Baſt. I do not well know, my Lord; if it ſhall pleaſe you to ſuſpend your indignation againſt my brother, 'till you can derive from him better teſtimony of his intent, you ſhould run a certain courſe: where, if you violently proceed againſt him, miſtaking his purpoſe, it would make a great gap in your honour, and ſhake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn down my life for him, that he hath writ this to feel my affection to your honour, and to no other pretence of danger.

Glo. Think you ſo?

Baſt. If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you ſhall hear us confer this, and by an Auricular aſſurance have your ſatisfaction, and that without any further delay, then this very Evening.

Glo. He cannot be ſuch a Monſter. Edmund ſeek him out: wind me into him, I pray you: frame the Buſineſs after your own wiſdome. I would unſtate my ſelf, to be in a due reſolution.

Baſt. I will ſeek him, Sir, preſently: convey the buſineſs as I ſhall find means, and acquaint you withall.

Glo. Theſe late Eclipſes in the Sun and Moon portend no good to us: though the wiſdome of Nature can reaſon it thus, and thus, yet Nature finds it ſelf ſcourg'd by the ſequent effects. Love cools, Friendſhip falls off, Brothers divide. In Cities, mutinies; in Countries, diſcord: in Palaces, Treaſon; and the Bond crack'd, 'twixt Son and Father. This Villain of mine comes under the prediction: there's Son againſt Father, the King falls from byas of Nature, there's Father againſt Child. We have ſeen the beſt of our time. Machinations, hollowneſs, treachery, and all ruinous diſorders follow us diſquietly to our Graves. Find out this Villain, Edmund, it ſhall loſe thee nothing, do it carefully: & the Noble and true-hearted Kent baniſh'd; his offence, honeſty. 'Tis ſtrange. Exit.

Baſt. This is the excellent foppery of the world, that when we are ſick in fortune, often the ſurfets of our own behaviour, we make guilty of our diſaſters, the Sun, the Moon, and Starres, as if we were Villains on neceſſity, Fools by heavenly compulſion, Knaves, Thieves, and Treachers by Spherical predominance, Drunkards, Lyars, and Adulterers by an inforc'd obedience of Planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thruſting on. An admirable evaſion of Whore-maſter-man, to lay his Goatiſh diſpoſition on the charge of a Star, My father compounded with my mother under the Dragon's tail, and my Nativity was under Urſa major, ſo that it follows, I am rough and Lecherous. I ſhould have bin that I am, had the Maidenlieſt Star in the Firmament twinckled on my Baſtardizing.

Enter Edgar.

Pat: he comes like the Cataſtrophe of the old Comedy: my Cue is villanous Melancholy, with a ſigh like Tom o' Bedlam ----- O theſe Eclipſes do portend theſe diviſions: Fa, Sol, La, Me.

Edg. How now, brother Edmund, what ſerious contemplation are you in?

Baſt. I am thinking, brother, of a Prediction I read this other day, what ſhould follow theſe Eclipſes.

Edg. Do you buſie your ſelf with that?

Baſt. I promiſe, the effects he writes of, ſucceed unhappily.
When ſaw you my Father laſt?

Edg. The night gone by.

Baſt. Spake you with him?

Edg. I, two hours together.

Baſt. Parted you in good terms? Found you no diſpleaſure in him, by word, nor countenance?

Edg. None at all.

Baſt. Bethink your ſelf wherein you have offended him: and at my entreaty forbear his preſence, until ſome little time hath qualified the heat of his diſpleaſure, which at this inſtant ſo rageth in him, that with the miſchief

chief of your person, it would scarcely allay.

Edg. Some Villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. That's my fear, I pray you have a continent forbearance till the speed of his rage goes slower: and as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my Lord speak: pray ye go, there's my key: if you do stir abroad, go arm'd.

Edg. Arm'd, Brother?

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best, I am no honest man, if there be any good meaning toward you: I have told you what I have seen, and heard: But faintly. Nothing like the image, and horrour of it, pray you away.

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon? Exit.

Edm. I do serve you in this business:
A Credulous Father, and a Brother Noble,
Whose nature is so far from doing harms,
That he suspects none: on whose foolish honesty
My practises ride easie: I see the business.
Let me, if not by birth, have lands by wit,
All with me's meet, that I can fashion fit. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Gonerill, and Steward.

Gon. Did my Father strike my Gentleman for chiding of his fool?

Stew. I, Madam.

Gon. By day and night, he wrongs me; every hour
He flashes into one gross crime, or other,
That sets us all at oddes: I'le not endure it;
His Knights grow riotous, and himself upbraids us
On every trifle. When he returns from hunting,
I will not speak with him, say I am sick,
If you come slack of former services
You shall do well, the fault of it I'le answer.

Stew. He's coming, Madam, I hear him.

Gon. Put on what weary negligence you please.
You and your Fellows: I'd have it come to question;
If he distaste it, let him to my Sister,
Whose mind and mine I know in that are one,
Remember what I have said.

Stew. Well Madam.

Gon. And let his Knights have colder looks among you: what growes of it no matter, advise your fellows so, I'le write straight to my Sister to hold my course: prepare for dinner.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Kent.

Kent. If but as well I other accents borrow,
That can my speech defuse, my good intent
May carry through it self to that full issue
For which I rais'd my likeness. Now banisht Kent
If thou canst serve where thou dost stand condemn'd,
So may it come, thy Master whom thou lov'st,
Shall find thee full of labours.

Hornes within. Enter Lear and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a jot for dinner, go get it ready: how now, what art thou?

Kent. A man, Sir.

Lear. What dost thou profess? what would'st thou with us?

Kent. I do profess to be no less then I seem; to serve him truly that will put me in trust, to love him that is honest, to converse with him that is wise and sayes little, to fear judgement, to fight when I cannot chuse, and to eat no fish.

Lear. What art thou?

Kent. A very honest hearted Fellow, and as poor as the King.

Lear. If thou be'st as poor for a Subject, as he's for a King, thou art poor enough. What would'st thou?

Kent. Service.

Lear. Whom would'st thou serve?

Kent. You.

Lear. Do'st thou know me, fellow?

Kent. No Sir, but you have that in your countenance, which I would fain call Master.

Lear. What's that?

Kent. Authority.

Lear. What services canst thou do?

Kent. I can keep honest counsels, ride, run, marre a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly: that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in, and the best of me, is Diligence.

Lear. How old art thou?

Kent. Not so young, Sir, to love a woman for singing, nor so old to dote on her for any thing. I have years on my back fourty eight.

Lear. Follow me, thou shalt serve me, if I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet. Dinner ho, dinner, where's my knave? my fool? go you and call my fool hither. You, you, Sirrah, where's my Daughter?

Enter Steward.

Stew. So please you ——— Exit.

Lear. What sayes the fellow there? Call the Clotpole back: where's my Fool? Ho, I think the world's asleep, how now? where's that Mungrel?

Knigh. He sayes, my Lord, your Daughter is not well.

Lear. Why came not the slave back to me when I call'd him?

Knigh. Sir, he answered in the roundest manner, he would not.

Lear. He would not?

Knigh. My Lord, I know not what the matter is, but to my judgement your highness is not entertain'd with that Ceremonious affection as you were wont, there's a great abatement of kindness appears as well in the general dependants, as in the Duke himself also, and your Daughter.

Lear. Ha? say'st thou so?

Knigh. I beseech you pardon me, my Lord, if I be mistaken, for my duty cannot be silent, when I think your highness is wrong'd.

Lear. Thou but remembrest me of my own Conception, I have perceived a most faint neglect of late, which I have rather blamed as mine own jealous curiosity, then as a very pretence and purpose of unkindness; I will look further into't: but where's my Fool? I have not seen him this two dayes.

Knight. Since my young Ladies going into France,

Sir, the fool hath much pined away.

Lear. No more of that, I have noted it well; go you and tell my Daughter, I would ſpeak with her. Go you call hither my Fool; Oh you Sir, come you hither Sir, who am I Sir?

Enter Steward.

Stew. My Ladies Father.

Lear. My Ladies Father? my Lords knave, you whorſon dog, you ſlave, you curre.

Stew. I am none of theſe, my Lord,
I beſeech your pardon.

Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you Raſcal?

Stew. I'le not be ſtrucken, my Lord.

Kent. Nor tript neither, you baſe Foot-ball Player.

Lear. I thank thee, fellow,
Thou ſerv'ſt me, and I'le love thee.

Kent. Come ſir, ariſe, away, I'le teach you differences: away, away, if you will meaſure your lubbers length again, tarry, but away, go to, have you wiſdome, ſo.

Lear. Now my friendly knave I thank thee, there's earneſt of thy ſervice.

Enter Fool.

Fool. Let me hire him too, here's my Coxcomb.

Lear. How now my pretty knave, how doſt thou?

Fool. Sirrah, you were beſt take my Coxcomb.

Kent. Why, my Boy?

Fool. Why? for taking one's part that's out of favour; nay, and thou canſt not ſmile as the wind ſits, thou'lt catch cold ſhortly, there take my Coxcomb; why this fellow has baniſh'd two on's daughters, and did the third a bleſſing againſt his will; if thou follow him, thou muſt needs wear my Coxcomb. How now Nunkle? would I had two Coxcombs, and two Daughters.

Lear. Why, my Boy?

Fool. If I give them all my living, I'ld keep my Coxcomb my ſelf, there's mine, beg another of thy Daughters.

Lear. Take heed, Sirrah, the whip.

Fool. Truth's a dog muſt to kennel, he muſt be whipt out, when the Lady Brach may ſtand by th'fire and ſtink.

Lear. A peſtilent gall to me.

Fool. Sirra, I'le teach thee a ſpeech.

Lear. Doe.

Fool. Mark it Nuncle;
Have more then thou ſhoweſt,
Speak leſs then thou knoweſt,
Lend leſs then thou oweſt,
Ride more then thou goeſt,
Learn more then thou troweſt,
Set leſs then thou throweſt:
Leave thy drink and thy whore,
And keep in dore,
And thou ſhalt have more,
Then two tens to a ſcore.

Kent. This is nothing, fool.

Fool. Then 'tis like the breath of an unfee'd Lawyer, you give me nothing for't, can you make no uſe of nothing, Nuncle?

Lear. Why no, Boy,
Nothing can be made out of nothing.

Fool. Prythee tell him, ſo much the rent of his Land comes to, he will not believe a Fool.

Lear. A bitter Fool.

Fool. Doſt thou know the difference, my Boy, between a bitter Fool, and a ſweet one?

Lear. No Lad; teach me.

Fool. Nuncle, give me an egg, and I'le give thee two Crowns.

Lear. What two Crowns ſhall they be?

Fool. Why after I have cut the egg i'th'middle and eat up the meat, the two Crowns of the egg: when thou cloveſt thy Crown i'th'middle, and gav'ſt away both parts, thou boar'ſt thine Aſs on thy back o're the dirt, thou had'ſt little wit in thy bald crown, when thou gav'ſt thy golden one away: if I ſpeak like my ſelf in this, let him be whipt that firſt finds it ſo.

Fools had ne're leſs grace in a year,
For wiſemen are grown foppiſh,
And know not how their wits to wear,
Their manners are ſo apiſh.

Lear. When were you wont to be ſo full of Songs, ſirra?

Fool. I have uſed it Nuncle, e're ſince thou mad'ſt thy Daughters thy Mothers, for when thou gav'ſt them the rod, and put'ſt down thine own breeches, then they

For ſudden joy did weep,
And I for ſorrow ſung,
That ſuch a King ſhould play bo-peep,
And go the Fools among.

Prythee Nuncle keep a School-Maſter that can teach thy Fool to lye, I would fain learn to lye.

Lear. And you lye, ſirrah, we'll have you whipt.

Fool. I marvel what kin thou and thy daughters are: they'll have me whipt for ſpeaking true: thou'lt have me whipt for lying, and ſometimes I am whipt, for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind o'thing then a fool, and yet I would not be thee, Nuncle; thou haſt pared thy wit o'both ſides, and left nothing i'th'middle; here comes one o'the parings.

Enter Gonerill.

Lear. How now Daughter? what makes that Frontlet on? You are too much of late i'th'frown.

Fool. Thou waſt a pretty fellow when thou had'ſt no need to care for her frowning; now thou art an O without a figure, I am better then thou art now, I am a fool, thou art nothing. Yes forſooth I will hold my tongue, ſo your face bids me, though you ſay nothing.
Mum, mum, he that keeps nor cruſt, nor crum,
Weary of all, ſhall want ſome. That's a ſheal'd Peſcod.

Gon. Not onely, Sir, this, your all-licenc'd Fool,
But other of your inſolent retinue
Do hourly Carp and Quarrel, breaking forth
In rank, (and not to be endured) riots, Sir.
I had thought by making this well known unto you,
To have found a ſafe redreſs, but now grow fearfull
By what your ſelf too late have ſpoke and done,
That you protect this courſe, and put it on
By your allowance, which if you ſhould, the fault
Would not ſcape cenſure, nor the redreſſes ſleep,
Which in the tender of a wholeſome weal,
Might in their working do you that offence,
Which elſe were ſhame, that then neceſſity
Will call diſcreet proceeding.

Fool. For you know, Nuncle, the Hedge-Sparrow fed the Cuckooe ſo long, that it had it's head bit off by it's young, ſo out went the Candle, and we were left darkling.

Lear. Are you our Daughter?

Gon. I would you would make uſe of your good wiſdome,
(Whereof I know you are fraught) and put away
Theſe diſpoſitions, which of late tranſport you
From what you rightly are.

Fool.

Fool. May not an Asse know, when the Cart draws the Horse?
Whoop Jug I love thee.
Lear. Do's any here know me?
This is not Lear:
Do's Lear walk thus? Speak thus? Where are his eyes?
Either his Notion weakens, his Discernings
Are Lethargied. Ha! Waking? 'Tis not so;
Who is it that can tell me who I am?
Fool. Lear's shadow.
Lear. Your name, fair Gentlewoman?
Gon. This admiration, Sir, is much o'th'savour
Of other your new pranks. I do beseech you
To understand my purposes aright:
As you are Old, and Reverend, should be Wise.
Here do you keep a hundred Knights and Squires,
Men so disorder'd, so debosh'd, and bold,
That this our Court infected, with their manners,
Shews like a riotous Inne; Epicurisme and Lust
Makes it more like a Tavern, or a Brothell,
Then a grac'd Palace. The shame it self doth speak
For instant remedy. Be then desir'd,
By her that else will take the thing she begs,
A little to disquantity your Train,
And the remainders that shall still depend,
To be such men as may besort your Age,
Which know themselves, and you.
Lear. Darkness, and Devils,
Saddle my horses: call my Train together.
Degenerate Bastard, I'le not trouble thee;
Yet have I left a Daughter.
Gon. You strike my people, and your disorder'd rabble, make servants of their Betters.

Enter Albany.

Lear. Woe, that too late repents:
Is it your will, speak, Sir? Prepare my Horses,
Ingratitude! thou Marble-hearted Fiend,
More hideous when thou shew'st thee in a Child,
Then the Sea-monster.
Alb. Pray, Sir, be patient.
Lear. Detested Kite, thou lyest.
My Train are men of choice, and rarest parts,
That all particulars of duty know,
And in the most exact regard, support
Their worships of their name. O most small fault,
How ugly did'st thou in Cordelia shew?
Which like an Engine, wrencht my frame of Nature
From the fixt place: drew from my heart all love,
And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear!
Beat at this gate that let thy Folly in,
And thy dear Judgement out. Go, go, my people.
Alb. My Lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant
Of what hath moved you.
Lear. It may be so, my Lord,
Hear Nature, hear dear Goddess, hear:
Suspend thy purpose, if thou did'st intend
To make this Creature fruitfull:
Into her Womb convey sterility,
Dry up in her the Organs of increase,
And from her derogate body, never spring
A Babe to honour her. If she must teem,
Create her Child of Spleen, that it may live
And be a thwart, disnatur'd torment to her.
Let it stamp wrinckles in her brow of youth,
With cadent Teares fret Channels in her Cheeks,
Turn all her Mother's pains, and benefits
To laughter, and contempt: That she may feel,
How sharper then a Serpent's tooth it is,
To have a thankless Child. Away, away. Exit.
Alb. Now gods that we adore.
Whereof comes this?
Gon. Never afflict your self to know of it:
But let his disposition have that scope
As dotage gives it.

Enter Lear.

Lear. What fifty of my followers at a clap?
Within a fortnight?
Alb. What's the matter, Sir?
Lear. I'le tell thee:
Life and death, I am asham'd
That thou hast power to shake my manhood thus,
That these hot tears, which break from me perforce,
Should make thee worth them,
Blasts and Foggs upon thee:
Th'untented woundings of a Father's curse
Pierce every sense about thee. Old fond eyes,
Beweep thee once again, I'le pluck ye out,
And cast you with the waters that you lose
To temper Clay. Ha? Let it be so.
I have another daughter,
Who I am sure is kind and comfortable:
When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails
She'll flea thy Wolvish visage. Thou shalt find,
That I'le resume the shape which thou dost think
I have cast off for ever.
Gon. Do you mark that?
Alb. I cannot be so partial, Gonerill,
To the great love I bear you.
Gon. Pray you content. What Oswald hoa?
You Sir, more Knave then Fool, after your Master.
Fool. Nuncle Lear, Nuncle Lear,
Tarry, take the Fool with thee:
A Fox, when one has caught her,
And such a daughter,
Should sure to the slaughter,
If my Cap would buy a Halter,
So the Fool follows after. Exit.
Gon. This man hath had good counsel,
A hundred Knights?
'Tis politick, and safe to let him keep
At point a hundred Knights: yes, that on every dream,
Each, buz, each fancy, each complaint, dislike,
He may enguard his dotage with their powers,
And hold our lives in mercy. Oswald, I say.
Alb. Well, you may fear too far;
Gon. Safer then trust too far;
Let me still take away the harms I fear,
Not fear still to be taken. I know his heart,
What he hath utter'd, I have writ my sister:
If she'll sustain him, and his hundred Knights
When I have shew'd th'unfitness.

Enter Steward.

How now Oswald?
What have you writ that letter to my Sister?
Stew. I, Madam.
Gon. Take you some company, and away to horse,
Inform her full of my particular fear,
And thereto add such reasons of your own,
As may compact it more. Get you gone,

And haſten your return; no, no, my Lord,
This milky gentleneſs, and courſe of yours
Though I condemn not, yet under pardon
You are much more at task for want of wiſedome,
Then prais'd for harmfull mildneſs.
Alb. How far your eyes may pierce I cannot tell;
Striving to better, oft we marre what's well.
Gon. Nay then -----
Alb. Well, well, the'vent. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Lear, Kent, Gentleman, and Fool.

Lear. Go you before to Gloſter with theſe Letters; acquaint my daughter no further with any thing you know, then comes from her demand out of the Letter, if your diligence be not ſpeedy, I ſhall be there afore you.
Kent. I will not ſleep, my Lord, till I have delivered your Letter. Exit.
Fool. If a man's brains were in his heels, were not in danger of kibes?
Lear. I, boy.
Fool. Then I prythee be merry, thy wit ſhall not go ſlip-ſhod.
Lear. Ha, ha, ha.
Fool. Shalt ſee thy other Daughter will uſe thee kindly, for though ſhe's as like this, as a Crab's like an Apple, yet I can tell what I can tell.
Lear. What canſt tell, Boy?
Fool. She will taſte as like this, as a Crab do's to a Crab: canſt thou tell why ones Noſe ſtands i'th'middle on's face?
Lear. No.
Fool. Why to keep ones eyes of either ſide's noſe, that what a man cannot ſmell out, he may ſpy into.
Lear. I did her wrong.
Fool. Canſt tell how an Oyſter makes his ſhell?
Lear. No.
Fool. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a Snail has a houſe.
Lear. Why?
Fool. Why to put's head in, not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his hornes without a caſe.
Lear. I will forget my Nature, ſo kind a Father? Be my horſes ready?
Fool. Thy Aſſes are gone about'em; the reaſon why the Seven ſtarres are no moe then ſeven, is a pretty reaſon.
Lear. Becauſe they are not eight.
Fool. Yes indeed, thou would'ſt make a good fool.
Lear. To tak't again perforce? Monſter ingratitude!
Fool. If you were my fool, Nuncle, I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy time.
Lear. How's that?
Fool. Thou ſhould'ſt not have bin old, till thou had'ſt bin wiſe.
Lear. O let me not be mad, not mad ſweet heaven: keep me in temper, I would not be mad. How now, are the horſes ready?
Gent. Ready, my Lord.
Lear. Come Boy.
Fool. She that's a Maid now, and laughs at my departure,
Shall not be a Maid long, unleſs things be cut ſhorter.
Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Baſtard, and Curan, ſeverally.

Baſt. Save thee, Curan.
Cur. And you, Sir, I have bin
With your Father, and given him notice
That the Duke of Cornwall, and Regan his Dutcheſs
Will be here with him this night.
Baſt. How comes that?
Cur. Nay I know not, you have heard of the news abroad, I mean the whiſper'd ones, for they are yet but ear-kiſſing arguments.
Baſt. Not I: pray you what are they?
Cur. Have you heard of no likely Warres toward,
'Twixt the Dukes of Cornwall and Albany?
Baſt. Not a word.
Cur. You may do then in time,
Fare you well, Sir. Exit.
Baſt. The Duke be here to night? the better beſt,
This weaves it ſelf perforce into my buſineſs,
My father hath ſet guard to take my brother,
And I have one thing of a queazie queſtion
Which I muſt act, briefneſs, and Fortune work.

Enter Edgar.

Brother, a word, deſcend; brother I ſay,
My father watches; O Sir, flye this place,
Intelligence is given where you are hid;
You have now the good advantage of the night,
Have you not ſpoken 'gainſt the Duke of Cornwall?
He's coming hither, now i'th'night, i'th'haſte,
And Regan with him, have you nothing ſaid
Upon his party 'gainſt the Duke of Albany?
Adviſe your ſelf.
Edg. I am ſure on't, not a word.
Baſt. I hear my father coming, pardon me:
In cunning, I muſt draw my Sword upon you:
Draw, ſeem to defend your ſelf,
Now quit you well.
Yield, come before my father, light hoa, here,
Flye Brother, Torches, ſo farewell, Exit Edgar.
Some bloud drawn on me would beget opinion
Of my more fierce endeavour. I have ſeen drunkards
Do more then this in ſport; Father, father,
Stop, ſtop, no help?

Enter Gloſter, and Servants with Torches.

Glo. Now Edmund, where's the villain?
Baſt. Here ſtood he in the dark, his ſharp Sword out,
Mumbling of wicked Charms, conjuring the Moon
To ſtand his auſpicious Miſtreſs.
Glo. But where is he?
Baſt. Look, Sir, I bleed.
Glo. Where is the villain, Edmund?
Baſt. Fled this way, Sir, when by no means he could ---
Glo. Purſue him, ho: go after. By no means, what?
Baſt. Perſwade me to murther of your Lordſhip,

But

But that I told him the revenging gods,
'Gainſt Parricides did all the thunder bend,
Spoke with how manifold, and ſtrong a Bond
The Child was bound toth Father. Sir, in fine,
Seeing how lothly oppoſite I ſtood
To his unnatural purpoſe, in fell motion
With his prepared Sword, he charges home
My unprovided body, latch'd mine arme:
And when he ſaw my beſt alarum'd ſpirits
Bold in the quarrels right, rouz'd to th'encounter,
Or whether gaſted by the noiſe I made,
Full ſuddenly he fled.

Gloſt. Let him flye far:
Not in this Land ſhall he remain uncaught
And found; diſpatch, the Noble Duke my Maſter,
My worthy Arch and Patron comes to night,
By his authority I will proclaim it,
That he which finds him ſhall deſerve our thanks,
Bringing the murderous Coward to the ſtake:
He that conceals him, death.

Baſt. When I diſſwaded him from his intent,
And found him pight to do it, with curſt ſpeech
I threatned to diſcover him; he replied,
Thou unpoſſeſſing Baſtard, doſt thou think,
If I would ſtand againſt thee, would the repoſal
Of any truſt, virtue, or worth in thee
Make thy words faith'd? No, what ſhould I deny,
(As this I would, though thou did'ſt produce
My very Character) I'ld turn it all
To thy ſuggeſtion, plot, and damned practice:
And thou muſt make a dullard of the world,
If they not thought the profits of my death
Were very pregnant and potential ſpirits
To make thee ſeek it. Tucket within.

Glo. O ſtrange and faſtned Villain!
Would he deny his Letter, ſaid he?
Heark, the Duke's trumpets, I know not where he comes,
All Ports I'le bar, the villain ſhall not ſcape,
The Duke muſt grant me that: beſides, his picture
I will ſend far and near, that all the Kingdome
May have due note of him, and of my land,
(Loyal and natural Boy) I'le work the means
To make thee capable.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, and Attendants.

Corn. How now, my Noble friend, ſince I came hither
(Which I can call but now) I have heard ſtrangeneſs.

Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes to ſhort
Which can purſue th'offender: how does my Lord?

Glo. O Madam, my old heart is crack'd, it's crack'd.

Reg. What, did my Father's Godſon ſeek your life?
He whom my father nam'd, your Edgar:

Glo. O Lady, Lady, ſhame would have it hid.

Reg. Was he not companion with the riotous Knights
That tended upon my father?

Glo. I know not, Madam, 'tis too bad, too bad.

Baſt. Yes, Madam, he was of that conſort.

Reg. No marvel then, though he were ill-affected,
'Tis they have put him on the old man's death,
To have th'expence and waſt of Revenues;
I have this preſent evening from my Siſter
Been well inform'd of them, and with ſuch cautions,
That if they come to ſojourn at my houſe,
I'le not be there.

Cor. Nor I, aſſure thee, Regan;
Edmund, I hear that you have ſhewn your Father
A Child-like Office.

Baſt. It is my duty, Sir.

Glo. He did bewray his practice, and receiv'd
This hurt you ſee, ſtriving to apprehend him.

Corn. Is he purſued?

Glo. I, my good Lord.

Cor. If he be taken, he ſhall never more
Be fear'd of doing harm, make your own purpoſe,
How in my ſtrength you pleaſe: as for you Edmund,
Whoſe virtue and obedience doth this inſtant
So much commend it ſelf, you ſhall be ours,
Natures of ſuch deep truſt, we ſhall much need:
You we firſt ſeize on.

Baſt. I ſhall ſerve you, Sir, truly, how ever elſe.

Glo. For him I thank your Grace.

Cor. You know not why we came to viſit you.

Reg. Thus out of ſeaſon, thredding dark-ey'd night,
Occaſions Noble Gloſter of ſome prize,
Wherein we muſt have uſe of your advice.
Our Father he hath writ, ſo hath our Siſter,
Of differences, which I beſt thought it fit
To anſwer from our home: the ſeveral Meſſengers
From hence attend diſpatch, our good old friend
Lay comforts to your boſome, and beſtow
Your needfull counſel to our buſineſſes,
Which craves the inſtant uſe.

Glo. I ſerve you, Madam,
Your Graces are right welcome.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Kent, and Steward, ſeverally.

Stew. Good dawning to thee, friend, art of this houſe?

Kent. I.

Stew. Where may we ſet our horſes?

Kent. I th'mire.

Stew. Prythee if thou lov'ſt me, tell me.

Kent. I love thee not.

Stew. Why then I care not for thee.

Kent. If I had thee in Lipsbury Pinfold, I would make thee care for me.

Stew. Why doſt thou uſe me thus? I know thee not.

Kent. Fellow, I know thee.

Stew. What doſt thou know me for?

Kent. A Knave, a Raſcal, an eater of broken meats, a baſe, proud, ſhallow, beggarly, three-ſuited, hundred pound, filthy wooſted-ſtocking knave, a Lilly-livered, action-taking, whoreſon glaſs-gazing, ſuper-ſerviceable finical Rogue, one-Trunk-inheriting ſlave, one that would'ſt be a Bawd in way of good ſervice, and art nothing but the compoſition of a Knave, Beggar, Coward, Pandar, and the Son and Heir of a Mungril Bitch; one whom I will beat into clamorous whining, if thou deny'ſt the leaſt ſyllable of thy addition.

Stew. Why, what a monſtrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one, that is neither known of thee, nor knows thee?

Kent. What a brazen-fac'd Varlet art thou, to deny thou knoweſt me? Is it two dayes ſince I tript up thy heels, and beat thee before the King? Draw you rogue, for for though it be night, yet the Moon ſhines, I'le make a ſop o'th'Moonſhine of you, you whorſon Culleinly Barbar-monger, draw.

Stew. Away, I have nothing to do with thee.

Kent. Draw, you Raſcal, you come with Letters againſt the King, and take Vanity the puppet's part, againſt the Royalty of her father: draw, you Rogue, or I'le ſo carbonado your ſhanks, draw you Raſcal, come your wayes.

Stew. Help, ho, murther, help.

Kent. Strike you ſlave: ſtand rogue, ſtand you neat ſlave, ſtrike.

Stew. Help hoa, murther, murther.

Enter Baſtard, Cornwall, Regan, Gloſter, Servant.

Baſt. How now, what's the matter? Part.

Kent. With you, goodman boy, if you pleaſe, come, I'le fleſh ye, come on young Maſter.

Glo. Weapons? Armes? what's the matter here?

Corn. Keep peace upon your lives, he dyes that ſtrikes again, what is the matter?

Reg. The Meſſengers from our Siſter, and the King?

Cor. What is your difference, ſpeak?

Stew. I am ſcarce in breath, my Lord.

Kent. No marvel, you have ſo beſtir'd your Valour, you cowardly Raſcal, nature diſclaims in thee: a Taylor made thee.

Corn. Thou art a ſtrange fellow, a Taylor make a man?

Kent. A Taylor, Sir; a Stone-cutter, or a Painter, could not have made him ſo ill, though they had bin but two yeares o'th'trade.

Cor. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel?

Stew. The ancient Ruffian, Sir, whoſe life I have ſpar'd at ſute of his gray beard.

Kent. Thou whoreſon Zed, thou unneceſſary letter, my Lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unboulted villain into morter, and daub the wall of a Jakes with him, Spare my gray-beard, you wag-tail?

Cor. Peace, ſirrah,
You beaſtly knave, know you no reverence?

Kent. Yes, Sir, but anger hath a priviledge.

Cor. Why art thou angry?

Kent. That ſuch a ſlave as this ſhould wear a Sword,
Who wears no honeſty: ſuch ſmiling rogues as theſe,
Like Rats oft bite the holy cords a-twain,
Which art t'intrince, t'unlooſe: ſmooth every paſſion
That in the natures of their Lords rebell,
Being oil to fire, ſnow to the colder moods,
Renege, affirm, and turn their Halcyon beaks
With every gale, and vary of their Maſters,
Knowing naught (like dogges) but following:
A plague upon your Epileptick viſage,
Smoile you my ſpeeches, as I were a fool?
Gooſe, if I had you upon Sarum plain
I'ld drive ye cackling home to Camelot.

Corn. What art thou mad, old fellow?

Gloſt. How fell you out, ſay that?

Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy,
Then I, and ſuch a knave.

Corn. Why doſt thou call him Knave?
What is his fault?

Kent. His countenance likes me not.

Cor. No more perchance do's mine, nor his, nor hers.

Kent. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain,
I have ſeen better faces in my time,
Then ſtands on any ſhoulder that I ſee
Before me, at this inſtant.

Corn. This is ſome fellow,
Who having been prais'd for bluntneſs, doth affect
A ſawcy roughneſs, and conſtrains the garb
Quite from his Nature. He cannot flatter, he,
An honeſt mind and plain, he muſt ſpeak truth,
And they will take it ſo, if not, he's plain.
Theſe kind of Knaves I know, which in this plainneſs.
Harbour more craft, and more corrupter ends,
Then twenty ſilly-ducking obſervants,
That ſtretch their duties nicely.

Kent. Sir, in good faith, in ſintere verity,
Under th'allowance of your great aſpect,
Whoſe influence like the wreath of radiant fire
On flicking Phœbus front.

Corn. What mean'ſt by this?

Kent. To go out of my dialect: which you diſcommend ſo much; I know, Sir, I am no flatterer, he that beguil'd you in a plain accent, was a plain Knave, which for my part I will not be, though I ſhould win your diſpleaſure to entreat me to't.

Corn. What was th'offence you gave him?

Stew. I never gave him any:
It pleas'd the King his Maſter very late
To ſtrike at me upon his miſconſtruction,
When he compact, & flattering his diſpleaſure
Tript me behind: being down, inſulted, rail'd.
And put upon him ſuch a deal of Man,
That worthied him, got praiſes of the King,
For him attempting, who was ſelf-ſubdued,
And in the fleſhment of this dead exploit,
Drew on me here again.

Kent. None of theſe Rogues, and Cowards
But Ajax is their fool.

Corn. Fetch forth the Stocks?
You ſtubborn ancient Knave, you reverent Braggart,
We'll teach you.

Kent. Sir, I am too old to learn:
Call not your Stocks for me, I ſerve the King;
On whoſe imployment I was ſent to you,
You ſhall do ſmall reſpects, ſhew too bold malice
Againſt the Grace, and Perſon of my Maſter,
Stocking his Meſſenger.

Corn. Fetch forth the Stocks;
As I have life and honour, there ſhall he ſit 'till Noon.

Reg. 'Till noon? 'till night my Lord, and all night too.

Kent. Why Madam, if I were your Father's dog,
You ſhould not uſe me ſo.

Reg. Sir, being his Knave, I will. Stocks brought out.

Corn. This is a fellow of the ſelf-ſame colour,
Our Siſter ſpeaks of. Come, bring away the Stocks.

Glo. Let me beſeech your Grace, not to do ſo,
The King his Maſter, needs muſt take it ill
That he's ſo ſlightly valued in his Meſſenger,
Should have him thus reſtrained.

Corn. I'le anſwer that.

Reg. My Siſter may receive it much more worſe,
To have her Gentleman abus'd, aſſaulted.

Corn. Come, my Lord, away. Exit.

Glo. I am ſorry for thee friend, 'tis the Dukes pleaſure,
Whoſe diſpoſition all the world well knows
Will not be rubb'd nor ſtopt, I'le intreat for thee.

Ken. Pray do not, ſir, I have watch'd and travel'd hard,
Some time I ſhall ſleep out, the reſt I'le whiſtle:
A good man's fortune may grow out at heels:

Give

Give you good morrow.
Glo. The Duke's to blame in this,
'Twill be ill taken. Exit.
Kent. Good King, that must approve the common saw,
Thou out of heaven's benediction com'st
To the warm Sun.
Approach thou Beacon to this under Globe,
That by thy comfortable Beams I may
Peruse this Letter. Nothing almost sees miracles
But misery. I know 'tis from Cordelia,
Who hath most fortunately been inform'd
Of my obscured course. And shall find time
From this enormous State, seeking to give
Losses their remedies. All weary and o're-watch'd,
Take vantage heavy eyes, not to behold
This shamefull lodging. Fortune goodnight,
Smile once more, turn thy wheel.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. I heard my self proclaim'd,
And by the happy hollow of a Tree,
Escap'd the hunt. No Port is free, no place
That guard, and most unusual vigilance
Do's not attend my taking. Whiles I may scape
I will preserve my self: and am bethought
To take the basest, and most poorest shape
That ever penury in contempt of man,
Brought near to beast: my face I'le grime with filth,
Blanket my loins, put all my hairs in knots,
And with presented nakedness out-face
The Winds, and persecutions of the sky:
The Countrey gives me proof and president
Of Bedlam beggars, who with roaring voices
Strike in their numm'd and mortified Armes,
Pins, Wooden-pricks, Nailes, Sprigs of Rosemary:
And with this horrible object, from low Farmes,
Poor pelting Villages, Sheep-Coats, and Mills,
Sometimes with Lunatick bans, sometimes with Prayers
Inforce their charity: poor Turlygod, poor Tom.
That's something yet: Edgar I nothing am. Exit.

Enter Lear, Fool, and Gentleman.

Lear. 'Tis strange that they should so depart from home.
And not send back my Messenger.
Gent. As I learn'd,
The night before, there was no purpose in them
Of this remove.
Kent. Haile to thee, Noble Master.
Lear. Ha? Mak'st thou this shame thy pastime?
Kent. No, my Lord.
Fool. Ha, ha, he wears Crewel Garters; horses are ti'd by the heads, Dogs and Bears by th'neck, Monkies by th'loins, and Men by th'legs; when a man is over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden nether-stocks.
Lear. What's he,
That hath so much thy place mistook
To set thee here?
Kent. It is both he and she,
Your Son, and Daughter.
Lear. No.
Kent. Yes.
Lear. No I say.
Kent. I say yea.
Lear. By Jupiter I swear no.
Kent. By Juno, I swear I.
Lear. They durst not do't:
They could not, would not do't: 'tis worse then murther
To do upon respect such violent outrage:
Resolve me with all modest haste, which way
Thou might'st deserve, or they impose this usage,
Coming from us.
Kent. My Lord, when at their home
I did commend your highness Letters to them,
E're I was risen from the place, that shewed
My duty kneeling, came there a reeking Poste,
Stew'd in his haste, half breathless, panting forth
From Gonerill his Mistriss, salutation;
Deliver'd Letters spight of intermission,
Which presently they read; on those contents
They summon'd up their meiny, straight took horse,
Commanded me to follow, and attend
The leisure of their answer, gave me cold looks,
And meeting here the other Messenger,
Whose welcome I perceiv'd had poison'd mine,
Being the very fellow which of late
Displai'd so saucily against your highness,
Having more man then wit about me, drew;
He rais'd the house, with loud and coward cryes,
Your son and daughter found this trespass worth
The shame which here it suffers. (way,
Fool. Winter's not gone yet, if the wild Geese fly that Fathers that wear rags, do make their Children blind,
But fathers that bear bags, shall see their children kind.
Fortune that arrant whore, ne're turns the key to th'poor.
But for all this thou shalt have as many Dolors for thy Daughters, as thou canst tell in a year. (dear
Lear. Oh how this Mother swells up toward my heart!
Hysterica passio, down thou climing sorrow,
Thy Element's below; where is this daughter?
Kent. With the Earl, Sir, here within.
Lear. Follow me not, stay here. Exit.
Gen. Made you more offence,
But what you speak of.
Kent. None;
How chance the King comes with so small a number?
Fool. And thou had'st been set i'th'Stocks for that question, thoud'st well deserv'd it.
Kent. Why fool?
Fool. We'll set thee to school to an Ant, to teach thee there's no labouring i'th'winter. All that follow their noses, are led by their eyes, but blind men, and there's not a nose among twenty, but can smell him that's stinking; let go thy hold, when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following. But the great one that goes upward, let him draw thee after: when a wiseman gives thee better counsel, give me mine again, I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool gives it.
That Sir, which serves, and seeks for gain,
And follows but for form;
Will pack, when it begins to rain,
And leave thee in the storm,
And I will tarry, the fool will stay,
And let the wiseman flie:
The knave turns fool that runs away,
The fool no knave perdy.

Enter Lear, and Gloster.

Kent. Where learn'd you this, fool?
Fool. Not i'th'Stocks, fool.

Lear.

Lear. Deny to ſpeak with me?
They are ſick, they are weary,
They have travel'd all the night? mere fetches,
The Images of revolt and flying off.
Fet me a better anſwer.
Glo. My dear Lord,
You know the fiery quality of the Duke,
How unremoveable and fixt he is
In his own courſe.
Lear. Vengeance, Plague, Death, Confuſion:
Fiery? What quality? Why Gloſter, Gloſter,
I'd ſpeak with the Duke of Cornwall, and his wife.
Glo. Well, my good Lord, I have inform'd them ſo.
Lear. Inform'd them? Doſt thou underſtand me man?
Glo. I, my good Lord.
Lear. The King would ſpeak with Cornwall,
The dear Father
Would with his Daughter ſpeak, commands, tends, ſervice,
Are they inform'd of this? My breath and bloud:
Fiery? The fiery Duke, tell the hot Duke that ——
No, but not yet, may be he is not well,
Infirmity doth ſtill neglect all office,
Whereto our health is bound, we are not our ſelves,
When Nature being oppreſt, commands the mind
To ſuffer with the body: I'le forbear,
And am fall'n out with my more headier will,
To take the indiſpos'd and ſickly fit,
For the ſound man. Death on my ſtate: wherefore
Should he ſit here? This Act perſwades me,
That this remotion of the Duke and her
Is practice onely, Give me my ſervant forth;
Go tell the Duke, and's wife, I'd ſpeak with them:
Now preſently: bid them come forth and hear me,
Or at their chamber door I'le beat the Drum,
'Till it cry ſleep to death.
Glo. I would have all well betwixt you. Exit.
Lear. Oh me my heart! my riſing heart! but down.
Fool. Cry to it Nunkle, as the Cockney did to the Eels, when he put 'em i'th'Paſte alive, ſhe knapt 'em o'th'Coxcombs with a ſtick, and cryed down wantons, down; 'twas his brother, that in pure kindneſs to his Horſe buttered his Hey.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Gloſter, Servants.

Lear. Good morrow to you both.
Corn. Hail to your Grace. Kent here ſet at liberty.
Reg. I am glad to ſee your Highneſs.
Lear. Regan, I think you are, I know what reaſon,
I have to think ſo, if thou ſhould'ſt not be glad,
I would divorce me from thy Mother's Tombe,
Sepulchring an Adultereſs. O are you free?
Some other time for that. Beloved Regan
Thy ſiſter's naught: Oh Regan, ſhe hath tyed
Sharp-tooth'd unkindneſs, like a vulture here,
I can ſcarce ſpeak to thee, thou'lt not believe
With how deprav'd a quality. Oh Regan.
Reg. I pray you, Sir, take patience, I have hope
You leſs know how to value her deſert,
Than ſhe to ſcant her duty.
Lear. Say? how is that?
Reg. I cannot think my ſiſter in the leaſt
Would fail her Obligation. If Sir perchance
She have reſtrain'd the Riots of your Followers,
'Tis on ſuch ground, and to ſuch wholeſome end,
As clears her from all blame.
Lear. My curſes on her.
Reg. O Sir, you are old,
Nature in you ſtands on the very Verge
Of her confine: you ſhould be rul'd, and led
By ſome diſcretion, that diſcerns your ſtate
Better then you your ſelf: therefore I pray you,
That to our Siſter, you do make return,
Say you have wrong'd her.
Lear. Ask her forgiveneſs?
Do you but mark how this becomes the houſe?
Dear daughter, I confeſs that I am old;
Age is unneceſſary: on my knees I beg,
That you'll vouchſafe me Rayment, Bed, and Food.
Reg. Good Sir, no more: theſe are unſightly tricks:
Return you to my Siſter.
Lear. Never, Regan:
She hath abated me of half my Train:
Look'd black upon me, ſtrook me with her Tongue
Moſt Serpent-like, upon the very heart.
All the ſtor'd Vengeances of heaven, fall
On her ingratefull top: ſtrike her young bones
You taking Airs with Lameneſs.
Corn. Fie Sir, fie.
Lear. You nimble Lightnings, dart your blinding flames
Into her ſcornfull eyes: infect her Beauty,
You Fen-ſuck'd Fogs, drawn by the powerfull Sun
To fall, and blifter.
Reg. O the bleſt gods!
So will you wiſh on me, when the raſh mood is on.
Lear. No Regan, thou ſhalt never have my curſe:
Thy tender-hefted Nature ſhall not give
Thee o're to harſhneſs: Her eyes are fierce, but thine
Do comfort, and not burn. 'Tis not in thee
To grudge my pleaſures, to cut off my Train,
To bandy haſty words, to ſcant my ſizes,
And in concluſion, to oppoſe the bolt
Againſt my comming in. Thou better know'ſt
The Offices of Nature, bond of Childhood,
Effects of Curteſie, dues of Gratitude:
Thy half o'th'Kingdome haſt thou not forgot,
Wherein I thee endow'd.
Reg. Good Sir, to'th'purpoſe. Tucket within.
Lear. Who put my man i'th'Stocks?

Enter Steward.

Corn. What Trumpet's that?
Reg. I know't my Siſter's: this approves her Letter,
That ſhe would ſoon be here. Is your Lady come?
Lear. This is a Slave, whoſe eaſie bortowed pride
Dwells in the ſickly grace of her he follows.
Out Varlet, from my ſight.
Corn. What means your Grace?

Enter Gonerill.

Lear. Who ſtockt my Servant? Regan, I have good hope
Thou did'ſt not know on't.
Who comes here? O heavens!
If you do love old men; if your ſweet ſway
Allow Obedience: if you your ſelves are old,
Make it your cauſe: Send down, and take my part.
Art not aſham'd to look upon this Beard?
O Regan, will you take her by the hand?
Gon. Why not by th'hand, Sir? How have I offended?
All's not offence that indiſcretion finds
And dotage terms ſo.
Lear. O ſides, you are too tough!
Will you yet hold?
How came my man i'th'Stocks?
Corn. I ſet him there, Sir: but his own Diſorders

Deſerv'd

Deserv'd much less advancement.
Lear. You? Did you?
Reg. I pray you Father, being weak, seem so.
If 'till the expiration of your Moneth
You will return and sojourn with my Sister,
Dismissing half your train, come then to me,
I am now from home, and out of that provision,
Which shall be needfull for your entertainment.
Lear. Return to her? and fifty men dismiss'd?
No, rather I abjure all roofs, and chuse
To wage against the enmity o'th'air,
To be a Comrade with the Wolf and Owle,
Necessities sharp pinch. Return with her?
Why? the hot-bloudied France, that dowerless took
Our youngest born, I could as well be brought
To knee his throne, and, Squire-like, pension beg,
To keep base life a-foot; return with her?
Perswade me rather to be slave and sumpter
To this detested groom.
Gon. At your choice, Sir.
Lear. I prythee Daughter do not make me mad,
I will not trouble thee, my Child: farewell:
We'll no more meet, no more see one another,
But yet thou art my flesh, my bloud, my daughter,
Or rather a disease that's in my flesh,
Which I must needs call mine. Thou art a Bile,
A plague-sore, or imbossed Carbuncle
In my corrupted bloud. But I'le not chide thee.
Let shame come when it will, I do not call it,
I do not bid the thunder-bearer shoot,
Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove,
Mend when thou canst, be better at thy leisure,
I can be patient, I can stay with Regan,
I and my hundred Knights.
Reg. Not altogether so,
I look'd not for you yet, nor am provided
For your fit welcome, give ear Sir to my Sister,
For those that mingle reason with your passion,
Must be content to think you old, and so,
But she knows what she does.
Lear. Is this well spoken?
Reg. I dare avouch it, Sir, what fifty Followers?
Is it not well? what should you need of more?
Yea, or so many? Sith that both charge and danger,
Speak 'gainst so great a number: How in one house
Should many people, under two commands
Hold amity? 'tis hard, almost impossible.
Gon. Why might not you my Lord, receive attendance
From those that she calls Servants, or from mine?
Reg. Why not, my Lord?
If then they chanc'd to slack ye,
We could controll them; if you will come to me,
(For now I spy a danger) I intreat you
To bring five and twenty, to no more
Will I give place or notice.
Lear. I gave you all.
Reg. And in good time you gave it.
Lear. Made you my Guardians, my Depositaries,
But keep a reservation to be followed
With such a number? what, must I come to you
With five and twenty? Regan, said you so?
Reg. And speak't again, my Lord, no more with me.
Lear. Those wicked Creatures yet do look well favor'd,
When others are more wicked, not being the worst
Stands in some rank of praise; I'le go with thee,
Thy fifty yet doth double five and twenty.
And thou art twice her Love.
Gon. Hear me, my Lord;
What need you five and twenty? Ten? or five?
To follow in a house, where twice so many.
Have a command to tend you?
Reg. What need one?
Lear. O reason not the need: our basest Beggars
Are in the poorest thing superfluous,
Allow not Nature, more then Nature needs:
Man's life is cheap as Beasts. Thou art a Lady;
If only to go warm were gorgeous.
Why Nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st,
Which scarcely keeps thee warm, but for true need,
You heavens, give me that patience, patience I need,
You see me here (you gods) a poor old man,
As full of grief as age, wretched in both,
If it be you that stirres these Daughters hearts
Against their father, fool me not so much.
To bear it tamely: touch me with Noble anger,
And let not women's weapons, water drops,
Stain my man's cheeks. No you unnatural Hags,
I will have such revenges on you both,
That all the world shall ----- I will do such things,
What they are yet, I know not, but they shall be,
The terrors of the earth; you think I'le weep,
No, I'le not weep, I have full cause of weeping.
Storm and Tempest.
But this heart shall break into a hundred thousand flaws,
Or e're I weep. O fool, I shall go mad. Exeunt.
Corn. Let us withdraw, 'twill be a storm.
Reg. This house is little, the old man and's people
Cannot be well bestow'd.
Gon. 'Tis his own blame hath put himself from rest,
And must needs taste his folly.
Reg. For his particular, I'le receive him gladly,
But not one follower.
Gon. So am I purpos'd,
Where is my Lord of Gloster?
Enter Gloster.
Corn. Followed the old man forth, he is return'd.
Glo. The King is in high rage.
Corn. Whither is he going?
Glo. He calls to horse, but will I know not whither.
Corn. 'Tis best to give him way, he leads himself.
Gon. My Lord, intreat him by no means to stay.
Glo. Alack the night comes on, and the high winds
Do sorely ruffle, for many Miles about
There's scarce a Bush.
Reg. O Sir, to wilfull men,
The injuries that they themselves procure,
Must be their School-Masters: shut up your doors,
He is attended with a desperate train,
And what they may incense him to, being apt,
To have his ear abus'd, wisdome bids fear.
Corn. Shut up your doors, my Lord, 'tis a wild night,
My Regan counsels well: come out o'th'storm. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Storm still. Enter Kent, and a Gentleman, severally.

Kent. Who's there besides foul weather?
Gen. One minded like the weather, most unquietly.
Kent.

Kent. I know you: where's the King?
Gent. Contending with the fretfull Elements.
Bids the wind blow the Earth into the Sea,
Or swell the curled Waters 'bove the Main,
That things might change, or cease.
Kent. But who is with him?
Gent. None but the fool, who labours to out-jest
His heart-strook injuries.
Kent. Sir, I do know you,
And dare upon the warrant of my note
Commend a dear thing to you. There is division
(Although as yet the face of it is cover'd
With mutual cunning) 'twixt Albany, and Cornwall:
Who have, as who have not, that their great Starres
Thron'd and set high; Servants who seem no less,
Which are to France the Spies and Speculations
Intelligent of our State. What hath bin seen,
Either in snuffs, and packings of the Dukes,
Or the hard Rein which both of them have borne
Against the old kind King; or something deeper,
Whereof (perchance) these are but furnishings.
Gent. I will talk further with you.
Kent. No, do not:
For confirmation that I am much more
Then my out-wall; open this Purse, and take
What it contains. If you shall see Cordelia,
(As fear not but you shall) shew her this Ring,
And she will tell you who that fellow is
That yet you do not know. Fie on this storm,
I will go seek the King.
Gent. Give me your hand,
Have you no more to say?
Kent. Few words, but to effect more then all yet;
That when we have found the King, in which your pain
That way, I'le this: He that first lights on him,
Holla the other. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Storm still. Enter Lear, and Fool.

Lear. Blow winds, and crack your cheeks; Rage, blow
You Cataracts, and Hurricano's spout.
'Till you have drench'd our Steeples, drown the Cocks.
You Sulph'rous and thought-executing fires,
Vaunt-curriors of Oak-cleaving Thunder-bolts,
Sindge my white head. And thou all-shaking Thunder,
Strike flat the thick Rotundity o'th'world,
Crack Nature's moulds, all germanes spill at once
That makes ingratefull Man.
Fool. O Nunkle, Court holy-water in a dry house, is better then the Rain-water out o'door. Good Nunkle, in, ask thy Daughter' blessing, here's a night pities neither Wise-men, nor Fools.
Lear. Rumble thy belly full: spit Fire, spout Rain;
Nor Rain, Wind, Thunder, Fire are my Daughters,
I tax not you, you Elements with unkindness.
I never gave you Kingdome, call'd you Children;
You owe me no subscription. Then let fall
Your horrible pleasure. Here I stand your Slave,
A poor, infirm, weak, and despis'd old man:
But yet I call you servile Ministers,
That will with two pernicious Daughters join
Your high-engender'd Battels, 'gainst a head
So old and white as this. O, ho! 'tis foul.
Fool. He that has a house to put's head in, has a good Head-piece:
The Codpiece that will house, before the Head has any;
The Head, and he shall Lowse: so Beggars marry many.
That man that makes his toe, what he his heart should make,
Shall of a Corn cry woe, and turn his sleep to wake.
For there was never yet fair woman, but she made mouthes in a glass. Enter Kent.
Lear. No, I will be the patience of all patience.
I will say nothing.
Kent. Who's there?
Fool. Marry here's Grace, and a Codpiece, that's a Wise-man, and a Fool.
Kent. Alas Sir, are you here? things that love night,
Love not such nights as these: the wrathfull Skies
Gallow the very wanderers of the dark
And makes them keep their Caves: Since I was man,
Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid thunder,
Such groans of roaring Wind, and Rain, I never Remember to have heard. Man's Nature cannot carry
Th'affliction, nor the fear.
Lear. Let the great gods
That keep this dreadfull pudder o're our heads,
Find out their enemies now. Tremble thou Wretch,
That hast within thee undivulged Crimes
Unwhipt of Justice. Hide thee, thou bloudy hand;
Thou Perjur'd, and thou Simular of Virtue
That art incestuous. Caitiff, to pieces shake
That under covert and convenient seeming
Has practis'd on man's life. Close pent-up guilts,
Rive your concealing Continents, and cry
These dreadfull Summoners grace. I am a man,
More sinn'd against, then sinning.
Kent. Alack, bare-headed?
Gracious my Lord, hard by here is a Hovel,
Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the tempest:
Repose you there, while I to this hard house
(More harder then the stones whereof 'tis rais'd,
Which even but now, demanding after you,
Deny'd me to come in) return, and force
Their scanted curtesie.
Lear. My wits begin to turn.
Come on my boy. How dost my boy? Art cold?
I am cold my self. Where is this straw, my fellow?
The Art of our Necessities is strange,
And can make vild things precious. Come, your hovel;
Poor Fool, and Knave, I have one part in my heart
That's sorry yet for thee.
Fool. He that has and a little-tyne wit,
With height-ho, the Wind and the Rain,
Must make content with his fortunes fit,
Though the Rain it raineth every day.
Lear. True Boy: Come bring us to this Hovel. Exit
Fool. This is a brave night ta cool a Curtizan:
I'le speak a Prophesie e're I go:
When Priests are more in words, then matter:
When Brewers marre their Malt with water;
When Nobles are their taylor's tutors,
No Hereticks burn'd but wenches Sutors,
When every Case in Law is right:
No Squire in debt, nor no poor Knight:
When Slanders do not live in tongues;
Nor Cut-purses come not to throngs;
When Usurers tell their Gold i'th'field,

And

And Bauds, and Whores, do Churches build.
Then ſhall the Realm of Albion, come to great confuſion,
Then comes the time, who lives to ſee't,
That going ſhall be us'd with feet.
This prophecy Merlin ſhall make,
For I do live before his time. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Gloſter and Edmund.

Glo. Alack, alack Edmund, I like not this unnatural dealing; when I deſired their leave that I might pitty him, they took from me the uſe of mine own houſe, charg'd me on pain of perpetual diſpleaſure, neither to ſpeak of him, entreat for him, or any way ſuſtain him.

Baſt. Moſt ſavage and unnatural.

Glo. Go too; ſay you nothing. There is diviſion between the Dukes, and a worſe matter then that: I have received a Letter this night, 'tis dangerous to be ſpoken, I have lock'd the Letter in my Cloſſet, theſe injuries the King now bears, will be revenged home; there is part of a Power already footed, we muſt incline to the King, I will look him, and privily relieve him; go you and maintain talk with the Duke, that my charity be not of him perceived; if he ask for me, I am ill, and gone to bed, if I die for it, (as no leſſe is threatned me) the King my old Maſter muſt be relieved. There is ſtrange things toward, Edmund, pray you be carefull. Exit.

Baſt. This Curteſie forbid thee, ſhall the Duke
Inſtantly know, and of that Letter too;
This ſeems a fair deſerving, and muſt draw me
That which my father looſes: no leſſe then all,
The younger riſes, when the old doth fall. Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Kent. Here is the place, my Lord, good my Lord, enter,
The tiranny of the open night's too rough
For Nature to endure. Storm ſtill.

Lear. Let me alone.

Kent. Good my Lord, enter here.

Lear. Wilt break my heart?

Kent. I had rather break mine own,
Good my Lord enter.

Lear. Thou think'ſt 'tis much that this contentious ſtorm
Invades us to the skin ſo: 'tis to thee,
But where the greater malady is fix'd,
The leſſer is ſcarce felt. Thou'dſt ſhun a Bear,
But if thy flight lay toward the roaring Sea,
Thou'dſt meet the Bear i'th'mouth, when the minds free
The bodies delicate, the tempeſt in my mind,
Doth from my ſences take all feeling elſe,
Save what beats there. Filial ingratitude,
Is it not as this mouth ſhould tear his hand
For lifting food to't: But I will puniſh home;
No, I will weep no more. In ſuch a night,
To ſhut me out? Pour on, I will endure:
In ſuch a night as this? O Regan, Goneril,
Your old kind Father, whoſe frank heart gave all,
O that way madneſſe lies, let me ſhun that;
No more of that.

Kent. Good my Lord, enter here.

Lear. Prithee go in thy ſelf, ſeek thine own eaſe,
This tempeſt will not give me leave to ponder
On things would hurt me more, but I'le go in,
In Boy, go firſt. You houſeleſſe poverty, Exit.
Nay, get thee in; I'le pray, and then I'le ſleep.
Poor naked wretches, where ſo ere you are
That bide the pelting of this pittileſſe ſtorm,
How ſhall your houſeleſſe heads, and unfed ſides,
Your lop'd, and window'd raggedneſſe defend you
From ſeaſons ſuch as theſe? O I have tane
Too little care of this: take Phyſick, Pompe,
Expoſe thy ſelf to feel, what wretches feel,
That thou may'ſt ſhake the ſuperflux to them,
And ſhew the heavens more juſt.

Enter Edgar, and Fool.

Edg. Fathom and half, Fathom and half? poor Tom.

Fool. Come not in here Nuncle, heres a ſpirit, help me, help me.

Kent. Give me thy hand, who's there?

Fool. A ſpirit, a ſpirit, he ſayes his name's poor Tom

Ken. What art thou that do'ſt grumble there i'th'ſtraw? Come forth.

Edg. Away, the foul Fiend follows me, through the ſharp Hauthorn blow the winds. Humh, go to thy bed and warme thee.

Lear. Didſt thou give all to thy daughters? And art thou come to this?

Eg. Who gives any thing to poor Tom? Whom the foul Fiend hath led through Fire, and through Flame, through Sword, and Whirle Poole, ore Bog, and Quagmire, that hath laid Knives under his Pillow, and Halters in his Pue, ſet Rats-bane by his Porredge; made him Proud of heart, to ride on a Bay trotting horſe, over four arch'd Bridges, to courſe his own ſhadow for a traitor, Bleſſe thy five Wits, Tom's a cold. O do, de, do, de, do, de, bleſſe thee from Whirle-winds, Star-blaſting, and taking, do poor Tom ſome charity, whom the foul fiend vexes. There could I have him now, and there, and there again, and there.

Storm ſtill.

Lear. Has his Daughters brought him to this paſſe?
Could'ſt thou ſave nothing? Would'ſt thou give'em all?

Fool. Nay, he reſerv'd a Blanket, elſe we had been all ſham'd.

Lear. Now all the plagues that in the pendulous aire
Hang fated o're mens faults, light on thy daughters.

Kent. He hath no Daughters, Sir.

Lear. Death traitor, nothing could have ſubdu'd Nature
To ſuch a lowneſſe, but his unkind Daughters.
Is it the faſhion, that diſcarded Fathers,
Should have thus little mercy on their fleſh:
Judicious puniſhment, 'twas this fleſh begot
Thoſe Pelican Daughters.

Edg. Pillicock ſat on Pillicock hill, alow: alow, loo, loo.

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools, and Madmen.

Edgar. Take heed oth'foule fiend, obey thy Parents, keep thy word, juſtice, ſwear not, commit not, with mans sworn Spouse; set on thy Sweet-heart on proud array. Tom's a cold.

Lear. What hast thou been?

Edg. A servingman. Proud in heart, and mind: that curl'd my hair; wore Gloves in my cap; serv'd the Lust of my Mistris heart, and did the act of darkness with her. Swore as-many Oaths, as I spake words, and broak them in the sweet face of heaven. One, that slept in the contriving of Lust, and wak'd to do it. Wine lov'd I dearly; Dice dearly; and in Woman, out-Paramour'd the Turk. False of heart, light of ear, bloudy handed. Hog in sloth, Fox in stealth, Wolf in greedinesse, Dog in madnesse, Lion in prey. Let not the creaking of shooes, Nor the rustling of Silks, betray thy poor heart to woman. Keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of Plackets, thy pen from Lenders Books, and defie the foule fiend. Still through thy Hawthorn blowes the cold wind: Sayes suum, mun, nonny, Dolphin my Boy, Boy Sessey: let him trot by. Storm still.

Lear. Thou wert better in a Grave, then to answer with thy uncover'd body, this extremity of the Skies. Is man no more then this? Consider him well. Thou ow'st the Worme no Silk: the Beast, no Hide: the Sheep, no Wooll: the Cat no perfume. Ha? Here's three on's are sophisticated. Thou art the thing it self, unaccommodated man, is no more but such a poor, bare, forked Animal as thou art. Off, off you Lendings: Come, unbutton here.

Enter Glouc'ester, with a Torch.

Fool. Prethee Nuncle be contented, 'tis a naughty night to swim in. Now a little fire in a wild field, were like an old Letchers heart, a small spark, all the rest on's body, cold: Look, here comes a walking fire.

Edga. This is the foul Flibbertigibbet; he begins at Curfew, and walks at first Cock: He gives the Web And the Pin, squints the eye, and make the Hare-lip; Mildews the white Wheat, and hurts the poor Creature of the earth.

Swithold footed thrice the old.
He met the Night-Mare, and her ninefold,
Bid her a-light, and her troth-plight,
And aroynt the Witch, aroynt thee.

Kent. How fares your grace?

Lear. What's he?

Kent. Who's there? What is't you seek?

Glou. What are you there? Your Names?

Edg. Poor Tom, that eats the swimming Frog, the Toad, the Tod-pool, the wall-Newt, and the water: that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend rages, eats Cow-dung for Sallets; swallows the old Rat, and the ditch-Dog: drinks the green Mantle of the standing Pool: who is whipt from Tything to Tything, and stockt, punish'd, and imprison'd: who hath three Suits to his back, six shirts to his Body:

Horse to ride, and weapon to wear:
But Mice, and Rats, and such small Dear,
Have been Tom's food for seven long year:

Beware my follower. Peace Smulkin, peace thou fiend.

Glou. What, hath your Grace no better company?

Edg. The Prince of Darkness is a Gentleman. Modo he's call'd, and Mahu.

Glou. Our flesh and bloud, my Lord, is grown so vild, that it doth hate what it gets.

Edg. Poor Tom's a cold.

Glou. Go in with me; my duty cannot suffer T'obey in all your daughters hard commands:
Though all their injunction be to bar my doors,
And let this tyrannous night take hold upon you,
Yet have I ventured to come to seek you out,
And bring you where both fire, and food is ready.

Lear. First let me talk with this Philosopher,
What is the cause of Thunder?

Kent. Good my Lord take his offer,
Go into th'house.

Lear. I'le take a word with this same learned Theban:
What is your study?

Edg. How to prevent the fiend, and to kill Vermin.

Lear. Let us ask you one word in private.

Kent. Importune him once more to go my Lord,
His wits begin t'unsettle.

Glou. Can'st thou blame him? Storm still.
His Daughters seek his death: Ah, that good Kent,
He said it would be thus: poor banish'd man:
Thou sayest the King grows mad, I'le tell thee friend
I am almost mad my self, I had a Son,
Now out-law'd from my bloud: he sought my life
But lately: very late: I lov'd him (friend)
No father his Son dearer: true to tell thee,
The grief hath craz'd my wits. What a nights this?
I do beseech your grace.

Lear. O cry you mercy, sir:
Noble Philosopher, your company.

Edg. Tom's a cold.

Glou. In fellow there, into th'Hovel; keep thee warme

Lear. Come, let's in all.

Kent. This way, my Lord.

Lear. With him;
I will keep still with my Philosopher.

Kent. Good my Lord, sooth him:
Let him take the fellow.

Glou. Take him you on.

Kent. Sirra, come on: go along with us.

Lear. Come, good Athenian.

Glou. No words, no words, hush.

Edg. Child Rowland to the dark Tower came,
His word was still, fie, foh, and fum
I smell the bloud of a Brittish man. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Cornwall, and Edmund.

Corn. I will have revenge, ere I depart his house.

Bast. How my Lord, I may be censured, that Nature thus gives way to Loyalty, something fears me to think of.

Cornw. I now perceive, it was not altogether your Brothers evill disposition made him seek his death: but a provoking merit set a work by a reprovable badnesse in himself.

Bast. How malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be just? This is the Letter which he spoke of; which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O Heavens! that this Treason were not; or not I the detector.

Cornw. Go with me to the Dutchesse.

Bast. If the matter of this Paper be certain, you have mighty businesse in hand.

Corn.

Corn. True or falſe, it hath made thee Earl of Glouceſter: ſeek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehenſion.

Baſt. If I find him comforting the King, it will ſtuffe his ſuſpition more fully. I will perſever in my courſe of Loyalty, though the conflict be ſore between that and my bloud.

Corn. I will lay truſt upon thee; and thou ſhalt find a dear father in my Love. Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Kent and Glouceſter.

Glou. Here is better then the open aire, take it thankfully: I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can: I will not be long from you. Exit.

Kent. All the power of his wits, have given way to his impatience: the gods reward your kindneſſe.

Enter Lear, Edgar, and Fool.

Edg. Fraterretto calls me, and tells me Nero is an Angler in the Lake of Darkneſſe: pray innocent, and beware the foul fiend.

Fool. Prethee Nunkle tell me, whether a madman be a Gentleman, or a Yeoman.

Lear. A King, a King.

Fool. No, he's a Yeoman, that has a Gentleman to his Son: for he's a Yeoman that ſee's his Son a Gentleman before him.

Lear. To have a thouſand with red burning ſpits
Come hizzing in upon 'em.

Edg. Bleſſe thy five wits.

Kent. O pitty: Sir, where is the patience now
That you ſo oft have boaſted to remain?

Edg. My tears begin to take his part ſo much,
They mar my counterfeiting.

Lear. The little dogs, and all;
Trey, Blanch, and Sweet-heart: ſee, they bark at me,

Edg. Tom will throw his head at them: Avaunt you
Currs, be thy mouth or black or white:
Tooth that poiſons if it bite:
Maſtiffe, Grey-hound, Mongrill, Grim,
Hound or Spaniel, Brache, or Hym:
Or Bobtail tight, or Troudle tail,
Tom will make him weep and wail,
For with throwing thus my head;
Dogs leapt the hatch, and all are fled.
Do, de, de, de: ſeſe; Come, march to Wakes and Faires,
And Market Towns: poor Tom thy horn is drye. Exit.

Lear. Then let them Anatomize Regan: See what breeds about her heart. Is there any cauſe in Nature that make theſe hard hearts. You ſir, I entertain for one of my hundred; only, I do not like the faſhion of your garments. You will ſay they are Perſian; but let them be chang'd,

Enter Gloſter.

Kent. Now good my Lord, lie here, and reſt a while.

Lear. Make no noiſe, make no noiſe, draw the Curtains: ſo, ſo, we'll go to ſupper ith' morning.

Fool. And I'le go to bed at noon.

Glou. Come hither friend;
Where is the King my Maſter?

Kent. Here Sir, but trouble him not, his wits are gone.

Glou. Good friend, I prethee take him in thy armes;
I have o'reheard a plot of death upon him:
There is a Litter ready, lay him in't,
And drive toward Dover friend, where thou ſhalt meet
Both welcome, and protection. Take up thy Maſter,
If thou ſhould'ſt dally half an hour, his life
With thine, and all that offer to defend him,
Stand in aſſured loſſe. Take up, take up,
And follow me, that will to ſome proviſion
Give thee quick conduct. Come, come, away. Exeunt.

Scena Septima.

Enter Cornwall, Gonerill, Baſtard. and Servants.

Corn. Poſt ſpeedily to my Lord your husband, ſhew him this Letter, the Army of France is landed: ſeek out the traitor Gloſter.

Reg. Hang him inſtantly.

Gon. Pluck out his eyes.

Corn. Leave him to my diſpleaſure. Edmund, keep you our Siſter company: the revenges we are bound to take upon your traiterous father, are not fit for your beholding. Adviſe the Duke where you are going, to a moſt feſtinate preparation: we are bound to the like. Our Poſts ſhall be ſwift, and intelligent betwixt us. Farewell dear Siſter, farewell my Lord of Gloſter.

Enter Steward.

How now? Where's the King?

Stew. My Lord of Gloſter hath convey'd him hence.
Some five or ſix and thirty of his Knights
Hot Queſtrills after him, met him at gate,
Who, with ſome other of the Lords dependants,
Are gone with him toward Dover; where they boaſt
To have well armed friends.

Corn. Get horſes for your Miſtris.

Gon. Farewell ſweet Lord, and Siſter. Exit.

Corn. Edmund farewell: go ſeek the traitor Gloſter,
Pinnion him like a Thief, bring him before us:
Though well we may not paſſe upon his life
Without the forme of Juſtice; yet our power
Shall do a curt'ſie to our wrath, which men
May blame, but not controll.

Enter Glouceſter, and Servants.

Who's there? the traitor?

Reg. Ingratefull Fox, 'tis he.

Corn. Bind faſt his corky armes.

Glou. What means your Graces?
Good my friends conſider you are my Gueſts:
Do me no foul play, friends,

Corn. Bind him I ſay.

Reg. Hard, hard: O filthy traitor.

Glou. Unmercifull Lady, as you are, I'm none.

Corn. To this Chair bind him,
Villain, thou ſhalt find.

Glou. By the kind gods, 'tis moſt ignobly done
To pluck me by the Beard.

Reg. So white, and ſuch a traitor?

Glou. Naughty Lady,
Theſe hairs which thou do'ſt raviſh from my chin
Will quicken and accuſe thee. I am your Hoſt,
With Robbers hands, my hoſpitable favours

You should not ruffle thus. What will you do
Corn. Come Sir.
What Letters had you late from France?
Reg. Be simple answer'd, for we know the truth.
Corn. And what confederacy have you with the traitors, late footed in the Kingdome?
Reg. To whose hands
You have sent the Lunatick King: speak.
Glou. I have a Letter guessingly set down
Which came from one that's of a newtrall heart,
And not from one oppos'd.
Corn. Cunning.
Reg. And false.
Cor. Where hast thou sent the King?
Glou. To Dover.
Reg. Wherefore to Dover?
Was't thou not charg'd at perill.
Corn. Wherefore to Dover? Let him answer that.
Glou. I am tyed to th'Stake,
And I must stand the Course.
Reg. Wherefore to Dover?
Glou. Because I would not see thy cruell Nails
Pluck out his poor old eyes: nor thy fierce Sister,
In his Annointed flesh, stick boarish phangs.
The Sea, with such a storme as his bare head,
In hell-black-night indur'd, would have buoy'd up
And quench'd the Stelled fires:
Yet poor old heart, he holp the heavens to rain.
If Wolves had at thy Gate howl'd that stern time,
Thou should'st have said, good Porter turn the Key:
All Cruells else subscribe: but I shall see
The winged Vengeance overtake such Children.
Corn. See't shalt thou never. Fellows hold the Chair.
Upon these eyes of thine, I'le set my foot.
Glou. He that will think to live, till he be old,
Give me some help,-----O cruell! O you gods.
Reg. One side will mock another: th'other too.
Corn. If you see vengeance.
Serv. Hold your hand, my Lord?
I have serv'd you ever since I was a Child:
But better service have I never done you,
Then now to bid you hold.
Reg. How now, you dog?
Ser. If you did wear a beard upon your chin,
I'd shake it on this quarrel. What do you mean?
Corn. My Villain?
Ser. Nay then come on, and take the chance of anger.
Reg. Give me thy sword. A pezant stand up thus?
Kills him
Ser. Oh I am slain: my Lord, you have one eye left
To see some mischief on him. Oh.
Corn. Lest it see more, prevent it; Out vild gelly:
Where is thy luster now?
Glou. All dark and comfortlesse?
Where's my Son Edmund?
Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of Nature
To quit this horrid act.
Reg. Out treacherous Villain,
Thou call'st on him, that hates thee, It was he
That made the overture of thy Treasons to us:
Who is too good to pitty thee.
Glou. O my follies! then Edgar was abus'd.
Kind gods, forgive me that, and prosper him.
Reg. Go thrust him out at gates, and let him smell
His way to Dover. Exit with Gloster.
How is't my Lord? How look you?
Corn. I have receiv'd a hurt: follow me Lady:
Turn out that eyelesse Villain: throw this Slave
Upon the Dunghill: Regan, I bleed apace,
Untimely comes this hurt. Give me your arme. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. Yet better thus, and known to be contemn'd,
Then still contemn'd and flatter'd, to be worst:
The lowest, and most deject thing of Fortune,
Stands still in esperance, lives not in fear.
The lamentable change is from the best,
The worst returns to laughter. Welcome then,
Thou unsubstantiall aire that I embrace:
The wretch that thou hast blown unto the worst,
Owes nothing to thy blasts.
Enter Gloster led by an old man.
But who comes here? My Father poorly led?
World, World, O World!
But that thy strange mutations make us hate thee,
Life would not yield to age.
Oldm. O my good Lord, I have been your Tenant,
And your Fathers Tenant, these fourscore years.
Glo. Away, get thee away: good friend be gone,
Thy comforts can do me no good at all,
Thee they may hurt.
Oldm. You cannot see your way.
Glou. I have no way, and therefore want no eyes:
I stumbled when I saw. Full oft 'tis seen,
Our means secure us, and our meer defects
Prove our Commodities. Oh dear Son Edgar,
The food of thy abused fathers wrath:
Might I but live to see thee in my touch,
I'd say I had eyes again.
Oldm. How now? who's there?
Edg. O gods! Who is't can say I am at the worst?
I am worse then ere I was.
Oldm. 'Tis poor mad Tom.
Edg. And worse I may be yet: the worst is not,
So long as we can say this is the worst.
Oldm. Fellow, where goest?
Glou. Is it a Beggar-man?
Oldm Madman, and beggar too.
Glou. He has some reason, else he could not beg.
Ith'last nights storm, I such a fellow saw;
Which made me think a Man, a Worm. My Son
Came then into my mind, and yet my mind
Was then scarce Friends with him.
I have heard more since:
As Flies to th'wanton Boyes, are we to th'gods,
They kill us for their sport.
Edg. How should this be?
Bad is the Trade that must play the fool to sorrow,
Ang'ring it self, and others. Blesse thee Master.
Glou. Is that the naked fellow?
Oldm. I my Lord.
Glou. Get thee away: if for my sake
Thou wilt o're-take us hence a mile or twain
I'th'way toward Dover, do it for ancient love,
And bring some covering for this naked Soul,
Which I'le intreat to lead me.
Oldm. Alack sir, he is mad.

Glou.

Glou. 'Tis the times plague,
When Madmen lead the blind:
Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure:
Above the rest, begone.
Oldm. I'le bring him the Best Parrell that I have Come on't, what will, Exit.
Glou. Sirrah, naked fellow.
Edg. Poor Tom's a cold. I cannot daub it further.
Glou. Come hither fellow.
Edg. And yet I must:
Blesse thy sweet eyes, they bleed.
Glou. Know'st thou the way to Dover?
Edg. Both stile, and gate, horse-way, and foot-path: poor Tom hath been scar'd out of his good wits. Blesse thee good mans son, from the foul fiend. (plagues
Glou. Here take this purse, thou whom the heav'ns
Have humbled to all stroaks: that I am wretched
Makes thee the happier: heavens deal so still:
Let the superfluous, and Lust-dieted man,
That slaves your ordinance, that will not see
Because he do's not feel, feel your power quickly:
So distribution should undo excesse,
And each man have enough. Do'st thou know Dover?
Edg. I master.
Glou. There is a Cliffe, whose high and bending head
Looks fearfully in the confined Deep:
Bring me but to the very brim of it,
And I'le repair the misery thou do'st bear
With something rich about me: from that place,
I shall no lending need.
Edg. Give me thy arme;
Poor Tom shall lead thee. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Gonerill, Bastard, and Steward.
Gon. Welcome my Lord, I marvel our mild husband
Not met us on the way. Now, where's your Master?
Stew. Madam within, but never man so chang'd:
I told him of the Army that was Landed:
He smil'd at it. I told him you were coming,
His answer was, the worse. Of Glosters treachery,
And of the loyal service of his Son
When I inform'd him, then he call'd me Sot,
And told me I had turn'd the wrong side out:
What most he should dislike, seems pleasant to him;
What like, offensive.
Gon. Then shall you go no further.
It is the Cowish terror of his spirit
That dares not undertake: he'll not feel wrongs
Which tye him to an answer; our wishes on the way
May prove effects. Back Edmund to my Brother,
Hasten his Musters, and conduct his powers.
I must change names at home, and give the Distaffe
Into my Husbands hands. This trusty Servant
Shall passe between us: ere long you are like to hear
(If you dare venture in your own behalf)
A Mistresses command. Wear this; spare speech,
Decline your head. This kisse, if it durst speak,
Would stretch thy Spirits up into the aire:
Conceive, and fare thee well.
Bast. Yours in the ranks of death.
Gon. My most dear Gloster.
Oh, the difference of man, and man,
To thee a Womans services are due,
My fool usurps my body.
Stew. Madam, here comes my Lord.
Enter Albany.
Gon. I have been worth the whistle.
Alb. Oh Gonerill.
You are not worth the dust which the rude wind
Blows in your face.
Gon. Milk-liver'd man.
That bear'st a cheek for blows, a head of wrongs,
Who hast not in thy brows an eye-discerning,
Thine honor, from thy suffering.
Alb. See thy self devill:
Proper deformity seems not in the fiend
So horrid as in woman.
Gon. Oh vain fool.
Enter a Messenger.
Mes. Oh my good Lord, the Duke of Cornwalls dead,
Slain by his Servant, going to put out
The other eye of Gloster.
Alba. Glosters eyes?
Mes. A Servant that he bred, thrill'd with remorse,
Oppos'd against the act: bending his Sword
To his great Master, who, thereat enrag'd
Flew on him, and amongst them fell'd him dead,
But not without that harmfull stroke, which since
Hath pluck'd him after.
Alba. This shews you are above
You Justices, that these our nether crimes
So speedily can venge. But (O poor Gloster)
Lost he his other eye?
Mes. Both, both, my Lord.
This Letter Madam, craves a speedy answer:
'Tis from your Sister,
Gon. One way I like this well,
But being widow, and my Gloster with her,
May all the building in my fancy pluck
Upon my hatefull life. Another way
The News is not so tart. I'le read, and answer.
Alba. Where was his Son,
When they did take his eyes?
Mes. Come with my Lady hither.
Alba. He is not here.
Mes. No my good Lord, I met him back again.
Alba. Knows he the wickednesse?
Mes. I my good Lord: 'twas he inform'd against him
And quit the house of purpose, that their punishment
Might have the freer course.
Alb. Gloster, I live
To thank thee for the love thou shewd'st the King,
And to revenge thine eyes. Come hither friend,
Tell me what more thou know'st. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter with Drum and Colours, Cordelia, Gentlemen, and Souldiers.

Cor. Alack, 'tis he: why he was met even now
As made the vext Sea, singing aloud,
Crown'd with rank Fenitar, and furrow weeds,
With Hardocks, Hemlock, Nettles, Cuckow flowers,

Darnell, and all the idle weeds that grow
In our ſuſtaining Corn. A Century ſend forth;
Search every Acre in the high-grown field,
And bring him to our eye. What can mans wiſdome
In the reſtoring his bereaved Senſe: he that helps him,
Take all my outward worth.
Gent. There is means, Madam:
Our foſter Nurſe of Nature, is repoſe,
The which he lacks: that to provoke in him,
Are many Simples operative, whoſe power
Will cloſe the eye of Anguiſh.
Cord. All bleſt Secrets,
All you unpubliſh'd Vertues of the earth
Spring with my tears; be aidant, and remediate
In the good mans deſires: ſeek, ſeek for him,
Leſt his ungovern'd rage, diſſolve the life
That wants the means to lead it.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſ. News Madam,
The Britiſh Powers are marching hitherward.
Cord. 'Tis known before. Our preparation ſtands
In expectation of them. O dear father,
It is thy buſineſs that I go about: therefore great France
My mourning, and importun'd tears hath pittied:
Now blown Ambition doth our Arms incite,
But love, dear love, and our ag'd Fathers Right:
Soon may I hear, and ſee him. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Regan, and Steward.

Reg. But are my Brothers Powers ſet forth?
Stew I Madam.
Reg. Himſelf in perſon there?
Stew. Madam, with much adoe
Your Siſter is the better Souldier.
Reg. Lord Edmund ſpake not with your Lord at home;
Stew. No Madam.
Reg. What might import my Siſters Letter to him?
Stew. I know not, Lady.
Reg. Faith he is poſted hence on ſerious matter:
It was great ignorance. Gloſters eyes being out
To let him live. Where he arrives, he moves
All hearts againſt us: Edmund, I think is gone
In pitty of his miſery, to diſpatch
His nighted life: Moreover to deſcry
The ſtrength oth'Enemy.
Stew. I muſt needs after him, Madam, with my Letter.
Reg. Our troops ſet forth to morrow, ſtay with us:
The ways are dangerous.
Stew. I may not Madam:
My Lady charg'd my duty in his buſineſſe.
Reg. Why ſhould ſhe write to Edmund?
Might not you tranſport her purpoſes by word? Belike,
Some things, I know not what. I'le love thee much
Let me unſeal the Letter.
Stew. Madam, I had rather-----
Reg. I know your Lady do's not love her husband,
I am ſure of that: and at her late being here,
She gave ſtrange Iliads, and moſt ſpeaking looks
To Noble Edmund. I know you are of her boſome.
Stew. I Madam?
Reg. I ſpeak in underſtanding: Y'are: I know't,
Therefore I do adviſe you take this note:
My Lord is dead: Edmund, and I have talk'd,
And more convenient is he for my hand
Then for your Ladies: You may gather more:
If you do find him, pray you give him this;
And when your Miſtris hears thus much from you,
I pray deſire her call her wiſdome to her.
So fare you well:
If you do chance to hear of that blind traitor,
Preferment falls on him, that cuts him off.
Stew. Would I could meet him, Madam, I ſhould ſhew
What party I do follow.
Reg. Fare thee well. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Glouceſter, and Edgar.

Glou. When ſhall I come to th'top of that ſame hill?
Edg. You do climb up it now. Look how we labour.
Glou. Me thinks the ground is even.
Edg. Horrible ſteep.
Hark, do you hear the Sea?
Glou. No truly.
Edg. Why then your other Senſes grow imperfect
By your eyes anguiſh,
Glou. So may it be indeed.
Me thinks thy voice is alter'd, and thou ſpeak'ſt
In better phraſe, and matter then thou did'ſt.
Edg. Y'are much deceiv'd: in nothing am I chang'd
But in my Garments.
Glou. Me thinks y'are better ſpoken.
Edg. Come on ſir,
Heres the place: ſtand ſtill: how fearfull
And dizzy 'tis, to caſt ones eyes ſo low,
The Crows and Choughs, that wing the midway aire
Shew ſcarce ſo groſſe as Beetles. Half way down
Hangs one that gathers Sampire: dreadfull trade:
Me thinks he ſeems no bigger then his head.
The Fiſhermen that walk'd upon the beach
Appear like Mice: and yond tall Anchoring Bark,
Diminiſh'd to her Cock: her Cock, a Buoy
Almoſt to ſmall for ſight. The murmering Surge,
That on th'unnumbred idle Pebble chafes
Cannot be heard ſo high. I'le look no more,
Leſt my brain turn, and the deficient ſight
Topple down headlong.
Glou. Set me where you ſtand.
Edg. Give me your hand:
You are now within a foot of th'extream Verge:
For all beneath the Moon would I not leap upright.
Glou. Let go my hand:
Here friends, another purſe: in it, a Jewell
Well worth a poor mans taking. Fairies, and gods
Proſper it with thee. Go thou further off,
Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going.
Edg. Now fare ye well, good ſir.
Glou. With all my heart.
Edg. Why do I trifle thus with his deſpair,
'Tis done to cure it.
Glou. O you mighty gods!
This world I do renounce, and in your ſights

Shake patiently my great affliction off:
If I could bear it longer, and not fall
To quarrell with your great opposeless wills,
My snuff, and loathed part of Nature should
Burn it self out. If Edgar live, O blesse him.
Now fellow, fare the well.

Edg. Good Sir, farewell.

And yet I know not how conceit may rob
The Treasure of life, when life it self
Yields to the Theft. Had he bin where he thought,
By this had thought bin past. Alive, or dead?
Hoa, you sir: friend, here you sir, speak:
Thus might he passe indeed: yet he revives.
What are you sir?

Glou. Away, and let me die.

Edg. Had'st thou been ought
But Gozemore, feathers and aire,
(So many fathome down precipitating)
Thoud'st shiver'd like an Egge: but thou do'st breath:
Hast heavy substance, bleed'st not, speak, art sound.
Ten Masts at each, make not the altitude
Which thou hast perpendicularly fell,
Thy life's a Miracle. Speak yet again.

Glou. But have I fain, or no?

Edg. From the dread Summet of this Chalky Bourn
Look up a height, the shrill-gor'd Lark so far
Cannot be seen or heard: Do but look up.

Glou. Alack, I have no eyes:
Is wretchednesse depriv'd that benefit
To end it self by death? 'Twas yet some comfort,
When misery could beguile the tyrants rage,
And frustrate his proud will.

Edg. Give me your arme.
Up, so: How is't? Feel you your Legs? You stand.

Glou. Too well, too well.

Edg. This is above all strangenesse,
Upon the Crown oth' Cliffe. What thing was that
Which parted from you?

Glou. A poor unfortunate Beggar.

Edg. As I stood here below, me thought his eyes
Were two full Moons: he had a thousand Noses,
Horns walk'd, and wav'd like the enraged Sea:
It was some fiend: therefore thou happy father,
Think that the clearest gods, who make them honors
Of mens impossibilities, have preserved thee.

Glou. I do remember now: henceforth I'le bear
Affliction, till it do cry out it self
Enough, enough, and die. That thing you speak of,
I took it for a man: often 'twould say
The fiend, the fiend; he led me to that place,

Edg. Bear free and patient thoughts.

Enter Lear.

But who comes here?
The safer sense will ne're accomodate
His Master thus.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for crying. I am the King himself.

Edg. O thou side-piercing sight!

Lear. Natures above Art, in that respect. There's your Presse-money. That fellow handles his Bow like a Crow-keeper: draw me a Cloathiers yard. Look, look, a Mouse: peace, peace, this piece of toasted Cheese will doo't. There's my Gauntlet, I'le prove it on a Gyant. Bring up the brown Bills. O well flown Bird: ith' clout, ith' clout: Hewgh. Give the word.

Edg. Sweet Marjoram.

Lear. Passe.

Glou. I know that voice.

Lear. Ha! Gonerill with a white beard? They flatter'd me like a Dog, and told me I had the white hairs in my Beard, ere the black ones were there. To say I, and no, to every thing that I said: I, and no too, was no good Divinity. When the raign came to wet me once, and wind to make me chatter: when the Thunder would not peace at my bidding, there I found 'em, there I smelt 'em out. Go to, they are not men o'their words; they told me, I was every thing: 'Tis a Lie, I am not Agu-proof.

Glou. The trick of that voice, I do well remember: Is't not the King?

Lear. I, every inch a King.
When I do stare, see how the subject quakes.
I pardon that mans life. What was thy cause?
Adultery? thou shalt not die: die for Adultery?
No, the wren goes too't, and the small guilded Flie
Do's letcher in my sight. Let Copulation thrive:
For Glosters bastard Son was kinder to his father,
Then my Daughters got 'tween the lawfull sheets.
Too't Luxury pell-mell, for I lack Souldiers.
Behold yon simpring Dame, whose face between her Forks presages Snow; that minces Vertue, and do's shake the head to hear of pleasures name. The Fitchew, nor the soyled horse goes too't with a more riotous appetite: down from the waste they are Centaures, though Women all above: but to the Girdle do the gods inherit, beneath is all the fiends. There's hell, there's darkenesse, there is the sulpherous pit, burning, scalding, stench, consumption: Fie, fie, fie; pah, pah: Give me an Ounce Of Civet; good Apothecary sweeten my imagination: There's money for thee.

Glou. O let me kiss that hand.

Lear. Let me wipe it first,
It smells of Mortality.

Glou. O ruin'd piece of Nature, this great world
Shall so wear out to naught.
Do'st thou know me?

Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough: do'st thou squiny at me? No, do thy worst blind Cupid, I'le not love. Read thou this challenge, mark but the penning of it.

Glou. Were all thy Letters Suns, I could not see one.

Edg. I would not take this from report,
It is, and my heart breaks at it.

Lear. Read.

Glou. What with the Case of eyes?

Lear. Oh ho, are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse? Your eyes are in heavy case, your purse in a light, yet you see how this world goes.

Glou. I see it feelingly.

Lear. What, art mad? A man may see how this world goes, with no eyes. Look with thine ears: See how yond Justice rails upon yond simple thief. Heark in thine ear: Change places, and handy-dendy; which is the Justice, which is the thief: Thou hast seen a Farmers dog bark at a Beggar?

Glou. Sir.

Lear. And the Creature run from the Cur: there thou might'st behold the great image of Authority, a Dog's obey'd in Office. Thou, Rascal Beadle, hold thy bloudy hand: why do'st thou lash that Whore? Strip thy own back, thou hotly lusts to use her in that kind, for which thou whip'st her. The Usurer hangs the Cozener. Thorough rough and tatter'd cloaths, great Vices do appear: Robes, and furr'd gowns hide all. Place ſinns with gold, and the ſtrong Lance of juſtice, hurtleſſe breaks: Arme it in rags, a Pigmies ſtraw doth pierce it. None does offend, none, I ſay none, I'le able 'em; take that of me my friend, Who have the power to ſeal th'accuſers lips. Get thee glaſſe eyes, and like a ſcurvy Politician, ſeem to ſee the things thou do'ſt not. Now, now, now, now. Pull off my Boots: harder, harder, ſo.

Edg. O matter, and impertinency mixt,
Reaſon in Madneſſe.

Lear. If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take my eyes.
I know thee well enough, thy name is Gloſter:
Thou muſt be patient; we came crying hither:
Thou know'ſt, the firſt time that we ſmell the aire
We wawle, and cry. I will preach to thee: Mark.

Glou. Alack, alack the day.

Lear. When we are born, we cry that we are come
To this great ſtage of fools. This a good block:
It were a delicate ſtratagem to ſhooe
A Troop of horſe with felt: I'le put't in proofe,
And when I have ſtoln upon theſe Sons in Laws:
Then kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill.

Enter a Gentleman.

Gent. Oh here he is: lay hand upon him, Sir.
Your moſt dear Daughter.------

Lear. No reſcue? What, a Priſoner? I am even
The Natural Fool of fortune. Uſe me well,
You ſhall have ranſome. Let me have Surgeons,
I am cut to th'Brains.

Gent. You ſhall have any thing.

Lear. No Seconds? All my ſelf?
Why, this would make a man, a man of Salt;
To uſe his eyes for Garden water-pots. I will die bravely,
Like a ſmug Bridegroom. What? I will be Jovial:
Come, come, I am a King. Maſters, know you that?

Gent. You are a Royal one, and we obey you.

Lear. Then there's life in't. Come, and you get it,
You ſhall get it by running: Sa, ſa, ſa, ſa. Exit.

Gent. A ſight moſt pittifull in the meaneſt wretch,
Paſt ſpeaking of in a King. Thou haſt a Daughter
Who redeems Nature from the general curſe
Which twain have brought her to.

Edg. Hail gentle Sir.

Gent. Sir, ſpeed you: what's your will?

Edg. Do you hear ought (Sir) of a Battell toward.

Gent. Moſt ſure, and vulgar:
Every one hears that, which can diſtinguiſh ſound.

Edg. But by your favour:
How near's the other Army?

Gent. Near, and on ſpeedy foot: the main diſcry
Stands on the hourly thought.

Edg. I thank you ſir, that's all.

Gent. Though that the Queen on ſpecial cauſe is here,
Her Army is mov'd on. Exit.

Edg. I thank you Sir.

Glou. You ever gentle gods, take my breath from me,
Let not my worſer Spirit tempt me again
To die before you pleaſe.

Edg. Well pray you father.

Glou. Now good ſir, what are you?

Edg. A moſt poor man, made tame to Fortunes blows
Who, by the Art of known, and feeling ſorrows,
Am pregnant to good pitty. Give me your hand,
I'le lead you to ſome biding.

Glou. Hearty thanks:
The bounty, and the benizon of heaven
To boot, and boot.

Enter Steward.

Stew. A proclaim'd prize: moſt happy:
That eyeleſſe head of thine, was firſt fram'd fleſh
To raiſe my fortunes. Thou old, unhappy traitor,
Briefly thy ſelf remember: the Sword is out
That muſt deſtroy thee.

Glou. Now let thy friendly hand
Put ſtrength enough to't.

Stew. Wherefore, bold Pezant,
Darſt thou ſupport a publiſh'd Traitor? hence,
Leſt that th'infection of his fortune take
Like hold on thee. Let go his arm.

Edg. Chill not let go Zir,
Without vurther caſion.

Stew. Let go Slave, or thou dy'ſt.

Edg. Good Gentleman go your gate, and let poor volk paſſe: and'chud ha'bin zwagged out of my life, 'twould ha'bin zo long as 'tis, by a vortnight. Nay, come not near th'old man: keep out che vor'ye, or ice try Whither your Coſtard, or my Ballow be the harder; chill be plain with you.

Stew. Out Dunghill.

Edg. Chill pick your teeth Zir: come, no matter vor your foyns.

Stew. Slave thou haſt ſlain me: villain, take my purſe;
If ever thou wilt thrive, bury my body,
And give the Letters which thou find'ſt about me,
To Edmund Earl of Gloſter: ſeek him out
Upon the Engliſh party. Oh untimely death, death.

Edg. I know thee well. A ſerviceable Villain,
As duteous to the vices of thy Miſtris,
As badneſſe would deſire.

Glou. What, is he dead?

Edg. Sit you down Father: reſt you.
Let's ſee theſe Pockets; the Letters that he ſpeaks of
May be my friends: he's dead; I am only ſorry
He had no other Deathſman. Let us ſee:
Leave gentle wax, and manners: blame us not
To know our enemies minds, we rip their hearts,
Their Papers are more lawfull.

Reads the Letter.

Let our reciprocall vows be remembred. You have many opportunities to cut him off: if your will want not, time and place will be fruitfully offer'd. There is nothing done. If he return the Conqueror, then am I the Priſoner, and his bed, my Goal, from the loathed warmth whereof, deliver me, and ſupply the place of our Labour.

Your (Wife, ſo I would ſay) affectionate Servant. Gonerill.

Of indinguiſh'd ſpace of Womans will,
A plot upon her vertuous husbands life,
And the exchange my brother: here, in the ſands
Thee I'le rake up, the poſt unſanctified
Of murtherous Letchers: and in the mature time,
With this ungracious paper ſtrike the ſight
Of the death-practis'd Duke: for him 'tis well,
That of thy death, and buſineſſe, I can tell.

Glou. The King is mad:
How ſtiffe is my vilde ſenſe
That I ſtand up, and have ingenious feeling
Of my huge ſorrows? Better I were diſtract,
So ſhould my thoughts be ſever'd from my griefs,

Drum afar off.

And woes, by wrong imaginations looſe

The knowledge of themſelves.
Edg. Give me your hand:
Far off me thinks I hear the beaten Drum.
Come father, I'le beſtow you with a friend. Exeunt.

Scena Septima.

Enter Cordelia, Kent and Gentleman.

Cor. O thou good Kent,
How ſhall I live and work
To match thy goodneſſe?
My life will be too ſhort,
And every meaſure fail me.
Kent. To be acknowledg'd Madam is o're-paid;
All my reports go with the modeſt truth,
Nor more, nor clipt, but ſo.
Cor. Be better ſuited,
Theſe weeds are memories of thoſe worſer hours:
I prethee put them off.
Kent. Pardon dear Madam,
Yet to be known ſhortens my made intent,
My boon I make it, that you know me not,
Till time, and I think meet.
Cor. Then be't ſo my good Lord:
How do's the King?
Gent. Madam ſleeps ſtill.
Cor. O you kind gods!
Cure this great breach in his abuſed Nature,
Th'untun'd and jarring ſenſes, O wind up,
Of this child-changed Father.
Gent. So pleaſe your Majeſty.
That we may wake the King, he hath ſlept long?
Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and proceed
I'th'ſway of your own will: is he array'd?

Enter Lear in a Chair, carried by Servants.

Gent. I Madam: in the heavineſſe of ſleep,
We put freſh garments on him.
Be by, good Madam, when we do awake him,
I doubt not of his Temperance,
Cor. O my dear father, reſtauration hang
Thy medicine on my lips, and let this kiſſe
Repair thoſe violent harmes, that my two Siſters
Have in thy Reverence made.
Kent. Kind and dear Princeſſe.
Cor. Had you not bin their father, theſe white flakes
Did challenge pitty of them. Was this face
To be oppos'd againſt the jarring winds?
Mine Enemies dog, though he had bit me,
Should have ſtood that night againſt my fire,
And was't thou fain (poor Father)
To hovell thee with Swine and Rogues forlorn,
In ſhort, and muſty ſtraw? Alack, alack,
'Tis wonder that my life and wits, at once
Had not concluded all. He wakes, ſpeak to him.
Gent. Madam do you, 'tis fitteſt.
Cor. How does my Royal Lord?
How fares your Majeſty?
Lear. You do me wrong to take me out oth'grave;
Thou art a ſoul in bliſſe, but I am bound
Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
Do ſcald, like molten Lead.
Cor. Sir, do you know me?
Lear. You are a ſpirit I know, when did you die?
Cor. Still, ſtill, far wide.
Gent. He's ſcarce awake,
Let him alone a while.
Lear. Where have I bin?
Where am I? fair day light?
I am mightily abus'd; I ſhould even die with pitty
To ſee another thus. I know not what to ſay:
I will not ſwear theſe are my hands: let's ſee,
I feel this pin prick, would I were aſſur'd
Of my condition,
Cor. O look upon me, ſir,
And hold your hand in benediction o're me,
You muſt not kneel.
Lear. Pray do not mock me;
I am a very fooliſh fond old man,
Fourſcore and upward,
Not an hour more, nor leſſe:
And to deal plainly,
I fear I am not in my perfect mind.
Me thinks I ſhould know you, and know this man,
Yet I am doubtfull: for I am mainly ignorant
What place this is, and all the skill I have Remembers not theſe garments: nor I know not
Where I did lodge laſt night. Do not laugh at me,
For (as I am a man) I think this Lady
To be my child Cordelia.
Cor. And ſo I am: I am,
Lear. Be your tears wet?
Yes faith: I pray weep not.
If you have poiſon for me, I will drink it:
I know you do not love me, for your Siſters
Have (as I do remember) done me wrong.
You have ſome cauſe, they have not,
Cor. No cauſe, no cauſe.
Lear. Am I in France?
Kent. In your own kingdome, Sir,
Lear. Do not abuſe me.
Gent. Be comforted good Madam, the great rage
You ſee is kill'd in him: deſire him to go in,
Trouble him no more till further ſetling.
Cor. Wilt pleaſe your highneſſe walk?
Lear. You muſt bear with me:
Pray you now forget, and forgive,
I am old and fooliſh. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter with Drum and Colours, Edmund, Regan, Gentlemen, and Souldiers.

Baſt. Know of the Duke if his laſt purpoſe hold,
Or whether ſince he is advis'd by ought
To change the courſe, he's full of alteration,
And ſelf reproving, bring his conſtant pleaſure.
Reg. Our Siſters man is certainly miſcarried.
Baſt. 'Tis to be doubted Madam.
Reg. Now ſweet Lord,

You

You know the goodneſſe I intend upon you:
Tell me but truly, but then ſpeak the truth.
Do you not love my Siſter?
Baſt. In honour'd Love.
Reg. But have you never found my Brothers way,
To the fore-fended place?
Baſt. No by mine honour, Madam.
Reg. I never ſhall endure her, dear my Lord,
Be not familiar with her.
Baſt. Fear not, ſhe and the Duke her husband.

Enter with Drum & Colours, Albany, Goneril, Souldiers.

Alba. Our very loving Siſter, well be-met:
Sir, this I heard, the King is come to his Daughter
With others, whom the rigour of our State
Forc'd to cry out.
Reg. Why is this reaſon'd?
Gone. Combine together 'gainſt the Enemy:
For theſe domeſtick, and particular broils,
Are not the queſtion here.
Alb. Let's then determine with th'ancient of war
On our proceeding.
Reg. Siſter, you'll go with us?
Gon. No.
Reg. 'Tis moſt convenient, pray go with us.
Gon. Oh, ho, I know the Riddle, I will go.
Exeunt both the Armies.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. If ere your Grace had ſpeech with man ſo poor,
Hear me one word.
Alb. I'le overtake you, ſpeak.
Edg. Before you fight the Battel, ope this Letter:
If you have victory, let the Trumpet ſound
For him that brought it: wretch though I ſeem,
I can produce a Champion, that will prove
What is avouched there. If you miſcarry,
Your buſineſſe of the world hath ſo an end,
And machination ceaſes. Fortune loves you.
Alb. Stay till I have red the Letter.
Edg. I was forbid it.
When time ſhall ſerve, let but the Herald cry.
And I'le appear again. Exit.
Alb. Why fare thee well, I will o're-look thy paper.

Enter Edmund.

Baſt. The Enemy'es in view, draw up your powers,
Here is the gueſſe of their true ſtrength and forces,
By diligent diſcovery, but your haſt
Is now urg'd on you.
Alb. We will greet the time. Exit.
Baſt. To both theſe Siſters have I ſworn my love:
Each jealous of the other, as the ſtung
Are of the Adder. Which of them ſhall I take?
Both? One? Or neither? Neither can be enjoy'd
If both remain alive: To take the Widow,
Exaſperates, makes mad her ſiſter Goneril,
And hardly ſhall I carry out my ſide,
Her husband being alive. Now then, we'll uſe
His countenance for the Battel, which being done,
Let her who would be rid of him, deviſe
His ſpeedy taking off. As for the mercy
Which he intends to Lear, and to Cordelia,
The Battel done, and they within our power;
Shall never ſee his pardon: for my ſtate,
Stands on me to defend, not to debate. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Alarum within. Enter with Drum and Colours, Lear Cordelia, and Souldiers, over the Stage, & Exeunt.

Enter Edgar, and Glouceſter.

Edg. Here Father, take the ſhadow of this tree
For your good hoaſt: pray that the right may thrive:
If ever I return to you again,
I'le bring you comfort.
Glo. Grace be with you Sir. Exit.
Alarum and Retreat within.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. Away old man, give me thy hand, away:
King Lear hath loſt, he and his Daughter tane,
Give me thy hand. Come on.
Glo. No further Sir, a man may rot even here.
Edg. What in ill thoughts again?
Men muſt endure
Their going hence, even as their coming hither,
Ripeneſſe is all, come on.
Glo. And that's true too. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter in conqueſt with Drum & Colours, Edmund, Lear, and Cordelia, as priſoners, Souldiers, Captain.

Baſt. Some Officers take them away: good guard,
Untill their greater pleaſures firſt be known
That are to cenſure them.
Cor. We are not the firſt,
Who with beſt meaning have incurr'd the worſt:
For thee oppreſſed King I am caſt down.
My ſelf could elſe out-frown falſe fortunes frown.
Shall we not ſee theſe Daughters, and theſe Siſters?
Lear. No, no, no, no: come lets away to priſon:
We two alone will ſing like Birds ith' Cage:
When thou do'ſt ask me bleſſing, I'le kneel down
And ask of thee forgiveneſſe: So we'll live,
And pray and ſing, and tell old tales, and laugh
At guilded Butterflies: and hear poor Rogues
Talk of Court news, and we'll talk with them too,
Who looſes, and who wins; who's in, who's out:
And take upon's the miſtery of things,
As if we were Gods ſpies: And we'll wear out
In a wall'd priſon, packs and ſects of great ones
That ebbe and flow by th'Moon.
Baſt. Take them away.
Lear. Upon ſuch ſacrifices my Cordelia,
The gods themſelves throw incenſe.
Have I caught thee?
He that parts us, ſhall bring a Brand from heaven,
And fire us hence, like Foxes: wipe thine eye,
The good years ſhall devour them, fleſh and fell,

E're

Ere they shall make us weep?
We'll see'em starv'd first: come. Exit.
Bast. Come hither Captain, hark.
Take thou this note, go follow them to prison,
One step I have advanc'd thee, if thou dost
As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy way
To Noble Fortunes: know thou this, that men
Are as the time is; to be tender minded
Do's not become a Sword, thy great imployment
Will not bear question: either say thou'lt do't,
Or thrive by other means,
Capt. I'le do't my Lord.
Bast. About it, and write happy, when th'ast done,
Mark I say instantly, and carry it so
As I have set it down. Exit Captain.

Enter Albany, Gonerill, Regan, Souldiers.

Alba. Sir, you have shew'd to day your valiant strain
And fortune led you well: you have the Captives
Who were the opposites of this dayes strife:
I do require them of you so to use them,
As we shall find their merits, and our safety
May equally determine.
Bast. Sir, I thought it fit,
To send the old and miserable King to some retention,
Whose age had Charmes in it, whose Title more,
To pluck the common bosome on this side,
And turn our imprest Launces in our eyes
Which do command them. With him I sent the Queen
My reason all the same, and they are ready
To morrow, or at further space, t'appear
Where you shall hold your Session.
Alb. Sir, by your patience.
I hold you but a subject of this War,
Not as a brother.
Reg. That's as we list to grace him.
Me thinks our pleasure might have bin demanded
Ere you had spoke so far. He led our Powers,
Bore the Commission of my place and person,
The which immediacy may well stand up,
And call it self your Brother.
Gon. Not so hot:
In his own grace he doth exalt himself,
More then in your addition.
Reg. In my rights,
By me invested, he compeers the best.
Alb. That were the most, if he should husband you.
Reg. Jesters do oft prove Prophets.
Gon. Holla, holla,
That eye that told you so, look'd but a squint.
Reg. Lady I am not well, else I should answer
From a full flowing stomack. Generall,
Take thou my souldiers, prisoners, patrimony,
Dispose of them, of me, the walls are thine:
Witnesse the world, that I create thee here
My Lord, and Master.
Gon. Mean'you to enjoy him?
Alb. The let alone lies not in your good will.
Bast. Nor in thine, Lord.
Alb. Half-blouded fellow, yes.
Reg. Let the Drum strike, and prove my title thine.
Alb. Stay yet, hear reason: Edmund, I arrest thee
On capitall Treason; and in thy arrest,
This guilded Serpent: for your claim fair Sisters,
I bare it in the interest of my wife,
'Tis she is sub-contracted to this Lord,
And I her husband contradict your Bans.
If you will marry, make your loves to me;
My Lady is bespoke.
Gon. An enterlude.
Alb. Thou art armed, Gloster,
Let the Trumpet sound:
If none appear to prove upon thy person,
Thy heynous, manifest, and many Treasons;
There is my pledge: I'le make it on thy heart
Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing lesse
Then I have here proclaim'd thee.
Reg. Sick, O sick.
Gon. If not, I'le ne're trust medicine.
Bast. There's my exchange, what in the world he is
That names me Traitor, villain-like he lies,
Call by the Trumpet: he that dares approach;
On him, on you, who not, I will maintain
My truth and honor firmly.

Enter a Herald.

Alb. A Herald, ho.
Trust to thy single vertues, for thy Souldiers
All levied in my name, have in my name
Took their discharge.
Reg. My sickneſſe grows upon me.
Alb. She is not well, convey her to my Tent,
Come hither Herald, let the Trumpet sound,
And read out this. A Trumpet sounds.

Herald reads.

If any man of quality or degree within the lists of the Army, will maintain upon Edmund supposed Earl of Gloster, that he is a manifold Traitor, let him appear by the third sound of the Trumpet: he is bold in his defence. 1 Trumpet.
Her. Again. 2 Trumpet.
Her. Again. 3 Trumpet.
Trumpet answers him within.

Enter Edgar armed.

Alb. Ask him his purposes, why he appears
Upon this Call o'th'Trumpet.
Her. What are you?
Your name, your quality, and why you answer
This present Summons?
Edg. Know my name is lost
By treasons tooth: bare-gnawn, and Canker-bit,
Yet am I Noble as the Adversary
I come to cope.
Alb. Which is that Adversary?
Edg. What's he that speaks for Edmund Earl of Gloster?
Bast. Himself, what saist thou to him?
Edg. Draw thy Sword.
That if my speech offend a Noble heart,
Thy arme may do thee Justice, here is mine:
Behold it is my priviledge,
The priviledge of mine honors,
My oath, and my profession. I protest,
Maugre thy strength, place, youth, and eminence,
Despise thy victor-Sword, and fire new fortune,
Thy valour, and thy heart, thou art a traitor:
False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy father,
Conspirant 'gainst this high illustrious Prince,
And from th'extreamest upward of thy head,
To the discent and dust below thy foot,

A moſt Toad-ſpotted traitor. Say thou no,
This Sword, this arme, and my beſt ſpirits are bent
To prove upon thy heart, whereto I ſpeak,
Thou lyeſt.
Baſt. In wiſdome I ſhould ask thy name,
But ſince thy out-ſide looks ſo fair and Warlike,
And that thy tongue (ſome ſay) of breeding breaths,
What ſafe, and nicely I might well delay,
By rule of Knight-hood, I diſdain and ſpurn:
Back do I toſſe theſe Treaſons to thy head;
With the hell-hated Lie, ore-whelm thy heart,
Which for they yet glance by, and ſcarcely bruiſe,
This ſword of mine ſhall give them inſtant way,
Where they ſhall reſt for ever. Trumpets ſpeak.
Alb. Save him, ſave him. Alarums. Fights.
Gon. This is practiſe Gloſter,
By th'law of War, thou waſt not bound to anſwer
An unknown oppoſite: thou art not vanquiſh'd,
but cozen'd, and beguil'd.
Alb. Shut your mouth Dame,
Or with this paper ſhall I ſtop it: hold Sir,
Thou worſe then any name, read thine own evil:
No tearing Lady, I perceive you know it.
Gon. Say if I do, the Laws are mine not thine,
Who can arraign me for't? Exit.
Alb. Moſt monſtrous! O, know'ſt thou this paper?
Baſt. Ask me not what I know.
Alb. Go after her, ſhe's deſperate, govern her.
Baſt. What you have charg'd me with,
That have I done,
And more, much more, the time will bring it out.
'Tis paſt, and ſo am I: But what art thou
That haſt this fortune on me? If thou'rt Noble,
I do forgive thee.
Edg. Let's exchange charity:
I am no leſſe in bloud then thou art Edmund.
If more, the more th'haſt wrong'd me:
My name is Edgar, and thy Fathers ſon,
The gods are juſt, and of our pleaſant vices
Make inſtruments to plague us:
The dark and vitious place, where thee he got,
Coſt him his eyes.
Baſt. Th'haſt ſpoken right, 'tis true,
The Wheel is come full circle, I am here.
Alb. Me thought thy very gate did propheſie
A Royal Nobleneſſe: I muſt embrace thee,
Let ſorrow ſplit my heart, if ever I
Did hate thee, or thy father.
Edg. Worthy Prince I know't.
Alb. Where have you hid your ſelf?
How have you known the miſeries of your father?
Edg. By nurſing them my Lord. Liſt a brief tale,
And when 'tis told, O that my heart would burſt.
The bloudy proclamation to eſcape
That follow'd me ſo neer, (O our lives ſweetneſſe!
That we the pain of death would hourly die,
Rather then die at once) taught me to ſhift
Into a mad-mans rags, t'aſſume a ſemblance
That very Dogs diſdain'd: and in this habit
Met I my father with his bleeding Rings,
Their precious Stones new loſt: became his guide,
Led him, beg'd for him, ſav'd him from deſpair,
Never (O fault) reveal'd my ſelf unto him,
Untill ſome halfe hour paſt, when I was arm'd,
Not ſure, though hoping of this good ſucceſſe,
I ask'd his bleſſing, and from firſt to laſt
Told him our Pilgrimage. But his flaw'd heart
(Alack too weak the conflict to ſupport)
'Twixt two extreams of paſſion, joy and grief,
Burſt ſmilingly.
Baſt. This ſpeech of yours hath mov'd me,
And ſhall perchance do good, but ſpeak you on,
You look as you had ſomething more to ſay.
Alb. If there be more, more wofull, hold it in,
For I am almoſt ready to diſſolve,
Hearing of this.

Enter a Gentleman.

Gent. Help, help; O help.
Edg. What kind of help?
Alb. Speak man.
Edg. What means this bloudy Knife?
Gent. 'Tis hot, it ſmoaks, came even from the heart of------O ſhe's dead.
Alb. Who dead? Speak man.
Gent. Your Lady Sir, your Lady; and her Siſter
By her is poyſon'd: ſhe confeſſes it.
Baſt. I was contracted to them both, all three
Now marry in an inſtant.
Edg. Here comes Kent.

Enter Kent.

Alb. Produce the bodies, be they live or dead.
Gonerill and Regans bodies brought out.
This judgement of the heavens that makes us tremble,
Touches us not with pitty. O! is this ſhe?
The time will not allow the complement
Which very manners urges.
Kent. I am come
To bid my King and Maſter aye good night,
Is he not here?
Alb. Great thing of us forgot,
Speak Edmund, where's the King? and where's Cordelia?
Seeſt thou this object Kent.
Kent. Alack, why thus?
Baſt. Yet Edmund was belov'd:
The one the other poiſon'd for my ſake,
And after, ſlew her ſelf.
Alb. Even ſo: cover their faces.
Baſt. I pant for life: ſome good I mean to do
Deſpight of mine own Nature. Quickly ſend,
(Be brief in it) to th'Caſtle for my Writ
Is on the life of Lear, and Cordelia:
Nay, ſend in time.
Alb. Run, run, O run?
Edg. To whom my Lord? Who has the Office?
Send thy token of repreeve.
Baſt. Well thought on, take my Sword,
Give it the Captain.
Edg. Haſte thee for thy life.
Baſt. He hath Commiſſion from thy Wife and me,
To hang Cordelia in the priſon, and
To lay the blame upon her own diſpair,
That ſhe fore-did her ſelf.
Alb. The gods defend her, bear him hence a while,

Enter Lear with Cordelia in his armes.

Lear. Howl, howl, howl: O you are men of ſtones,
Had I your tongues and eyes, I'ld uſe them ſo,
That heavens vault ſhould crack: ſhe's gone for ever,
I know when one is dead, and when one lives,
She's dead as earth: Lend me a Looking-glaſſe,

If

If that her breath will mist or stain the stone,
Why then she lives.
Kent. Is this the promis'd end?
Edge. Or image of that horror.
Alb. Fall and cease.
Lear. This feather stirs, she lives: if it be so,
It is a chance which do's redeem all sorrows
That ever I have felt.
Kent. Oh my good Master.
Lear. Prethee away.
Edg. 'Tis noble Kent your friend.
Lear. A plague upon you murtherers, Traitors all,
I might have sav'd her, now she's gone for ever:
Cordelia, Cordelia, stay a little. Ha.
What is't thou saist? her voyce was ever soft,
Gentle, and low, an excellent thing in woman.
I kill'd the slave that was a hanging thee.
Gent. 'Tis true (my Lords) he did.
Lear. Did I not, fellow?
I have seen the day, with my good biting Faulchion
I would have made him skip: I am old now,
And these same crosses spoyle me. Who are you?
Mine eyes are o'th' best, I'le tell you straight.
Kent. If Fortune brag of two, she lov'd and hated,
One of them we behold.
Lear. This is a dull sight, are you not Kent?
Kent. The same: your servant Kent,
Where is your servant Caius?
Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you that,
He'll strike, and quickly too, he's dead and rotten.
Kent. No, my good Lord, I am the very man.
Lear. I'le see that straight.
Kent. That from your first of difference and decay,
Have follow'd your sad steps.
Lear. You are welcome hither.
Kent. Nor no man else:
All's cheerlesse, dark, and deadly:
Your eldest Daughters have fore-done themselves,
And desperately are dead.
Lear. I, so I think.
Alb. He knowes not what he sayes, and vain is it
That we present us to him.

Enter a Messenger.

Edg. Very bootlesse.
Mes. Edmund is dead, my Lord.
Alb. That's but a trifle here:
You Lords and noble friends know our intent,
What comfort to this great decay may come,
Shall be appli'd. For us we will resign,
During the life of this old Majesty,
To him our absolute power, you to your rights,
With boot, and such addition as your Honours
Have more then merited. All Friends shall
Taste the wages of their virtue, and all Foes
The Cup of their deservings: O see, see.
Lear. And my poor Fool is hang'd: No, no, no life?
Why should a Dog, a Horse, a Rat have life,
And thou no breath at all? Thou'lt come no more,
Never, never, never, never, never.
Pray you undoe this Button. Thank you, Sir,
Do you see this? look on her, look on her lips,
Look there, look there. He Dies.
Edg. He faints, my Lord, my Lord.
Kent. Break heart, I prethee break.
Edg. Look to my Lord.
Kent. Vex not his Ghost, O let him passe, he hates him,
That would upon the wrack of this tough world
Stretch him out longer.
Edg. He is gone indeed.
Kent. The wonder is, he hath endur'd so long,
He but usurpt his life.
Alb. Bear them from hence, our present businesse
Is generall woe: Friends of my Soule, you 'twain,
Rule in this Realm, and the gor'd state sustain.
Kent. I have a Journey, Sir, shortly to go,
My Master calls me, I must not say no. Dies.
Edg. The weight of this sad time we must obey,
Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say:
The oldest hath born most, we that are young,
Shall never see so much, nor live so long.

Exeunt with a dead march.

FINIS.

The Tragedy of OTHELLO, the Moore of Venice.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Rodorigo, and Iago.

Rodorigo.

NEver tell me, I take it very unkindly
That thou(Iago)who hast had my purse, (this.
As if the strings were thine,should'st know of Iago. But you'll not hear me. If ever I did
Of such a matter, abhor me. (dreame
Rodo. Thou told'st me,
Thou didst hold him in thy hate.
Iago. Despise me
If I doe not. Three great ones of the City,
(In personall suit to make me his Lieutenant)
Off-capt to him: and by the faith of man
I know my price, I am worth no worse a place.
But he (as loving his own pride and purposes)
Evades them, with a Bumbast Circumstance,
Horribly stuft with Epithets of Warre,
Non-suits my Mediators. For certes, sayes he,
I have already chose my Officer. And what was he?
Forsooth, a great Arithmetician,
One Michel Cassio, a Florentine,
(A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife)
That never set a Squadron in the Field,
Nor the division of a Battell knowes
More then a Spinster: Unlesse the Bookish Theorick:
Wherein the Tongued Consuls can propose
As Masterly as he, meer prattle (without practice)
Is all his Souldiership. But he (Sir) had th'election
And I (of whom his eyes had seen the proof
At Rhodes, at Cyprus, and on others grounds
Christian, and Heathen) must be be-lee'd, and calm'd
By Debitor, and Creditor. This Counter-Caster,
He (in good time) must his Lieutenant be,
And I (blesse the mark) his Moore-shps Ancient.
Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been his hang- (man.
Iago. Why there's no remedy,
'Tis the curse of Service;
Preferment goes by Letter, and affection,
And not by old gradation, where each second
Stood heir to th' first. Now, Sir, be Judge your self,
Whether I in any just terme am Affin'd
To love the Moore?
Rod. I would not follow him then.
Iago. O, Sir, content you.
I follow him to serve my turn upon him.
We cannot all be Masters, nor all Masters
Cannot be truly follow'd. You shall marke
Many a dutious and knee-crooking Knave,
That (doting on his own obsequious bondage)
Weares out his time, much like his Masters Asse,
For nought but Provender, and when he's old Casheer'd.
Whip me such honest Knaves. Others there are
Who trimm'd in Formes, and Visages of duty,
Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves.
And throwing but showes of service on their Lords,
Doe well thrive by them.
And when they have lin'd in their Coats
Doe themselves Homage.
These Fellowes have some soule,
And such a one doe I professe my self. For (sir)
It is as sure as you are Rodorigo,
Were I the Moore, I would not be Iago:
In following him, I follow but my self.
Heaven is my Judge, not I, for love and duty,
But seeming so, for my peculiar end:
For when my outward action doth demonstrate
The native act, and figure of my heart
In complement externe, 'tis not long after
But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve
For Dawes to peck at; I am not what I am.
Rod. What a fall Fortune do's the thick-lips owe
If he can carry't thus?
Iago. Call up her Father:
Rowse him, make after him, poyson his delight,
Proclaime him in the streets. Incense her kinsmen,
And though he in a fertile Clymate dwell,
Plague him with Flyes: though that his joy be joy,
Yet throw such chances of vexation on't,
As it may loose some colour.
Rodo. Here is her Fathers house, I'le call aloud.
Iago. Doe, with like timorous accent, and dire yell,
As when (by night and negligence) the fire
Is spied in populous Cities.
Rod. VVhat hoa: Brabantio, Signior Brabantio, hoa.
Iago. Awake, what hoa, Brabantio: Thieves, thieves.
Look to your House, your Daughter, and your Bags,
Thieves, thieves.
Bra. Above. VVhat is the reason of this terrible
Summons? what is the matter there?
Rodo. Signior, is all your Family within?
Iago. Are your doores lock'd?
Bra. VVhy? wherefore aske you this?
Iago. Sir, y'are robb'd, for shame put on your Gown,

Your

Your heart is burſt, you have loſt half your ſoule
Even now, very now, an old black Ramme
Is Tupping your white Ewe. Ariſe, ariſe,
Awake the ſnorting Citizens with the Bell,
Or elſe the Devil will make a Grand-fire of you.
Ariſe I ſay.
Bra. What, have you loſt your wits?
Rod. Moſt Reverend Signior, do you know my voyce?
Bra. Not I: what are you?
Rod. My name is Rodorigo.
Bra. The worſer welcome:
I have charg'd thee not to haunt about my doores:
In honeſt plainneſſe thou haſt heard me ſay,
My Daughter is not for thee. And now in madneſſe
(Being full of ſupper, and diſtempering draughts)
Upon malicious knavery, doſt thou come
To ſtart my quiet.
Rod. Sir, Sir, Sir.
Bra. But thou muſt needs be ſure,
My Spirits and my place have in their power
To make this bitter to thee.
Rod. Patience, good Sir.
Bra. What tell'ſt thou me of Robbing?
This is Venice: my houſe is not a Grange.
Rod. Moſt grave Brabantio,
In ſimple and pure ſoule, I come to you.
Iag. Sir, you are one of thoſe that will not ſerve God, if the Devil bid you. Becauſe we come to do you ſervice, and you think we are Ruffians, you'll have your Daughter cover'd with a Barbary Horſe, you'll have your Nephews neigh to you, you'll have Courſers for Couſins, and Gennets for Germans.
Bra. What profane wretch art thou?
Iag. I am one, Sir, that comes to tell you, your Daughter and the Moore, are making the Beaſt with two backs.
Bra. Thou art a Villain.
Iago. You are a Senator.
Bra. This thou ſhalt anſwer. I know thee, Rodorigo.
Rod. Sir, I will anſwer any thing. But I beſeech you,
If't be your pleaſure, and moſt wiſe conſent,
(As partly I find it is) that your fair Daughter,
At this odde Even and dull Watch oth' night
Tranſported with no worſe or better guard,
But with a Knave of common hire, a Gundelier,
To the groſſe claſpes of a Laſcivious Moore:
If this be known to you, and your Allowance,
We then have done you bold and ſawcy wrongs.
But if you know not this, my manners tell me,
We have your wrong rebuke. Doe not believe
That from the ſenſe of all Civility,
I thus would play and trifle with your Reverence.
Your Daughter (if you have not given her leave)
I ſay again, hath made a groſſe revolt,
Tying her Duty, Beauty, Wit, and Fortunes
In an extravagant, and wheeling Stranger,
Of here, and every where: ſtraight ſatisfie your ſelf.
If ſhe be in your Chamber, or your houſe,
Let looſe on me the Juſtice of the ſtate
For thus deluding you.
Bra. Strike on the Tinder, hoa:
Give me a Taper: call up all my people,
This Accident is not unlike my dreame,
Belief of it oppreſſes me already.
Light, I ſay, light.
Iago. Farewell: for I muſt leave you.
It ſeems not meet, nor wholſome to my place
To be producted, as if I ſtay, I ſhall,
Againſt the Moore. For I doe know the ſtate,
(However this may gall him with ſome check)
Cannot with ſafety caſt him. For he's embark'd
With ſuch loud reaſon to the Cyprus warres,
(Which even now ſtands in Act) that for their ſoules
Another of his fadome, they have none,
To lead their buſineſſe. In which regard,
Though I doe hate him as I doe hell,
Yet, for neceſſity of preſent life,
I muſt ſhew out a Flag, and ſign of Love,
(Which is indeed but ſign) that you ſhall ſurely find him
Lead to the Sagitary the raiſed Search:
And there will I be with him. So farewell. Exit.

Enter Brabantio, with Servants and Torches.

Bra. It is too true an evil. Gone ſhe is,
And what's to come of my deſpiſed time,
Is naught but bitterneſſe. Now, Rodorigo,
Where didſt thou ſee her? (Oh unhappy Girle)
With the Moore ſaiſt thou? (Who would be a Father?)
How didſt thou know 'twas ſhe? (Oh ſhe deceives me
Paſt thought:) what ſaid ſhe to you? Get moe Tapers:
Raiſe all my Kinted. Are they married think you?
Rod. Truly I think they are.
Bra. Oh heaven: how got ſhe out?
Oh treaſon of my blood.
Fathers, from hence truſt not your Daughters minds
By what you ſee them Act. Are there not charmes,
By which the property of Youth and Maidhood
May be abus'd? Have you not read, Rodorigo,
Of ſome ſuch thing?
Rod. Yes, ſir: I have indeed.
Bra. Call up my brothers: oh would you had had her.
Some one way, ſome another. Doe you know
Where we may apprehend her, and the Moore?
Rod. I think I can diſcover him, if you pleaſe
To get good Guard, and go along with me.
Bra. Pray you lead on. At every Houſe I'le call,
(I may command at moſt) get Weapons (hoa)
And raiſe ſome ſpeciall Officers of might:
On good Rodorigo, I will deſerve your pains. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, Iago, Attendants, with Torches.

Iago. Though in the trade of warre I have ſlain men,
Yet doe I hold it very ſtuffe oth' Conſcience
To do no contriv'd murder: I lake iniquity
Sometime to doe me ſervice. Nine or ten times
I had thought to have yerk'd him here under the Ribbes.
Othel. 'Tis better as it is.
Iago. Nay, but he prated,
And ſpoke ſuch ſcurvy, and provoking termes
Againſt your Honour, that with the little godlineſs I have,
I did full hard forbear him. But I pray you, ſir,
Are you faſt married? Be aſſur'd of this,
That the Magnifico is much belov'd,
And hath in his effect a voyce potentiall
As double as the Dukes: He will divorce you,
Or put upon you, what reſtraint or grievance,

The Law (with all his might, to enforce it on)
Will give him Cable.
Othe. Let him do his spight;
My services, which I have done the Signory
Shall out-tongue his complaints. 'Tis yet to know,
Which when I know, that boasting is an honour,
I shall promulgate. I fetch my life and being,
From men of Royall Siege. And my demerits
May speak (unbonnetted) to as a proud a Fortune
As this that I have reach'd. For know, Iago,
But that I love the gentle Desdemona,
I would not my unhoused free condition
Put into Circumscription, and Confine,
For the Seas worth. But look, what Lights come yond?

Enter Cassio with Torches.

Iago. Those are the raised Father, and his friends:
You were best go in.
Othel. Not I: I must be found.
My parts, my title, and my perfect soule
Shall manifest me rightly. Is it they?
Iago. By Janus, I think no.
Othel. The servants of the Dukes?
And my Lieutenant?
The goodnesse of the night upon you (friends)
What is the Newes?
Cassio. The Duke does greet you (Generall)
And he requires your haste, Post-haste appearance,
Even on the instant.
Othel. What is the matter think you?
Cassio. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine:
It is a businesse of some heat. The Gallies
Have sent a dozen sequent messengers
This very night, at one anothers heeles:
And many of the Consuls (rais'd and met,)
Are at the Dukes already. You have been hotly call'd for,
When being not at your lodging to be found,
The Senate hath sent about three severall Quests,
To search you out.
Othel. 'Tis well I am found by you:
I will spend but a word here in the house,
And go with you.
Cassio. Ancient, what makes he here?
Iago. Faith, he to night hath boorded a Land Carrac,
If it prove lawfull prize, he's made for ever.
Cassio. I doe not understand.
Iago. He's married.
Cassio. To whom?
Iago. Marry to-------Come Captain, will you go?
Othel. Have with you.
Cassio. Here comes another Troop to seek for you:

Enter Brabantio, Rodorigo, with Officers and Torches.

Iago. It is Brabantio: Generall be advis'd,
He comes to bad intent.
Othel. Holla, stand there.
Rod. Signior, it is the Moore.
Bra. Down with him, Thief.
Iago. You Rodorigo? Come, sir, I am for you.
Othe. Keep up your bright Swords, for the dew will rust them. Good Signiors, you shall more command with yeares, than with your Weapons.
Bra. Oh thou foule Thief,
Where hast thou stow'd my Daughter?
Damn'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted her
For I'le referre me to all things of sense,
(If she in chaines of Magick were not bound)
Whether a Maid, so tender, fair, and happy,
So opposite to Marriage, that she shunn'd
The wealthy curled Dearling of our Nation,
Would ever have (t'encurre a generall mock)
Run from her Guardage to the sooty bosome,
Of such a thing as thou: to fear, not to delight?
Judge me the world, if 'tis not grosse in sense,
That thou hast practis'd on her with foule Charmes,
Abus'd her delicate youth, with Drugs or Minerals,
That weakens motion. I'le have't disputed on,
'Tis probable, and palpable to thinking;
I therefore apprehend and doe attach thee,
For an abuser of the world, a practiser
Of Arts inhibited, and out of warrant;
Lay hold upon him, if he doe resist
Subdue him at his peril.
Othe. Hold your hands,
Both you of my inclining, and the rest.
Were it my Cue to fight, I should have known it
Without a Prompter. Whither will you that I go
To answer this your charge?
Bra. To prison, till fit time
Of Law, and course of direct Session
Call thee to answer.
Othe. What if I doe obey?
How may the Duke be therewith satisfied,
Whose Messengers are here about my side,
Upon some present businesse of the State,
To bring me to him.
Officer. 'Tis true, most worthy Signior,
The Duke's in Council, and your Noble self,
I am sure is sent for.
Bra. How? The Duke in Council?
In this time of the night? bring him away;
Mine's not an idle cause. The Duke himself,
Or any of my Brothers of the State,
Cannot but feel this wrong, as 'twere their own:
For if such Actions may have passage free,
Bondslaves and Pagans shall our Statesmen be. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Duke, Senators, and Officers.

Duke. There is no composition in this newes,
That gives them credit.
1. Sen. Indeed, they are disproportioned;
My Letters say, a hundred and seven Gallies.
Duke. And mine a hundred forty.
2. Sen. And mine two hundred:
But though they jump not on a just account,
(As in these Cases where the ayme reports,
'Tis oft with difference) yet doe they all confirm
A Turkish Fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.
Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgement:
I doe not so secure me in the errour,
But the main Article I doe approve
In fearfull sense.
Saylor within. What hoa, what hoa, what hoa.

Enter Saylor.

Officer.

Officer. A Messenger from the Gallies.
Duke. Now? What's the businesse?
Saylor. The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes,
So was I bid report here to the State,
By Signior Angelo.
Duke. How say you by this change?
1. Sen. This cannot be
By no assay of Reason. 'Tis a Pageant
To keep us in false gaze, when we consider
Th'importancy of Cyprus to the Turk:
And let our selves again but understand,
That as it more concerns the Turk then Rhodes,
So may he with more facile question bear it,
For that it stands not in such warlike brace,
But altogether lacks th'abilities
That Rhodes is dress'd in. If we make thought of this,
We must not think the Turk is so unskilfull,
To leave that latest, which concerns him first,
Neglecting an attempt of ease and gain,
To wake and wage a danger profitlesse.
Duke. Nay, in all confidence he's not for Rhodes.
Officer. Here is more Newes.

Enter a Messenger.

Messen. The Ottamittes, Reverend, and Gracious,
Steering with due course toward the Isle of Rhodes,
Have there injoynted them with an after Fleet.
1. Sen. I, so I thought: how many, as you guess?
Mess. Of thirty Sail: and now they do re-stem
Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance
Their purposes toward Cyprus. Signior Montano,
Your trusty and most valiant Servitour,
With his free duty, recommends you thus,
And prayes you to believe him.
Duke. 'Tis certain then for Cyprus:
Marcus Luccicos, is he not in Town?
1. Sen. He's now in Florence.
Duke. Write from us,
To him, Post, Post-haste, dispatch.
1. Sen. Here comes Brabantio, and the Moore.

Enter Brabantio, Othello, Cassio, Iago, Rodorigo, and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you,
Against the generall Enemy Ottoman.
I did not see you: welcome, gentle Signior,
We lack't your Counsell, and your help to night.
Bra. So did I yours: Good your Grace pardon me.
Neither my place, for ought I heard of business
Hath rais'd me from my Bed; nor doth the generall care
Take hold on me. For my particular grief
Is of so flood-gate, and o're-bearing Nature,
That it ingluts, and swallows other sorrows,
And it is still it self.
Duke. Why? what's the matter?
Bra. My Daughter: oh my Daughter!
Sen. Dead.
Bra. I, to me.
She is abus'd, stoln from me, and corrupted
By Spells and Medicines, bought of Mountebanks;
For Nature so prepostrously to erre,
(Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense,)
Sans witch-craft could not.
Duke. Who e're he be, that in this foule proceeding
Hath thus beguil'd your Daughter of her self,
And you of her; the bloody Book of Law,
You shall your self read in the bitter Letter,
After your own sense: yea, though our proper son
Stood in your Action.
Bra. Humbly I thank your Grace,
Here is the man; this Moore, whom now it seems
Your speciall Mandate, for the State Affaires,
Hath hither brought.
All. We are very sorry for't.
Duke. What in your own part can you say to this?
Bra. Nothing, but this is so.
Othe. Most Potent, Grave, and Reverend Signiors,
My very Noble, and approv'd good Masters;
That I have tane away this old mans Daughter,
It is most true: true I have married her;
The very head, and front of my offending,
Hath this extent; no more. Rude am I in my speech,
And little bless'd with the soft phrase of Peace;
For since these Armes of mine had seven yeares pith,
Till now, some nine Moons wasted, they have us'd
Their dearest action, in the tented field:
And little of this great world can I speak,
More then pertains to Feats of Broyls, and Battel;
And therefore little shall I grace my cause,
In speaking for my self. Yet, (by your gracious patience)
I will a round un-varnish'd tale deliver,
Of my whole course of Love.
What Drugs? what Charmes?
What Conjuration? & what mighty Magick,
(For such proceeding I am charg'd withall)
I won his Daughter with.
Bra. A Maiden, never bold:
Of spirit so still and quiet, that her Motion
Blush'd at her self, and she in spight of Nature,
Of Yeares, of Countrey, Credit, every thing,
To fall in Love with what she fear'd to look on;
It is a judgement maim'd, and most imperfect.
That will confesse Perfection so could erre
Against all rules of Nature, and must be driven
To find out practises of cunning hell
Why this should be. I therefore vouch again,
That with some mixtures powerfull o're the blood,
Or with some Dram (conjur'd to this effect)
He wrought upon her.
Duke. To vouch this, is no proof,
Without more wider, and more over-Test
Then these thin habits, and poor likelihoods
Of modern seeming, do preferre against him.
Sen. But Othello, speak,
Did you, by indirect, and forced courses
Subdue, and poyson this young Maids affections?
Or came it by request, and such fair question,
As soule to soule affordeth?
Othel. I doe beseech you,
Send for the Lady to the Sagitary,
And let her speak of me before her Father;
If you doe find me foule in her report,
The trust, the office, I doe hold of you,
Not onely take away, but let your sentence
Even fall upon my life.
Duke. Fetch Desdemona hither.
Othello. Ancient, conduct them:
You best know the place.
And till she come, as truly as to heaven,
I doe confesse the vices of my blood,
So justly to your Grave eares, I'le present

How I did thrive in this fair Ladies Love,
And she in mine.
Duke. Say it Othello.
Othe. Her Father lov'd me, oft invited me:
Still question'd me the story of my life,
From year to year: the Battells, Sieges, Fortune,
That I have past.
I ran it through, even from my Boyish dayes,
To th' very moment that he bad me tell it.
Wherein I spoke of most disastrous chances:
Of moving Accidents by Flood, and Field,
Of hair-breadth scapes ith' imminent deadly breach;
Of being taken by the insolent foe,
And sold to slavery. Of my redemption thence,
And portance in my Travellers history.
Wherein of Antars vast, and Deserts wilde, (ven,
Rough Quarries, Rocks, & Hills, whose heads touch hea-
It was my hint to speak. Such was my Processe,
And of the Canibals that each other eate,
The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads
Grew beneath their shoulders. These things to hear,
Would Desdemona seriously incline:
But still the house affaires would draw her hence:
Which ever as she could with haste dispatch,
She'ld come again, and with a greedy eare
Devoure up my discourse. Which I observing,
Took once a pliant houre, and found good meanes
To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart,
That I would all my Pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by parcels she had something heard,
But not distinctively: I did consent,
And often did beguile her of her teares,
When I did speak of some distressefull stroke
That my youth suffer'd: My story being done,
She gave me for my pains a world of kisses:
She swore in faith 'twas strange, 'twas passing strange.
'Twas pittifull: 'twas wondrous pittifull.
She wish'd she had not heard it, yet she wish'd
That heaven had made her such a man. She thank'd me,
And bad me if I had a friend that lov'd her,
I should but teach him how to tell my story,
And that would woo her. Upon this hint I spake,
She lov'd me for the dangers I have past,
And I lov'd her, that she did pitty them.
This onely is the witch-craft I have us'd.
Here comes the Lady, let her witnesse it.

Enter Desdemona, Iago, Attendants.

Duke. I think this tale would win my Daughter too,
Good Brabantio take up this mangled matter at the best:
Men doe their broken Weapons rather use,
Then their bare hands.
Bra. I pray you hear her speak:
If she confesse that she was half the wooer,
Destruction on my head, if my bad blame
Light on the man. Come hither gentle Mistris,
Doe you perceive in all this Noble company,
Where most you owe obedience?
Des. My Noble Father,
I doe perceive here a divided duty,
To you I am bound for life, and education:
My life and education both doe learn me,
How to respect you. You are the Lord of duty,
I am hitherto your Daughter. But here's my husband;
And so much duty, as my Mother shew'd
To you, preferring you before her Father:
So much I challenge, that I may professe
Due to the Moore, my Lord.
Bra. God be with you: I have done.
Please it your Grace, on to the State affaires;
I had rather to adopt a child than get it.
Come hither, Moore,
I here doe give thee that with all my heart,
Which but thou hast already, with all my heart
I would keep from thee. For your sake (Jewell)
I am glad at soule, I have no other child;
For thy escape would teach me tyranny
To hang clogs on them. I have done, my Lord.
Duke. Let me speak like your self:
And lay a Sentence,
Which like a grise, or step may help these Lovers.
When remedies are past, the griefs are ended
By seeing worst, which late on hopes depended.
To mourn a mischief that is past and gone,
Is the next way to draw new mischief on.
What cannot be preserv'd when Fortune takes:
Patience, her Injury a mockery makes.
The robb'd that smiles, steales something from the Thief,
He robs himself, that spends a bootlesse grief.
Bra. So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile,
We lose it not so long as we can smile:
He beares the sentence well, that nothing beares,
But the free comfort which from thence he heares.
But he heares both the sentence, and the sorrow,
That to pay grief, must of poor patience borrow.
These Sentences, to Sugar, or to Gall,
Being strong on both sides, are Equivocall.
But words are words: I never yet did hear,
That the bruiz'd heart was pierced through the eare.
humbly beseech you to proceed to th'Affaires of State.
Duke. The Turk with a most mighty preparation makes for Cyprus: Othello, the Fortitude of the place is best known to you. And though we have there a Substitute of most allowed sufficiency; yet opinion, a more Soveraign Mistris of Effects, throwes a more safe voyce on you: you must therefore be content to slubber the gross of your new Fortunes, with this more stubborn, and boysterous expedition.
Othe. The Tyrant Custome, most Grave Senators,
Hath made the flinty and Steel Couch of War
My thrice-driven bed of Down. I doe agnize
A naturall and prompt Alacrity,
I find in hardnesse: and do undertake
This present War against the Ottomittes.
Most humbly therefore bending to your State,
I crave fit disposition for my Wife,
Due reverence of Place, and Exhibition,
With such accommodation and besort
As levels with her breeding.
Duke. Why, at her Fathers.
Bra. I will not have it so.
Othe. Nor I.
Des. Nor would I there reside,
To put my Father in impatient thoughts
By being in his Eye. Most gracious Duke,
To my unfolding, lend your prosperous ear,
And let me find a Character in your voyce
T'assist my simplenes.
Duke. What would you, Desdemona?
Des. That I love the Moore, to live with him,
My down-right violence, and storm of Fortunes,

May

May trumpet to the world. My heart's ſubdu'd
Even to the very quality of my Lord;
I ſaw Othello's viſage in his minde,
And to his honours and his valiant parts,
Did I my ſoule and fortunes conſecrate.
So that (dear Lords) if I be left behind
A Moth of Peace, and he go to the War,
The Rites for why I love him, are bereft me:
And I a heavy interim ſhall ſupport
By his dear abſence. Let me go with him.

Othe. Let her have your voyce.
Vouch with me heaven, I therefore beg it not
To pleaſe the Paiate of my Appetite:
Nor to comply with heat the young effects
In my defunct, and proper ſatisfaction.
But to be free, and bounteous to her mind:
And heaven defend your good ſoules, that you think
I will your ſerious and great buſineſſe ſcant
When ſhe is with me. No when light wing'd Toyes
Of feather'd Cupid, ſeele with wanton dulneſſe
My ſpeculative, and offic'd Inſtrument:
That my Diſports corrupt, and taint my buſineſſe:
Let Houſewives make a Skillet of my Helme,
And all indigne, and baſe adverſities,
Make head againſt my Eſtimation.

Duk. Be it as you ſhall privately determine,
Either for her ſtay, or going: th'Affaire cries haſte:
And ſpeed muſt anſwer it.

Sen. You muſt away to night.

Othe. With all my heart.

Duke. At nine ith' morning here we'll meet again.
Othello, leave ſome Officer behind
And he ſhall our Commiſſion bring to you:
And ſuch things elſe of quality and reſpect
As doth import to you.

Othe. So pleaſe your Grace, my Ancient,
A man he is of honeſty and truſt:
To his conveyance I aſſign my wife.
With what elſe needfull, your good Grace ſhall think
To be ſent after me.

Duke. Let it be ſo:
Good night to every one. And Noble Signior,
If Virtue no delighted beauty lack,
Your Son-in-Law is farre more fair than black.

Sen. Adieu, brave Moore, uſe Deſdemona well.

Bra. Look to her (Moore) if thou haſt eyes to ſee:
She has deceiv'd her Father, and may thee. Exit.

Othe. My life upon her faith. Honeſt Iago,
My Deſdemona muſt I leave to thee:
I prethee let thy wife attend on her,
And bring them after in their beſt advantage.
Come Deſdemona, I have but an houre
Of Love, of worldly matter, and direction
To ſpeak with thee. We muſt obey the time. Exit.

Rod. Iago.

Iago. What ſaiſt thou, noble heart?

Rod. What will I doe, think'ſt thou?

Iago. Why go to bed and ſleep.

Rod. I will incontinently drown my ſelf.

Iago. If thou doſt, I ſhall never love thee after. Why thou ſilly Gentleman?

Rod. It is fillineſſe to live, when to live is torment: and then have we a preſcription to die, when death is our Phyſitian.

Iago. Oh villanous: I have look'd upon the world for four times ſeven yeares, and ſince I could diſtinguiſh betwixt a Benefit and an Injury, I never found man that knew how to love himſelf. Ere I would ſay, I would drown my ſelf for the love of a Gynney Hen, I would change my humanity with a Baboon.

Rod. What ſhould I doe, I confeſſe it is my ſhame to be ſo fond, but it is not in my virtue to amend it.

Iago. Virtue? a Fig, 'tis in our ſelves that we are thus, or thus. Our Bodies are our Gardens, to the which, our Wills are Gardiners. So that if we will plant Nettles, or ſow Lettice: Set Hyſop, and weed up Time: Supply it with one gender of Hearbs, or diſtract it with many: either have it ſterill with idleneſſe, or manured with Induſtry, why the power and Corrigible authority of this lies in our wills. If the brain of our lives had not one ſcale of Reaſon, to poyſe another of Senſuality, the blood and baſeneſſe of our Natures would conduct us to moſt prepoſtrous Concluſions. But we have reaſon to coole our raging Motions, our carnall Stings, or unbitted Luſts: whereof I take this, that you call Love, to be a Sect, or Seyen.

Rod. It cannot be.

Iago. It is meerly a Luſt of the Blood, and a permiſſion of the will. Come, be a man: drown thy ſelf? Drown Cats, and blinde Puppies. I have profeſt me thy Friend, and I confeſſe me knit to thy deſerving, with Cables of perdurable toughneſſe. I could never better ſteed thee than now. Put money in thy purſe: follow thou the Warres, defeat thy favour, with an uſurped Beard. I ſay, put money in thy purſe. It cannot be long that Deſdemona ſhould continue her love to the Moore. Put Money in thy purſe: nor he his to her. It was a violent Commencement in her, and thou ſhalt ſee an anſwerable Sequeſtration, but put money in thy purſe. Theſe Moores are changeable in their wills: fill thy purſe with money. The food that to him now is as luſhious as Locuſts, ſhall to him ſhortly be as bittter as Coloquintida. She muſt change for youth: when ſhe is fated with his body, ſhe will finde the errours of her choyce. Therefore put money in thy purſe. If thou wilt needs damn thy ſelf, doe it a more delicate way then drowning. Make all the money thou canſt: If Sanctimony and a fraile vow, betwixt an erring Barbarian, and ſuper-ſubtle Venetian be not too hard for my wits, and all the tribe of hell, thou ſhalt enjoy her: therefore make money: a pox of drowning thy ſelf, it is clean out of the way. Seek thou rather to be hang'd in compaſſing thy joy, then to be drown'd, and go without her.

Rod. Wilt thou be faſt to my hopes, If I depend on the iſſue?

Iago. Thou art ſure of me: Go make money: I have told thee often, and I re-tell thee again, and again, I hate the Moore. My cauſe is hearted; thine hath no leſſe reaſon. Let us be conjunctive in our revenge, againſt him. If thou canſt Cuckold him, thou doſt thy ſelf a pleaſure, me a ſport. There are many Events in the Wombe of Time, which will be delivered. Traverſe, go, provide thy money. We will have more of this to morrow. Adieu.

Rod. Where ſhall we meet ith' morning?

Iago. At my Lodging.

Rod. I'le be with thee betimes.

Iago. Go to, farewell. Doe you here, Rodorigo?

Rod. I'le ſell all my Land. Exit.

Iago. Thus doe I ever make my Foole, my purſe:
For I mine own gain'd knowledge ſhould profane,
If I would time expend with ſuch a Swain,

But for my Sport, and Profit: I hate the Moore,
And it is thought abroad, that 'twixt my sheets
He has done my Office. I know not if't be true,
But I, for meer suspition in that kinde,
Will doe, as if for Surety. He holds me well,
The better shall my purpose work on him:
Cassio's a proper man: Let me see now,
To get this place, and plume up my will
In double Knavery. How? how? Let's see.
After some time, to abuse Othello's eares,
That he is too familiar with his wife:
He hath a person, and a smooth dispose
To be suspected: fram'd to make women false.
The Moore is of a free, and open Nature,
That thinks men honest, that but seem to be so,
And will as tenderly be led by th' Nose
As Asses are:
I have't: it is engendred: Hell, and Night,
Must bring this monstrous Birth to the worlds light.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Montano, and Gentlemen.

Mon. What from the Cape, can you discern at Sea?

1. Gen. Nothing at all, it is a high wrought Flood:
I cannot 'twixt the heaven and the Main,
Descry a Sail.

Mon. Me thinks the wind hath spoke aloud at Land,
A fuller blast ne're shook our Battlements:
If it hath ruffian so upon the Sea,
What ribs of Oak, when Mountains melt on them,
Can hold the Mortise. What shall we hear of this?

2. A Segregation of the Turkish Fleet:
For do but stand upon the foaming shore,
The chidden Billow seems to pelt the clouds,
The wind-shak'd Surge, with high and monstrous Main,
Seems to cast water on the burning Bear,
And quench the Guards of th'ever-fixed Pole:
I never like molestation view
On the enchafed Flood.

Mon. If that the Turkish Fleet
Be not inshelter'd, and embay'd, they are drown'd,
It is impossible to bear it out.

Enter a Gentleman.

3. Newes Lads: our Wars are done:
The desperate Tempest hath so bang'd the Turks,
That their designment halts. A Noble ship of Venice,
Hath seen a grievous wrack and sufferance
On most part of their Fleet.

Mon. How? Is this true?

3. The Ship is here put in: A Veronesso, Michael Cassio
Lieutenant to the warlike Moore, Othello,
Is come on shore: the Moore himself at Sea,
And is in full Commission here for Cyprus.

Mon. I am glad on't:
'Tis a worthy Governour.

3. But this same Cassio, though he speak of comfort,
Touching the Turkish losse, yet he looks sadly,
And prayes the Moore be safe; for they were parted
With foule and violent Tempest.

Mon. Pray heavens he be:
For I have serv'd him, and the man commands
Like a full Souldier. Let's to the Sea side (hoa)
As well to see the Vessell that comes in,
As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello,
Even till we make the Main, and th' Eriall blew,
And indistinct regard.

Gent. Come, let's do so;
For every minute is expectancy
Of more Arrivancy.

Enter Cassio.

Cas. Thanks you, the valiant of the warlike Isle,
That so approve the Moore: Oh let the heavens
Give him defence against the Elements,
For I have lost him on a dangerous Sea,

Mon. Is he well shipp'd?

Cas. His Bark is stoutly Timber'd, and his Pilot
Of very expert, and approv'd Allowance;
Therefore my hopes (not surfetted to death)
Stand in bold Cure.

Within. A Sail, a Sail, a Sail.

Cas. What noyse?

Gent. The Town is empty; on the brow oth' Sea
Stand ranks of People, and they cry, a Sail.

Cas. My hopes do shape him for the Governour,

Gent. They do discharge their shot of courtesie,
Our friends, at least.

Cas. I pray you, sir, go forth.
And give us truth who 'tis that is arriv'd.

Gent. I shall. Exit.

Mon. But good Lieutenant, is your Generall wiv'd?

Cas. Most fortunately, he hath atchiev'd a Maid
That paragons description, and wilde Fame:
One that excells the quirks of blazoning Pens,
And in th' essentiall Vesture of Creation,
Do's tire the Ingeniver.

Enter Gentleman.

How now? who has put in?

Gent. 'Tis one Iago, Ancient to the Generall.

Cas. Ha's had most favourable, and happy speed:
Tempests themselves, high Seas, and howling winds,
The gutter'd Rocks, and Congregated Sands,
Traitors ensteep'd, to enclogge the guiltlesse Keel,
As having sense of Beauty do omit
Their mortall Natures, letting go safely by
The divine Desdemona.

Mon. What is she?

Cas. She that I spake of:
Our great Captain's Captain,
Left in the Conduct of the bold Iago,
Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts,
A Sennights speed. Great Jove, Othello guard,
And swell his Sail with thine own powerfull breath,
That he may blesse this Bay with his tall Ship,
Make loves quick pants in Desdemonaes armes,
Give renew'd fire to our extincteſt Spirits.

Enter Desdemona, Iago, Rodorigo, and Æmilia.

Oh behold,
The riches of the ship is come on shore:
You men of Cyprus, let her have your knees.
Hail to thee, Lady: and the grace of heaven,
Before, behind thee, and on every hand
Enwheele thee round.

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio,
What tidings can you tell me of my Lord?

Cassio.

Caſ. He is not arriv'd, nor know I ought
But that he's well, and will be ſhortly here.
Def. Oh but I fear:
How loſt you company?
Caſ. The great contention of the Sea and Skies,
Parted our Fellowſhip. But hark, a Saile.
Within. A Saile, a Saile.
Gent. They give this greeting to the Cittadell:
This likewiſe is a friend.
Caſ. See for the Newes:
Good Ancient, you are welcome. Welcome Miſtris:
Let it not gall your patience (good Iago)
That I extend my Manners. 'Tis my breeding,
That gives me this bold ſhew of Courteſie,
Iago. Sir, would ſhe give you ſo much of her lips,
As of her tongue ſhe oft beſtowes of me,
You would have enough.
Def. Alaſs: ſhe has no ſpeech.
Iago. Infaith, too much:
I find it ſtill, when I have leave to ſleep,
Marry before your Ladiſhip, I grant,
She puts her tongue a little in her heart,
And chides with thinking.
Æmil. You have little cauſe to ſay ſo.
Iago. Come on, come on: you are Pictures out of doores:
Bells in your Parlors: Wilde-Cats in your Kitchens:
Saints in your injuries: Devils being offended:
Players in your Huſwifery, and Huſwives in your Beds.
Def. Oh, fie upon thee, ſlanderer.
Iago. Nay, it is true: or elſe I am a Turk,
You riſe to play, and go to bed to work.
Æmil. You ſhall not write my praiſe.
Iago. No, let me not.
Def. What would'ſt write of me, if thou ſhould'ſt praiſe me.
Iago. Oh, gentle Lady, doe not put me to't,
For I am nothing, if not Criticall.
Def. Come on, aſſay.
There's one gone to the Harbour?
Iago. I, Madam.
Def. I am not merry: but I doe beguile
The thing I am, by ſeeming otherwiſe,
Come, how would'ſt thou praiſe me?
Iago. I am about it, but indeed my invention comes from my Pate, as Birdlime does from Freeze, it plucks out Braines and all. But my Muſe labours, and thus ſhe is delivered.

If ſhe be fair, and wiſe; fairneſſe and wit,
The one's for uſe, the other uſeth it.

Def. Well prais'd:
How if ſhe be black and witty?

Iago. If ſhe be black, and thereto have a wit,
She'll find a white, that ſhall her blackneſſe fit,

Def. Worſe and worſe.
Æmil. How if fair and fooliſh.

Iago. She never yet was fooliſh that was fair,
For even her folly helpt her to an heir.

Deſd. Theſe are old fond Paradoxes, to make Fooles laugh ith' Alehouſe. What miſerable praiſe haſt thou for her that's foule and fooliſh.

Iago. There's none ſo foule and fooliſh thereunto,
But does foule pranks, which fair, and wiſe ones doe.

Deſd. Oh heavy ignorance: thou praiſeſt the worſt beſt. But what praiſe could'ſt thou beſtow on a deſerving woman indeed? One, that in the authority of her merit, did juſtly put on the vouch of very malice it ſelf.

Iago. She that was ever fair, and never proud,
Had tongue at will, and yet was never loud:
Never lackt gold, and yet went never gay,
Fled from her wiſh, and yet ſaid now I may.
She that being angred, her revenge being nigh,
Bad her wrong ſtay, and her diſpleaſure fly.
She that in wiſedome never was ſo fraile,
To change the Cod's Head for the Salmon's Taile:
She that could think, and ne're diſcloſe her mind,
See Suitors following, and not look behind:
She was a Wight, (if ever ſuch Wights were)
Def. To doe what?
Iago. To ſuckle Fooles, and chronicle ſmall Beer.

Deſd. Oh moſt lame and impotent concluſion. Doe not learn of him, Æmilia, though he be thy Husband. How ſay you (Caſsio) is he not a moſt profane, and liberall Counſellor?

Caſsio. He ſpeaks home (Madam) you may relliſh him more in the Souldier, than in the Scholler.

Iago. He takes her by the palme: I, well ſaid, whiſper. With as little a web as this, will I enſnare as great a Fly as Caſsio. I, ſmile upon her, doe: I will give thee in thine own Courtſhip. You ſay true, 'tis ſo indeed. If ſuch tricks as theſe ſtrip you out of your Lieutenantry, it had been better you had not kiſs'd your three fingers ſo oft, which now again you are moſt apt to play the Sir in. Very good: well kiſsd, and excellent Curtſie: 'tis ſo indeed. Yet again, your fingers to your Lips? Would they were Cliſter-pipes for your ſake.
The Moore, I know his Trumpet.
Caſsio. 'Tis truly ſo.
Def. Let's meet him and receive him.
Caſsio. Loe, where he come.

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Oth. O my fair Warriour.
Def. My dear Othello.
Oth. It gives me wonder, great as my content
To ſee you here before me.
Oh my ſoules joy:
If after every Tempeſt, come ſuch calmes,
May the windes blow, till they have waken'd death:
And let the labouring Barke climbe hills of Seas
Olympus high: and duck again as low,
As hell's from heaven. If it were now to dye,
'Twere now to be moſt happy. For I fear,
My ſoule hath her content ſo abſolute,
That not another comfort like to this,
Succeeds in unknown Fate.
Def. The heavens forbid
But that our Loves
And Comforts ſhould encreaſe
Even as our dayes doe grow.
Othe. Amen to that (ſweet Powers)
I cannot ſpeak enough of this content,
It ſtops me here: it is too much of joy,
And this, and this the greateſt diſcords be
That e're our hearts ſhall make.
Iago. Oh you are well tun'd now: But I'le ſet down the Pegs that make this Muſick, as honeſt as I am.

Othe.

Othe. Come, let us to the Caſtle.
Newes, (Friends) our warres are done:
The Turks are drown'd.
How do's my old acquaintance of this Iſle?
(Hony) you ſhall be well deſir'd in Cyprus,
I have found great love amongſt them. O my Sweet,
I prattle out of faſhion, and I doat
In mine own comforts. I prethee, good Iago,
Go to the Bay, and diſembarke thy Coffers:
Bring thou the Maſter to the Cittadell,
He is a good one, and his worthineſſe
Do's challenge much reſpect. Come Deſdemona,
Once more well met at Cyprus.

Exit Othello and Deſdemona.

Iago. Do you meet me preſently at the harbour. Come thither, if thou be'ſt valiant, (as they ſay, baſe men being in love, have then a Nobility in their Natures, more than is native to them) liſt-me; the Lieutenant to night watches on the Court of Guard. Firſt, I muſt tell thee this: Deſdemona is directly in love with him.

Rod. With him? why, 'tis not poſſible.

Iago. Lay thy finger thus: and let thy ſoule be inſtructed. Marke me with what violence ſhe lov'd the Moore, but for bragging, and telling her fantaſticall lies. To love him ſtill for prating, let not thy diſcreet heart think it. Her eye muſt be fed. And what delight ſhall ſhe have to look on the Devil? When the blood is made dull with the Act of Sport, there ſhould be a game to enflame it, and to give ſatiety a freſh appetite. Loveline ſſe in favour, ſympathy in yeares, Manners, and Beauties: all which the Moore is defective in. Now for want of theſe requir'd Conveniences, her delicate tenderneſſe will find it ſelf abus'd, begin to heave the gorge, diſrelliſh and abhorre the Moore, very Nature will inſtruct her in it, and compell her to ſome ſecond choyce. Now, ſir, this granted (as it is a moſt pregnant and unforc'd poſition) who ſtands ſo eminent in the degree of this Fortune, as Caſſio do's: a Knave very voluble: no further conſcionable, than in putting on the meer form of Civil, and humane ſeeming, for the better compaſſe of his Salt, and moſt hidden looſe affection? Why none, why none: A ſlippery, and ſubtle Knave, a finder of occaſion: that has an eye can ſtamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never preſent it ſelf. A Deviliſh Knave: beſides, the Knave is handſome, young: and hath all thoſe requiſites in him, that folly and green minds look after. A peſtilent compleat Knave, and the woman hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her, ſhe's full of moſt bleſs'd condition.

Iago. Bleſs'd Figs-end. The Wine ſhe drinks is made of Grapes. If ſhe had been bleſs'd, ſhe would never have lov'd the Moore: Bleſs'd pudding. Didſt thou not ſee her paddle with the palme of his hand? Didſt not marke that?

Rod. Yes, that I did: but that was but courteſie.

Iago. Leachery by this hand: an Index, and obſcure prologue to the Hiſtory of Luſt and foule Thoughts. They met ſo near with their lips, that their breaths embrac'd together. Villanous Thoughts Rodorigo, when theſe mutabilities ſo marſhall the way, hard at hand comes the Maſter, and main exerciſe, th'incorporate concluſion: Piſh. But, ſir, be you rul'd by me. I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to night: for the command, I'le lay't upon you. Caſſio knowes you not: I'le not be farre from you. Doe you find ſome occaſion to anger Caſſio, either by ſpeaking too loud, or tainting his diſcipline, or from what other courſe you pleaſe, which the time ſhall more favourably miniſter.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he's raſh, and very ſudden in Choller: and happily may ſtrike at you, provoke him that he may: for even out of that will I cauſe theſe of Cyprus to Mutiny. Whoſe qualification ſhall come into no true taſte again, but by diſplanting of Caſſio. So ſhall you have a ſhorter journey to your deſires, by the meanes I ſhall then have to preferre them. And the impediment moſt profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our proſperity.

Rod. I will doe this, if you can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the Cittadell. I muſt fetch his neceſſaries aſhore. Farewell.

Rod. Adieu. Exit.

Iago. That Caſſio loves her, I doe well believ't:
That ſhe loves him, 'tis apt, and of great credite.
The Moore (howbeit that I endure him not)
Is of a conſtant, loving, noble Nature,
And I dare think, he'll prove to Deſdemona,
A moſt dear Husband. Now I doe love her too,
Not out of abſolute Luſt, (though peradventure
I ſtand accountant for as great a ſin)
But partly led to diet my Revenge,
For that I doe ſuſpect the luſty Moore
Hath leapt into my ſeat. The thought whereof,
Doth (like a poyſonous Minerall) gnaw my Inwards:
And nothing can, or ſhall content my Soule
Till I am even'd with him, wife for wife.
Or failing ſo, yet that I put the Moore,
At leaſt into a Jealouſie ſo ſtrong,
That Judgement cannot cure. Which thing to doe,
If this poor Traſh of Venice, whom I trace
For his quick hunting, ſtand the putting on,
I'le have our Michael Caſsio on the hip,
Abuſe him to the Moore, in the right garbe
(For I fear Caſſio with my Night-Cap too)
Make the Moore thank me, love me, and reward me,
For making him egregiouſly an Aſſe,
And practiſing upon his peace and quiet,
Even to madneſſe. 'Tis here: but yet confus'd,
Knaveries plain face, is never ſeen, till us'd. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello's Herald with a Proclamation.

Herald. It is Othello's pleaſure, our Noble and Valiant Generall; That upon certain tydings now arriv'd, importing the meer perdition of the Turkiſh Fleet, every man put himſelf into Triumph. Some to dance, ſome to make Bonefires, each man to what Sport and Revels his addition leads him. For beſides theſe beneficiall Newes, it is the Delebration of his Nuptiall. So much was his pleaſure ſhould be proclaimed. All Offices are open, and there is full liberty of Feaſting from this prepreſent houre of five, till the Bell have told eleven.

Bleſſe the Iſle of Cyprus, and our Noble Generall Othello.
Exit.

Enter Othello, Deſdemona, Caſsio, and Attendants.

Othel. Good Michael, look you to the Guard to night.
Let's teach our ſelv s that honourable ſtop,
Not to out-ſport diſcretion.

Caſ. Iago hath direction what to doe.
But notwithſtanding with my perſonall eye
Will I look-to't.

Othe. Iago is moſt honeſt:
Michael, good night. To morrow with your earlieſt,
Let me have ſpeech with you. Come my dear Love,
The purchaſe made, the fruits are to enſue,
That profit's yet to come 'tween me and you.
Good night. Exit.

Enter Iago.

Caſ. Welcome Iago; we muſt to the Watch.

Iago. Not this houre Lieutenant: 'tis not yet ten oth' Clock. Our Generall caſt us thus early for the love of his Deſdemona: Whom, let us not therefore blame; he hath not yet made wanton the night with her: and ſhe is ſport for Jove.

Caſ. She's a moſt exquiſite Lady.

Iago. And, I'le warrant her, full of Game.

Caſ. Indeed ſhe's a moſt freſh and delicate creature.

Iago. What an Eye ſhe has?
Me thinks it ſounds a parley to provocation.

Caſ. An inviting eye:
And yet me thinks right modeſt.

Iago. And when ſhe ſpeaks,
Is it not an Alarum to Love?

Caſ. She is indeed perfection.

Iago. Well: happineſſe to their ſheets. Come Lieutenant, I have a ſtope of Wine, and here without are a brace of Cyprus Gallants, that would fain have a meaſure to the health of black Othello.

Caſ. Not to night, good Iago: I have very poor, and unhappy Brains for drinking. I could well wiſh courteſie would invent ſome other cuſtome of entertainment.

Iago. Oh, they are our Friends: but one Cup, I'le drink for you.

Caſsio. I have drunk but one Cup to night, and that was craftily qualified too: and behold what innovation it makes here. I am infortunate in the infirmity, and dare not taſk my weakneſſe with any more.

Iago. What man? 'tis a night of Revels, the Gallants deſire it.

Caſ. Where are they?

Iago. Here, at the door: I pray you call them in.

Caſ. I'le do't, but it diſlikes me.

Iago. If I can faſten but one Cup upon him
With that which he hath drunk to night already,
He'll be as full of Quarrell, and Offence
As my young Miſtris's Dog,
Now my ſick Foole, Rodorigo,
Whom Love hath turn'd almoſt the wrong ſide out,
To Deſdemona hath to night Carrows'd,
Potations, pottle-deep; and he's to watch.
Three elſe of Cyprus, Noble ſwelling ſpirits,
(That hold their honours in a wary diſtance,
The very Elements of this warlike Iſle)
Have I to night flutter'd with flowing Cups,
And they Watch too.
Now 'mongſt this Flock of Drunkards,
And I to put our Caſsio in ſome Action
That may offend the Iſle. But here they come.

Enter Caſsio, Montano, and Gentlemen.

If conſequence doe but approve my dreame,
My Boat ſailes freely, both with wind and ſtreame.

Caſ. 'Fore heaven, they have given me a rowſe already.

Mon. Good faith a little one: not paſt a Pint, as I am a Souldier.

Iago. Some Wine hoa,
And let me the Cannakin clink, clink:
And let me the Cannakin clink,
A Souldier's a man: Oh, mans life's but a ſpan,
Why then let a Souldier drink.
Some Wine Boyes.

Caſ. 'Fore heaven, an excellent Song.

Iago, I learn'd it in England: where indeed they are moſt potent in Potting. Your Dane, your Germane, and your ſwag-belly'd Hollander, (drink hoa) are nothing to your Engliſh.

Caſsio. Is your Engliſh-man ſo exquiſite in his drinking?

Iago. Why, he drinks you with facility, your Dane dead Drunk. He ſweares not to overthrow your Almain. He gives your Hollander a vomit, ere the next Pottle can be fill'd.

Caſ. To the health of our Generall.

Mon. I am for it, Lieutenant: and I'le do you Juſtice.

Iago. Oh ſweet England.
King Stephen was and-a worthy Peer,
His Breeches coſt him but a Crown,
He held them ſix pence all too dear,
With that he call'd the Taylor Lown:
He was a Wight of high Renown,
And thou art but of low degree:
'Tis Pride that pulls the Country down,
And take thy awl'd Cloak about thee.
Some Wine hoa.

Caſsio. Why this is a more exquiſite Song than the other.

Iago. Will you hear't again?

Caſ No: for I hold him to be unworthy of his place, that do's thoſe things. Well; heaven's above all: and there be ſoules muſt be ſaved, and there be ſoules muſt not be ſaved.

Iago. It's true, good Lieutenant.

Caſ. For mine own part, no offence to the Generall, nor any man of quality: I hope to be ſaved.

Iago. And ſo do I too, Lieutenant.

Caſsio. I: (but by your leave) not before me. The Lieutenant is to be ſaved before the Ancient. Lets have no more of this: lets to our affaires. Forgive our ſins: Gentlemen, lets look to our buſineſſe. Do not think Gentlemen, I am Drunk: this is my Ancient, this is my right hand, and this is my left. I am not drunk now: I can ſtand well enough, and I ſpeak well enough.

Gent. Excellent well.

Caſ. Why very well then: you muſt not think then, that I am drunk.

Montan. To th' Platforme (Maſters) come, lets ſet the Watch.

Iago. You ſee this fellow that is gone before,
He is a Soldier, fit to ſtand by Caſar,
And give direction. And doe but ſee his vice,
'Tis to his Virtues a juſt Equinox,

The

The one as long as th'other. 'Tis pitty of him;
I fear the truſt Othello puts him in,
On ſome odde time of his infirmity
Will ſhake this Iſland.
Mont. But is he often thus
Iago. 'Tis evermore his prologue to his ſleep,
He'll watch the Horologue a double Set,
If drink rock not his Cradle.
Mont. It were well
The Generall were put in mind of it:
Perhaps he ſees it not, or his good nature
Prizes the Virtue that appeares in Caſſio,
And looks not on his evils: is not this true?

Enter Rodorigo.

Iago. How now, Rodorigo?
I pray you after the Lieutenant, go.
Mont. And 'tis great pitty that the Noble Moore
Should hazard ſuch a place, as his own Second,
With one ingraft Infirmity,
It were an honeſt Action, to ſay ſo
To the Moore.
Iago. Not I, for this fair Iſland,
I do love Caſſio well: and would do much
To cure him of this evil. But hark, what noyſe?

Enter Caſſio purſuing Rodorigo.

Caſ. You Rogue: you Raſcall.
Mon. What's the matter Lieutenant?
Caſ. A Knave teach me my duty? I'le beat the Knave into a Twiggen Bottle.
Rod. Beat me.
Caſ. Doſt thou prate, Rogue?
Mon. Nay, good Lieutenant:
I pray you, ſir, hold your hand.
Caſ. Let me go (ſir)
Or I'le know you o're the Mazzard.
Mon. Come, come, you're Drunk.
Caſſio. Drunk?
Iago. Away I ſay: go out and cry a Mutiny.
Nay, good Lieutenant. Alaſs, Gentlemen:
Help hoa. Lieutenant. Sir Montano:
Help maſters. Here's a goodly Watch indeed.
Who's that which rings the Bell? Diablo, hoa:
The Town will riſe. Fie, fie, Lieutenant,
You'll be aſham'd for ever.

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Othe. What is the matter here?
Mon. I bleed ſtill, I am hurt, but not to th' death.
Othe. Hold for your lives.
Iago. Hold hoa: Lieutenant, Sir Montane, Gentlemen:
Have you forgot all place of ſenſe and duty?
Hold. The Generall ſpeaks to you: hold for ſhame.
Oth. Why how now hoa? From whence ariſeth this?
Are we turn'd Turks? and to our ſelves do that
Which heaven hath forbid the Ottamittes.
For Chriſtian ſhame, put by this barbarous brawle:
He that ſtirres next to carve for his own rage,
Holds his ſoule light: He dies upon his Motion.
Silence that dreadfull Bell, it frights the Iſle
From her propriety. What is the matter, Maſters.
Honeſt Iago, that looks dead with grieving,
Speak: who began this? On thy love I charge thee?
Iago. I do not know: Friends all, but now, even now
In Quarter, and in termes like Bride and Groom
Deveſting them for Bed: and then, but now;
(As if ſome Planet had unwitted men)
Sword out, and tilting one at others breaſts,
In oppoſition bloody. I cannot ſpeak
Any beginning to this peeviſh odds.
And would in Action glorious, I had loſt
Thoſe legs that brought me to a part of it.
Othe. How comes it (Michael) you are thus forgot?
Caſ. I pray you pardon me, I cannot ſpeak.
Othe. Worthy Montano, you were wont to be civil:
The gravity and ſtilneſſe of your youth
The world hath noted. And your name is great
In mouthes of wiſeſt Cenſure. Whats the matter
That you unlace your reputation thus,
And ſpend your rich opinion, for the name
Of a night-brawler? Give me anſwer to it.
Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger,
Your Officer Iago can inform you,
While I ſpare ſpeech, which ſomething now offends me,
Of all that I do know, nor know I ought
By me; that's ſaid, or done amiſſe this night,
Unleſſe ſelf-charity be ſometimes a vice,
And to defend our ſelves it be a ſin,
When violence aſſailes us.
Othe. Now by heaven,
My blood begins my ſafer Guides to rule,
And paſſion (having my beſt judgement collied)
Aſſayes to lead the way. If I once ſtirre,
Or doe but lift this Arme, the beſt of you
Shall ſink in my rebuke. Give me to know
How this foul Rout began: Who ſet it on,
And he that is approv'd in this offence,
Thou he had twinn'd with me, both at a birth,
Shall looſe me. What in a Town of warre,
Yet wilde, the peoples hearts brim-full of fear,
To manage private, and domeſtick Quarrell?
In night, and on the Court and Guard of ſafety?
'Tis monſtrous: Iago, who began't?
Mon. If partially Aſſi'nd, or league in office,
Thou doſt deliver more, or leſſe than truth,
Thou art no Souldier.
Iago. Touch me not ſo near,
I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth,
Than it ſhould doe offence to Michael Caſſio.
Yet I perſwade my ſelf, to ſpeak ſo the truth
Shall nothing wrong him. This it is Generall:
Montano and my ſelf being in ſpeech,
There comes a Fellow, crying out for help,
And Caſſio following him with determin'd Sword,
To execute upon him. Sir, this Gentleman,
Steps in to Caſſio, and intreats his pawſe:
My ſelf, the crying fellow did purſue,
Leſt by his clamour (as it ſo fell out)
The Town might fall in fright. He, (ſwift of foot)
Out-ran my purpoſe: and I return'd the rather
For that I heard the clink and fall of Swords,
And Caſſio high in oath: which till to night
I ne're might ſay before. When I came back
(For this was brief) I found them cloſe together
At blow, and thruſt, even as again they were
When you your ſelf did part them:
More of this matter, cannot I report,
But men are men: the beſt ſometimes forget,
Though Caſſio did ſome little wrong to him,
As men in rage ſtrike thoſe that wiſh them beſt,
Yet ſurely Caſſio, I believe, receiv'd
From him that fled, ſome ſtrange indignity,
Which patience could not paſſe.

Othe.

Othe. I know, Iago,
Thy honeſty and love doth mince this matter,
Making it light to Caſſio: Caſſio, I love thee,
But never more be Officer of mine.

Enter Deſdemona attended.

Look if my gentle Love be not rais'd up:
I'le make thee an example.
Deſ. What's the matter (Dear?)
Othe. All's well, Sweeting:
Come away to bed. Sir, for your hurts,
My ſelf will be your Surgeon. Lead him off:
Iago, look with care about the Town,
And ſilence thoſe whom this vile brawle diſtracted.
Come, Deſdemona, 'tis the Souldiers life,
To have their Balmy ſlumbers wak'd with ſtrife. Exit.
Iago. What, are you hurt, Lieutenant?
Caſ. I, paſt all Surgery.
Iago. Marry heaven forbid.
Caſ. Reputation, Reputation, Reputation: Oh I have loſt my Reputation. I have loſt the immortall part of my ſelf, and what remains is beſtiall. My Reputation, Iago, my Reputation.
Iago. As I am an honeſt man, I had thought you had received ſome bodily wound; there is more ſence in that then in Reputation. Reputation is an idle, and moſt falſe impoſition; oft got without merit, and loſt without deſerving. You have loſt no Reputation at all, unleſſe you repute your ſelf ſuch a looſer. What man, there are more wayes to recover the Generall again. You are but now caſt in his mood, (a puniſhment more in policy, than in malice) even ſo as one would beat his offenceleſſe dog, to affright an Imperious Lyon. Sue to him again, and he's yours.
Caſ. I will rather ſue to be deſpis'd, then to deceive ſo good a Commander, with ſo ſlight, ſo drunken, and ſo indiſcreet an Officer. Drunk? and ſpeak Parrat? and ſquabble? ſwagger? ſwear? and diſcourſe Fuſtian with ones own ſhadow? O thou inviſible ſpirit of Wine, if thou haſt no name to be known by, let us call thee Devil.
Iago. What was he that you follow'd with your ſword? what had he done to you?
Caſ. I know not.
Iago. Is't poſſible?
Caſ. I remember a maſſe of things, but nothing diſtinctly: a Quarrell, but nothing wherefore. Oh, that men ſhould put an Enemy in their mouthes, to ſteale away their Brains? that we ſhould with joy pleaſance, revel and applauſe, transform our ſelves into Beaſts.
Iago. Why? But you are now well enough: how came you thus recovered?
Caſ. It hath pleas'd the Devil Drunkenneſſe, to giAe place to the Devil Wrath, one unperfectneſſe ſhewes me another, to make me frankly deſpiſe my ſelf.
Iago. Come, you are too ſevere a Moraller. As the Time, the Place, and the Condition of this Countrey ſtands, I could heartily wiſh this had not befalne: but ſince itis, as it is, mend it for your own good.
Caſ. I will ask him for my Place again, he ſhall tell me, I am a Drunkard: had I as many mouthes as Hydra, ſuch an anſwer would ſtop them all. To be now a ſenſible man, by and by a Foole, and preſently a Beaſt. Oh ſtrange! Every inordinate Cup is unbleſs'd, and the Ingredient is a Devil.
Iago. Come, come: good Wine is a good familiar Creature, if it be well us'd: exclaime no more againſt it. And good Lieutenant, I think, you think I love you.
Caſsio. I have well approved it, Sir, I drunk?
Iago. You, or any man living, may be drunk at a time, man. I tell you what you ſhall do: Our Generals Wife is now the Geuerall. I may ſay ſo in this reſpect, for that he hath devoted, and given up himſelf to the contemplation, marke: and devotement of her parts and Graces. Confeſſe your ſelf freely to her: Importune her help to put you in your place again. She is of ſo free, ſo kinde, ſo apt, ſo bleſſed a diſpoſition, ſhe holds it a vice in her goodneſſe, not to do more then ſhe is requeſted. This broken joynt between you and her Husband, entreat her to ſplinter. And my Fortunes againſt any lay worth naming, this crack of your love, ſhall grow ſtronger then it was before.
Caſsio. You adviſe me well.
Iago. I proteſt in the ſincerity of Love, and honeſt kindneſſe.
Caſsio. I think it freely: and betimes in the morning, I will beſeech the virtuous Deſdemona to undertake for me: I am deſperate of my Fortunes if they check me.
Iago. You are in the right: good night, Lieutenant, I muſt to the Watch.
Caſsio. Good night, honeſt Iago.

Exit Caſsio.

Iago. And what's he then,
That ſayes I play the Villain?
When this advice is free I give, and honeſt,
Proball to thinking, and indeed the courſe
To win the Moor again.
For 'tis moſt eaſie
Th'inclining Deſdemona to ſubdue
In any honeſt Suit. She's fram'd as fruitfull
As the free Elements. And then for her
To win the Moore, were to renounce his Baptiſme,
All Seales, and Symbols of redeemed ſin:
His Soule is ſo enfetter'd to her Love,
That ſhe may make, unmake, doe what ſhe liſt:
Even as her appetite ſhall play the god
With his weak Function. How am I then a Villain,
To counſell Caſsio to this paralell courſe.
Directly to his good? Divinity of Hell,
When Devils will the blackeſt ſins put on,
They do ſuggeſt at firſt with heavenly ſhewes,
As I doe now. For while this honeſt Foole
Plies Deſdemona, to repair his Fortune,
And ſhe for him, pleads ſtrongly to the Moore,
I'le poure this peſtilence into his eare:
That ſhe repeales him, for her bodies Luſt,
And by how much ſhe ſtrives to doe him good,
She ſhall undoe her Credit with the Moore.
So will I turn her virtue into pitch,
And out of her own goodneſſe make the Net,
That ſhall enmaſh them all.
How now, Rodorigo?

Enter Rodorigo.

Rodorigo. I doe follow here in the Chace, not like a Hound that Hunts, but one that fills up the Cry. My money is almoſt ſpent; I have been to night exceedingly well Cudgell'd: And I think the iſſue will be, I ſhall have so much experience for my pains; and to, with no money at all, and a little more wit, return again to Venice.

Iago. How poor are they that have not Patience?
What wound did ever heal but by degrees?
Thou know'st we work by wit, and not by witchcraft;
And wit depends on dilatory time:
Dost not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee,
And thou by that small hurt hast cashier'd Cassio:
Though other things grow fair against the Sun,
Yet Fruits that blossom first, will first be ripe:
Content thy self a while. In troth 'tis Morning;
Pleasure and Action make the houres seem short.
Retire thee: go where thou art Billited:
Away, I say, thou shalt know more hereafter:
Nay, get thee gone. Exit Rodorigo.
Two things are to be done:
My Wife must move for Cassio to her Mistris:
I'le set her on my self a while, to draw the Moore apart,
And bring him jump, when he may Cassio find
Soliciting his wife: I, that's the way:
Dull not Device, by coldnesse and delay. Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Cassio, Musicians, and Clown.

Cassio. Masters, play here, I will content your pains,
Something that's brief: and bid good morrow Generall.

Clo. Why Masters, have your Instruments bin in Naples, that they speak ith' Nose thus?

Mus. How, Sir? how?

Clo. Are these, I pray you, wind Instruments?

Mus. I marry are they, sir.

Clo. Oh, thereby hangs a tale.

Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, sir?

Clow. Marry, sir, by many a wind Instrument that I know. But, Masters, here's money for you; and the Generall so likes your Musick, that he desires you for loves sake to make no noyse with it.

Mus. Well, Sir, we will not.

Clo. If you have any Musick that may not be heard, too't again. But (as they say) to hear Musick, the Generall do's not greatly care.

Mus. We have none such, sir.

Clow. Then put up your Pipes in your bag, for I'le away. Go, vanish into ayre, away. Exit Mus.

Cassio. Dost thou hear me, mine honest Friend?

Clo. No, I hear not your honest Friend:
I hear you.

Cassio. Prethee keep up thy Quillets, there's a poor piece of Gold for thee: if the Gentlewoman that attends the Generall be stirring, tell her, there's one Cassio entreats her a little favour of speech. Wilt thou do this?

Clo. She is stirring, sir: if she will stirre hither, I shall seem to notifie unto her. Exit Clo.

Enter Iago.

In happy time, Iago.

Iago. You have not bin a bed then?

Cas. Why no: the day had broke before we parted.
I have made bold (Iago) to send in to your wife:
My suit to her is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona
Procure me some accesse.

Iago. I'le send her to you presently:
And I'le devise a mean to draw the Moore
Out of the way, that your converse and busines
May be more free. Exit.

Cassio. I humbly thank you for't. I never knew
A Florentine more kind and honest. Enter Æmilia.

Æmil. Good morrow (good Lieutenant) I am sorry
For your displeasure; but all will sure be well.
The Generall and his wife are talking of it,
And she speaks for you stoutly. The Moore replies,
That he you hurt is of great Fame in Cyprus,
And great Affinity: and that in wholsome wisedome
He might not but refuse you. But he protests he loves you,
And needs no other Suitor but his likings,
To bring you in again.

Cassio. Yet I beseech you,
If you think fit, or that it may be done,
Give me advantage of some brief Discourse
With Desdemon alone.

Æmil. Pray come in:
I will bestow you where you shall have time
To speak your bosome freely.

Cassio. I am much bound to you. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Gentlemen.

Othe. These Letters give (Iago) to the Pilot,
And by him do my duties to the Senate:
That done, I will be walking on the Works,
Repair there to me.

Iago. Well, my good Lord, I'le do't.

Oth. This Fortification (Gentlemen) shall we see't?

Gent. We'll wait upon your Lordship. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Desdemona, Cassio, and Æmilia.

Des. Be thou assur'd (good Cassio) I will doe
All my abilities in thy behalf.

Æmil. Good Madam, doe:
I warrant it grieves my Husband,
As if the cause were his.

Des. Oh that's an honest Fellow: do not doubt, Cassio
But I will have my Lord and you again,
As friendly as you were.

Cassio. Bounteous Madam,
What ever shall become of Michael Cassio,
He's never any thing but your true Servant.

Des. I know't: I thank you: you do love my Lord:
You have known him long, and be you well assur'd,
He shall in strangenesse stand no farther off,
Then in a politick distance.

Cassio. I, but Lady,
That policy may either last so long,
Or feed upon such nice and waterish diet,
Or breed it self so out of Circumstances,
That I being absent, and my place supplied,
My Generall will forget my Love, and Service.

Des. Doe not doubt that: before Æmilia here,

I give thee warrant of thy place. Assure thee,
If I doe vow a friendship, I'le perform it
To the last Article. My Lord shall never rest,
I'le watch him tame, and talk him out of patience;
His Bed shall seem a Schoole, his Boord a Shrift,
I'le intermingle every thing he do's
With Cassio's suit: Therefore be merry Cassio,
For thy solicitor shall rather die,
Then give thy cause away.

Enter Othello, and Iago.

Æmil. Madam, here comes my Lord.
Cassio. Madam, I'le take my leave.
Des. Why stay, and hear me speak.
Cas. Madam, not now: I am very ill at ease.
Unfit for mine own purposes.
Des. Well, doe your discretion. Exit Cassio.
Iago. Hah? I like not that.
Othe. What dost thou say?
Iago. Nothing, my Lord; or if----I know not what.
Othe. Was not that Cassio parted from my wife?
Iago. Cassio, my Lord? No sure, I cannot think it,
That he would steale away so guilty-like,
Seeing you comming.
Oth. I do believe 'twas he.
Des. How now, my Lord?
I have bin talking with a Suitor here,
A man that languishes in you displeasure.
Oth. Who is't you mean?
Des. Why your Lieutenant Cassio. Good my Lord,
If I have any grace, or power to move you,
His present reconciliation take.
For if he be not one that truly loves you,
That erres in ignorance, and not in cunning,
I have no judgement in an honest face.
I prethee call him back.
Oth. Went he hence now?
Des. I, Sooth; so humbled,
That he hath left part of his grief with me
To suffer with him. Good Love, call him back.
Oth. Not now (sweet Desdemon) some other time.
Des. But shal't be shortly?
Oth. The sooner (sweet) for you.
Des. Shal't be to night, at Supper?
Oth. No, not to night.
Des. To morrow Dinner then?
Oth. I shall not dine at home:
I meet the Captains at the Cittadell.
Des. Why then to morrow night, on Tuesday morn,
On Tuesday noon, or night; on Wednesday morn.
I prethee name the time, but let it not Exceed three dayes. Infaith he's penitent:
And yet his Trespasse, in our common reason
(Save that they say the warres must make example)
Out of her best, is not almost a fault
T'incurre a private check. When shall he come?
Tell me, Othello. I wonder in my Soule
What you would aske me, that I would deny,
Or stand so mam'ring on? What? Michael Cassio,
That came a wooing with you? and so many a time
(When I have spoke of you dispraisingly)
Hath tane your part, to have so much to doe
To bring him in? Trust me, I could do much.
Oth. Prethee no more: Let him come when he will:
I will deny thee nothing.
Des. Why, this is not a Boon:
'Tis as I should entreat you wear your Gloves,
Or feed on nourishing Dishes, or keep you warm,
Or sue to you, to doe a peculiar profit
To your own person. Nay, when I have suit,
Wherein I mean to touch your Love indeed,
It shall be full of poize, and difficult weight,
And fearfull to be granted.
Oth. I will deny thee nothing.
Whereon, I doe beseech thee, grant me this,
To leave me but a little to my self.
Des. Shall I deny you? no: Farewell, my Lord.
Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona, I'le come to thee straight
Des. Æmilia, come; be as your Fancies teach you:
Whate're you be, I am obedient. Exit.
Oth. Excellent wretch: Perdition catch my Soule,
But I doe love thee: and when I love thee not,
Chaos is come again.
Iago. My Noble Lord.
Oth. What dost thou say, Iago?
Iago. Did Michael Cassio
When you woo'd my Lady, know of your love?
Oth. He did, from first to last:
Why dost thou aske?
Iago. But for a satisfaction of my Thought,
No further harme.
Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago?
Iago. I did not think he had bin acquainted with it.
Oth. O yes, and went between us very oft.
Iago. Indeed?
Oth. Indeed? I indeed. Discern'st thou ought in that?
Is he not honest?
Iago. Honest, my Lord?
Othe. Honest? I, honest.
Iago. My Lord, for ought I know
Oth. What dost thou think?
Iago. Think, my Lord?
Oth. Think, my Lord? Alass, thou eccho'st me;
As if there were some Monster in thy thought
Too hideous to be shewn. Thou dost mean something:
I heard thee say even now, thou lik'st not that,
When Cassio left my wife. What did'st not like?
And when I told thee, he was of my Counsell,
Of my whole course of wooing; thou cried'st, Indeed?
And didd'st contract, and purse thy brow together,
As if thou then hadst shut up in thy brain
Some horrible conceit, if thou dost love me
Shew me thy thought.
Iago. My Lord, you know I love you.
Oth. I think thou dost:
For I know thour't full of Love and Honesty,
And weigh'st thy words before thou giv'st them breath,
Therefore these stops of thine, fright me the more:
For such things in a false disloyall Knave
Are tricks of Custome: but in a man that's just,
They're cold dilations working from the heart,
That passion cannot rule.
Iago. For Michael Cassio,
I dare be sworn, I think that he is honest.
Oth. I think so too.
Iago. Men should be what they seem,
Or those that be not, would they might seem none.
Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem.
Iago. Why then I think Cassio's an honest man.
Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this?
I pray thee speak to me as to thy thinkings,
As thou dost ruminate, and give thy worst of thoughts

Th' worſt of words.
Iago. Good my Lord, pardon me.
Though I am bound to every Act of duty,
I am not bound to that: All Slaves are free:
Utter my thoughts? Why ſay they are vild, and falſe?
As where's that Palace, whereinto foule things
Sometimes intrude not? who has that breaſt ſo pure,
Wherein uncleanly apprehenſions
Keep Leets, and Law-dayes, and in Seſſions ſit
With meditations lawfull?
Oth. Thou do'ſt conſpire againſt thy Friend (Iago)
If thou but think'ſt him wrong'd, and mak'ſt his eare
A ſtranger to thy thoughts.
Iago. I doe beſeech you,
Though I perchance am vicious in my gueſſe
(As I confeſſe it is my Natures plague
To ſpie into abuſes, and of my jealouſie
Shapes faults that are not) that your wiſedome
From one, that ſo imperfectly conceits,
Would take no notice, nor build your ſelf a trouble
Out of his ſcattering, and unſure obſervance:
It were not for your quiet, nor your good,
Nor for my manhood, honeſty and wiſedome,
To let you know my thoughts.
Oth. What doſt thou mean?
Iago. Good name in man and woman (dear my Lord)
Is the immediate Jewel of their Soules;
Who ſteales my purſe ſteales traſh:
'Tis ſomething, nothing;
'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has bin ſlave to thouſands:
But he that filches from me my good name,
Robs me of that, which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.
Oth. I'le know thy Thoughts.
Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand,
Nor ſhall not, whil'ſt 'tis in my cuſtody.
Oth. Ha?
Iago. Oh, beware, my Lord, of jealouſie,
It is the green-ey'd Monſter, which doth mock
The meat it feeds on. That Cuckold lives in bliſſe,
Who certain of his Fate, loves not his wronger:
But oh, what damned minutes tells he o're,
Who dotes, yet doubts: Suſpects, yet ſoundly loves?
Oth. O miſery.
Iago. Poor, and Content, is rich, and rich enough,
But riches fineleſſe, is as poor as Winter,
To him that ever feares he ſhall be poor:
Good Heaven, the Soules of all my Tribe defend
From jealouſie.
Oth. Why? why is this?
Think'ſt thou, I'ld make a Life of Jealouſie;
To follow ſtill the changes of the Moon
With freſh ſuſpitions? No: to be once in doubt,
Is to be reſolv'd: Exchange me for a Goat,
When I ſhall turn the buſineſſe of my Soule
To ſuch exufflicate, and blowed Surmiſes,
Matching the inference. 'Tis not to make me Jealous,
To ſay my wife is faire, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of ſpeech, Sings, Playes, and Dances:
Where Virtue is, theſe are moſt virtuous.
Nor from mine own weak merits, will I draw
The ſmalleſt feare, or doubt of her revolt,
For ſhe had eyes, and choſe me. No, Iago,
I'le ſee before I doubt; when I doubt, prove;
And on the proof, there is no more but this,
Away at once with Love, or Jealouſie.
Iago. I am glad of this: for now I ſhall have reaſon
To ſhew the Love and Duty that I bear you
With franker ſpirit. Therefore (as I am bound)
Receive it from me. I ſpeak not yet of proof:
Look to your wife, obſerve her well with Caſſio,
Wear your eyes, thus: not Jealous, nor Secure:
I would not have your free, and Noble Nature,
Out of ſelf-bounty be abus'd, look to't:
I know our Country diſpoſition well:
In Venice, they doe let Heaven ſee the pranks
They dare not ſhew their Husbands.
Their beſt Conſcience,
Is not to leav't undone, but kept unknown.
Oth. Doſt thou ſay ſo?
Iag. She did deceive her Father, marrying you,
And when ſhe ſeem'd to ſhake, and fear your looks,
She lov'd them moſt.
Oth. And ſo ſhe did.
Iago. VVhy, go to then:
She that ſo young could give out ſuch a Seeming
To ſeale her Fathers eyes up, cloſe as Oake,
He thought 'twas witchcraft.
But I am much too blame:
I humbly do beſeech you of your pardon
For too much loving you.
Oth. I am bound to thee for ever.
Iago. I ſee this hath a little daſh'd your Spirits:
Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.
Iago. Truſt me, I fear it has:
I hope you will conſider what is ſpoke
Comes from my Love.
But I doe ſee y'are mov'd:
I am to pray you, not to ſtrain my ſpeech
To groſſer iſſues, nor to larger reach,
Then to Suſpition.
Oth. I will not.
Iago. Should you doe ſo (my Lord)
My ſpeech ſhould fall into ſuch vilde ſucceſſe,
VVhich my thoughts aim'd not.
Caſſio's my worthy friend:
My Lord, I ſee y'are mov'd:
Oth. No, not much mov'd:
I doe not think but Deſdemona's honeſt.
Iago. Long live ſhe ſo;
And long live you to think ſo.
Oth. And yet how Nature erring from it ſelf------
Iago. I there's the point:
As (to be bold with you)
Not to affect many propoſed Matches
Of her own Clime, Complexion and Degree,
VVhereto we ſee in all things, Nature tends:
Foh, one may ſmell in ſuch, a will moſt rank,
Foule diſproportions, thoughts unnaturall.
But (pardon me) I doe not in poſition
Diſtinctly ſpeak of her, though I may fear
Her will, recoyling to her better judgement,
May fall to match you with her Countrey formes,
And happily repent.
Oth. Farewell, farewell:
If more thou doſt perceive, let me know more:
Set on thy wife to obſerve.
Leave me, Iago.
Iago. My Lord, I take my leave.
Oth. VVhy did I marry?
This honeſt Creature (doubtleſſe)
Sees, and knowes more, much more then he unfolds.

Iago.

Iago. My Lord, I would I might entreat your Honour
To ſcan this thing no farther: Leave it to time,
Although 'tis fit that Caſſio have his place;
For ſure he fills it up with great ability;
Yet if you pleaſe to put him off a while,
You ſhall by that perceive him, and his meanes:
Note if your Lady ſtrain his Entertainment
With any ſtrong, or vehement importunity,
Much will be ſeen in that: In the mean time,
Let me be thought too buſie in my feares,
(As worthy cauſe I have to feare I am)
And hold her free, I doe beſeech your Honour.
Oth. Feare not my government.
Iago. I once more take my leave.
Oth. This Fellow's of exceeding honeſty,
And knowes all Quantities with a learn'd Spirit
Of humane dealings. If I doe prove her Haggard,
Though that her Jeſſes were my dear heart-ſtrings,
I'ld whiſtle her off, and let her down the winde
To prey at Fortune. Haply, for I am black,
And have not thoſe ſoft parts of Converſation
That Chamberers have: Or for I am declin'd
Into the vale of yeares (yet that's not much)
She's gone. I am abus'd, and my relief
Muſt be to loathe her. Oh Curſe of Marriage!
That we can call theſe delicate Creatures ours,
And not their Appetites? I had rather be a Toad,
And live upon the Vapour of a Dungeon,
Then keep a corner in the thing I love
For others uſes. Yet 'tis the plague to Great-ones,
Prerogativ'd are they leſſe then the Baſe;
'Tis deſtiny unſhunnable like death:
Even then, this forked plague is Fated to us,
When we do quicken. Look where ſhe comes:

Enter Deſdemona, and Æmilia.

If ſhe be falſe, Heaven mock'd it ſelf:
I'le not believ't.
Def. How now, my dear Othello?
Your Dinner, and the generous Iſlanders
By you invited, do attend your preſence.
Oth. I am too blame.
Def. VVhy doe you ſpeak ſo faintly?
Are you not well?
Oth. I have a pain upon my Forehead here.
Def. VVhy that's with watching, 'twill away again.
Let me but binde it hard, within this houre
It will be well.
Oth. Your Napkin is too little:
Let it alone: Come, I'le go in with you. Exeunt.
Def. I am very ſorry that you are not well.
Æmil. I am glad I have found this Napkin:
This was her firſt remembrance from the Moore,
My wayward Husband hath a hundred times
Woo'd me to ſteale it. But ſhe ſo loves the Token,
(For he conjur'd her, ſhe ſhould ever keep it)
That ſhe reſerves it evermore about her,
To kiſſe, and talke to. I'le have the work tane out,
And giv't Iago: what he will doe with it
Heaven knowes, not I:
I nothing, but to pleaſe his Fantaſie.

Enter Iago.

Iago. How now? what doe you here alone?
Æmil. Doe not you chide: I have a thing for you.
Iago. You have a thing for me?
It is a common thing——
Æmil. Hah?
Iago. To have a fooliſh wife.
Æmil. Oh, is that all? what will you give me now
For that ſame Handkerchiffe?
Iago. What Handkerchiffe?
Æmil. What Handkerchiffe?
Why that the Moore firſt gave to Deſdemona,
That which ſo often you did bid me ſteale.
Iago. Haſt ſtoln it from her?
Æmil. No: but ſhe let it drop by negligence,
And to th'advantage, I being here, took't up:
Look, here 'tis.
Iago. A good wench, give it me.
Æmil. What will you doe with't, you have been ſo earneſt to have me filch it?
Iago. Why, what is that to you?
Æmil. If it be not for ſome purpoſe of import,
Giv't me again. Poor Lady, ſhe'll run mad
When ſhe ſhall lack it.
Iago. Be not acknown on't:
I have uſe for it. Go, leave me, Exit Æmil.
I will in Caſſio's Lodging looſe this Napkin,
And let him finde it. Trifles light as aire
Are to the jealous, confirmations ſtrong,
As proofs of holy Writ. This may doe ſomething.
The Moore already changes with my poyſons:
Dangerous conceits, are in their natures poyſons,
Which at the firſt are ſcarce found to diſtaſte:
But with a little act upon the blood,
Burn like the Mines of Sulphure. I did ſay ſo.

Enter Othello.

Look where he comes: Not Poppy nor Mandragora,
Nor all the drowſie Syrrups of the world,
Shall ever medicine thee to that ſweet ſleep
Which thou ow'dſt yeſterday.
Oth. Ha, ha, falſe to me?
Iago. Why how now, Generall? no more of that.
Oth. Avant, be gone: thou haſt ſet me on the Rack:
I ſwear 'tis better to be much abus'd,
Then but to know a little.
Iago. How now, my Lord?
Oth. What ſent had I, in her ſtoln houres of Luſt?
I ſaw't not, thought it not: it harm'd not me:
I ſlept the next night well, fed well, was free, and merry.
I found not Caſſio's kiſſes on her Lips:
He that is robb'd, not wanting what is ſtoln,
Let him not know't, and he's not robb'd at all.
Iago. I am ſorry to hear this?
Oth. I had been happy if the generall Camp,
Pioneers and all, had taſted her ſweet Body,
So I had nothing known. Oh now, for ever
Farewell the Tranquill minde; farewell Content;
Farewell the plumed Troops, and the big Warres,
That make Ambition Virtue! Oh farewell,
Farewell the neighing Steed, and the ſhrill Trump,
The Spirit-ſtirring Drum, th' Eare-piercing Fife,
The Royall Banner, and all Quality,
Pride, Pomp and Circumſtance of glorious Warre:
And O you mortall Engines, whoſe rude throats
Th'immortall Jove's dread Clamours counterfeit,
Farewell: Othello's Occupation's gone.
Iago. Is't poſſible, my Lord?
Oth. Villain, be ſure thou prove my Love a Whore;
Be ſure of it; Give me the Ocular proof,

Or by the worth of mine eternall Soule,
Thou hadst bin better have bin born a Dog
Then answer my wak'd wrath.
Iago. Is't come to this?
Oth. Make me to see't: or (at the least) so prove it,
That the probation bear no Hindge, nor Loop,
To hang a doubt on: Or woe upon thy life.
Iago. My Noble Lord.
Oth. If thou dost slander her, and torture me,
Never pray more: abandon all remorse
On horrors head, horrors accumulate,
Doe deeds to make heaven weep, all earth amaz'd;
For nothing canst thou to damnation adde,
Greater then that.
Iago. O Grace! O heaven forgive me!
Are you a man? have you a soule? or sense?
God buy you: take mine Office. Oh wretched Foole,
That lov'st to make thine honesty a vice!
Oh monstrous world! Take note, take note (O World)
To be direct and honest, is not safe.
I thank you for this profit, and from hence
I'le love no friend, sith love breeds such offence.
Oth. Nay stay: thou shouldst be honest.
Iago. I should be wise, for honesty's a Foole,
And loses that it works for.
Oth. By the world,
I think my Wife is honest, and think she is not:
I think that thou art just, and think thou art not:
I'le have some proof. My name that was as fresh
As Dians Visage, is now begrim'd and black
As mine own face. If there be Cords or Knives,
Poyson, or Fire, or suffocating streames.
I'le not endure it. Would I were satisfied.
Iago. I see you are eaten up with passion:
I doe repent me that I put it to you,
You would be satisfied?
Oth. Would, Nay, and I will.
Iago. And may: but how? how satisfied, my Lord?
Would you the super-vision grossely gape on?
Behold her topp'd?
Oth. Death, and damnation. Oh!
Iago. It were a tedious difficulty I think,
To bring to that prospect: Damn them then,
If ever mortall eyes doe see them boulster
More then their own. What then? how then?
What shall I say? Where's Satisfaction?
It is impossible you should see this,
Were they as prime as Goats, as hot as Monkies,
As salt as Wolves in pride, and Fooles as grosse
As Ignorance, made drunk. But yet, I say,
If imputation and strong circumstances,
Which lead directly to the door of truth,
Will give you satisfaction, you might have't.
Oth. Give me a living reason she's disloyall.
Iago. I doe not like the Office;
But sith I am entred in this cause so farre
(Prick'd to't by foolish Honesty, and Love)
I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately,
And being troubled with a raging tooth,
I could not sleep. There are a kind of men,
So loose of Soule, that in their sleeps will mutter
Their Affaires: one of this kinde is Cassio:
In sleep I heard him say, sweet Desdemona,
Let us be wary, let us hide our Loves,
And then (Sir) would he gripe, and wring my hand:
Cry, oh sweet Creature: then kisse me hard,
As if he pluckt up kisses by the roots,
That grew upon my lips, laid his Leg o're my Thigh,
And sigh and kisse, and then cry curs'd Fate,
That gave thee to the Moore.
Oth. O monstrous! monstrous?
Iago. Nay this was but his Dreame.
Oth. But this denoted a fore-gone conclusion,
'Tis a shrewde doubt, though it be but a Dreame.
Iago. And this may help to thicken other proofs,
That doe demonstrate thinly.
Oth. I'le teare her all to pieces.
Iago. Nay yet be wise; yet we see nothing done,
She may be honest yet: Tell me but this,
Have you not sometimes seen a Handkerchiffe
Spotted with Straw-berries, in your Wives hand?
Oth. I gave her such a one: 'twas my first gift.
Iago. I know not that: but such a Handkerchiffe
(I am sure it was your Wives) did I to day
See Cassio wipe his Beard with.
Cassio. If it be that.
Iago. If it be that, or any, if 'twas hers,
It speaks against her with the other proofs.
Oth. O that the slave had forty thousand lives:
One is too poor, too weak for my revenge.
Now doe I see 'tis true. Look here, Iago,
All my fond love thus doe I blow to heaven. 'Tis gone,
Arise black vengeance from the hollow hell,
Yield up (O Love) thy Crown and hearted Throne
To tyrannous Hate. Swell bosome with thy fraught,
For 'tis of Aspicks tongues.
Iago. Yet be content.
Oth. Oh blood, blood, blood.
Iago. Patience I say: your minde may change.
Oth. Never, Iago. Like to the Pontick Sea,
Whose Icie Current, and compulsive Course,
Ne're keeps retiring ebbe, but keeps due on
To the Propontick, and the Hellespont:
Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace
Shall ne're look back, ne're ebbe to humble Love,
Till that a capable, and wide Revenge
Swallow them up. Now by yond Marble Heaven,
In the due reverence of a Sacred vow,
I here engage my words------
Iago. Doe not rise yet:
Witnesse you ever-burning Lights above,
You Elements, that clip us round about,
Witnesse that here Iago doth give up
The execution of his wit, hands, heart,
To wrong'd Othello's Service. Let him command,
And to obey shall be in me remorse,
What bloody businesse ever.
Oth. I greet thy love,
Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance bountious,
And will upon the instant put thee to't:
Within these three dayes let me hear thee say,
That Cassio's not alive.
Iago. My friend is dead:
'Tis done at your request.
But let her live.
Oth. Damn her lewde Minx:
O damn her, damn her.
Come go with me apart, I will withdraw
To furnish me with some swift meanes of death
For the fair Devil.
Now art thou my Lieutenant.
Iago. I am your own for ever. Exeunt.

Scena.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Desdemona, Æmilia, and Clown.

Des. Do you know, Sirrah, where Lieutenant Cassio lyes?

Clow. I dare not say he lies any where.

Des. Why man?

Clo. He's a Soldier, and for me to say a Soldier lyes, 'tis stabbing.

Des. Go to: where lodges he?

Clo. To tell you where he lodges, is to tell you where I lye.

Des. Can any thing be made of this?

Clo. I know not where he lodges, and for me to devise a lodging, and say he lies here, or he lies there, were to lye in mine own throat.

Des. Can you enquire him out? and be edified by report?

Clo. I will Catechize the world for him, that is, make Questions, and by them answer.

Des. Seek him, bid him come hither: tell him, I have mov'd my Lord on his behalf, and hope all will be well.

Clo. To doe this, is within the compasse of mans wit, and therefore I will attempt the doing it. Exit Clo.

Des. Where should I loose the Handkerchiffe, Æmilia?

Æmil. I know not, Madam.

Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse
Full of Cruzadoes. And but my Noble Moore
Is true of minde, and made of no such baseneſſe,
As jealous Creatures are, it were enough
To put him to ill-thinking.

Æmil. Is he not jealous?

Des. Who he? I think the Sun where he was born,
Drew all such humours from him.

Æmilia. Look where he comes.

Des. I will not leave him now, till Cassio be Call'd to him. How is't with you, my Lord?

Oth. Well, my good Lady. Oh hardneſſe to dissemble!
How doe you, Desdemona?

Des. Well, my good Lord.

Oth. Give me your hand,
This hand is moist, my Lady.

Des. It hath felt no age, nor known no sorrow.

Enter Othello.

Oth. This argues fruitfulneſſe, and liberall heart:
Hot, hot, and moist. This hand of yours requires
A sequester from Liberty: Fasting, and Prayer,
Much Castigation, Exercise devout,
For here's a young and sweating Devil here,
That commonly rebells: 'Tis a good hand,
A frank one.

Des. You may (indeed) say so:
For 'twas that hand that gave away my heart.

Oth. A liberall hand. The hearts of old, gave hands:
But our new Heraldry is hands, not hearts.

Des. I cannot speak of this:
Come, now your promise.

Oth. What promise, Chuck?

Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with you.

Oth. I have a salt and sorry Rheume offends me:
Lend me thy Handkerchiffe.

Des. Here, my Lord.

Oth. That which I gave you.

Des. I have it not about me.

Oth. Not?

Des. No indeed, my Lord.

Oth. That's a fault: That Handkerchiffe
Did an Ægyptian to my Mother give:
She was a Charmer, and could almost read
The thoughts of people: She told her, while she kept it,
'Twould make her amiable, subdue my Father
Intirely to her love: but if she lost it,
Or made a Gift of it, My Fathers eye
Should hold her loathed, and his Spirits should hunt
After new Fancies. She dying gave it me,
And bid me (when my Fate would have me Wiv'd)
To give it her. I did so, and take heed on't,
Make it a Darling, like your precious eye:
To loos't, or give't away, were such perdition,
As nothing else could match.

Des. Is't possible?

Oth. 'Tis true, there's Magick in the web of it:
A Sybill that had numbred in the world
The Sun to course two hundred compasses,
In her prophetick fury sow'd the work:
The Wormes were hallowed, that did breed the Silk,
And it was di'd in Mummey, which the skilfull
Conserv'd of Maidens hearts.

Des. Indeed? is't true?

Oth. Most veritable, therefore look to't well.

Des. Then would the heaven, that I had never seen't.

Oth. Ha? wherefore?

Des. Why doe you speak so staringly, and rash?

Oth. Is't lost? is't gone? Speak, is't out oth' way?

Des. Blesse us.

Oth. Say you?

Des. It is not lost: but what and if it were?

Oth. How?

Des. I say it is not lost.

Oth. Fetch't, let me see't.

Des. Why so I can: but I will not now:
This is a trick to put me from my suit,
Pray you let Cassio be receiv'd again.

Oth. Fetch me the Handkerchiffe,
My minde misgives.

Des. Come, come: you'll never meet a more sufficient man.

Oth. The Handkerchiffe.

Des. A man that all his time
Hath founded his good Fortunes on your love;
Shar'd dangers with you.

Oth. The Handkerchiffe.

Des. Insooth, you are too blame,

Oth. Away. Exit Othello.

Æmil. Is not this man jealous?

Des. I never saw this before.
Sure there's some wonder in this Handkerchiffe,
I am most unhappy in the losse of it.

Æmil. 'Tis not a yeare or two shewes us a man:
They are all but stomacks, and we all but Food,
They eat us hungerly, and when they are full
They belch us.

Enter Iago, and Cassio.

Look you, Cassio and my Husband.

Iago. There is no other way: 'tis she must do't:
And lo the happineſſe: go and importune her.

Des.

Def. How now, (good Cassio) what's the newes with you?

Cassio. Madam, my former suit. I doe beseech you,
That by your virtuous meanes, I may again
Exist, and be a member of his love,
Whom I, with all the Office of my heart
Intirely honour, I would not be delay'd.
If my offence be of such mortall kinde,
That not my Service past, nor present Sorrowes,
Nor purpos'd merit in futurity,
Can ransome me into his love again,
But to know so, must be my benefit:
So shall I cloathe me in a forc'd content,
And shut my self up in some other course
To Fortunes Almes.

Def. Alas (thrice-gentle Cassio)
My Advocation is not now in tune;
My Lord, is not my Lord; nor should I know him,
Were he in favour, as in humour alterd.
So help me every spirit sanctified,
As I have spoken for you all my best,
And stood within the blank of his displeasure
For my free speech. You must a while be patient:
What I can doe, I will: and more I will
Then for my self I dare. Let that suffice you.

Iago. Is my Lord angry?

Æmil. He went hence but now:
And certainly in strange unquietnesse.

Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen the Cannon,
When it hath blown his Ranks into the aire,
And like the Devil from his very Arme
Puft his own Brother: And is he angry?
Something of moment then; I will go meet him,
There's matter in't indeed, if he be angry, Exit.

Def. I prethee doe so. Something sure of State,
Either from Venice, or some unhatch'd practice,
Made demonstrable here in Cyprus, to him,
Hath pudled his clear Spirit: and in such cases,
Mens Natures wrangle with inferiour things,
Though great ones are their object. 'Tis even so.
For let our finger ake, and it endues
Our other healthfull members, even to a sense
Of pain. Nay, we must think men are not Gods,
Nor of them look for such observance
As fits the Bridall. Beshrew me much, Æmilia,
I was (unhandsome Warriour as I am)
Arraigning his unkindnesse with my soule;
But now I finde, I had suborn'd the Witnesse,
And he's Indited falsely.

Æmil. Pray heaven it be
State matters, as you think, and no Conception,
Nor no jealous toy concerning you.

Def. Alas-the-day, I never gave him cause.

Æmil. But Jealous soules will not be answer'd so;
They are not ever jealous for the cause,
But jealous, for they're jealous. It is a Monster
Begot upon it self, Born on it self.

Def. Heaven keep the Monster from Othello's minde.

Æmil. Lady, Amen.

Def. I will go seek him. Cassio, walk hereabout:
If I doe finde him fit, I'le move your suit,
And seek to effect it to my uttermost. Exit.

Caf. I humbly thank your Ladiship.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. 'Save you (Friend Cassio.)

Cassio. What make you from home?
How is't with you, my most fair Bianca?
Indeed (sweet Love) I was comming to your house.

Bian. And I was going to your Lodging, Cassio.
What? keep a week away? Seven dayes, and nights?
Eight score eight houres? And Loves absent houres
More tedious then the Diall, eight score times?
O weary reck'ning.

Cassio. Pardon me, Bianca:
I have this while with leaden thoughts been prest,
But I shall in a more continuate time
Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca,
Take me this work out.

Bianca. Oh Cassio, whence came this?
This is some token from a newer Friend;
To the felt-absence: now I feel a Cause:
Is't come to this? Well, well.

Cassio. Go to, woman:
Throw your vilde guesses in the Devils teeth,
From whence you have them. You are jealous now
That this is from some Mistris, some remembrance;
No, in good troth, Bianca.

Bian. Why, whose is it?

Cassio. I know not neither:
I found it in my Chamber,
I like the work well: Ere it be demanded
(As like enough it will) I would have it coppied:
Take it, and do't, and leave me for this time.

Bian. Leave you? wherefore?

Cassio. I doe attend here on the Generall,
And think it no addition, nor my wish
To have him see me woman'd.

Bian. Why, I pray you?

Cassio. Not that I love you not.

Bian. But that you doe not love me,
I pray you bring me on the way a little,
And say, if I shall see you soon at night?

Cassio. 'Tis but a little way that I can bring you,
For I attend here. But I'le see you soon.

Bian. 'Tis very good: I must be circumstanc'd.

Exeunt omnes.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Othello, and Iago.

Iago. Will you think so?

Oth. Think so, Iago?

Iago. What, to kisse in private?

Oth. An unauthoriz'd kisse?

Iago. Or to be naked with her Friends in bed,
An houre, or more, not meaning any harme?

Oth. Naked in bed (Iago) and not mean harme?
It is hypocrisie against the Devil:
They that mean virtuously, and yet do so,
The Devil their virtue tempts, and they tempt Heaven.

Iago. If they do nothing, 'tis a Veniall slip:
But I give my wife a Handkerchiffe.

Oth. What then?

Iago. Why then 'tis hers (my Lord) and being hers,
She may (I think) bestow't on any man,

Oth. She is Protectresse of her honour too:
May she give that?

Iago.

Iago. Her Honour is an Eſſence that's not ſeen,
They have it very oft that have it not.
But for the Handkerchiffe.
Oth. By heaven I would moſt gladly have forgot it:
Thou ſaidſt (oh, it comes o're my memory,
As doth the Raven o're the infectious houſe:
Boading to all) he had my Handkerchiffe.
Iago. I: what of that?
Oth. That's not ſo good now:
Iago. What if I had ſaid, I had ſeen him do you wrong?
Or hear him ſay, as Knaves be ſuch abroad,
Who having by their own importunate ſuit,
Or voluntary dotage of ſome Miſtris,
Convinced or ſuppli'd them cannot chuſe
But they muſt blab.
Oth. Hath he ſaid any thing?
Iago. He hath (my Lord) but be you well aſſur'd,
No more then he'll unſwear.
Oth. What hath he ſaid?
Iago. Why, that he did: I know not what he did.
Oth. What? what?
Iago. Lye.
Oth. With her?
Iago. With her? on her: what you will.
Oth. Lie with her? lie on her? we ſay, lie on her, when they be-lye her. Lie with her? that's fulſome: Handkerchiffe: Confeſſions: Handkerchiffe. To confeſſe, and be hang'd for his labour. Firſt, to be hang'd, and then to confeſſe: I tremble at it. Nature would not inveſt her ſelf in ſuch ſhadowing paſſion, without ſome inſtruction. It is not words that ſhakes me thus, (piſh) Noſes, Eares, and Lips: is't poſſible. Confeſſe? Handkerchiffe? O Devil. Falls in a Traunce.
Iago. Work on,
My Medicine works. Thus credulous Fooles are caught,
And many worthy, and chaſte Dames even thus
(All guiltleſſe) meet reproach: what hoa? My Lord?
My Lord, I ſay Othello.

Enter Caſſio.

How now, Caſſio?
Caſ. What's the matter?
Iago. My Lord is faln into an Epilepſie,
This is his ſecond Fit: he had one yeſterday.
Caſ. Rub him about the Temples.
Iago. The Lethargy muſt have his quiet courſe:
If not, he foames at mouth: and by and by
Breaks out to ſavage madneſſe: Look, he ſtirres:
Doe you withdraw your ſelf a little while,
He will recover ſtraight: when he is gone,
I would on great occaſion, ſpeak with you.
How is it Generall? Have you not hurt your hand?
Oth. Doſt thou mock me?
Iago. I mock you not, by Heaven:
Would you would bear your Fortune like a Man.
Oth. A Horned man's a Monſter and a Beaſt.
Iago. There's many a Beaſt then in a populous City,
And many a civil Monſter.
Oth. Did he confeſſe it?
Iago. Good Sir, be a man:
Think every bearded fellow that's but yoak'd
May draw with you. There's millions now alive,
That nightly lie in thoſe unproper beds,
Which they dare ſwear peculiar. Your cauſe is better.
Oh, 'tis the ſpight of hell, the Fiends Arch-mock,
To lip a wanton in a ſecure Cowch;
And to ſuppoſe her chaſte. No, let me know,
And knowing what I am, I know what ſhe ſhall be.
Oth. Oh, thou art wiſe: 'tis certain.
Iago. Stand you a while apart,
Confine your ſelf but in a patient Liſt,
Whil'ſt you were here, o're-whelmed with your grief
(A paſſion moſt reſulting ſuch a man)
Caſſio came hither. I ſhifted him away,
And laid good ſcuſes on your Extaſie,
Bad him anon return, and here ſpeak with me,
The which he promis'd. Doe but encave your ſelf,
And marke the Fleeres, the Gybes and notable Scorns,
That dwell in every Region of his face.
For I will make him tell the tale anew;
Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when
He hath, and is again to cope your wife.
I ſay, but marke his geſture: marry Patience,
Or I ſhall ſay y'are all in all in Spleen,
And nothing of a man.
Oth. Doſt thou hear, Iago,
I will be found moſt cunning in my Patience:
But (doſt thou hear) moſt bloody.
Iago. That's not amiſſe.
But yet keep time in all: will you withdraw?
Now will I queſtion Caſſio of Bianca,
A Huſwife, that by ſelling her deſires,
Buyes her ſelf Bread and Cloth. It is a Creature
That dotes on Caſſio, (as 'tis the Strumpets plague
To beguile many, and be beguil'd by one)
He, when he heares of her, cannot reſtrain
From the exceſſe of Laughter. Here he comes.

Enter Caſſio.

As he ſhall ſmile, Othello ſhall go mad:
And his unbookiſh Jealouſie muſt conſerve,
Poor Caſſio's ſmiles, geſtures and light behaviours
Quite in the wrong. How doe you, Lieutenant?
Caſ. The worſer, that you gave me the addition,
Whoſe want even kills me.
Iago. Ply Deſdemona well, and you are ſure on't:
Now, if this Sute lay in Bianca's dowre,
How quickly ſhould you ſpeed?
Caſ. Alaſs, poor Caitiffe.
Oth. Look how he laughes already.
Iago. I never knew woman love man ſo.
Caſ. Alaſs, poor Rogue, I think indeed ſhe loves me.
Oth. Now he denies it faintly: and laughes it out,
Iago. Doe you hear, Caſſio?
Oth. Now he importunes him
To tell it o're: go to, well ſaid, well ſaid.
Iago. She gives it out, that you ſhall marry her.
Doe you intend it?
Caſ. Ha, ha, ha.
Oth. Doe ye triumph, Roman? doe you triumph?
Caſ. I marry. What? a cuſtomer; prethee bear
Some Charity to my wit, doe not think it
So unwholeſome. Ha, ha, ha.
Oth. So, ſo: they laugh, that winnes.
Iago. Why, the cry goes, that you ſhall marry her.
Caſ. Prethee ſay true.
Iago. I am a very Villain elſe.
Oth. Have you ſcoar'd me; well.
Caſ. This is the Monkies own giving out:
She is perſwaded I will marry her
Out of her own love & flattery, not out of my promiſe.

Othe:

Oth. Iago beckon's me: now he begins the story.

Caſsio. She was here even now: ſhe haunts me in every place. I was the other day talking on the Sea bank with certain Venetians, and thither comes the Bauble, and falls me thus about my neck.

Oth. Crying, oh dear Caſsio, as it were: his geſture imports it.

Caſ. So hangs, and lolls, and weeps upon me:
So ſhakes, and pulls me. Ha, ha, ha.

Oth. Now he tells how ſhe pluckt him to my Chamber: oh, I ſee that Noſe of yours, but now that Dog, I ſhall throw it to:

Caſ. Well, I muſt leave her company.

Iago. Before me: look where ſhe comes.

Enter Bianca.

Caſ. 'Tis ſuch another Fitchew: marry a perfum'd one: What doe you mean by this haunting of me?

Bian. Let the devil and his damme haunt you: what did you mean by that ſame Handkerchiffe you gave me even now? I was a fine Foole to take it: I muſt take out the work? A likely piece of work, that you ſhould finde it in your Chamber, and know not who left it there. This is ſome Minxes token, and I muſt take out the work? There, give it your Hobbey-horſe: wherefoever you had it, I'le take out no work on't.

Caſ. How now, my ſweet Bianca?
How now? how now?

Oth. By Heaven, that ſhould be my Hankerchiffe.

Bian. If you'll come to ſupper to night you may, if you will not, come when you are next prepar'd for. Exit.

Iago. After her, after her.

Caſ. I muſt, ſhe'll raile in the ſtreets elſe.

Iago. Will you ſup there?

Caſ. Yes, I intend ſo.

Iago. Well, I may chance to ſee you: for I would very fain ſpeak with you.

Caſ. Prethee come, will you?

Iago. Go to; ſay no more. Exit.

Oth. How ſhall I murther him, Iago?

Iago. Did you perceive how he laugh'd at his vice?

Oth. Oh, Iago.

Iago. And did you ſee the Handkerchiffe?

Oth. Was that mine?

Iago. Yours by this hand: and to ſee how he prizes the fooliſh woman your wife: ſhe gave it him, and he hath given it his whore.

Oth. I would have him nine yeares a killing;
A fine woman, a fair woman, a ſweet woman?

Iago. Nay, you muſt forget that.

Oth. I, let her rot and periſh, and be damn'd to night, for ſhe ſhall not live. No, my heart is turn'd to ſtone: I ſtrike it, and it hurts my hand. Oh, the world hath not a ſweeter Creature: ſhe might lye by an Emperours ſide, and command him Taskes.

Iago. Nay, that's not your way.

Othe. Hang her, I do but ſay what ſhe is: ſo delicate with her Needle: an admirable Muſitian. Oh, ſhe will ſing the Savageneſſe out of a Bear: of ſo high a plentious wit, and invention?

Iag. She's the worſe for all this.

Oth. Oh, a thouſand, a thouſand times:
And then of ſo gentle a condition?

Iago. I, too gentle.

Othe. Nay that's certain.
But yet the pitty of it, Iago: oh Iago, the pitty of it, Iago.

Iago. If you are ſo fond over her iniquity: give her patient to offend, for if it touch not you, it comes near no body.

Oth. I will chop her into Meſſes: Cuckold me?

Iago. Oh, 'tis foul in her.

Oth. With mine Officer?

Iago. That's fouler.

Othe. Get me ſome poyſon, Iago, this night. I'le not expoſtulate with her: leſt her body and her beauty unprovide my minde again: this night, Iago.

Iago. Doe it not with poyſon, ſtrangle her in her bed, even the bed ſhe hath contaminated.

Oth. Good, good:
The juſtice of it pleaſes: very good.

Iago. And for Caſsio, let me be his undertaker:
You ſhall hear more by midnight.

Enter Lodovico, Deſdemona, and Attendants.

Oth. Excellent good: what Trumpet is that ſame?

Iago. I warrant ſomething from Venice,
'Tis Lodovico, this comes from the Duke.
See, your wife's with him.

Lodo. Save you, worthy Generall.

Oth. With all my heart, Sir.

Lod. The Duke, and the Senators of Venice greet you.

Oth. I kiſſe the Inſtrument of their pleaſures.

Deſ. And what's the newes, good couſin Lodovico?

Iago. I am very glad to ſee you, Signior.
Welcome to Cyprus.

Lod. I thank you: how do's Lieutenant Caſsio?

Iago. Lives, Sir.

Deſ. Couſin, there's faln between him and my Lord,
An unkind breach: but you ſhall make all well.

Oth. Are you ſure of that?

Deſ. My Lord?

Oth. This faile you not to do, as you will——

Lod. He did not call: he's buſie in the paper,
Is there diviſion 'twixt my Lord and Caſsio?

Deſ. A moſt unhappy one: I would do much
T'attone them for the love I bear to Caſsio.

Oth. Fire and Brimſtone.

Deſ. My Lord.

Oth. Are you wiſe?

Deſ. What, is he angry?

Lod. May be the Letter mov'd him.
For as I think they do command him home,
Deputing Caſsio in his Government.

Deſ. Truſt me, I am glad on't.

Oth. Indeed?

Deſ. My Lord?

Oth. I am glad to ſee you mad.

Deſ. Why, ſweet Othello?

Oth. Devil.

Deſ. I have not deſerv'd this.

Lod. My Lord, this would not be believ'd in Venice,
Though I ſhould ſwear I ſaw't. 'Tis very much,
Make her amends: ſhe weeps.

Oth. Oh Devil, Devil:
If that the Earth could teem with womans teares,
Each drop ſhe falls would prove a Crocodile:
Out of my ſight.

Deſ. I will not ſtay to offend you:

Lod. Truly obedient Lady:
I do beſeech your Lordſhip call her back.

Oth.

Othe. Miſtris.
Def. My Lord.
Othe. What would you with her, Sir?
Lod. VVho I, my Lord?
Othe. I, you did wiſh that I would make her turn:
Sir, ſhe can turn, and turn: and yet go on
And turn again. And ſhe can weep, Sir, weep:
And ſhe's obedient: as you ſay obedient.
Very obedient: proceed you in your teares.
Concerning this, Sir, (oh well painted paſſion)
I am commanded home: get you away:
I'le ſend for you anon. Sir, I obey the Mandate.
And will return to Venice. Hence, avant:
Caſſio ſhall have my Place. And, Sir, to night
I do entreat, that we may ſup together.
You are welcome, Sir, to Cyprus.
Goats and Monkies. Exit.
Lod. Is this the Noble Moore, whom our full Senate
Call all in all ſufficient? Is this the Nature
VVhom Paſſion could not ſhake? whoſe ſolid virtue
The ſhot of Accident, nor dart of Chance
Could neither graze, nor pierce?
Iago. He is much chang'd.
Lod. Are his wits ſafe? is he not of light Brain?
Iago. He's that he is: I may not breathe my cenſure.
VVhat he might be: if what he might, he is not,
I would to heaven he were.
Lod. VVhat, ſtrike his wife?
Iago. 'Faith that was not ſo well; yet would I knew
That ſtroake would prove the worſt.
Lod. Is it his uſe?
Or did the Letters work upon his blood,
And new create his fault?
Iago. Alaſs, alaſs:
It is not honeſty in me to ſpeak
VVhat I have ſeen and known. You ſhall obſerve him,
And his own courſes will denote him ſo,
That I may ſave my ſpeech: do but go after
And mark how he continues.
Lo. I am ſorry that I am deceiv'd in him. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, and Æmilia.

Othe. You have ſeen nothing then?
Æmil. Nor ever heard: nor ever did ſuſpect.
Othe. Yes, you have ſeen Caſſio and ſhe together.
Æmil. But then I ſaw no harme: and then I heard
Each ſyllable that breath made up between them.
Othe. VVhat? Did they never whiſper?
Æmil. Never, my Lord.
Othe. Nor ſend you out oth' way?
Æmil. Never.
Othe. To fetch her Fan, her Gloves, her Mask, nor (nothing?
Æmil. Never, my Lord.
Othe. That's ſtrange.
Æmil. I durſt (my Lord) to wager ſhe is honeſt,
Lay down my Soule at ſtake: If you think other,
Remove your thought. It doth abuſe your boſome,
If any wretch hath put this in your head,
Let heaven requite it with the Serpents curſe,
For if ſhe be not honeſt, chaſte, and true,
There's no man happy, the pureſt of their Wives
Is foul as Slander.
Othe. Bid her come hither: go. Exit Æmilia.
She ſaies enough: yet ſhe's a ſimple Baud
That cannot ſay as much. This is a ſubtle Whore:
A Cloſſet Lock and Key of Villanous Secrets,
And yet ſhe'll kneel, and pray: I have ſeen her do't.

Enter Deſdemona, and Æmilia.

Def. My Lord, what is your will?
Othe. Pray you Chuck come hither.
Def. What is your pleaſure?
Othe. Let me ſee your eyes: look in my face.
Def. What horrible Fancie's this?
Othe. Some, of your Function, Miſtris,
Leave Procreants alone, and ſhut the door:
Cough, or cry hem; if any body come:
Your Myſtery, your Myſtery; Nay diſpatch. Exit Æmi.
Def. Upon my knee, what doth your ſpeech import?
I underſtand a Fury in your words.
Othe. Why? What art thou?
Def. Your wife my Lord: your true and loyal wife.
Othello. Come ſwear it: damne thy ſelf, being like one of Heaven, the devills themeſelves ſhould fear to ceiſe thee. Therefore be double damn'd: ſwear thou art honeſt.
Def. Heaven doth truly know it.
Othe. Heaven truly knows, that thou art falſe as hell.
Def. To whom, my Lord?
With whom? How am I falſe?
Othe. Ah Deſdemon, away, away, away.
Def. Alas the heavy day: why do you weep?
Am I the motive of theſe tears, my Lord?
If happely you my Father do ſuſpect,
An Inſtrument of this your calling back,
Lay not your blame on me: if you have loſt him,
I have loſt him too.
Othe. Had it pleas'd Heaven,
To try me with Affliction, had they rain'd
All kind of ſores, and ſhames on my bare-head:
Steep'd me in poverty to the very lips.
Given to Captivity, me and my utmoſt hopes.
I ſhould have found in ſome place of my ſoul
A drop of patience. But alas, to make me
The fixed Figure for the time of Scorn,
To point his ſlow, and moving finger at.
Yet could I bear that too, well, very well:
But there where I have garnerd up my heart,
Where either I muſt live, or bear no life,
The fountain from the which my currant runs,
Or elſe dries up: to be diſcarded thence,
Or keep it as a Ceſtern, for foul Toads
To knot and gender in. Turn thy complexion there:
Patience, thou young and roſe-lipp'd Cherubin,
I here look grim as hell.
Def. I hope my Lord eſteems me honeſt.
Othe. O I, as Sommer Flies are in the Shambles,
That quicken even with blowing. Oh thou weed:
Who art ſo lovely fair, and ſmell'ſt ſo ſweet,
That the Sence asks at thee,
Would thad'ſt never been born.
Def. Alas, what ignorant ſin have I committed?
Othe. Was this fair Paper? this moſt goodly Book
Made to write Whore upon? What committed,

Com-

Committed? Oh, thou publick Commoner,
I should make very Forges of my Cheeks,
That would to Cynders burn up Modesty,
Did but I speak thy deeds. What committed?
Heaven stops the Nose at it, and the Moon winks:
The bawdy wind that kisses all it meets,
Is hush'd within the hollow Myne of Earth
And will not hear't. What committed?
Def. By Heaven you doe me wrong.
Othe. Are not you a Strumpet?
Def. No, as I am a Christian.
If to preserve this Vessell for my Lord,
From any other foule unlawfull touch
Be not to be a Strumpet, I am none.
Othe. What, not a Whore?
Def. No, as I shall be sav'd.
Othe. Is't possible?
Def. Oh Heaven forgive us.
Othe. I cry you mercy then.
I took you for that cunning Whore of Venice,
That married with Othello. You Mistris,

Enter Æmilia.

That have the Office opposite to Saint Peter,
And keeps the gate of hell. You, you: I you.
We have done our course: there's money for your pains:
I pray you turn the key and keep our counsell. Exit.
Æmil. Alas, what do's this Gentleman conceive?
How doe you, Madam? how doe you, my good Lady?
Def. Faith, half asleep.
Æmi. Good Madam,
What's the matter with my Lord?
Def. With whom?
Æmi. Why, with my Lord, Madam?
Def. Who is thy Lord?
Æmil. He that is yours, sweet Lady.
Def. I have none: doe not talk to me, Æmilia,
I cannot weep: nor answers have I none,
But what should go by water. Prethee to night,
Lay on my bed my wedding sheets, remember,
And call thy Husband hither.
Æmil. Here's a change indeed. Exit.
Def. 'Tis meet I should be us'd so: very meet.
How have I bin behav'd, that he might stick
The small'st opinion on my least misuse?

Enter Iago, and Æmilia.

Iago. What is your pleasure, Madam?
How is't with you?
Def. I cannot tell: those that doe teach your Babes
Doe it with gentle meanes, and easie taskes.
He might have chid me so: for in good faith
I am a Child to chiding.
Iago. What is the matter, Lady?
Æmil. Alas (Iago) my Lord hath so bewhor'd her,
Thrown such despight, and heavy termes upon her,
That true hearts cannot bear it.
Def. Am I that name, Iago?
Iago. What name (fair Lady?)
Def. Such as she said my Lord did say I was.
Æmil. He call'd her whore: a Beggar in his drink,
Could not have laid such termes upon his Callet.
Iago. Why did he so?
Def. I doe not know: I am sure I am none such.
Iago. Doe not weep, doe not weep: alas-the-day.
Æmil. Hath she forsook so many Noble Matches?
Her Father? and her Countrey? and her Friends?
To be call'd Whore? would it not make one weep?
Def. It is my wretched Fortune.
Iago. Beshrew him for't:
How comes this trick upon him?
Def. Nay, heaven doth know.
Æmi. I will be hang'd, if some eternall Villain,
Some busie and insinuating Rogue,
Some cogging, cozening slave, to get some Office,
Has not devis'd this Slander: I will be hang'd else.
Iago. Fie, there is no such man: it is impossible.
Def. If any such there be, heaven pardon him.
Æmil. A halter pardon him:
And hell gnaw his bones.
Why should he call her Whore?
Who keeps her company?
What Place? what Time?
What Form? what Likelihood?
The Moore's abus'd by some most villanous Knave,
Some base notorious Knave, some scurvy Fellow.
Oh heavens, that such companions thoud'st unfold,
And put in every honest hand a whip
To lash the Rascall naked through the world,
Even from the East to th' West.
Iago. Speak within door.
Æmil. Oh fie upon them: some such Squire he was
That turn'd your wit, the seamy side without,
And made you to suspect me with the Moore.
Iago. You are a Foole: go to.
Def. Alas, Iago.
What shall I do to win my Lord again?
Good Friend, go to him: for by this light of Heaven,
I know not how I lost him. Here I kneele:
If e're my will did trespasse 'gainst his Love,
Either in discourse of thought, or actual deed,
Or that mine Eyes, mine Ears, or any Sence
Delighted them: or any other Form:
Or that I do not yet, and ever did,
And ever will, (though he do shake me off
To beggerly divorcement) Love him dearly,
Comfort forswear me. Unkindnesse may do much,
And his unkindnesse may defeat my life,
But never taint my Love. I cannot say Whore,
It do's abhorre me now I speak the word,
To do the Act, that might the addition earn,
Not the worlds Masse of vanity could make me.
Iago. I pray you be content: 'tis but his humour:
The businesse of the State do's him offence,
Def. If 'twere no other.
Iago. It is but so, I warrant:
Hark how these Instruments summon to supper:
The Messenger of Venice stayes the Meat;
Go in, and weep not: all things shall be well.
Exeunt Desdemona and Æmilia.

Enter Rodorigo.

How now, Rodorigo?
Rod. I do not finde
That thou deal'st justly with me.
Iago. What in the contrary?
Rodo. Every day thou dofts me with some device, Iago, and rather as it seems to me now, keep'st from me all conveniency, then supplies me with the least advantage of hope: I will indeed no longer endure it. Nor am I yet perswaded to put up in peace, what already I have foolishly suffer'd.
Iago. Will you hear me, Rodorigo?

Rodo.

Rodo. I have heard too much: and your words and performances are no kin together.

Iago. You charge me most unjustly.

Rodo. With naught but truth: I have wasted my self out of my meanes. The Jewels you have had from me to deliver Desdemona, would half have corrupted a Votarist. You have told me she hath receiv'd them, and return'd me expectations and comforts of sudden respect, and acquaintance, but I find none.

Iago. Well, go to: very well.

Rodo. Very well, go to: I cannot go to, (man) nor 'tis not very well: nay, I think it is scurvy: and begin to find my self fopt in it.

Iago. Very well.

Rodo. I tell you, 'tis not very well: I will make my self known to Desdemona. If she will return me my Jewels, I will give over my Suit, and repent my unlawfull solicitation. If not, assure your self, I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now.

Rod. I, and said nothing but what I protest intendment of doing.

Iago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee: and even from this instant doe build on thee a better opinion then ever before: give me thy hand Rodorigo. Thou hast taken against me a most just exception: but yet I protest I have dealt most directly in thy Affaire.

Rod. It hath not appear'd.

Iago. I grant indeed it hath not appear'd: and your suspition is not without wit and judgement. But, Rodorigo, if thou hast that in thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now then ever (I mean purpose, Courage, and Valour) this night shew it. If thou the next night following enjoy not Desdemona, take me from this world with Treachery, and devise Engines for my life.

Rod. Well: what is it? Is it within reason and compasse?

Iago. Sir, there is especiall Commission come from Venice to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

Rod. Is that true? Why then Othello and Desdemona, return again to Venice.

Iago. Oh no: he goes into Mauritania, and taketh away with him the fair Desdemona, unlesse his abode be lingred here by some accident. Wherein none can be so determinate, as the removing of Cassio.

Rod. How doe you mean removing him?

Iago. Why, by making him uncapable of Othello's place: knocking out his brains.

Rod. And that you would have me to doe.

Iago. I; if you dare doe your self a profit, and a right. He sups to night with a Harlotry: and thither will I go to him. He knowes not yet of his honourable fortune, if you will watch his going thence (which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one) you may take him at your pleasure. I will be near to second your Attempt, and he shall fall betwen us. Come, stand not amaz'd at it, but go along with me: I will shew you such a necessity in his death, that you shall think your self bound to put it on him. It is now high supper time: and the night growes to waste. About it.

Rod. I will hear further reason for this.

Iago. And you shall be satisfied.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Othello, Lodovico, Desmona, Æmilia and Attendats.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble your self no further.

Othe. Oh pardon: 'twill do me good to walk.

Lod. Madam, good night: I humbly thank your Ladiship.

Des. Your honour is most welcome.

Othe. Will you walk sir? Oh Desdemona.

Des. My Lord.

Othe. Get you to bed on th'instant, I will be return'd forthwith: dismisse your Attendant there: look't be done. Exit.

Des. I will, my Lord.

Æmi. How goes it now? he looks gentler then he did.

Des. He sayes he will return incontinent,
And hath commanded me to go to bed,
And bid me to dismisse you.

Æmil. Dismisse me?

Des. It was his bidding: therefore good Æmilia,
Give me my nightly wearing, and adieu.
We must not now displease him.

Æmil. I would you had never seen him.

Des. So would not I: my love doth so approve him,
That even his stubbornes, his checks, his frowns,
(Prithee un-pin me) have grace and favour.

Æmi. I have laid those sheets you bad me on the bed.

Des. All's one: good Father, how foolish are our minds?
If I do die before thee, prithee shrowd me
In one of these same sheets.

Æmil. Come, come: you talk.

Des. My Mother had a Maid call'd Barbara,
She was in love: and he she lov'd prov'd mad.
And did forsake her. She had a Song of Willow,
An old thing 'twas: but it expres'd her Fortune.
And she dy'd singing it. That song to night,
Will not go from my mind: I have much to do,
But to go hang my head all at one side
And sing it like poor Barbara: prithee dispatch.

Æmil. shall I go fetch your Night-gown?

Des. No, unpin me here,
This Lodovico is a proper man.

Æmil. A very handsome man.

Des. He speaks well.

Æmil. I know a Lady in Venice would have walk'd bare-foot to Palestine for a touch of his nether lip.

Des. The poor Soul sat singing, by a Sicamore tree.
Sing all a green Willough:
Her hand on her bosome, her head on her knee,
Sing Willough, Willough, Willough.
The fresh streams ran by her, and murmur'd her moans
Sing Willough, &c.
Her salt tears fell from her, and softned the stones,
Sing willow, &c. (Lady by these)
Willough, Willough. (Prithe high thee, he'll come anon)
Sing all a green Willough must be my Garland.
Let no body blame him, his scorn I approve.
(Nay that's not next. Hark who is't that knocks?

Æmil. It's the wind.

Des. I call'd my Love false Love: but what said he then?
Sing Willough, &c.
If I court no women, you'll couch with no men.

so get thee gone, good night: mine eyes do itch:
Doth that bode weeping?
Æmil. 'Tis neither here, nor there,
Des. I have heard it said so, O these Men, these men!
Dost thou in conscience think (tell me Æmilia)
That there be women do abuse their husbands
In such a grosse kind?
Æmil. There be some such, no question.
Des. Would'st thou do such a deed for all the world?
Æmil. Why, would not you?
Des. No, by this heavenly light.
Æmil. Nor I neither, by this heavenly light.
I might do't as well ith'dark.
Des. Would'st thou do such a deed for all the world?
Æmil. The world's a huge thing:
It is a great price, for a small vice.
Des. In troth I think thou would'st not.
Æmil. In troth I think I should, and undo't when I had done. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joynt Ring, nor for measures of Lawn, nor for Gowns, Petticoats, nor Caps, nor any petty exhibition. But for all the whole world: why, who would not make her husband a Cuckold, to make him a Monarch? I should venture Purgatory for't.
Des. Beshrew me, if I would do such a wrong
For the whole world.
Æmil. Why, the wrong, is but a wrong ith'world; and having the world for your labour, 'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right.
Des. I do not think there is any such woman.
Æmil. Yes, a dozen: and as many to th'vantage, as would store the world they plaid for.
But I do think it is their husbands faults
If Wives do fall: (Say, that they slack their duties,
And pour our treasures into forraign laps;
Or else break out in peevish Jealousies,
Throwing restraint upon us; Or say they strike us,
Or scant our former having in despight)
Why we have galls: and though we have some Grace,
Yet have we some Revenge. Let husbands know,
Their wives have sense like them: They see and smell,
And have their Palats both for sweet and sowre,
As husbands have. What is it that they do
When they change us for others? Is it sport?
I think it is: and doth affection breed it?
I think it doth: Is't frailty that thus errs?
It is so too. And have not we affections?
Desires for sport? and frailty as men have?
Then let them use us well: else let them know,
The ills we do, their ills instruct us to.
Des. Good night, good night:
Heaven me such uses send,
Not to pick bad, from bad; but by bad, mend. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Iago, and Rodorigo.

Iago. Here, stand behind this Bark,
Straight will he come:
Wear thy good Rapier bare, and put it home:
Quick, quick, fear nothing; I'le be at thy Elbow,
It makes us, or it marrs us, think on that,
And fix most firm thy Resolution;
Rod. Be near at hand, I may miscarry in't.
Iago. Here, at thy hand: Behold, and take thy stand.
Rod. I have no great devotion to the deed,
And yet he hath given me satisfying Reasons:
'Tis but a man gone. Forth my Sword: he dies.
Iago. I have rub'd this young Quat almost to the sense,
And he growes angry. Now, whether he kill Cassio,
Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my gain. Live Rodorigo,
He calls me to a restitution large
Of Gold, and Jewels, that I bob'd from him,
As gifts to Desdemona.
It must not be: if Cassio do remain,
He hath a daily beauty in his life,
That makes me ugly: and besides, the Moor
May unfold me to him: there stand I in much perill:
No, he must die. But so, I hear him coming.

Enter Cassio.

Rod. I know his gate, 'tis he: Villain thou dyest.
Cas. That thrust had been mine enemy indeed,
But that my Coat is better then thou know'st:
I will make proof of thine.
Rod. Oh, I am slain.
Cas. I am maim'd for ever:
Help hoa: Murther, murthrr.

Enter Othello.

Othe. The voice of Cassio, Iago keeps his word.
Rod. O Villain that I am.
Oth. It is even so.
Cas. Oh help hoa: Light, a Surgeon.
Othe. 'Tis he: O brave Iago, honest, and just,
That hast such Noble sense of thy friends wrong,
Thou teachest me. Minion, your dear lies dead,
And your unblest Fate hyes: Strumpet I come:
For off my heart, those Charmes thine Eyes, are blotted.
Thy Bed-lust-stain'd, shall with Lusts bloud be spotted.
Exit Othello.

Enter Lodovico, and Gratiano.

Cas. What hoa? no Watch? no passage?
Murther, Murther.
Gra. 'Tis some mischance, the voice is very direfull.
Cas. Oh help.
Lodo. Hark.
Rod. Oh wretched Villain.
Lod. Two or three groan. 'Tis heavy night;
These may be counterfeits: Let's think't unsafe
To come into the cry, without more help.
Rod. No body come: then shall I bleed to death.

Enter Iago.

Lod. Hark.
Gra. Here's one comes in his shirt, with Light, and Weapons.
Iago. Who's there?
Whose noise is this that cryes out murther?
Lodo. We do not know.
Iago. Do not you hear a cry?
Cas. Here, here: for heaven sake help me.
Iago. What's the matter?
Gra. This is Othello's Ancient as I take it.
Lodo. The same indeed, a very valiant Fellow.
Iago. What are you here, that cry so grievously?
Cas. Iago? Oh I am spoyl'd, undone by Villains:
Give me some help.
Iago. O me, Lieutenant?
What Villains have done this?
Cas. I think that one of them is hereabout,

And

And cannot make away.
Iago. Oh trecherous Villains:
What are you there? Come in, and give some help.
Rod. O help me there.
Cassi. That's one of them.
Iago. Oh murd'rous Slave! O Villain!
Rod. O damn'd Iago! O inhumane Dog!
Iago. Kill men ith' dark?
Where be these bloudy Thieves?
How silent is this Town? Hoa, murther murther.
What may you be? Are you of good or evil?
Lod. As you shall prove us, praise us.
Iago. Signior Lodovico.
Lod. He, Sir.
Iago. I cry you mercy: here's Cassio hurt by Villains.
Gra. Cassio.
Iago. How is't, brother?
Cas. My Leg is cut in two.
Iago. Marry heaven forbid:
Light Gentlemen, I'le bind it with my shirt.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. What is the matter hoa? Who is't that cry'd?
Iago. Who is't that cry'd?
Bian. Oh my dear Cassio,
My sweet Cassio: Oh Cassio, Cassio, Cassio.
Iago. O notable Strumpet. Cassio, may you suspect
Who they should be, that have thus mangled you?
Cas. No.
Gra. I am sorry to find you thus;
I have been to seek you.
Iago. Lend me a Garter. So:-------Oh for a Chair
To bear him easily hence.
Bian. Alas he faints. Oh Cassio, Cassio, Cassio.
Iago. Gentlemen all, I do suspect this Trash
To be a party in this injury.
Patience a while, good Cassio. Come, come;
Lend me a Light: know we this face, or no?
Alas my friend, and my dear Countryman
Roderigo? No: Yes sure: Yea, 'tis Roderigo.
Gra. What, of Venice?
Iago. Even he, Sir: did you know him?
Gra. Know him? I.
Iago. Signior Gratiano? I cry your gentle pardon:
These bloudy accidents must excuse my Manners,
That so neglected you.
Gra. I am glad to see you.
Iago. How do you, Cassio? Oh a Chair, a Chair.
Gra. Roderigo?
Iago. He, he, 'tis he:
Oh that's well said, the Chair.
Some good man bear him carefully from hence,
I'le fetch the Generals Surgeon. For you, Mistris,
Save you your labour. He that lies slain here (Cassio)
Was my dear friend. What malice was between you?
Cas. None in the world: nor do I know the man?
Iago. What look you pale? Oh bear him out oth' Aire.
Stay you good Gentlemen. Look you pale Mistris?
Do you perceive the gastnesse of her eye?
Nay, if you stare, we shall hear more anon.
Behold her well: I pray you look upon her:
Do you see, Gentlemen? Nay, guiltinesse will speak
Though tongues were out of use.
Æmil. Alas, what is the matter?
What is the matter, husband.
Iago. Cassio hath here bin set on in the dark
By Rodorigo, and Fellows that are scap'd:
He's almost slain, and Rodorigo quite dead.
Iago. This is the fruits of whoring. Prithee Æmilia,
Go know of Cassio where he supt to night.
What do you shake at that?
Bian. He supt at my house, but I therefore shake not.
Iago. O did he so? I charge you go with me.
Æmil. Oh fie upon thee, Strumpet.
Bian. I am no Strumpet, but of life as honest,
As you that thus abuse me.
Æmil. As I? Fie upon thee.
Iago. Kind Gentlemen:
Let's go see poor Cassio dresst.
Come Mistris, you must tell's another Tale.
Æmilia, run you to the Cittadell,
And tell my Lord and Lady, what hath hap'd:
Will you go on afore? This is the night
That either makes me, or fordoes me quite. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, and Desdemona in her bed.

Oth. It is the Cause, it is the Cause (my soul)
Let me not name it to you, you chaste Starrs,
It is the Cause. Yet I'le not shed her bloud,
Nor scar that whiter skin of hers then Snow,
And smooth as Monumental Alablaster:
Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men:
Put out the Light, and then put out the Light:
If I quench thee, thou flaming Minister,
I can again thy former light restore,
Should I repent me. But once put out thy light,
Thou cunning'st Pattern of excelling Nature,
I know not where is that Promethean heat
That can thy Light re-Lume.
When I have pluck'd thy Rose,
I cannot give it vital growth again,
It needs must wither. I'le smell the on the tree:
Oh Balmy breath, that do'st almost perswade
Justice to break her sword. One more, one more;
Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee,
And love thee after. One more, and that's the last.
So sweet, was ne're so fatal. I must weep,
But they are cruel tears: this sorrows heavenly,
It strikes, where it doth love. She wakes.
Des. Who's there? Othello?
Othe. I, Desdemona.
Des. Will you come to bed, my Lord?
Othe. Have you pray'd to night, Desdemona?
Des. I, my Lord.
Othe. If you bethink your self of any Crime
Unreconcil'd as yet to heaven, and Grace,
Solicit for it straight.
Des. Alack, my Lord,
What may you mean by that?
Othe. Well, do it, and be brief, I will walk by?
I would not kill thy unprepared spirit,
No, (Heavens fore-fend) I would not kill thy soul.
Des. Talk you of killing?
Othe. I, I do.
Des. Then heaven have mercy on me.

Othe. Amen, with all my heart.
Def. If you say so, I hope you will not kill me.
Oth. Humh.
Def. And yet I fear you: for you're fatal then.
When your eyes rowl so.
Why I should fear I know not,
Since guiltinesse I know not: But yet I feel I fear,
Oth. Think on thy sins.
Def. They are love I bear to you.
Oth. I, and for that thou dy'st.
Def. That death's unnatural, that kills for loving.
Alas, why gnaw you so your nether-lip?
Some bloudy passion shakes your very frame:
These are portents: but yet I hope, I hope,
They do not point on me.
Oth. Peace, and be still.
Def. I will so: What's the matter?
Oth. That Handkerchief
Which I so lov'd, and gave thee, thou gav'st Cassio.
Def. No by my life, and soul: send for the man,
And ask him.
Oth. Sweet soul, take heed, take heed of Perjury,
Thou art on thy death-bed.
Def. I, but not yet to die.
Oth. Presently.
Therefore confesse thee freely of thy sin:
For to deny each Article with Oath,
Cannot remove, nor choak the strong Conception
That I do groan withall. Thou art to die.
Def. Oh heaven have mercy on me.
Oth. I say, Amen.
Def. And have you mercy too, I never did
Offend you in my life: never lov'd Cassio,
But with such general warranty of heaven,
As I might love. I never gave him Token.
Oth. By heaven I saw my Handkerchief in's hand.
O perjur'd woman, thou do'st stone my heart,
And makest me call, what I intend to do
A Murther, which I thought a Sacrifice.
I saw the Handkerchief.
Def. He found it then:
I never gave it him: Send for him hither:
Let him confesse a truth.
Oth. He hath confest:
Def. What, my Lord?
Oth. That he hath us'd thee.
Def. How? unlawfully?
Oth. I.
Def. He will not say so.
Oth. No: his mouth is stopp'd:
Honest Iago hath tane order for't.
Def. Oh, my fear interprets. What is he dead?
Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great Revenge
Had stomack for them all.
Def. Alas, he is betray'd, and I undone.
Oth. Out Strumpet: weep'st thou for him to my face?
Def. O banish me, my Lord, but kill me not.
Oth. Down Strumpet.
Def. Kill me to morrow, let me live to night.
Oth. Nay, if you strive.
Def. But half an hour.
Oth. Being done, there is no pause.
Def. But while I say one prayer.
Oth. It is too late. Smothers her.

Æmilia at the door.

Æmil. My Lord, my Lord? What hoa?
My Lord, my Lord.
Oth. What noise is this? not dead? not yet quite dead
I that am cruel, am yet mercifull,
I would not have thee linger in thy pain?
So, so.
Æmil. within. What hoa? my Lord, my Lord?
Oth. Who's there?
Æmil. Oh, my good Lord, I would speak a word with you.
Oth. Yes: 'tis Æmilia: by and by. She's dead.
'Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio's death:
The noise was high. Hah, no more mooving?
Still as the Grave. Shall she come in? wer't good?
I think she stirs again, No, what's best to do?
If she come in, she'll sure speak to my wife:
My wife, my wife, what wife? I have no wife.
Oh insupportable! O heavy hour!
Me thinks, it should be now a huge Eclipse
Of Sun and Moon: and that th'affrighted Globe
Did yawn at Alteration.
Æmil. I do beseech you
That I may speak with you. Oh, good my Lord.
Oth. I had forgot thee: oh come in Æmilia.
Soft, by and by, let me the Curtains draw,
Where art thou? What's the matter with thee now?

Enter Æmilia.

Æmil. Oh, my good Lord, yonders foule Murthers done.
Oth. What? now?
Æmil. But now, my Lord,
Oth. It is the very error of the Moon,
She comes more nearer Earth then she was wont,
And makes men mad.
Æmil. Cassio, my Lord, hath kill'd
A young Venetian, call'd Rodorigo.
Oth. Rodorigo kill'd? and Cassio kill'd?
Æmil. No, Cassio is not kill'd.
Oth. Not Cassio kill'd? Then Murthers out of tune,
And sweet Revenge grows harsh.
Def. O falsely, falsely murder'd.
Æmil. Alas! what cry is that?
Oth. That? what?
Æmil. Out, and alas, that was my Ladies voice,
Help, help hoa, help, Oh Lady speak again,
Sweet Desdemona, oh sweet Mistris, speak.
Def. A guiltlesse death I die.
Æmil. Oh who hath done this deed?
Def. No body: I my self, farewell:
Commend me to my kind Lord: oh farewell.
Oth. Why, how should she be murd'red?
Æmil. Alas: who knows?
Oth. You hear her say her self, it was not I.
Æmil. She said so: I must needs report the truth.
Oth. She's like a Lyar gone to burning hell,
'Twas I that kill'd her.
Æmil. Oh the more Angel she, and you the blacker Devil.
Oth. She turn'd to folly: and she was a whore.
Æmil. Thou do'st bely her, and thou art a devil.
Oth. She was false as water.
Æmil. Thou art rash as fire, to say
That she was false. Oh she was heavenly true.
Oth. Cassio did top her: ask thy husband else.
O, I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell:
But that I did proceed upon just grounds
To this extremity. Thy husband knew it all.

Æmil.

Æmil. My husband ?
Oth. Thy husband.
Æmil. That ſhe was falſe to Wedlock ;
Oth. I, with Caſſio : had ſhe bin true,
If heaven would make me ſuch another world,
Of one entire and perfect Chryſolite,
I'd not have ſold her for it.
Æmil. My husband ?
Oth. I, 'twas he that told me on her firſt,
An honeſt man he is, and hates the ſlime
That ſticks on filthy deeds.
Æmil. My husband ?
Oth. What needs this iterance, woman ?
I ſay thy husband.
Æmil. Oh Miſtris,
Villany hath made mocks with love:
My husband ſay ſhe was falſe ?
Othe. He, woman ;
I ſay thy husband: do'ſt underſtand the word?
My friend, thy husband ; honeſt, honeſt Iago.
Æmil. If he ſay ſo, may his pernicious ſoul
Rot half a grain a day : he lies to'th'heart,
She was too fond of her moſt filthy Bargain.
Oth. Hah?
Æmil. Do thy worſt :
This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven,
Then thou waſt worthy her.
Oth. Peace, you were beſt.
Æmil. Thou haſt not halfe that power to do me harme
As I have to be hurt. Oh gull, oh dolt,
As ignorant as durt : thou haſt done a deed
(I care not for thy ſword) I'le make thee known,
Though I loſt twenty lives, Help, help, hoa, help :
The Moor hath kill'd my Miſtris. Murther, murther.

Enter Montano, Gratiano, and Iago.

Mon. What is the matter ? How now General ?
Æmil. Oh, are you come, Iago : you have done well,
That men muſt lay their Murthers on your neck.
Gra. What is the matter ?
Æmil. Diſprove this Villain, if thou be'ſt a man,
He ſayes, thou told'ſt him that his wife was falſe :
I know thou did'ſt not : thour't not ſuch a Villain.
Speak, for my heart is full.
Iago. I told him what I thought,
And told no more
Then what he found himſelf was apt, and true.
Æmil. But did you ever tell him,
She was falſe ?
Iago. I did.
Æmil. You told a Lie, an odious damned Lie:
Upon my ſoul, a Lye; a wicked Lie.
She falſe with Caſſio ?
Did you ſay with Caſſio ?
Iago. With Caſſio, Miſtris,
Go to, charme your tongue.
Æmil. I will not charme my tongue ;
I am bound to ſpeak,
My Miſtris here lies murthered in her bed.
All. Oh heavens, forefend.
Æmil. And your reports have ſet the Murther on.
Oth. Nay ſtare not Maſters,
It is true indeed.
Gra. 'Tis a ſtrange Truth.
Mont. O monſtrous Act.
Æmil. Villany, villany, villany :
I think upon't, I think : I ſmel't: O Villany:
I thought ſo then : I'le kill my ſelf for grief,
O villany ! villany ?
Iago. What, are you mad ?
I charge you get you home.
Æmil. Good Gentlemen, let me have leave to ſpeak:
'Tis proper I obey him; but not now:
Perchance Iago, I will ne're go home.
Oth. Oh, oh, oh.
Æmil. Nay, lay thee down and roar:
For thou haſt kil'd the ſweeteſt innocent,
That e're did lift up eye.
Oth. Oh ſhe was foul !
I ſcarce did know you Uncle, there lies your Niece,
Whoſe breath (indeed) theſe hands have newly ſtopp'd :
I know this act ſhews horrible and grim.
Gra. Poor Deſdemona :
I am glad thy father's dead,
Thy Match was mortal to him; and pure grief
Shore his old thred in twain. Did he live now,
This ſight would make him do a deſperate turn:
Yea, curſe his better Angel from his ſide,
And fall to Reprobance.
Oth. 'Tis pittifull ; but yet Iago knows,
That ſhe with Caſſio hath the act of ſhame
A thouſand times committed. Caſſio confeſt it,
And ſhe did gratifie his amorous works
With that Recognizance and pledg of Love
Which I firſt gave her : I ſaw it in his hand :
It was a Handkerchief, an Antick Token
My father gave my mother.
Æmil. Oh heaven! oh heavenly Powers!
Iago. Come, hold your peace.
Æmil. 'Twill out. 'Twill out, I peace ;
No, I will ſpeak as liberal as the North,
Let heaven, and men, and devils, let them all,
All, all, cry ſhame againſt me, yet I'le ſpeak.
Iago. Be wiſe and get you home.
Æmil. I will not.
Gra. Fie, your ſword upon a woman.
Æmil. Oh thou dull Moor,
That Handkerchief thou ſpeak'ſt of
I found by fortune, and did give my husband,
For often, with a ſolelmne earneſtneſſe,
(More then indeed belong'd to ſuch a Trifle)
He begg'd of me, to ſteal't.
Iago. Villanous Whore.
Æmil. She give it Caſſio ? alas I found it,
And I did giv't my husband.
Iago. Filth thou lieſt.
Æmil. By heaven I do not, I do not Gentlemen:
Oh murd'rous Coxcomb, what ſhould ſuch a fool
Do with ſo good a wife ?
Oth. Are there no ſtones in heaven,
But what ſerves for the Thunder ?
Precious Villain.
Gra. The woman falls :
Sure he hath kill'd his Wife.
Æmil. I, I; oh lay me by my Miſtris ſide.
Gra. He's gone, but his wife's kill'd.
Mont. 'Tis a notorious Villain: take you this weapon
Which I have recover'd from the Moor :
Come guard the door without, let him not paſſe,
But kill him rather: I'le after that ſame villain,
For 'tis a damned Slave. Exit.

Oth. I am not valiant neither:
But every Puny whipster gets my sword.
But why should honour out-live honesty?
Let it go all.

Æmil. What did thy Song boad, Lady?
Hark canst thou hear me? I will play the Swan,
And die in Musick: Willow, willow, willow.
Moor, she was chaste: she lov'd thee, cruel Moor:
So come my soul to blisse, as I speak true:
So speaking as I think, alas, I die.

Oth. I have another weapon in this Chamber,
It was a sword of Spain, the Ice brooks temper:
Oh here it is: Uncle I must come forth.

Gra. If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear;
Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.

Oth. Look in upon me then, and speak with me,
Or naked as I am I will assault thee.

Gra. What is the matter?

Oth. Behold, I have a weapon:
A better never did it self-sustain
Upon a Souldiers Thigh. I have seen the day,
That with this little Arme, and this good sword,
I have made my way through more impediments
Then twenty times you stop. But (oh vain boast)
Who can controll his fate? 'tis not so now.
Be not affraid, though you do see me weapon'd:
Here is my journeys end, here is my But,
And very Sea-mark of my utmost Sail.
Do you go back dismaid? 'Tis a lost fear,
Man but a Rush against Othello's brest,
And he retires. Where should Othello go?
Now: how do'st thou look now? oh ill-Starr'd wench,
Pale as thy Smock: when we shall meet at compt,
This look of thine will hurle my soul from Heaven,
And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my Girle?
Even like thy Chastity. O cursed, cursed Slave!
Whip me, ye Devils,
From the possession of this heavenly sight:
Blow me about in winds, and roast me in Sulphure,
Wash me in steep-down gulfs of Liquid Fire.
Oh Desdemona! dead Desdemona: dead, dead. Oh, oh!

Enter Lodovico, Cassio, Montano, and Iago with Officers.

Lod. Where is this rash, and most unfortunate man?

Oth. That's he that was Othello: here I am.

Lod. Where is that Viper?
Bring the Villain forth.

Oth. I look down towards his feet; but that's a fable,
If that thou beest a devil, I cannot kill thee.

Lod. Wrench his sword from him.

Iago. I bleed, sir, but not kill'd.

Oth. I am not sorry neither, I'ld have thee live:
For in my sense, 'tis happinesse to die.

Lod. Oh thou, Othello, that was once so good,
Fall in the practise of a cursed Slave,
What shall be said to thee.

Oth. Why any thing:
An honorable Murderer, if you will:
For nought I did in hate, but all in Honor.

Lod. This wretch hath part confest his Villany:
Did you and he consent in Cassio's death.

Oth. I.

Cas. Dear General, I never gave you cause,

Oth. I do believe it, and I ask your pardon:
Will you, I pray, demand that demy-Devil,
Why he hath thus ensnar'd my soul and body.

Iag. Demand me nothing: what you know, you know:
From this time forth, I never will speak word.

Lod. What? not to pray?

Gra. Torments will ope your lips.

Oth. Well, thou do'st best.

Lod. Sir,
You shall understand what hath befalln,
(Which as I think, you know not) here is a Letter
Found in the pocket of the slain Roderigo,
And here another, the one of them imports
The death of Cassio, to be undertook
By Roderigo.

Oth. O Villain!

Cassio. most heathenish, and most grosse.

Lod. Now, here's another discontented paper
Found in his pocket too: and this it seems
Roderigo meant t'have sent this damned villain:
But that (belike) Iago in the interim
Came in, and satisfi'd him.

Oth. Oh thou pernicious Caitiffe;
How came you (Cassio) by that Handkerchief
That was my wives?

Cas. I found it in my Chamber:
And he himself confest it but even now,
That there he dropt it for a special purpose,
Which wrought to his desire.

Oth. O fool, fool, fool!

Cas. There is besides, in Roderigo's Letter,
How he upbraids Iago, that he made him
Brave me upon the Watch: whereon it came
That I was cast: and even but now he spake
(After long seeming dead) Iago hurt him,
Iago set him on.

Lod. You must forsake this room, and go with us:
Your power, and your command is taken off,
And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this Slave,
If there be any cunning Cruelty,
That can torment him much, and hold him long,
It shall be his. You shall close Prisoner rest,
Till that the Nature of your fault be known
To the Venetian State. Come, bring away.

Oth. Soft you; a word or two before you go:
I have done the State some service, and they know't:
No more of that. I pray you in your Letters,
When you shall these unlucky deeds relate,
Speak of me, as I am. Nothing extenuate,
Nor set down ought in malice.
Then must you speak,
Of one that lov'd not wisely, but too well:
Of one, not easily Jealous, but being wrought,
Perplexed in the extream: Of one, whose hand
(Like the base Indian) threw a Pearle away
Richer then all his Tribe: Of one, whose subdu'd Eyes,
Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees
Their Medicinable gumme. Set you down this:
And say besides, that in Aleppo once,
Where a malignant, and a Turbond-Turk
Beat a Venetian, and traduc'd the State,
I took by th'throat the circumcised Dog,
And smote him, thus.

Lod. Oh bloudy period.

Gra. All that is spoke is marr'd.

Oth. I kist thee, ere I kill'd thee: No way but this,
Killing my self, to die upon a kiss. Dies.

Cassio.

Caſ. This did I fear, but thought he had no weapon:
For he was great of heart.
Lod. Oh Spartan Dog:
More fell then Anguiſh, Hunger, or the Sea:
Look on the Tragick Loading of this bed:
This is thy work:
The Object poyſons ſight,
Let it be hid. Gratiano, keep the houſe,
And ſeize upon the Fortunes of the Moor,
For they ſucceed on you. To you, Lord Governor,
Remains the Cenſure of this helliſh villain:
The time, the place, the torture, oh inforce it.
My ſelf will ſtraight aboard, and to the State,
This heavy Act, with heavy heart relate. Exeunt.

THE ACTORS NAMES.

OThello, the Moor.
Brabantio, Father to Deſdemona.
Caſſio, An honorable Lieutenant.
Iago, A Vtllain.
Rodorigo, A gull'd Gentleman.
Duke of Venice.
Senators.
Montano, Governor of Cyprus.
Gentlemen of Cyprus.
Lodovico, and Gratiano, two Noble Venetians.
Saylors.
Clown.

Deſdemona, Wife to Othello.
Æmilia, Wife to Iago.
Bianca, A Curtezan.

FINIS.

THE TRAGEDY OF ANTHONY and CLEOPATRA.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Demetrius, and Philo.

Philo.

NAy, but this dotage of our General
Ore-flows the measure: those his goodly eyes
That o're the Files and Musters of the War,
Have glow'd like plated Mars,
Now bend, now turn
The Office and Devotion of their view
Upon a Tawny Front. His Captains heart,
Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst
The Buckles on his brest reneages all temper,
And is become the Bellows and the Fan
To cool a Gypsies Lust.

Enter Anthony, and Cleopatra, her Ladies; the Train, with Eunuchs fanning her.

Look where they come:
Take but good note, and you shall see him
The tripple Pillar of the world transform'd
Into a Strumpets Fool. Behold and see.

Cleo. If it be Love indeed, tell me how much?

Ant. There's beggery in the love that can be reckon'd.

Cleo. I'le set a bourn how far to be belov'd.

Ant. Then must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. News (my good Lord) from Rome.

Ant. Rate me, the summe.

Cleo. Nay hear them Anthony.
Fulvia perchance is angry: or who knows,
If the scarce-bearded Cæsar have not sent
His powerfull Mandate to you. Do this, or this;
Take in that Kingdome, and infranchise that:
Perform't, or else we damne thee.

Ant. How, my Love?

Cleo. Perchance? Nay, and most like;
You must not stay here longer, your dismission
Is come from Cæsar, therefore hear it Anthony.
Where's Fulvia's Processe? (Cæsars I would say) both?
Call in the Messengers: as I am Egypts Queen,
Thou blushest Anthony, and that bloud of thine
Is Cæsars homager: else so thy cheeks payes shame,
When shrill-tongu'd Fulvia scolds. The Messengers.

Ant. Let Rome in Tyber melt, and the wide Arch
Of the raign'd Empire fall: Here is my space,
Kingdomes are clay: Our dungy earth alike
Feeds beast as Man; the Nobleness of life
Is to do thus: when such a mutual pair,
And such a twain can do't, in which I bind,
On pain of punishment, the world to weet
We stand up Peerlesse.

Cleo. Excellent falshood:
Why did he marry Fulvia, and not love her?
I'le seem the fool I am not. Anthony will be himself,

Ant. But stirr'd by Cleopatra.
Now for the love of love, and her soft hours,
Let's not confound the time with Conference harsh;
There's not a minute of our lives should stretch
Without some pleasure now. What sport to night?

Cleo. Hear the Ambassadors.

Ant. Fie wrangling Queen:
Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh,
To weep: whose every passion fully strives
To make it self (in Thee) fair, and admir'd.
No Messenger but thine, and all alone, to night
We'll wander through the streets, and note
The qualities of people. Come my Queen,
Last night you did desire it. Speak not to us.

Exeunt with the Train.

Dem. Is Cæsar with Anthonius priz'd so slight?

Philo. Sir, sometimes when he is not Anthony,
He comes too short of that great Property
Which still should go with Anthony.

Dem. I am full sorry, that he approves the common Lyar, who thus speaks of him at Rome: but I will hope of better deeds to morrow. Rest you happy. Exeunt.

Enter Enobarbus, Lamprius, a Southsayer, Rannius, Lucillius, Charmian, Iras, Mardian the Eunuch, and Alexas,

Char. I. Alexas, sweet Alexas, most any thing Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where's the Southsayer that you prais'd to th'Queen? Oh that I knew this Husband, which you say, must change his horns with Garlands.

Alex. Soothsayer.

Sooth. Your will?

Char. Is this the Man? Is't you, sir, that know things?

Sooth. In Natures infinite book of Secrecy, a little I can read.

Alex. Shew him your hand.

Enob. Bring in the Banquet quickly: Wine enough,

Cleo.

Cleopatra's health to drink.

Char. Good ſir, give me good Fortune.

Sooth. I make not, but foreſee.

Char. Pray then, foreſee me one.

Sooth. You ſhall be yet far fairer then you are.

Char. He means in fleſh.

Iras. No, you ſhall paint when you are old.

Char. Wrinkles forbid.

Alex. Vex not his patience, be attentive.

Char. Huſh.

Sooth. You ſhall be more beloving, then beloved.

Char. I had rather heat my Liver with drinking.

Alex. Nay, hear him.

Char. Good now ſome excellent Fortune. Let me be married to three Kings in a forenoon, and Widow them all: Let me have a Child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry may do Homage. Finde me to marry me with Octavius Cæſar, and companion me with my Miſtris.

Sooth. You ſhall out-live the Lady whom you ſerve.

Char. Oh excellent, I love long life better then Figs.

Sooth. You have ſeen and proved a fairer former fortune, then that which is to approach.

Char. Then belike my Children ſhall have no names: Prithee how many Boyes and Wenches muſt I have.

Sooth. If every of your wiſhes had a womb, and foretell every wiſh, a Million.

Char. Out Fool, I forgive thee for a Witch.

Alex. You think none but your ſheets are privy to your wiſhes.

Char. Nay come, tell Iras hers.

Alex. We'll know all our Fortunes.

Enob. Mine, and moſt of our Fortunes to night, ſhall be drunk to bed.

Iras. There's a Palm preſages Chaſtity, if nothing elſe.

Char. E'ne as the o'reflowing Nylus preſageth Famine.

Iras. Go you wild Bedfellow, you cannot Soothſay.

Char. Nay, if an oyly Palme be not a fruitfull Prognoſtication, I cannot ſcratch mine ear. Prithee tell her but a workyday Fortune.

Sooth. Your Fortunes are alike.

Iras. But how, but how, give me particulars.

Sooth. I have ſaid.

Iras. Am I not an inch of Fortune better then ſhe?

Char. Well, if you were but an inch of Fortune better then I: where would you chooſe it.

Iras. Not in my husbands Noſe.

Char. Our worſer thoughts heavens mend.

Alexas. Come, his Fortune, his Fortune. Oh let him marry a woman that cannot go, ſweet Iſis, I beſeech thee, and let her die too, and give him a worſe, and let worſe follow worſe, till the worſt of all follow him laughing to his grave, fifty-fold a Cuckold. Good Iſis, hear me this Prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight: good Iſis, I beſeech thee.

Char. Amen, dear Goddeſſe, hear that prayer of the people. For, as it is a heart-breaking to ſee a handſome man looſe-wiv'd, ſo it is a deadly ſorrow, to behold a foul Knave uncuckold'd: therefore, dear Iſis, keep decorum, and Fortune him accordingly.

Char. Amen.

Alex. Loe now, if it lay in their hands to make me a Cuckold, they would make themſelves Whores, but they'ld do't.

Enter Cleopatra.

Eno. Huſh, Here comes Anthony,

Char. Not he, the Queen.

Cleo. Saw you my Lord?

Eno. No Lady.

Cleo. Was he not here?

Char. No Madam.

Cleo. He was diſpos'd to mirth, but on the ſudden
A Roman thought hath ſtruck him.
Enobarbus?

Enob. Madam.

Cle. Seek him, and bring him hither: where's Alexas?

Alex. Here at your ſervice.
My Lord approaches.

Enter Anthony with a Meſſenger.

Cleo. We will not look upon him:
Go with us. Exeunt.

Meſſ. Fulvia thy Wife,
Firſt came into the Field.

Ant. Againſt my Brother Lucius.

Meſſ. I, but ſoon that War had end,
And the times ſtate
Made friends of them, joynting their force 'gainſt Cæſar.
Whoſe better iſſue in the war of Italy,
Upon the firſt encounter drave them.

Ant. Well, what worſt.

Meſ. The nature of bad news infects the Teller.

Ant. When it concerns the Fool or Coward: On.
Things that are paſt, are done, with me. 'Tis thus,
Who tells me true, though in his Tale lye death,
I hear him as he flatter'd.

Meſſ. Labienus (this is ſtiffe-news)
Hath with his Parthian Force
Extended Aſia: from Euphrates his conquering
Banner ſhook, from Syria to Lydia,
And to Ionia, whilſt--------

Ant. Anthony thou would'ſt ſay.

Meſſ. Oh my Lord.

Ant. Speak to me home,
Mince not the general tongue, name
Cleopatra as ſhe is call'd in Rome:
Rail thou in Fulvia's phraſe, and taunt thy faults
With ſuch full Licenſe, as both Truth and Malice
Have power to utter. Oh then we bring forth weeds,
When our quick winds lye ſtill, and our ills told us
Is as our ear-ring: fare thee well a while.

Meſſ. At your Noble pleaſure. Exit Meſſenger.

Enter another Meſſenger.

Ant. From Scicion how the news? ſpeak there.

1 Meſſ. The man from Scicion,
Is there ſuch an one?

2 Meſ. He ſtayes upon your will.

Ant. Let him appear:
Theſe ſtrong Egyptian Fetters I muſt break,
Or looſe my ſelf in dotage.

Enter another Meſſenger with a Letter.

What are you?

3 Meſſ. Fulvia thy wife is dead.

Ant. Where died ſhe.

Meſ. In Scicion, her length of ſickneſſe,
With what elſe more ſerious,
Importe to thee to know, this bears.

Ant. Forbear me
There's a great ſpirit gone, thus did I deſire it:
What our contempts do often hurle from us,

We

We with it ours again. the prefent pleafure,
By revolution lowring, does become
The oppofite of it felf: fhe's good being gon,
The hand could pluck her back, that fhov'd her on.
I muft from this Queen break off,
Ten thoufand harmes, more then the ills I know
My idleneffe doth hatch.

Enter Enobarbus.

How now Enobarbus.

Eno. What's your pleafure, fir?

Ant. I muft with haft from hence.

Eno. Why then we kill all our Women. We fee how mortall an unkindneffe is to them, if they fuffer our departure, death's the word.

Anth. I muft be gone,

Eno. Under a compelling an occafion, let women die. It were pitty to caft them away for nothing, though between them and a great cauſe, they fhould be eſteemed nothing. Cleopatra catching but the leaſt noiſe of this, dies inſtantly: I have ſeen her, die twenty times upon far poorer moment: I do think there is mettle in death, which commits ſome loving act upon her, ſhe hath ſuch a celerity in dying,

Ant. She is cunning paſt mans thought.

Eno. Alack, ſir, no, her paſſions are made of nothing but the fineſt part of pure love. We cannot call her winds and waters, ſighes and tears: they are greater ſtormes and Tempeſts then Almanacks can report. This cannot be cunning in her; if it be, ſhe makes a ſhowre of Rain as well as Jove.

Ant. Would I had never ſeen her.

Eno. Oh ſir, you had then left unſeen a wonderfull piece of work, which not to have bin bleſt withall, would have diſcredited your Travel.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Sir.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Fulvia?

Ant. Dead.

Eno. Why ſir, give the gods a thankfull Sacrifice: when it pleaſeth their Deities to take the wife of a man from him, it ſhews to man the Tailors of the earth: comforting therein, that when old Robes are worn out, there are members to make new. If there were no more Women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the caſe to be lamented: this grief is crown'd with Conſolation, your old Smock brings forth a new Petticoat, and indeed the tears live in an Onion, that ſhould water this ſorrow.

Ant. The buſineſſe ſhe hath broached in the State,
Cannot endure my abſence.

Eno. And the buſineſſe you have broach'd here cannot be without you, eſpecially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your aboad.

Ant. No more like Anſwers:
Let our Officers
Have notice what we propoſe. I ſhall break
The cauſe of our expedience to the Queen,
And get her love to part. For not alone
The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches
Do ſtrongly ſpeak to us: but the letters too
Of many our contriving friends in Rome,
Petition us at home. Sextus Pompeius
Hath given thee dare to Cæſar, and commands
The Empire of the Sea. Our ſlippery people
Whoſe love is never link'd to the deſerver,
Till his deſerts are paſt, begin to throw
Pompey the great, and all his dignities
Upon his Son, who high in Name and Power,
Higher then both in bloud and life, ſtands up
For the main Souldier. Whoſe quality going on,
The ſides oth'world may danger. Much is breeding,
Which like the Courſers hare, hath yet but life,
And not a Serpents poiſon. Say our pleaſure,
To ſuch whoſe place is under us, requires
Our quick remove from hence.

Eno. I ſhall do't. Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Alexas, and Iras.

Cleo. Where is he?

Char. I did not ſee him ſince.

Cleo. See where he is,
Who's with him, what he do's:
I did not ſend you. If you find him ſad,
Say I am dancing: if in mirth, report
That I am ſudden ſick. Quickly, and return.

Char. Madam, me thinks if you did love him dearly
You do not hold the method, to enforce
The like from him.

Cleo. What ſhould I do, I do not?

Ch. In each thing give him way, croſſe him in noth ing

Cleo. Thou teacheſt like a fool: the way to loſe him.

Char. Tempt him not ſo too far. I wiſh forbear,
In time we hate that which we often fear.

Enter Anthony.

But here comes Anthony.

Cleo. I am ſick, and ſullen.

Anth. I am ſorry to give breathing to my purpoſe.

Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian, I ſhall fall,
It cannot be thus long, the ſides of Nature
Will not ſuſtain it.

Ant. Now, my deareſt Queen.

Cleo. Pray you ſtand farther from me,

Ant. What's the matter?

Cleo. I know by that ſame eye there's ſome good news
What ſaies the married woman you may go?
Would ſhe had never given you leave to come,
Let her not ſay 'tis I that keep you here,
I have no power upon you: Hers you are.

Ant. The gods beſt know.

Cleo. Oh never was there Queen
So mightily betrayed: yet at the firſt
I ſaw the treaſons planted.

Ant. Cleopatra.

Cleo. Why ſhould I think you can be mine, and true
Though you ſwearing ſhake the Throned gods)
Who have bin falſe to Fulvia?
Riotous madneſſe,
To be entangled with thoſe mouth-made vows,
Which break themſelves in ſwearing.

Ant. Moſt ſweet Queen.

Cleo. Nay pray you ſeek no colour for your going,
But bid farewell, and go:
When you ſued ſtaying,
Then was the time for words: No going then,
Eternity was in our Lips, and Eyes,
Bliſſe in our brows bent: none our parts ſo poor,
But was a race of heaven. They are ſo ſtill,
Or thou the greateſt Souldier of the world,
Art turn'd the greater Lyar.

Ant. How now, Lady?

Cleo.

Cleo. I would I had thy inches, thou ſhould'ſt know
There were a heart in Egypt.
Ant. Hear me Queen:
The ſtrong neceſſity of time, commands
Our Services a while: but my full heart
Remains in uſe with you. Our Italy,
Shines o're with civill Swords; Sextus Pompeius
Makes his approaches to the Port of Rome,
Equality of two Domeſtick powers,
Breed ſcrupulous faction: the hated grown to ſtrength
Are newly grown to Love: the condemn'd Pompey,
Rich in his Fathers honour, creeps apace
Into the hearts of ſuch, as have not thrived
Upon the preſent ſtate, whoſe numbers threaten,
And quietneſſe grown ſick of reſt, would purge
By any deſperate change: My more particular,
And that which moſt with you ſhould ſafe my going
Is Fulvias death.
Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me freedom
It does from childiſhneſſe. Can Fulvia die?
Ant. She's dead, my Queen,
Look here, and at thy Sovereign leiſure read
The Garboyls ſhe awak'd: at the laſt, beſt,
See when, and where ſhe died.
Cleo. O moſt falſe love!
Where be the ſacred Vials thou ſhould'ſt fill
With ſorrowfull water? now I ſee, I ſee,
In Fulvia's death, how mine receiv'd ſhall be.
Ant. Quarrel no more, but be prepar'd to know
The purpoſes I bear: which are, or ceaſe,
As you ſhall give th'advice. By the fire
That quickens Nilus ſlime, I go from hence
Thy Souldier, Servant, making Peace or War,
As thou affect'ſt.
Cleo. Cut my Lace, Charmain come,
But let it be, I am quickly ill, and well,
So Anthony loves.
Ant. My precious Queen forbear,
And give true evidence to his Love, which ſtands
An honorable Triall.
Cleo. So Fulvia told me.
I prithee turn aſide, and weep for her,
Then bid adieu to me, and ſay the tears
Belong to Egypt. Good now, play one Scene
Of excellent diſſembling, and let it look
Like perfect honour.
Ant. You'll heat my bloud no more?
Cleo. You can do better yet: but this is meetly.
Ant. Now by my Sword.
Cleo. And Target. Still he mends.
But this is not the beſt. Look prithee Charmian,
How this Herculean Roman does become
The carriage of his chafe.
Ant. I'le leave you Lady.
Cleo. Courteous Lord, one word:
Sir, you and I muſt part, but that's not it:
Sir, you and I have lov'd, but there's not it:
That you know well, ſomething it is I would:
Oh, my oblivion is a very Anthony.
And I am all forgotten.
Ant. But that your Royalty
Holds idleneſſe your ſubject, I ſhould take you
For Idleneſſe it ſelf.
Cleo. 'Tis ſweating labour,
To bear ſuch idleneſſe ſo near the heart
As Cleopatra this. But, Sir, forgive me,
Since my becomings kill me, when they do not
Eye well to you. Your honour calls you hence.
Therefore be deaf to my unpittied Folly,
And all the gods go with you. Upon your Sword
Sit Lawrell'd victory, and ſmooth ſucceſſe
Be ſtrew'd before your feet.
Ant. Let us go.
Come: Our ſeperation ſo abides and flies,
That thou reſiding here, goeſt yet with me,
And I hence fleeting, here remain with thee.
Away. Exeunt.

Enter Octavius reading a Letter, Lepidus, and their Train.

Caſ. You may ſee Lepidus, and henceforth know,
It is not Cæſars Natural vice, to hate
One geeat Competitor. From Alexandria
This is the news: he fiſhes, drinks, and waſtes
The Lamps of night in revells: Is not more manlike
Then Cleopatra: nor the Queen of Ptolomy
More Womanly then he. Hardly gave audience
Or did vouchſafe to think he had Partners. You
Shall find there a man, who is the'abſtract of all faults;
That all men follow.
Lep. I muſt not think
There are, evils enow to darken all his goodneſſe,
His faults in him, ſeem as the ſpots of heaven,
More fiery by nights blackneſſe; Hereditary,
Rather then purchaſte: what he cannot change,
Then what he chooſes.
Caſ. You are too indulgent. Let's grant it is
Amiſſe to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy,
To give a Kingdome for a Mirth, to ſit
And keep the turn of Tipling with a Slave,
To reel the ſtreets at noon, and ſtand the Buffet
With knaves that ſmell of ſweat: Say this becomes him
(As his compoſure muſt be rare indeed,
Whom theſe things cannot blemiſh) yet muſt Anthony
No way excuſe his toyls, when we do bear
So great waight in his Lightneſſe. If he fill'd
His vacancy with his Voluptuouſneſſe,
Full ſurfets, and the drineſſe of his bones,
Call on him for't. But to confound ſuch time,
That drums him from his ſport, and ſpeaks as loud
As his own State, and ours, 'tis to be chid:
As we rate Boyes, who being mature in knowledge,
Pawn their experience to their preſent pleaſure,
And ſo rebell to judgement.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Lep. Here's more news.
Meſ. Thy biddings have been done, and every hour
Moſt Noble Cæſar, ſhalt thou have report
How 'tis abroad. Pompey is ſtrong at Sea,
And it appears, he is belov'd of thoſe
That only have fear'd Cæſar: to the Ports
The diſcontents repair, and mens reports
Give him much wrong'd.
Caſ. I ſhould have known no leſſe,
It hath bin taught us from the primal ſtate,
That he which is, was wiſht, untill he were:
And the ebb'd man,
Ne're lov'd, till ne're worth love,
Comes fear'd, by being lack'd. This common body
Like to a Vagabond Flag upon the ſtream,
Goes too, and back, lacking the varying tyde

To rot it ſelf with motion.
Meſ. Cæſar I bring thee word,
Menacrates and Menas, famous Pyrates
Makes the Sea ſerve them, which they ear and wound
With knecls of every kind. Many hot inrodes
They make in Italy, the borders Maritime
Lack bloud to think on't, and fleſh youth to revolt,
No Veſſel can peep forth, but 'tis as ſoon
Taken as ſeen: for Pompeyes name ſtrikes more
Then could his War reſiſted.
Cæſar. Anthony.
Leave thy laſcivious Vaſſails. When thou once
Wert beaten from Medena, where thou ſlew'ſt
Hirſius, and Panſa Conſuls, at thy heel
Did famine follow, whom thou faught'ſt againſt,
(Though daintily brought up) with patience more
Then Savages could ſuffer. Thou didſt drink
The ſtale of horſes, and the gilded Puddle
Which Beaſts would cough at. Thy pallat then did dain
The roughcſt Berry, on the rudeſt Hedge.
Yea, like the Stag, when Snow the Paſture ſheets,
The barks of trees thou browſed'ſt. On the Alpes,
It is repoted thou did'ſt eat ſtrange fleſh,
Which ſome did die to look on: and all this
(It wounds thine honor that I ſpeak it now)
Was born ſo like a Souldier, that thy cheek
So much as I lank'd not.
Lep. 'Tis pitty of him.
Cæſ. Let his ſhames quickly
Drive him to Rome, 'tis time we twain
Did ſhew our ſelves ith' Field, and to that end
Aſſemble we immediately councel, Pompey
Thrives in our Idleneſſe.
Lep. To morrow Cæſar,
I ſhall be furniſh'd to informe you rightly
Both what by Sea and Land I can be able
To front this preſent time. (well.
Cæſ. Till which encounter, it is my buſineſſe too. Fare-
Lep. Farewell my Lord, what you ſhall know mean
Of ſtirs abroad, I ſhall beſeech you ſir, (time
To let me be partaker.
Cæſ. Doubt not ſir, I knew it for my bond. Exeunt.
Enter Cleopatra, Charmain, Iras, and Mardian.
Cleo. Charmain.
Char. Madam.
Cleo. Ha, ha, give me to drink Mandragoras.
Char. Why Madam?
Cleo. That I might ſleep out this great gap of time:
My Anthony is away.
Char. You think of him too much.
Cleo. O 'tis treaſon.
Char. Madam, I truſt not ſo.
Cleo. Thou, Eunuch Mardian?
Mar. What's your highneſſe pleaſure?
Cleo. Not now to hear thee ſing. I take no pleaſure
In ought an Eunuch has: 'Tis well for thee,
That being unſeminaried, thy freer thoughts
May not flye forth of Egypt, Haſt thou Affections?
Mar. Yes gracious Madam.
Cleo. Indeed?
Mar. Not indeed Madam, for I can do nothing
But what indeed is honeſt to be done:
Yet have I fierce Affections, and think
What Venus did with Mars.
Cleo. Oh Charmain;
Where think'ſt thou he is now? Stands, or ſits he?
Or does he walk? Or is he on his horſe?
Oh happy horſe to bear the weight of Anthony!
Do bravely horſe, for wot'ſt thou whom thou moov'ſt,
The demy Atlas of this Earth, the Arme
And Burgonet of man. He's ſpeaking now.
Or murmuring, wheres my Serpent of old Nyle,
(For ſo he call's me: Now I feed my ſelf
With moſt delicious poyſon. Think on me
That am with Phebus amorous pinches black,
And wrinkled deep in time. Broad-fronted Cæſar,
When thou waſt here above the ground, I was
A morſel of a Monark; and great Pompey
Would ſtand and make his eyes grow in my brow,
There would he anchor his aſpect, and die
With looking on his life.

Enter Alexas from Cæſar.

Alex. Soveraign of Egypt, hail.
Cleo. How much art thou like Mark Anthony?
Yet coming from him, that great Med'cine hath
With his Tinct gilded thee.
How goes it with my brave Mark Anthony?
Alex. Laſt thing he did (dear Queen)
He kiſt the laſt of many doubled kiſſes,
This Orient Pearl. His ſpeech ſticks in my heart.
Cleo. Mine ear muſt pluck it thence.
Alex. Good friend, quoth he:
Say the firm Roman to great Egypt ſends
This treaſure of an Oyſter: at whoſe foot
To mend the petty preſent, I will piece
Her opulent Throne, with Kingdomes. All the Eaſt,
(Say thou) ſhall call her Miſtris. So he nodded,
And ſoberly did mount an Arme-gaunt Steed,
Who neigh'd ſo high, that what I would have ſpoke,
Was beaſtly dumb by him.
Cleo. What was he ſad or merry?
Ale. Like to the time oth'year, between the extreams
Of hot and cold, he was not ſad nor merry.
Cleo. Oh well divided diſpoſition: Note him:
Note him good Charmain, 'tis the man; but note him.
He was not ſad, for he would ſhine on thoſe
That make their looks by his. He was not merry,
Which ſeem'd to tell them, his remembrance lay
In Egypt with his joy, but between both.
Oh heavenly mingle? Be'ſt thou ſad, or merry,
The violence of either thee becomes,
So do's it no man elſe. Met'ſt thou my Poſts?
Alex. I madam, twenty ſeveral Meſſengers,
Why do you ſend ſo thick?
Cleo. Who's born that day, when I forget to ſend to Anthony, ſhall die a Beggar. Ink and paper, Charmian. Welcome my good Alexas. Did I, Charmian, ever love Cæſar ſo?
Char. Oh that brave Cæſar.
Cleo. Be choak'd with ſuch another Emphaſis,
Say the brave Anthony.
Char. The valiant Cæſar.
Cleo. By Iſis, I will give thee bloudy teeth,
If thou with Cæſar Paragon again
My man of men.
Char. By your moſt gracious pardon,
I ſing but after you.
Cleo. My Sallad dayes,
When I was green in judgement, cold in bloud,
To ſay, as I ſaid then. But come, away,
Get me Ink and Paper,

He

he shall have every day several greeting, or I'le unpeople Ægypt. Exeunt.

Enter Pompey, Menecrates, and Menas in warlike manner.

Pom. If the great gods be just, they shall assist
The deeds of justest men.

Mene. Know worthy Pompey, that which they do delay, they not deny.

Pom. While we are suitors to their Throne, decayes the thing we sue for.

Mene. We, ignorant of our selves,
Beg often our own harmes, which the wise Powers
Deny us for our good: so find we profit
By losing of our Prayers.

Pom. I shall do well:
The People love me, and the Sea is mine;
My powers are Crescent, and my Auguring hope
Says it will come to th'full. Mark Anthony
In Ægypt sits at dinner, and will make
No warres without doors. Cæsar gets money where
He looses hearts: Lepidus flatters both,
Of both is flatter'd: but he neither loves,
Nor either cares for him.

Mene. Cæsar and Lepidus are in the field,
A mighty strength they carry.

Pom. Where have you this? 'Tis false.

Mene. From Silvius, Sir.

Pom. He dreams: I know they are in Rome together
Looking for Anthony: but all the charmes of Love,
Salt Cleopatra soften thy wand lip,
Let witchcraft join with beauty: Lust with both,
Tie up the Libertine in a field of Feasts,
Keep his Brain fuming. Epicurean Cooks,
Sharpen with cloyless sawce his Appetite.
That sleep and feeding may prorogue his Honour,
Even 'till a Lethied dulness ------

Enter Varrius.

How now Varrius?

Var. This is most certain, that I shall deliver:
Mark Anthony is every hour in Rome
Expected. Since he went from Ægypt, 'tis
A space for farther travel.

Pom. I could have given less matter
A better ear. Menas, I did not think
This amorous Surfetter would have donn'd his Helm
For such a petty War: His Souldiership
Is twice the other twain: But let us rear
The higher our Opinion, that our stirring
Can from the lap of Ægypt's Widdow pluck
The near Lust-wearied Anthony.

Mene. I cannot hope,
Cæsar and Anthony shall well greet together;
His Wife that's dead, did trespasses to Cæsar,
His Brother warr'd upon him, although I think
Not mov'd by Anthony.

Pom. I know not, Menas,
How lesser Enmities may give way to greater,
Were't not that we stand up against them all:
'Twere pregnant they should square between themselves,
For they have entertained cause enough
To draw their swords: but how the fear of us
May Cement their divisions, and bind up
The petty difference, we yet not know:
Be't as our gods will have't; it only stands
Our lives upon, to use our strongest hands,
Come Menas. Exeunt.

Enter Enobarbus and Lepidus.

Lep. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed,
And shall become you well, to intreat your Captain
To soft and gentle speech.

Enob. I shall intreat him
To answer like himself: if Cæsar move him,
Let Anthony look over Cæsar's head,
And speak as loud as Mars. By Jupiter,
Were I the wearer of Anthonio's Beard,
I would not shave't to day.

Lep. 'Tis not a time for private stomacking.

Eno. Every time serves for the matter that is then born in't.

Lep. But small to greater matters must give way.

Enob. Not if the small come first.

Lep. Your speech is passion: but pray you stir
No Embers up. Here comes the Noble Anthony.

Enter Anthony and Ventidius.

Enob. And yonder Cæsar.

Enter Cæsar, Mecænas, and Agrippa.

Ant. If we compose well here, to Parthia.
Hark Ventidius.

Cæsar. I do not know, Mecænas, ask Agrippa.

Lep. Noble Friends,
That which combin'd us was most great, and let not
A leaner action rend us. What's amiss,
May it be gently heard. When we debate
Our trivial difference loud, we do commit
Murther in healing wounds. Then noble Partners,
The rather, for I earnestly beseech,
Touch you the sowrest points with sweetest terms,
Nor curstness grow to th'matter.

Ant. 'Tis spoken well:
Were we before our Armies and to fight,
I should do thus. Flourish.

Cæs. Welcome to Rome.

Ant. Thank you.

Cæs. Sit.

Ant. Sit, sir.

Cæs. Nay then.

Ant. I learn you take things ill, which are not so:
Or being, concern you not.

Cæs. I must be laught at, if, or for nothing, or a little,
Should say my self offended, and with you
Chiefly i'th'world. More laught at, that I should Once name you derogately: when to sound your name
It not concern'd me.

Ant. My being in Ægypt, Cæsar, what was't to you?

Cæs. No more then my residing here at Rome
Might be to you in Ægypt: yet if you there
Did practise on my state, your being in Ægypt
Might be my question.

Ant. How intend you, practis'd?

Cæs. You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent,
By what did here befall me. Your Wife and Brother
Made warres upon me, and their contestation
Was Theme for you, you were the word of war.

Ant. You do mistake your business, My brother never Did urge me in his Act: I did inquire it,
And have my learning from some true reports
That drew their swords with you. Did he not rather Discredit my authority with yours,
And make the warres alike against my stomack,
Having alike your cause? Of this, my Letters
Before did satisfie you. If you patch a quarrel:
As matter whole you have to take it with,

It must not be with this.

Cæs. You praise your self, by laying defects of judgement to me: but you patch up your excuses.

Anth. Not so, not so:
I know you could not lack, I am certain on't,
Very necessity of this thought, that I
Your partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought,
Could not with graceful eyes attend those Warres
Which fronted mine own peace. As for my wife,
I would you had her Spirit, in such another,
The third o'th' world is yours, which with a Snaffle,
You may pace easie, but not such a wife.

Enobar. Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to warres with the women.

Anth. So much uncurbable, her Garboiles (Cæsar)
Made out of her impatience: which not wanted
Shrewdness of policy too: I grieving grant,
Did you too much disquiet, for that you must,
But say I could not help it.

Cæs. I wrote to you, when rioting in Alexandria you
Did pocket up my Letters: and with taunts
Did gibe my Missive out of audience.

Ant. Sir, he fell upon me, ere admitted, then:
Three Kings I had newly feasted, and did want
Of what I was i'th' morning: but next day
I told him of my self, which was as much
As to have askt him pardon. Let this Fellow
Be nothing of our strife: if we contend
Out of our question wipe him.

Cæs. You have broken the Article of your Oath, which you shall never have tongue to charge me with.

Lep. Soft, Cæsar.

Ant. No, Lepidus, let him speak,
The Honour is Sacred which he talks on now,
Supposing that I lackt it: but on, Cæsar,
The Article of my oath.

Cæs. To lend me Armes, and aid when I requir'd them, the which you both denied.

Ant. Neglected rather.
And then when poisoned houres had bound me up
From mine own knowledge, as nearly as I may,
I le play the penitent to you. But mine honesty,
Shall not make poor my greatness, nor my power
Work without it. Truth is, that Fulvia,
To have me out of Ægypt, made Warres here,
For which my self, the ignorant motive, doe
So far ask pardon, as befits mine Honour
To stoop in such a case.

Lep. 'Tis Nobly spoken.

Mece. If it might please you, to enforce no further
The griefs between ye: to forget them quite,
Were to remember, that the present need,
Speaks to attone you.

Lep. Worthily spoken, Mecenas.

Enobar. Or if you borrow one anothers Love for the instant, you may when you hear no more words of Pompey return it again: you shall have time to wrangle in, when you have nothing else to do.

Ant. Thou art a Souldier, only speak no more.

Enobar. That truth should be silent, I had almost forgot.

Anth. You wrong this presence, therefore speak no more.

Enob. Go to then: your Considerate stone.

Cæsar. I do not much dislike the matter, but
The manner of his speech: for't cannot be,
We shall remain in friendship, our conditions
So differing in their acts. Yet if I knew,
What Hoop should hold us staunch from edge to edge
Ath' world, I would pursue it.

Agri. Give me leave, Cæsar.

Cæs. Speak, Agrippa.

Agri. Thou hast a Sister by thy Mother's side, admir'd Octavia? Great Mark Anthony is now a widdower.

Cæs. Say not, say Agrippa; if Cleopatra heard you, your proof were well deserved of rashness.

Anth. I am not married, Cæsar: let me hear Agrippa further speak.

Agri. To hold you in perpetual amitie,
To make you Brothers, and to knit your hearts
With an un-slipping knot, take Anthony
Octavia to his wife: whose beauty claims
No worse a husband then the best of men:
Whose virtue, and whose general graces speak
That which none else can utter. By this marriage,
All little Jealousies which now seem great,
And all great fears, which now import their dangers,
Would then be nothing. Truths would be tales,
Where now half tales be truths: her love to both,
Would each to other, and all loves to both
Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke,
For 'tis a studied, not a present thought,
By duty ruminated.

Anth. Will Cæsar speak?

Cæs. Not 'till he hears how Anthony is toucht
With what is spoken already.

Anth. What power is in Agrippa,
If I would say Agrippa, be it so,
To make this good?

Cæs. The power of Cæsar,
And his power unto Octavia.

Anth. May I never
(To this good purpose, that so fairly shews)
Dream of impediment: let me have thy hand
Further this act of Grace: and from this hour,
The heart of Brothers govern in our Loves,
And sway our great Designes.

Cæs. There's my hand:
A Sister I bequeath you, whom no Brother
Did ever love so dearly. Let her live
To join our Kingdomes, and our hearts, and never Fly off our Loves again.

Lep. Happily, Amen.

Ant. I did not think to draw my Sword against Pompey,
For he hath strange courtesies, and great
Of late upon me. I must thank him onely,
Lest my remembrance, suffer ill report:
At heel of that defie him.

Lepi. Time calls upon's,
Of us must Pompey presently be sought,
Or else he seeks out us.

Anth. Where lies he?

Cæs. About the Mount-Mesena.

Anth. What is his strength by land?

Cæs. Great, and increasing:
But by Sea he is an absolute Master.

Anth. So is the Frame,
Would we had spoke together. Haste we for it,
Yet e're we put our selves in Armes, dispatch we
The business we have talkt of.

Cæs. With most gladness,
And do invite you to my Sisters view,

Whe-

VVhither straight I'le lead you.

Anth. Let us, Lepidus, not lack your company.

Lep. Noble Anthony, not sickness should detain me.

Exeunt omnes.

Manent Enobarbus, Agrippa, Mecenas.

Mec. Welcome from Ægypt, Sir.

Eno. Half the heart of Cæsar, worthy Mecenas. My honourable Friend Agrippa.

Agri. Good Enobarbus.

Mece. We have cause to be glad, that matters are so well digested: you stay'd well by't in Ægypt.

Enob. I Sir, we did sleep day out of countenance, and made the night light with drinking.

Mece. Eight wild-Boars rosted whole at a breakfast: and but twelve persons there. Is this true?

Enob. This was but as a Fly by an Eagle: we had much more monstrous matter of Feast, which worthily deserved noting.

Mecenas. She's a most triumphant Lady, if report be square to her.

Enob. When she first met Mark Anthony, she purst up his heart upon the river of Cydnus.

Agrip. There she appear'd indeed: or my reporter devis'd well for her.

Enob. I will tell you,
The Barge she sat in, like a burnisht Throne
Burnt on the water; the Poop was beaten Gold,
Purple the Sails: and so perfumed that
The Windes were Love-sick.
With them the Oares were Silver,
Which to the tune of Flutes kept stroke, and made
The water which they beat, to follow faster:
As amorous of her strokes. For her own person,
It beggar'd all description, she did lye
In her Pavillion, cloth of Gold, of Tissue,
O're-picturing that Venus, where we see
The fancie out-work Nature. On each side her
Stood pretty Dimpled Boyes, like smiling Cupids,
With divers-colour'd Fannes, whose wind did seem
To glove the delicate cheeks which they did cool,
And what they undid did.

Agrip. Oh rare for Anthony.

Eno. Her Gentlewomen, like the Nereides,
So many Mere-maids tended her i'th'eyes,
And made their bends adornings. At the Helm,
A seeming Mere-maid steers: the Silken Tackles
Swell with the touches of those Flower-soft hands,
That yearly frame the office. From the Barge
A strange invisible perfume hits the sense
Of the adjacent Wharfs. The City cast
Her people out upon her: and Anthony
Enthron'd i'th' Market-place, did sit alone,
Whistling to th'air: which but for vacancy,
Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too,
And made a gap in Nature.

Agrip. Rare Ægyptian.

Eno. Upon her landing, Anthony sent to her,
Invited her to Supper: she replyed,
It should be better, he became her guest:
Which she entreated, our Courteous Anthony,
Whom nere the word of no woman heard speak,
Being barber'd ten times o're, goes to the Feast;
And for his ordinary, payes his heart,
For what his eyes eat onely.

Agrip. Royal wench:
She made great Cæsar lay his Sword to bed,
He ploughed her, and she cropt.

Eno. I saw her once
Hop fourty Paces through the publick street,
And having lost her breath, she spoke, and panted,
That she did make defect, perfection,
And breathless power breathe forth.

Mece. Now Anthony, must leave her utterly

Eno. Never, he will not:
Age cannot wither her, nor custome stead
Her infinite variety: other women cloy
The appetites they feed, but she makes hungry,
Where most she satisfies. For vildest things
Become themselves in her, that the holy Priests
Bless her, when she is Riggish.

Mece. If Beauty, Wisedome, Modesty, can settle
The heart of Anthony: Octavia's
A blessed Lottery to him.

Agrip. Let us go. Good Enobarbus, make your self my guest, whil'st you abide here.

Eno. Humbly, Sir, I thank you. Exeunt.

Enter Anthony, Cæsar, Octavia between them.

Anth. The world, and my great office, will
Sometimes divide me from your bosome.

Octa. All which time, before the gods my knee shall bow my prayers to them for you.

Anth. Goodnight Sir. My Octavia
Read not my blemishes in the world's report:
I have not kept my square, but that to come
Shall all be done by th'Rule: good night, dear Lady.

Octa. Good night, sir.

Cæsar. Goodnight. Exit.

Enter Soothsayer.

Ant. Now sirrah: do you wish your self in Ægypt?

Sooth. Would I had never come from thence, nor you thither.

Ant. If you can, your reason?

Sooth. I see it in my motion: have it not in my tongue,
But yet hie you to Ægypt again.

Antho. Say to me, whose Fortunes shall rise higher,
Cæsar's or mine?

Soot. Cæsar's. Therefore (oh Anthony) stay not by his side.
Thy Dæmon (that's thy spirit which keeps thee) is
Noble, Courageous, high, unmatchable,
Where Cæsar's is not. But near him thy Angel
Becomes a fear: as being o're-powr'd, and therefore
Make space enough between you.

Anth. Speak this no more.

Sooth. To none but thee no more, but when to thee,
If thou dost play with him at any game,
Thou art sure to lose: And of that Natural luck
He beats thee 'gainst the odds. Thy Luster thickens,
When he shines by: I say again, thy spirit
Is all afraid to govern thee near him:
But he alway is Noble.

Anth. Get thee gone:
Say to Ventidius I would speak with him. Exit.
He shall to Parthia, be it art or hap,
He hath spoken true. The very Dice obey him;
And in our sports my better cunning faints,
Under his chance, if we draw lots, he speeds,
His Cocks do win the Battel, still of mine,
When it is all to naught: and his Quailes ever
Beat mine (inhoopt) at odd's. I will to Ægypt:

And though I make this marriage for my peace,
I'th'East my pleasure lies. Oh come, Ventidius.

Enter Ventidius.

You must to Parthia, your Commission's ready:
Follow me and receiv't. Exeunt.

Enter Lepidus, Mecenas, and Agrippa.

Lepidus. Trouble your self no farther: pray you hasten your generals after.

Agr. Sir, Mark Anthony will e'en but kiss Octavia, and we'll follow.

Lep. 'Till I shall see you in your Souldier's dress,
Which will become you both: Farewell.

Mece. We shall, as I conceive the journey, be at the Mount before you Lepidus.

Lep. Your way is shorter, my purposes do draw me much about, you'll win two dayes upon me.

Both. Sir, good success.

Lep. Farewell. Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras and Alexas.

Cleo. Give me some Musick: Musick, moody food of us that trade in love.

Omnes. The Musick, hoa.

Enter Mardian the Eunuch.

Cleo. Let it alone, let's to Billiards: come Charmian.

Char. My arm is sore, best play with Mardian.

Cleopa. As well a woman with an Eunuch play'd, as with a woman. Come, you'll play with me, Sir?

Mardi. As well as I can, Madam.

Cleo. And when good will is shewed,
Though't come too short
The Actor may plead pardon. I'le none now,
Give me mine Angle, we'll to th'River, there
My Musick playing far off. I will betray
Tawny-fine fishes, my bended hook shall pierce
Their slimie jaws: and, as I draw them up,
I'le think them every one an Anthony,
And say, ah ha; y'are caught.

Char. 'Twas merry when you wager'd on your Angling, when your diver did hang a salt fish on his hook, which he with fervencie drew up.

Cleo. That time? Oh times:
I laught him out of patience, and that night
I laught him into patience, and next morn,
Ere the ninth hour I drunk him to his bed:
Then put my Tires and Mantels on him, whil'st
I wore his Sword Philippan. Oh from Italie

Enter a Messenger.

Ramme thou thy fruitfull tidings in mine eares,
That long time have bin barren.

Mes. Madam, Madam.

Cleo. Anthony's dead,
If thou say so, Villain, thou kil'st thy Mistress:
But well and free, if thou so yield him.
There is Gold and here
My blewest veins to kiss: a hand that Kings
Have lipt, and trembled kissing.

Mes. First, Madam, he is well.

Cleo. Why there's more Gold.
But, sirrah, mark, we use
To say, the dead are well: bring me to that,
The Gold I give thee, will I melt and powre
Down thy ill-uttering throat.

Mes. Good Madam, hear me.

Cleo. Well, go to I will:
But there's no goodness in thy face, if Anthony
Be free and healthfull; so tart a favour
To trumpet such good tidings. If not well,
Thou should'st come like a Furie crown'd with Snakes,
Not like a formal man.

Mes. Wilt please you hear me?

Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee e're thou speak'st,
Yet if thou say, Anthony lives, 'tis well,
Or friends with Cæsar, or not Captain to him,
I'le see thee in a shower of Gold, and haile
Rich Pearls upon thee.

Mes. Madam, he's well.

Cleo. Well said.

Mes. And Friends with Cæsar.

Cleo. Th'art an honest man.

Mes. Cæsar, and he, are greater Friends then ever.

Cleo. Mark thee a Fortune from me.

Mes. But yet, Madam.

Cleo. I do not like but yet, it does allay
The good precedence, fie upon but yet,
But yet is as a Jaylor to bring forth
Some monstrous Malefactor. Prythee, Friend,
Powre out the pack of matter to mine ear,
The good and bad together: he's friends with Cæsar,
In state of health thou say'st, and thou sayest, free.

Mes. Free, Madam! no: I made no such sport,
He's bound unto Octavia.

Cleo. For what good turn?

Mes. For the best turn i'th'bed.

Cleo. I am pale, Charmian.

Mes. Madam, he's married to Octavia.

Cleo. The most infectious Pestilence upon thee.
Strikes him down.

Mes. Good Madam, patience.

Cleo. What say you? Strikes him.
Hence horrible Villain, or I'le spurn thine eyes
Like balls before me: I'le unhair thy head:
She hales him up and down.
Thou shalt be whipt with Wyer, and stew'd in brine,
Smarting in lingring pickle.

Mes. Gracious Madam,
I, that do bring the newes, made not the match.

Cleo. Say 'tis not so, a Province I will give thee,
And make thy Fortunes proud: the blow thou had'st
Shall make thy peace, for moving me to rage,
And I will boot thee with what gift beside
Thy modesty can beg.

Mes. He's married, Madam.

Cleo. Rogue, thou hast liv'd too long. Draw a knife.

Mes. Nay then I'le run:
What mean you, Madam, I have made no fault. Exit.

Char. Good Madam, keep your self within your self,
The man is innocent.

Cleo. Some Innocents scape not the thunderbolt:
Melt Ægypt into Nile; and kindled creatures
Turn all to Serpents. Call the slave again,
Though I am mad, I will not bite him: Call.

Char. He is afeard to come.

Cleo. I will not hurt him,
These hands do lack Nobility, that they strike
A meaner then my self: since I my self
Have given my self the cause. Come hither, Sir.

Enter the Messenger again.

Though it be honest, it is never good
To bring bad newes: give to a gracious Message

An

An hoſt of tongues, but let ill tidings tell
Themſelves when they be felt.
Meſ. I have done my duty.
Cleo. Is he married?
I cannot hate thee worſer then I do,
If thou again ſay yes.
Meſ. He's married, Madam.
Cleo. The gods confound thee,
Doſt thou hold there ſtill?
Meſ. Should I lye, Madam?
Cleo. Oh, would thou did ſt:
So half my Ægypt were ſubmerg'd and made
A Ciſtern for ſcal'd Snakes. Go get thee hence,
Had'ſt thou Narciſſus in thy face, to me
Thou would'ſt appear moſt ugly: He is married?
Meſ. I crave your highneſs pardon.
Cleo. He is married?
Meſ. Take no offence, that I would not offend you;
To puniſh me for what you make me doe,
Seems much unequal: he's married to Octavia.
Cleo. Oh that his fault ſhould make a knave of thee,
That art not what thou art ſure of. Get thee hence,
The Merchandiſe which thou haſt brought from Rome
Are all too dear for me:
Lie they upon thy hand, and be undone by'em.
Char. Good your Highneſs patience.
Cleo. In praiſing Anthony, I have diſprais'd Cæſar.
Char. Many times, Madam.
Cleo. I am paid for't now: lead me from hence,
I faint, oh Iras, Charmian: 'tis no matter.
Go to the fellow, good Alexas, bid him
Report the feature of Octavia, her yeares,
Her inclination, let him not leave out
The colour of her hair. Bring me word quickly.
Let him for ever go, let him not, Charmian,
Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,
The other wayes a Mars. Bid you Alexas
Bring me word, how tall ſhe is: pity me, Charmian,
But do not ſpeak to me. Lead me to my Chamber.
Exeunt.

Enter Pompey, at one door with Drum and Trumpet: at another Cæſar, Lepidus. Anthony, Enobarbus, Mecenas, Agrippa, Menas with Souldiers marching.

Pom. Your Hoſtages I have, ſo have you mine:
And we ſhall talk before we fight.
Cæſ. Moſt meet that firſt we come to words,
And therefore have we
Our written purpoſes before us ſent,
Which if thou haſt conſidered, let us know,
If't will tie up thy diſcontented Sword
And carry back to Sicily much tall youth,
That elſe muſt periſh here.
Pom. To you all three,
The Senators alone of this great world,
Chief Factors for the gods. I do not know,
Wherefore my Father ſhould revengers want,
Having a Son and Friends, ſince Julius Cæſar,
Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghoſted,
There ſaw you labouring for me. What was't
That mov'd pale Caſſius to conſpire? And what
Made the all-honour'd, honeſt Roman Brutus,
With the arm'd reſt, Courtiers of beauteous freedome,
To drench the Capitol, but that they would
Have one man but a man, and that is it
Hath made me rigge my Navie. At whoſe burthen,
The anger'd Ocean foams, with which I meant
To ſcourge th'ingratitude, that deſpightfull Rome
Caſt on my Noble Father.
Cæſar. Take your time.
Ant. Thou canſt not fear us, Pompey, with thy ſailes,
We'll ſpeak with thee at Sea. At land thou know'ſt
How much we do o're-count thee.
Pom. At Land indeed
Thou doſt o're-count me of my father's houſe.
But ſince the Cuckoo builds not for himſelf,
Remain in't as thou may'ſt.
Lepi. Be pleas'd to tell us,
(For this is from the preſent now you talk)
The offers we have ſent you.
Cæſar. There's the point.
Ant. Which do not be intreated to,
But weigh what it is worth embrac'd.
Cæſar. And what may follaw to try a larger Fortune.
Pom. You have made me offer
Of Sicily, Sardinia: and I muſt
Rid all the Sea of Pirats: then, to ſend
Meaſures of Wheat to Rome: this 'greed upon,
To part with unhackt edges, and bear back
Our targes undinted.
Omnes. That's our offer.
Pom. Know then I came before you here,
A man prepar'd
To take this offer. But Mark Anthony,
Put me to ſome impatience: though I loſe
The praiſe of it by telling. You muſt know
When Cæſar and your Brother were at blowes,
Your Mother came to Sicily, and did find
Her welcome friendly.
Ant. I have heard it, Pompey,
And am well ſtudied for a liberal thanks,
Which I do owe you.
Pom. Let me have your hand:
I did not think, Sir, to have met you here.
Ant. The beds i'th'Eaſt are ſoft, and thanks to you,
That call'd me timelier then my purpoſe hither:
For I have gained by't.
Cæſ. Since I ſaw you laſt, there's a change upon you.
Pom. Well, I know not,
What counts hard Fortune caſts upon my face,
But in my boſome ſhe ſhall never come,
To make my heart a vaſſal.
Lepi. Well met here.
Pom. I hope ſo, Lepidus, thus we are agreed:
I crave our compoſition may be written
And ſeal'd between us.
Cæſ. That's the next to doe.
Pom. We'll feaſt each other, e're we part, and let's
Draw lots who ſhall begin.
Anth. That will I, Pompey.
Pompey. No, Anthony, take the lot: but firſt or laſt, your fine Ægyptian cookery ſhall have the fame, I have heard that Julius Cæſar grew fat with feaſting there.
Ant. You have heard much.
Pom. I have fair meaning, Sir.
Ant. And fair words to them.
Pom. Then ſo much have I heard.
And I have heard Apollodorus carried ------
Eno. No more of that: he did ſo.
Pom. What, I pray you?
Eno. A certain Queen to Cæſar in a Materice.
Pom. I know thee now, how far'ſt thou Souldier?
Eno. Well, and well am like to do, for I perceive

Four Feasts are toward.

Pom. Let me shake thy hand,
I never hated thee: I have seen thee fight,
When I have envied thy behaviour.

Enob. Sir, I never lov'd you much, but I ha'prais'd ye,
When you have well deserv'd ten times as much,
As I have said you did.

Pom. Injoy thy plainness,
It nothing ill becomes thee:
Aboord my Gally, I invite you all.
Will you lead, Lords?

All. Shew's the way, Sir.

Pom. Come. Exeunt. Manent Enob. & Menas.

Men. Thy Father, Pompey, would ne're have made Treaty. You, and I have known, Sir.

Eno. At Sea, I think.

Men. We have, Sir.

Eno. You have done well by Water.

Men. And you by Land.

Eno. I will praise any man that will praise me, though it cannot be denied what I have done by Land.

Men. Nor what I have done by water.

Eno. Yes, some-thing you can deny for your own safety: you have bin a good Thief by Sea.

Men. And you by Land.

Eno. There I deny my Land service: but give me your hand Menas, if our eyes had authority, here they might have two Thieves kissing.

Men. All mens faces are true, whatsoe're their hands are.

Eno. But there is ne're a fair Woman, ha's a true Face.

Men. No slander, they steal hearts.

Eno. We came hither to fight with you.

Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turn'd to a Drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his Fortune.

Eno. If he do, sure he cannot weep't back again.

Men. Y'have said, Sir, we look'd not for Mark Anthony here, pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?

Eno. Cæsar's Sister is call'd Octavia.

Men. True, Sir, she was the wife of Caius Marcellus.

Eno. But now she is the wife of Marcus Anthonius.

Men. Pray ye, Sir.

Eno. 'Tis true.

Men. Then is Cæsar and he, for ever knit together.

Eno. If I were bound to Divine of this unity, I would not Prophesie so.

Men. I think the policy of that purpose, made more in the Marriage then the Love of the parties.

Eno. I think so too. But you shall find the band that seems to tie their friendship together, will be the very stranger of their Amitie: Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation.

Men. Who would not have his wife so?

Eno. Not he that himself is not so: which is Mark Anthony: he will to his Ægyptian dish again: then shall the sighes of Octavia blow the fire up in Cæsar, and (as I said before) that which is the strength of their Amity, shall prove the immediate Author of their variance. Anthony will use his affection where it is. He married but his occasion here.

Men. And thus it may be. Come, Sir, will you a-boord? I have a health for you.

Eno. I shall take it, sir: we have us'd our Throats in Ægypt.

Men. Come, let's away. Exeunt.

Musick playes.

Enter two or three Servants with a Banquet.

1. Here they'll be, man: some o' their Plants are ill rooted already, the least wind i'th'world will blow them down.

2. Lepidus is high-colour'd.

1. They have made him drink Almes drink.

2. As they pinch one-another by the disposition he cries out, no more; reconciles them to his entreatie, and himself to th'drink.

1. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion.

2. Why this it is to have a name in great men's Fellowship: I had as lieve have a Reed that will do me no service, as a Partizan I could not heave.

1. To be call'd into a huge Sphere, and not to be seen to move in't, are the holes where eyes should be, which pittifully disaster the cheeks.

A Sonnet sounded.

Enter Cæsar, Anthony, Pompey, Lepidus, Agrippa, Mecenas, Enobarbus, Menas, with other Captains.

Ant. Thus do they, Sir: they take the flow o'th'Nile
By certain scale, i'th'Pyramid: they know
By th'height, the lowness, or the mean: If dearth
Or Foizon follow. The higher Nilus swells
The more it promises as it ebbs, the Seedsman
Upon the slime and Ooze scatters his grain,
And shortly comes to Harvest.

Lep. Y'have strange Serpents there?

Ant. I, Lepidus.

Lep. Your Serpent of Ægypt, is bred now of your mud by the operation of the Sun: so is your Crocodile.

Ant. They are so.

Pom. Sir, and some Wine: A health to Lepidus.

Lep. I am not so well as I should be:
But I'le ne're out.

Eno. Not 'till you have slept: I fear me you'll be in 'till then.

Lep. Nay certainly, I have heard the Ptolemie's Pyramisis are very goodly things: without contradiction I have heard that.

Men. Pompey, a word.

Pom. Say in mine ear, what is't?

Men. Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee, Captain,
And hear me speak a word.

Pom. For me 'till anon. Whisper in's Ear.
This Wine for Lepidus.

Lep. What manner o'thing is your Crocodile?

Ant. It is shap'd, sir, like it self, and it is as broad as it hath bredth; It is just so high as it is, and moves with it's own organs. It lives by that which nourisheth it, and the Elements once out of it, it Transmigrates.

Lep. What colour is it of?

Ant. Of it's own colour too.

Lep. 'Tis a strange Serpent.

Ant. 'Tis so, and the teares of it are wet.

Cæs. Will this description satisfie him?

Ant. With the Health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very Epicure.

Pom. Go hang, sir, hang: tell me of that? Away:
Do as I bid you. Where's the Cup I call'd for?

Men. If for the sake of Merit thou wilt hear me,

Rise

Riſe from thy ſtool.
Pom. I think th'art mad: the matter?
Men. I have ever held my cap off to thy Fortunes.
Pom. Thou haſt ſerv'd me with much faith: what's elſe to ſay? Be jolly, Lords.
Anth. Theſe Quick-ſands, Lepidus,
Keep off them, for you ſink.
Men. Wilt thou be Lord of all the world?
Pom. What ſaiſt thou?
Men. Wilt thou be Lord of the whole world?
That's twice.
Pom. How ſhould that be?
Men. But entertain it, and though thou think me poor, I am the man will give thee all the world.
Pom. Haſt thou drunk well?
Men. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup,
That if thou dar'ſt be, the earthly Jove:
What e're the Ocean pales, or skie inclippes,
Is thine, if thou wilt ha't.
Pom. Shew me which way.
Men. Theſe three world-ſharers, theſe Competitors
Are in thy veſſel. Let me cut the Cable.
And when we are put off, fall to their throats:
All there is thine.
Pom. Ah, this thou ſhould'ſt have done,
And not have ſpoken on't. In me 'tis villanie,
In thee, 't had bin good ſervice: thou muſt know,
'Tis not my profit that does lead mine Honour:
Mine Honour is, Repent that e're thy tongue,
Hath ſo betrai'd thine act. Being done unknown,
I ſhould have found it afterwards well done:
But muſt condemn it now: deſiſt, and drink.
Men. For this I'le never follow
Thy pall'd Fortunes more,
Who ſeeks and will not take, when once 'tis offer'd,
Shall never find it more.
Pom. This health to Lepidus.
Ant. Bear him a-ſhoar,
I'le pledge it for him, Pompey.
Eno. Here's to thee, Menas.
Men. Enobarbus, welcome,
Pom. Fill 'till the cup be hid.
Eno. There's a ſtrange Fellow, Menas.
Men. Why?
Eno. A beares the third part of the world, man: ſeeſt not?
Men. The third part, then he is drunk: would it were all, that it might go on wheels.
Eno. Drink thou, encreaſe the Reels.
Men. Come.
Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian Feaſt.
Ant. It ripens towards it: ſtrike the Veſſels hoa.
Here's to Cæſar.
Cæſar. I could well forbear't, it's monſtrous labour when I waſh my brain, and it grows fouler.
Ant. Be a Child o'th'time.
Cæſar. Poſſeſs it, I'le make anſwer: but I had rather faſt from all, four dayes, then drink ſo much in one.
Eno. Ha, my brave Emperour, ſhall we dance now the Ægyptian Bacchanals, and celebrate our drink?
Pom. Let's ha't, good Souldier.
Ant. Come, let's all take hands,
'Till that the conquering Wine hath ſteept our ſenſe,
In ſoft and delicate Lethe.
Eno. All take hands:
Make battery to our eares with the loud Muſick,
The while, I'le place you, then the Boy ſhall ſing.
The holding every man ſhall beat as loud,
As his ſtrong ſides can volly.

Muſick Playes. Enobarbus places them hand in hand.

The Song.

Come thou Monarch of the Vine,
Plumpie Bacchus with pink eyne:
In thy Fattes our cares be drown'd.
With thy Grapes our haires be crown'd.
Cup us 'till the world go round,
Cup us 'till the world go round.

Cæſ. What would you more?
Pompey, goodnight. Good Brother
Let me requeſt you of our graver buſineſs
Frowns at this levity. Gentle Lords let's part,
You ſee we have burnt our cheek. Strong Enobarbe
Is weaker then the wind, and mine own tongue
Spleets what it ſpeaks: the wild diſguiſe hath almoſt
Antickt us all. What needs more words? goodnight.
Good Anthony, your hand.
Pom. I'le try you on the ſhoar.
Ant. And ſhall, Sir, give's your hand.
Pom. Oh, Anthony, you have my Father's houſe.
But what, we are Friends?
Come down into the Boat.
Eno. Take heed you fall not, Menas; I'le not on ſhoar,
No, to my Cabin: theſe Drummes
Theſe Trumpets, Flutes: what
Let Neptune hear, we bid aloud farewell
To theſe great Fellows. Sound and be hang'd, ſound out.

Sound a Flouriſh with Drummes.

Eno. Hoo ſaies a, there's my Cap.
Men. Hoa, Noble Captain, come. Exeunt.

Enter Ventidius as it were in a triumph, the dead body of Pacorus borne before him.

Ven. Now darting Parthia art thou ſtrook, and now
Pleas'd Fortune does of Marcus Craſſus death
Make me revenger. Beare the King's Son's body,
Before our Army, thy Pacorus Orades,
Payes this for Marcus Craſſus.
Roman. Noble Ventidius,
Whilſt yet with Parthian bloud thy Sword is warm,
The Fugitive Parthians follow. Spurn through Media,
Meſapotamia, and the ſhelters, whither
The routed flie. So thy grand Captain Anthony
Shall ſet thee on triumphant Charriots, and Put Garlands on thy head.
Ven. Oh Silius, Silius,
I have done enough. A lower place, note well
May make too great an act. For learn this, Silius,
Better to leave undone, then by our deed
Acquire too high a Fame, when him we ſerve's away.
Cæſar and Anthony, have ever won
More in their officer, then perſon. Soſſius
One of my place in Syria, his Lievtenant,
For quick accumulation of renown,
Which atchiev'd by th'minute, loſt his favour.
Who does i'th'Warres more then his Captain can,
Becomes his Captain's Captain: and Ambition
(The Souldier's virtue) rather makes choice of loſs
Then gain, which darkens him.
I could do more to doe Anthonius good,
But 'twould offend him. And in his offence,

Should

Should my performance perish.
Rom. Thou hast, Ventidius, that, without the which a Souldier and his Sword grants scarce distinction : thou wilt write to Anthony.
Ven. I'le humbly signifie what in his name,
That magical word of War we have effected,
How with his Banners, and his well pai'd ranks,
The ne're-yet beaten Horse of Parthia,
We have jaded out o'th' Field.
Rom. Where is he now?
Ven. He purposeth to Athens, whither with what haste
The weight we must convey with's, will permit:
We shall appear before him. On there, pass along.
Exeunt.

Enter Agrippa at one door, Enobarbus at another.
Agri. What are the Brother's parted?
Eno. They have dispatcht with Pompey, he is gone,
The other three are Sealing. Octavia weeps
To part from Rome : Cæsar is sad, and Lepidus
Since Pompey's feast, as Menas sayes, is troubled
With the Green-Sickness.
Agri. 'Tis a Noble Lepidus.
Eno. A very fine one : oh, how he loves Cæsar.
Agri. Nay but how dearly he adores Mark Anthony.
Eno. Cæsar? why he's the Jupiter of men.
Ant. What's Anthony, the god of Jupiter?
Eno. Speak you of Cæsar? Oh? the non-pareil?
Agri. Oh Anthony, oh thou Arabian Bird!
Eno. Would you praise Cæsar, say Cæsar, go no further.
Agr. Indeed he plied them both with excellent praises.
Eno. But he loves Cæsar best, yet he loves Anthony :
Hoo, Hearts, Tongues, Figure,
Scribes, Bards, Poets, cannot
Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number : hoo,
His love to Anthony. But as for Cæsar,
Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.
Agri. Both he loves.
Eno. They are his Shards, and he their Beetle, so :
This is to horse : Adieu, Noble Agrippa.
Agri. Good Fortune worthy Souldier, and farewell.

Enter Cæsar, Anthony, Lepidus, and Octavia.
Antho. No farther, Sir.
Cæsar. You take from me a great part of my self:
Use me well in't. Sister, prove such a wife
As my thoughts make thee, and as my farthest Band
Shall pass on thy approof: most Noble Anthony,
Let not the piece of Virtue which is set
Betwixt us, as the Cement of our love
To keep it builded, be the Ram to batter
The Fortune of it: for better might we
Have lov'd without this mean, if on both parts
This be not cherisht.
Ant. Make me not offended in your distrust.
Cæs. I have said.
Ant. You shall not find,
Though you be therein curious, the least cause
For what you seem to fear, so the gods keep you,
And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends:
We will here part.
Cæs. Farewell, my dearest Sister, fare thee well,
The Elements be kind to thee, and make
Thy spirits all of comfort: fare thee well.
Octa. My Noble Brother.
Anth. The April's in her eyes, it is Loves spring,
And these the showers to bring it on : be chearfull.
Octa. Sir, look well to my Husband's house : and ---- Cæsar. What Octavia.
Octa. I'le tell you in your ear.
Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can
Her heart inform her tongue.
The Swan's doun feather
That stands upon the Swell at full of tide:
And neither way inclines.
Eno. Will Cæsar weep?
Agri. He ha's a cloud in's face.
Eno. He were the worse for that were he a Horse, so is he being a man.
Agri. Why Enobarbus :
When Anthony found Julius Cæsar dead,
He cryed almost to roaring: And he wept,
When at Philippi he found Brutus slain.
Eno. That year indeed, he was troubled with a rheum,
What willingly he did confound, he wail'd,
Believ't 'till I weep too.
Cæs. No, sweet Octavia,
You shall hear from me still: the time shall not
Out-go my thinking on you.
Ant. Come Sir, come,
I'le wrestle with you in my strength of love:
Look here I have you: thus I let you go,
And give you to the gods.
Cæs. Adieu, be happy.
Lep. Let all the number of the Starres give light
To thy fair way.
Cæs. Farewell, farewell. Kisses Octavia.
Ant. Farewell. Trumpets sound. Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.
Cleo. Where is the Fellow?
Alex. Half afeard to come.
Cleo. Go to, go to: Come hither, Sir.
Enter the Messenger as before.
Alex. Good Majestie, Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you, but when you are well pleas'd.
Cleo. That Herod's head, I'le have: but how? When Anthony is gone, through whom I might command it:
Come thou near.
Mes. Most gracious Majesty.
Cleo. Did'st thou behold Octavia?
Mes. I, dread Queen.
Cleo. Where?
Mes. Madam, in Rome, I lookt her in the face: and saw her led between her Brother, and Mark Anthony.
Cleo. Is she as tall as me?
Mes. She is not, Madam.
Cleo. Did'st hear her speak?
Is she shrill tongu'd or low?
Mes. Madam, I heard her speak, she is low voic'd.
Cleo. That's not so good: he cannot like her long.
Char. Like her? Oh Isis: 'tis impossible.
Cleo. I think so Charmian: dull of tongue, & dwarfish.
What Majesty is in her gate, remember
If e're thou look'st on Majesty.
Mes. She creeps; her motion and her station are as one:
She shews a body, rather then a life,
A Statue, then a Breather.
Mes. Is this certain?
Cleo. Or I have no observance.
Cha. Three in Ægypt cannot make better note.
Cleo. He's very knowing, I do perceiv't,
There's nothing in her yet.

The

The Fellow has good judgement.
Char. Excellent.
Cleo. Guess at her yeares, I prythee.
Mes. Madam, she was a widdow.
Cleo. VViddow? Charmian, hark.
Mes. And I do think she's thirty.
Cle. Bear'st thou her face in mind? is't long or, round?
Mes. Round even to faultiness.
Cleo. For the most part too, they are foolish that are so. Her hair what colour?
Mes. Brown, Madam: and her forehead.
As low as she would wish it.
Cleo. There's Gold for thee,
Thou must not take my former sharpness ill,
I will employ thee back again: I find thee
Most fit for business. Go, make thee ready,
Our Letters are prepar'd.
Char. A proper man.
Cleo. Indeed he is so: I repent me much
That so I harried him. VVhy me thinks by him,
This Creature's no such thing.
Char. Nothing, Madam.
Cle. The man hath seen some Majesty, and should know.
Char. Hath he seen Majestie? Isis else defend: and serving you so long.
Cleo. I have one thing more to ask him yet, good Charmian: but 'tis no matter, thou shalt bring him to me where I will write; all may be well enough.
Char. I warrant you, Madam. Exeunt.

Enter Anthony and Octavia.

Ant. Nay, nay Octavia, not onely that,
That were excusable, that and thousands more
Of semblable import, but he hath wag'd
New Warres 'gainst Pompey, Made his will, and read it,
To publick ear, spoke scantly of me,
When perforce he could not
But pay me termes of Honour: cold and sickly
He vented then most narrow measure: lent me,
When the best hint was given him: he had lookt,
Or did it from his teeth.
Octavi. Oh, my good Lord,
Believe not all, or if you must believe,
Stomack not all. A more unhappy Lady,
If this division chance, ne're stood between
Praying for both parts:
The good gods will mock me presently,
When I shall pray: oh bless my Lord and husband,
Undo that prayer: by crying out as loud,
Oh bless my Brother. Husband winne, winne Brother,
Prayes, and destroyes the prayer, no midway
'Twixt these extremes at all.
Ant. Gentle Octavia,
Let your best love draw to that point which seeks
Best to preserve it: if I lose mine Honour,
I lose my self: better I were not yours
Then yours so branchless. But as you requested,
Your self shall go between's, the mean time, Lady,
I'le raise the preparation of a War
Shall stain your Brother, make your soonest haste
So your desires are yours.
Octa. Thanks to my Lord,
The Jove of Power make me most weak, most weak,
Your reconciler: Warres 'twixt you twain would be,
As if the world should cleave, and that slain men
Should fodder up the Rift.
Anth. When it appears to you where this begins,
Turn your displeasure that way, for our faults
Can never be so equal, that your love
Can equally move with them. Provide your going,
Choose your own company, and command what cost
Your heart has mind to. Exeunt.

Enter Enobarbus, and Eros.

Enob. How now, friend Eros?
Eros. There's strange Newes come, Sir.
Eno. What man?
Ero. Cæsar and Lepidus have made War upon Pompey.
Eno. This is old, what is the success?
Eros. Cæsar having made use of him in the warres 'gainst Pompey: presently denyed him rivality, would not let him partake of the glory of the action, and not resting here, accuses him of Letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey. Upon his own appeal seizes him, so the poor third is up, 'till death enlarge his Confine.
Eno. Then would thou hadst a pair of Chaps no more, and throw between them all the food thou hast, they'll grind the other. Where's Anthony?
Eros. He's walking in the garden thus, and spurns
The rush that lies before him. Cries, Fool Lepidus,
And threats the throat of that his Officer,
That murdred Pompey.
Eno. Our great Navie's rigg'd.
Eros. For Italy and Cæsar, more Domitius,
My Lord desires you presently: my Newes
I might have told hereafter.
Eno. 'Twill be naught, but let it be: bring me to Anthony.
Eros. Come, sir. Exeunt.

Enter Agrippa, Mecenas, and Cæsar.

Cæs. Contemning Rome he has done all this, and more
In Alexandria: here's the matter of it:
I'th'Market-place on a a Tribunal silver'd
Cleopatra and himself in Chairs of Gold
Were publickly enthron'd: at the feet sat
Cæsarion whom they call my father's Son,
And all the unlawfull issue, that their lust
Since then hath made between them. Unto her,
He gave the stablishment of Ægypt, made her
Of lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia, absolute Queen.
Mece. This is the publick eye?
Cæs. I'th'common shew place where they exercise,
His Sonns hither proclaim'd the King of Kings,
Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia
He gave to Alexander. To Ptolemy he assign'd,
Syria, Sicilia, and Phœnicia: she
In th'abiliments of the goddess Isis
That day appear'd, and oft before gave audience,
As 'tis reported, so.
Mece. Let Rome be thus inform'd.
Agrip. Who queasie with his insolence already,
Will their good thoughts call from him.
Cæs. The people know it,
And have now receiv'd his accusations.
Agri. Whom do's he accuse?
Cæs. Cæsar, and that having in Sicily
Sextus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated him
His part o'th' Isle. Then does he say, he lent me
Some shipping unrestored. Lastly he frets
That Lepidus of the Triumvirate, should be depos'd,
And being that we detain all his Revenue.
Agri. Sir, this should be answered.
Cæsar. 'Tis done already, and his Messenger gone:
I have told him Lepidus was grown too cruel,

That

That his high Authority abus'd,
And did deserve his chance for what I have conquer'd,
I grant him part: but then in his Armenia,
And other of his conquer'd Kingdomes, I demand the like
Mec. He'll never yield to that.
Cæs. Nor must not then be yielded to in this.
Enter Octavia with her Train.
Octa. Hail Cæsar, and my Lord; hail, most dear Cæsar.
Cæsar. That ever I should call thee Cast-away.
Octa. You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause.
Cæs. Why hast thou stolne upon me thus? you came not Like Cæsar's Sister; the wife of Anthony
Should have an Army for an Usher, and
The neighs of horse to tell of her approach,
Longe e're she did appear. The trees by th'way
Should have born men, and expectation fainted
Longing for what it had not. Nay, the dust
Should have ascended to the Roof of Heaven,
Rais'd by your populous Troops: But you are come
A Market-maid to Rome, and have prevented
The ostentation of our love; which left unshewn,
Is often left unlov'd: we should have met you
By Sea, and Land, supplying every stage
With an augmented greeting.
Octa. Good my Lord,
To come thus was I not constrain'd, but did it
On my free-will. My Lord Mark Anthony,
Hearing that you prepar'd for War, acquainted
My grieving ear withall: whereon I begg'd
His pardon for return.
Cæs. Which soon he granted,
Being an abstract 'tween his Lust, and him,
Octa. Do not say so, my Lord.
Cæs. I have eyes upon him.
And his affairs come to me on the wind: where is he now:
Octa. My Lord, in Atheus.
Cæs. No, my most wronged Sister, Cleopatra
Hath nodded him to her. He hath given his Empire
Up to a Whore, who now are levying
The Kings o'th'earth for War. He hath dissembled,
Bochus the King of Lybia, Archilaus
Of Cappadocia, Philadelphos King
Of Paphlagonia: the Thracian King Adullas,
King Manchus of Arabia, King of Pont,
Herod of Jewry, Mithridates King
Of Comageat, Polemen and Amintas.
The King of Mede, and Lycaonia,
With a more larger List of Scepters.
Octa. Aye me most wretched,
That have my heart parted betwixt two Friends,
That do afflict each other. (breaking forth
Cæs. Welcome hither, your letters did with-hold our
'Till we perceiv'd both how you were wrong led,
And we in negligent danger: cheer your heart.
Be you not troubled with the time which drives
O're your content, these strong necessities,
But let determin'd things to destinie
Hold unbewail'd their way. Welcome to Rome:
Nothing more dear to me. You are abus'd
Beyond the mark of thought: and the high gods
To do you Justice, make his Ministers
Of us, and those that love you. Best of comfort,
And ever welcome to us. Agrip. Welcome Lady.
Mec. Welcome, dear Madam,
Each heart in Rome does love and pity you,
Onely th'adulterous Anthony, most large
In his abhominations, turns you off,
And gives his potent Regiment to a Trull
That noises it against us.
Octa. Is it so, sir?
Cæs. Most certain: Sister welcome; pray you
Be ever known to patience. My dear'st Sister. Exeunt.
Enter Cleopatra, and Enobarbus.
Cleo. I will be even with thee: doubt it not.
Eno. But why, why, why?
Cleo. Thou hast forespoke my being in these warres;
And say'st it is not fit.
Eno. Well: is it, is it?
Cleo. If not, denounc'd against us, why should not we be there in person?
Eno. Well, I could reply: if we should serve with Horse and Mares together, the Horse were merely lost:
the Mares would bear a Souldier and his Horse.
Cleo. What is't you say?
Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle Anthony,
Take from his heart, take from his brain, take from's time,
What should not then be spar'd. He is already
Traduc'd for Levity, and 'tis said in Rome,
That Photinus an Eunuch, and your Maids
Mannage this war.
Cleo. Sink Rome, and their tongues rot
That speak against us. A Charge we bear i'th'War,
And as the president of my Kingdome will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it,
I will not stay behind.
Enter Anthony and Camidius.
Eno. Nay I have done, here comes the Emperour.
Ant. Is it not strange, Camidius,
That from Tarentum, and Brundusium,
He could so quickly cut the Ionian Sea,
And take in Toryne. You have heard on't (Sweet?)
Cleo. Celerity is never more admir'd
Then by the negligent.
Ant. A good rebuke,
Which might have well becom'd the best of men
To taunt at slackness. Camidius, we,
Will fight with him by Sea.
Cleo. By Sea, what else?
Cam. Why will my Lord do so?
Ant. For that he dares us to't.
Eno. So hath my Lord, dar'd him to single fight.
Cam. I, and to wage his Battel at Pharsalia,
Where Cæsar fought with Pompey. But these offers
Which serves not for his vantage, he shakes off,
And so should you.
Enob. Your Shippes are not well mann'd,
Your Mariners are Muliters, Reapers, people,
Ingrost by swift Impress. In Cæsar's Fleet,
Are those, that often have 'gainst Pompey fought,
Their shippes are yare, yours heavy: no disgrace
Shall fall you for refusing him at Sea,
Being prepar'd for Land.
Ant. By Sea, by Sea.
Eno. Most worthy Sir, you therein throw away
The absolute Souldiership you have by Land,
Distract your Army, which doth most consist
Of war-markt-footmen, leave unexecuted
Your own renowned knowledge, quite forgoe
The way which promises assurance, and
Give up your self merely to chance and hazard,
From firm Security.
Ant. I'le fight at Sea.

Cleo.

Cleo. I have sixty Sailes, Cæsar none better.
Ant. Our over-plus of shipping will we burn,
And with the rest full-mann'd, from th'heart of Actium
Beat th'approaching Cæsar. But if we fail,
We then can do't at Land. Enter a Messenger.
Thy business?
Mes. The newes is true, my Lord, he is discried,
Cæsar has taken Toryne.
Ant. Can he be there in person? 'Tis impossible
Strange, that his power should be so, Camidius,
Our nineteen Legions thou shalt hold by Land,
And our twelve thousand Horse. We'll to our Ship,
Away my Thetis.
Enter a Souldier.
How now, worthy Souldier?
Sould. Oh Noble Emperour, do not fight by Sea,
Trust not to rotten planks: Do you misdoubt
This Sword, and these my Wounds; let th'Egyptians
And the Phœnicians go a ducking: we
Have us'd to conquer standing on the earth,
And fighting foot to foot.
Ant. Well, well, away. Exeunt Ant. Cleo. & Enob.
Soul. By Hercules I think I am i'th'right.
Cam. Souldier thou art: but the whole action grows
Not in the power on't: so our Leaders lead,
And we are Womens men.
Soul. You keep by Land the Legions and the Horse whole, do you not?
Ven. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justius, Publicola, and Celius, are for Sea:
But we keep whole by Land. This speed of Cæsar's
Carries beyond belief.
Soul. While he was yet in Rome
His power went out in such distractions,
As beguil'd all Spies.
Cam. Who's his Lievtenant, hear you?
Soul. They say, one Towrus.
Cam. Well, I know the man.
Enter a Messenger.
Mes. The Emperour calls Camidius.
Cam. With Newes the time's with Labour,
And throwes forth each minute, some. Exeunt.

Enter Cæsar with his Army, marching.

Cæs. Towrus?
Tow. My Lord.
Cæs. Strike not by Land.
Keep whole, provoke not Battel
'Till we have done at Sea. Do not exceed
The Prescript of this Scroul: Our fortune lyes
Upon this jump. Exit.
Enter Anthony, and Enobarbus.
Ant. Set we our Squadrons on yond side o' th' Hill,
In eye of Cæsar's battel, from which place
We may the number of the Ships behold,
And so proceed accordingly. Exit.

Camidius Marching with his Land army one way over the stage, and Towrus the Lievtenant of Cæsar the other way: after their going in, is heard the noise of a Sea-fight. Alarum. Enter Enobarbus & Scarus.

Eno. Naught, naught, all naught, I can behold no longer:
Thantoniad, the Ægyptian Admiral,
With all their sixty flye, and turn the Rudder:
To see't, mine eyes are blasted.
Enter Scarus.
Scar. Gods, and goddesses, all the whole synod of them!
Eno. What's thy passion?
Scar. The greater Cantle of the world is lost
With very ignorance, we have kist away
Kingdomes, and Provinces.
Enob. How appears the fight?
Scar. On our side like the Token'd Pestilence,
Where death is sure. Your ribaudred Nagge of Ægypt,
(Whom Leprosie o're) i'th'mid'st o'th'fight,
When vantage like a pair of Twinnes appear'd
Both of the same, or rather ours the elder;
(The Breeze upon her) like a Cow in June,
Hoists Sails, and flyes.
Enob. That I beheld:
Mine eyes did sicken at the sight, and could not
Indure a further view.
Scar. She once being looft,
The Noble ruine of her Magick, Anthony,
Claps on his Sea-wing, and (like a doating Mallard)
Leaving the Fight in heighth, flyes after her:
I never saw an action of such shame;
Experience, Man-hood, Honour ne're before,
Did violate so it self.
Enob. Alack, alack.
Enter Camidius
Cam. Our Fortune on the Sea is out of breath,
And sinks most lamentably. Had our General
Bin what he knew himself, it had gone well:
Oh he has given example for our flight;
Most grossely by his own.
Enob. I, are you thereabouts? Why then goodnight indeed.
Cam. Toward Peloponnesus are they fled.
Scar. 'Tis easie to't,
And there I will attend what further comes.
Camid. To Cæsar will I render
My Legions and my horse, six Kings already
Shew me the way of yielding.
Enob. I'le yet follow
The wounded chance of Anthony, though my reason
Sits in the wind against me.
Enter Anthony with attendants
Ant. Hark, the Land bids me tread no more upon't,
It is asham'd to bear me. Friends, come hither,
I am so lated in the world, that I
Have lost my way for ever. I have a ship,
Laden with Gold, take that, divide it: flye,
And make your peace with Cæsar.
Omnes. Fly? Not we.
Ant. I have fled my self, and have instructed cowards
To run, and shew their shoulders. Friends, be gone,
I have my self, resolv'd upon a course,
Which has no need of you. Be gone,
My Treasure's in the Harbour. Take it: Oh,
I follow'd that I blush to look upon,
My very hairs do mutiny: for the white
Reprove the brown for rashness, and they them
For fear, and doating. Friends be gone, you shall Have Letters from me to some Friends, that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you look not sad:
Nor make replyes of loathness, take the hint
Which my despair proclaims. Let them be left
Which leaves it self, to Sea-side straightway;
I will possess you of that ship and Treasure.

Leave

Leave me, I pray, a little: pray you now,
Nay do so: for indeed I have lost command,
Therefore I pray you, I'le see you by and by. Sits down.
Enter Cleopatra, led by Charmian and Eros.
Eros. Nay, gentle Madam, to him, comfort him.
Iras. Do, most dear Queen.
Char. Do, why, what else?
Cleo. Let me sit down: Oh Juno.
Ant. No, no, no, no, no.
Eros. See you here, Sir?
Ant. Oh fie, fie, fie.
Char. Madam.
Iras. Madam, oh good Empress.
Eros. Sir, sir.
Ant. Yes, my Lord, yès; he at Philippi kept
His sword e'en like a dancer, while I strook
The lean and wrinckled Cassius, and 'twas I
That the mad Brutus ended: he alone
Dealt on Lievtenantry, and no practise had
In the brave squares of War: yet now: no matter.
Cleo. Ah stand by.
Eros. The Queen, my Lord, the Queen.
Iras. Go to him, Madam, speak to him,
He is unqualited with very shame.
Cleo. Well then, sustain me: Oh.
Eros. Most Noble Sir, arise, the Queen approaches,
Her head's declin'd, and death will seize her, but
Your comfort makes the rescue.
Ant. I have offended Reputation;
A most unnoble swerving.
Eros. Sir, the Queen.
Ant. O whither hast thou led me Ægypt, see
How I convey my shame, out of thine eyes,
By looking back what I have left behind
Stroy'd in dishonour.
Cleo. Oh, my Lord, my Lord;
Forgive my fearfull sails, I little thought
You would have followed,
Ant. Ægypt, thou knew'st too well;
My heart was to thy Rudder tyed by th'strings,
And thou should'st stowe me after. O're my spirit
The full supremacie thou knew'st, and that
Thy beck, might from the bidding of the gods
Command me.
Cleo. Oh, my pardon.
Ant. Now I must
To the young man send humble Treaties, dodge
And palter in the shifts of lowness, who,
With half the bulk o'th'world play'd as I pleas'd,
Making, and marring Fortunes. You did know
How much you were my Conqueror, and that
My sword, made weak by my affection, would
Obey it on all cause.
Cleo. Pardon, pardon.
Ant. Fall not a tear I say, one of them rates
All that is won and lost: Give me a kiss,
Even this repayes.
We sent our Schoolmaster, is a come back?
Love I am full of Lead: some Wine
Within there, and our Viands: Fortune knowes,
We scorn her most, when most she offers blows. Exeunt.

Enter Cæsar, Agrippa, Dolabella, with others.
Cæs. Let him appear that's come for Anthony.
Know you him?
Dolla. Cæsar, 't is his Schoolmaster,
An argument that he is pluckt, when hither
He sends so poor a Pinnion of his Wing,
Which had superfluous Kings for Messengers,
Not many Moons gone by.
Enter Ambassador from Anthony.
Cæsar. Approach, and speak.
Amb. Such as I am, I come from Anthony:
I was of late as petty to his ends,
As is the Morn-dew on the Myrtle leaf
To his grand Sea.
Cæs. Be't so, declare thine office.
Amb. Lord of his Fortunes he salutes thee, and Requires to live in Ægypt, which not granted
He Lessens his requests, and to thee sues
To let him breathe between the Heavens and Earth
A private man in Athens: this for him.
Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness:
Submits her to thy might, and of thee craves
The Circle of the Ptolomies for her heirs,
Now hazarded to thy Grace.
Cæs. For Anthony,
I have no eares to his request. The Queen,
Of Audience, nor desire shall fail, so she
From Ægypt drive her all-disgraced Friend.
Or take his life there. This if she perform,
She shall not sue unheard. So to them both.
Amb. Fortune pursue thee.
Cæs. Bring him through the Bands:
To try thy Eloquence, now 'tis time, dispatch,
From Anthony win Cleopatra, promise
And in our Name, when she requires, adde more
From thine invention, offers. Women are not
In their best Fortunes strong; but want will perjure
The ne're touch'd Vestal. Try thy cunning, Thidias,
Make thine own Edict for thy pains, which we
Will answer as a Law.
Thid. Cæsar, I go.
Cæs. Observe how Anthony becomes his flaw,
And what thou thinkest his very Action speaks
In every power that moves.
Thid. Cæsar, I shall. Exeunt.
Enter Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian, and Iras.
Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus?
Eno. Think, and dye.
Cleo. Is Anthony, or we in fault for this?
Eno. Anthony onely, that would make his will
Lord of his Reason. What though you fled,
From that great face of War, whose several ranges
Frighted each other? Why should he follow?
The itch of his Affection should not then
Have nickt his Captain-ship, at such a point,
When half to half the world oppos'd, he being
The meered question? 'Tis a shame no less
Then was his loss, to course your flying Flaggs,
And leave his Navy gazing.
Cleo. Prythee peace.
Enter the Ambassador, with Anthony.
Ant. Is this his answer?
Amb. I, my Lord.
Ant. The Queen shall then have courtesie,
So she will yield us up.
Amb. He says so.
Antho. Let her know't. To the Boy Cæsar send this grizled head, and he will fill thy wishes to the brimme,
With Principalities.
Cleo. That head, my Lord?

Ant.

Ant. To him again, tell him he weares the Roſe
Of youth upon him: from which, the world ſhould note
Something particular: His Coyn, Ships, Legions,
May be a Cowards, whoſe Miniſters would prevaile
Under the ſervice of a Child, as ſoon
As th' Command of Cæſar. I dare him therefore
To lay his gay compariſons apart
And anſwer me declin'd, ſword againſt ſword,
Our ſelves alone; I'le write it, Follow me.
Eno. Yes, like enough: hye-battell'd Cæſar will
Unſtate his happineſſe, and be Stag'd to th' ſhew
Againſt a Sworder. I ſee mens judgements are
A parcell of their Fortunes, and things outward
Doe draw the inward quality after them
To ſuffer all alike, that he ſhould dreame,
Knowing all meaſures, the full Cæſar will
Anſwer his emptineſſe; Cæſar thou haſt ſubdu'd
His judgement too.

Enter a Servant.

Ser. A Meſſenger from Cæſar.
Cleo. What, no more Ceremony? See my women,
Againſt the blown Roſe may they ſtop their Noſe,
That kneel'd unto the Buds. Admit him, ſir.
Enob. Mine honeſty, and I, begin to ſquare,
The Loyalty well held to Fooles, does make
Our Faith meer Folly: yet he that can endure
To follow with Allegiance a fain Lord,
Do's conquer him that did his Maſter conquer,
And earns a place ith' Story.

Enter Thidias.

Cleo. Cæſar's will.
Thid. Here it apart.
Cleo. None but friends: ſay boldly.
Thid. So haply are they friends to Anthony.
Enob. He needs as many (ſir) as Cæſar has.
Or needs not us. If Cæſar pleaſe, our Maſter
Will leap to be his friend: For as you know,
Whoſe he is, we are, and that is Cæſars.
Thid. So. Thus then thou moſt renown'd, Cæſar intreats
Not to conſider in what caſe thou ſtand'ſt
Further than he is Cæſar.
Cleo. Go on, right Royall.
Thid. He knowes that you embrace not Anthony
As you did love, but as you feared him.
Cleo. Oh.
Thid. The ſcarres upon your honour, therefore he
Do's pitty, as conſtrained blemiſhes,
Not as deſerved.
Cleo. He is a god,
And knows what is moſt right. Mine honour
Was not yielded, but conquer'd meerly.
Enob. To be ſure of that, I will ask Anthony.
Sir, ſir, thou art ſo leaky
That we muſt leave thee thy ſinking, for Thy deareſt quit thee. Exit Enob.
Thid. Shall I ſay to Cæſar,
What you require of him: for he partly begs
To be deſir'd to give. It much would pleaſe him,
That of his fortunes you ſhould make a ſtaffe
To lean upon. But it would warm his ſpirits
To hear from me you had left Anthony,
And put your ſelf under his ſhrowd, the univerſall
Cleo. What's your name? Landlord.
Thid. My name is Thidias.
Cleo. Moſt kind Meſſenger,
Say to great Cæſar this in diſputation,
I kiſſe his conqu'ring hand: Tell him, I am prompt
To lay my Crown at's feet, and there to kneele.
Tell him from his all-obeying breath, I hear
The doom of Ægypt.
Thid. 'Tis your nobleſt courſe:
Wiſedome and Fortune combating together,
If that the former dare but what it can,
No chance may ſhake it. Give me grace to lay
My duty on your hand.
Cleo. Your Cæſars Father oft,
(When he hath mus'd of taking Kingdomes in)
Beſtow'd his lips on that unworthy place,
As it rain'd kiſſes.

Enter Anthony, and Enobarbus.

Ant. Favours? By Jove that thunders. What art thou, Fellow?
Thid. One that but performs
The bidding of the fulleſt man, and worthieſt
To have command obey'd.
Enob. You will be whipt.
Ant. Approach there: ah you Kite. Now gods and devils,
Authority melts from me of late. When I cri'd hoa,
Like Boyes unto a muſſe, Kings would ſtart forth,
And cry your will. Have you no eares?
I am Anthony yet. Take hence this Jack and whip him.

Enter a Servant.

Enob. 'Tis better playing with a Lyons whelp,
Than with an old one dying.
Ant. Moon and Starres,
Whip him: were twenty of the greateſt Tributaries
That doe acknowledge Cæſar, ſhould I find them
So ſawcy with the hand of ſhe here, what's her name
Since ſhe was Cleopatra? Whip him, Fellowes,
Till like a Boy you ſee him crindge his face,
And whine aloud for mercy. Take him hence.
Thid. Marke Anthony.
Ant. Tug him away: being whipt,
Bring him again, the Jack of Cæſars ſhall
Bear us an arrant to him. Exeunt with Thidias.
You were half blaſted ere I knew you: Ha?
Have I my pillow left unpreſt in Rome,
Forborn the getting of a lawfull Race,
And by a Jemme of Women, to be abus'd
By one that looks on Feeders?
Cleo. Good my Lord.
An. You have been a boggeler ever,
But when we in our vicioufneſſe grew hard
(Oh miſery on't) the wiſe gods ſeale our eyes
In our own filth, drop our clear judgements, make us
Adore our errours, laugh at's while we ſtrut
To our confuſion.
Cleo. Oh, is't come to this?
Ant. I found you as a Morſell, cold upon
Dead Cæſar's Trencher: Nay, you were a Fragment
Of Cneius Pompeyes, beſides what hotter houres
Unregiſtred in vulgar Fame, you have
Luxuriouſly pickt out. For I am ſure,
Though you can gueſſe what Temperance ſhould be,
You know not what it is.
Cleo. Wherefore is this?
Ant. To let a Fellow that will take rewards,
And ſay, God quit you, be familiar with
My play-fellow, your hand; this Kingly Seale,
And plighter of high hearts. O that I were
Upon the Hill of Baſan, to out-roare
The horned Heard, for I have Savage cauſe,
And to proclaime it civilly, were like

A halter'd neck, which do's the Hangman thank,
For being yare about him. Is he whipt?

Enter a Servant with Thidias.

Ser. Soundly, my Lord.

Ant. Cryed he? and begg'd a pardon?

Ser. He did aske favour.

Ant. If that thy Father live, let him repent
Thou was't not made his Daugnter, and be thou sorry
To follow Cæsar in his triumph, since
Thou hast been whipt. For following him, henceforth
The white hand of a Lady Fever thee,
Shake to look on't. Get thee back to Cæsar,
Tell him thy entertainment: look thou say
He makes me angry with him. For he seems
Proud and disdainfull, harping on what I am,
Not what he knew I was. He makes me angry,
And at this time most easie 'tis to do't:
When my good starres, that were my former guides
Have empty left their Orbes, and shut their Fires
Into the Abisme of Hell. If he mislike,
My speech, and what is done, tell him he has
Hiparchus, my enfranched Bondman, whom
He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
As he shall like to quit me. Urge it thou:
Hence with thy stripes, be gone. Exit Thid.

Cleo. Have you done yet?

Ant. Alack, our Terene Moon is now Eclipst,
And it portends alone the fall of Anthony.

Cleo. I must stay his time.

Ant. To flatter Cæsar, would you mingle eyes
With one that ties his points.

Cleo. Not know me yet?

Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?

Cleo. Ah (Dear) if I be so,
From my cold heart, let heaven ingender Haile,
And poyson it in the source, and the first stone
Drop in my neck: as it determines so
Dissolve my life, the next Cæsarian smile,
Till by degrees the memory of my wombe,
Together with my brave Ægyptians all,
By the discandering of this pelletted storme,
Lye graveless, till the Flies and Gnats of Nyle
Have buried them for prey.

Ant. I am satisfied:
Cæsar sets down in Alexandria, where
I will oppose his Fate. Our force by Land,
Hath nobly held, and sever'd Navy too
Have knit again, and Fleet, threatning most Sea-like.
Where hast thou been my heart? Dost thou hear, Lady?
If from the Field I shall return once more
To kisse these lips, I will appear in blood,
I, and my Sword, will earn my Chronicle,
There's hope in't yet.

Cleo. That's my brave Lord.

Ant. I will be treble-sinewed, hearted, breath'd,
And fight maliciously: for when mine houres
Were nice and lucky, men did ransome lives
Of me for jests: but now, I'le set my teeth,
And send to darknesse all that stop me. Come,
Lets have one other gawdy night: Call to me
All my sad Captains, fill our Bowles once more:
Let's mock the midnight Bell.

Cleo. It is my Birth-day,
I had thought t'have held it poor. But since my Lord
Is Anthony again, I will be Cleopatra.

Ant. We will yet doe well.

Cleo. Call all his noble Captains to my Lord,

Ant. Doe so, we'll speak to them,
And to night I'le force
The Wine peep through their scarres.
Come on (my Queen)
There's sap in't yet. The next time I doe fight
I'le make death love me: for I will contend
Even with his pestilent Sythe. Exeunt.

Enob. Now he'll out-stare the Lightning, to be furious
Is to be frighted out of fear, and in that mood
The Dove will peck the Estridge; and I see still
A diminution in our Captains brain,
Restores his heart; when valour prayes in reason,
It eats the Sword it fights with: I will seek
Some way to leave him. Exeunt.

Enter Cæsar, Agrippa, and Mecenas with his Army, Cæsar reading a Letter.

Cæs. He calls me Boy, and chides as he had power
To beat me out of Ægypt. My Messenger
He hath whipt with Rods, dares me to personall Combat.
Cæsar to Anthony: let the old Ruffian know,
I have many other wayes to dye: mean time
Laugh at this Challenge.

Mece. Cæsar must think,
When one so great begins to rage, he's hunted
Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now
Make boot of his distraction: Never anger
Made good guard for it self.

Cæs. Let our best heads know,
That to morrow, the last of many Battels
We mean to fight. Within our Files there are,
Of those that serv'd Marke Anthony but late,
Enough to fetch him in. See it done,
And feast the Army, we have store to do't,
And they have earn'd the waste. Poor Anthony. Exeunt.

Enter Anthony and Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian, Iras, Alexas, with others.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Domitian.

Enob. No?

Ant. Why should he not?

Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of better fortune,
He is twenty men to one.

Ant. To morrow, Souldier,
By Sea and Land I'le fight: or I will live,
Or bathe my dying honour in the blood,
Shall make it live again. Woo't thou fight well.

Enob. I'le strike, and cry, take all.

Ant. Well said, come on:
Call forth my household servants, let's to night

Enter three or four Servitours.

Be bountious at our Meale. Give me thy hand,
Thou hast been rightly honest, so hast thou,
Thou, and thou, and thou: you have serv'd me well,
And Kings have been your fellowes.

Cleo. What meanes this?

En. 'Tis one of those odde tricks which sorrow shoots
Out of the mind.

Ant. And thou art honest too:
I wish I could be made so many men,
And all of you clapt up together, in
An Anthony: that I might doe you service,
So good as you have done.

Omnes.

Omnes. The Gods forbid.
Ant. Well, my good Fellowes, wait on me to night:
Scant not my Cups, and make as much of me
As when mine Empire was your Fellow too,
And suffered my command.
Cleo. What does he mean?
Eno. To make his followers weep.
Ant. Tend me to night;
May be it is the period of your duty,
Haply you shall not see me more, or if,
A mangled shadow. Perchance to morrow,
You'll serve another Master. I look on you,
As one that takes his leave. Mine honest Friends,
I turn you not away, but like a Master
Married to your good service, stay till death:
Tend me to night two houres, I ask no more,
And the gods yield you for't.
Enob. What mean you (sir)
To give them this discomfort? Look, you weep,
And I, an Asse, am Onion-ey'd; for shame,
Transforme us not to women.
Ant. Ho, ho, ho:
Now the Witch take me, if I meant it thus.
Grace grow where those drops fall (my hearty Friends)
You take me a too dolorous a sence;
For I spake to you for your comfort, did desire you
To burn this night with Torches: know (my hearts)
I hope well of to morrow, and will lead you,
Where rather I'le expect victorious Life,
Then Death, and Honour. Let's to Supper, come,
And drown consideration. Exeunt.

Enter a company of Souldiers.

1. Sol. Brother, good night: to morrow is the day.
2. Sol. It will determine one way: Fare you well.
Heard you of nothing strange about the streets.
1. Nothing: what newes?
2. Belike 'tis but a Rumour, good night to you.
1. Well sir, good night.
They meet with other Souldiers.
2. Souldiers, have carefull Watch.
1. And you: Good night, good night.
They place themselves in every corner of the Stage.
2. Here we, and if to morrow
Our Navy thrive, I have an absolute hope
Our Landmen will stand up.
1. 'Tis a brave Army, and full of purpose.
Musick of the Hoboyes is under the Stage.
2. Peace, what noyse?
1. List, list.
2. Harke.
1. Musick ith' Aire.
3. Under the earth.
It singes well, do's it not?
3. No.
1. Peace I say: what should this mean?
2. 'Tis the god Hercules, whom Anthony loved,
Now leaves him.
1. Walke, let's see if other Watchmen
Doe hear what we doe?
2. How now, Masters? Speak together.
Omnes. How now? how now? doe you hear this?
1. Is't not strange?
3. Doe you hear, Masters? Doe you hear?
1. Follow the noyse so farre as we have quarter.
Let's see how it will give off.
Omnes. Content: 'Tis strange. Exeunt.

Enter Anthony, and Cleopatra, with others.

Ant. Eros, mine Armour, Eros.
Cleo. Sleep a little.
Ant. No, my Chuck: Eros, come, mine Armour, Eros.
Enter Eros.
Come, good fellow, put thine Iron on,
If Fortune be not ours to day, it is Because we brave her. Come.
Cleo. Nay, I'le help too, Anthony.
What's this for? Ah, let be, let be, thou art
The Armourer of my heart: False, false: This, this,
Sooth-law I'le help: Thus it must be.
Ant. Well, well, we shall thrive now.
Seest thou my good Fellow. Go put on thy defences.
Eros. Briefly, sir.
Cleo. Is not this buckled well?
Ant. Rarely, rarely:
He that unbuckles this, till we doe please
To doft for our repose, shall hear a storme.
Thou fumblest Eros, and my Queen's a Squire
More tight at this: Dispatch. O Love,
That thou could'st see my warres to day, and knew'st
The Royall Occupation, thou should'st see
A workman in't.
Enter an armed Souldier.
Good morrow to thee, welcome,
Thou look'st like him that knowes a warlike charge:
To businesse that we love, we rise betime,
And go to't with delight.
Soul. A thousand, Sir, early though't be, have on their Rivetted trim, and at the Port expect you. Shout.
Trumpets flourish.
Enter Captains and Souldiers.
Alex. The Morn is fair: Good morrow Generall.
All. Good morrow Generall.
Ant. 'Tis well blown, Lad.
This morning like the spirit of a youth
That means to be of note, begins betimes.
So, so: Come give me that, what ere becomes of me,
Fare thee well, Dame, what ere becomes of me,
This is a Souldiers kisse: rebukeable,
And worthy shamefull check it were, to stand
On more Mechannick Complement, I'le leave thee.
Now like a man of Steele, you that will fight,
Follow me close, I'le bring you to't: Adieu. Exeunt.
Char. Please you retire to your Chamber?
Cleo. Lead me:
He goes forth gallantly: that he and Cæsar might
Determine this great Warre in single fight;
Then Anthony; but now. Well on. Exeunt.

Trumpets sound. Enter Anthony, and Eros.

Eros. The gods make this a happy day to Anthony.
Ant. Would thou, and those thy scarres had once pre-(vail'd,
To make me fight at Land.
Eros. Hadst thou done so,
The Kings that have revolted, and the Souldier
That has this morning left thee, would have still Followed thy heeles.
Ant. Who's gone this morning?
Eros. Who? one ever near thee, call for Enobarbus.

He ſhall not hear thee, or from Cæſar's Camp,
Say I am none of thine.
Ant. What ſayeſt thou?
Sold. Sir, he is with Cæſar.
Eros. Sir, his Cheſts and Treaſure he has not with him.
Ant. Is he gone?
Sol. Moſt certain.
Ant. Go, Eros, ſend his Treaſure after, doe it,
Detain no jot I charge thee: write to him,
(I will ſubſcribe) gentle adieus, and greetings:
Say, that I wiſh he never find more cauſe
To change a Maſter. Oh my fortunes have Corrupted honeſt men. Diſpatch, Eros. Exit.

Enter Agrippa, Cæſar, with Enobarbus, and Dolabella.

Cæſ. Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight:
Our will is Anthony be took alive:
Make it ſo known.
Agrip. Cæſar, I ſhall.
Cæſ. The time of univerſall peace is near,
Prove this a proſp'rous day, the three-nook'd world
Shall bear the Olive freely.
Enter a Meſſenger.
Meſ. Anthony is come into the field.
Cæſ. Go charge Agrippa,
Plant thoſe that have revolted in the Van,
That Anthony may ſeem to ſpend his Fury
Upon himſelf. Exeunt.
Enob. Alexas did revolt, and went to Jewry on Affaires of Anthony; there did diſſwade
Great Herod to incline himſelf to Cæſar,
And leave his Maſter Anthony. For this pains
Cæſar hath hang'd him: Camidius and the reſt
That fell away, have entertainment, but
No honourable truſt: I have done ill,
Of which I doe accuſe my ſelf ſoſorely,
That I will joy no more.
Enter a Soldier of Cæſars.
Sol. Enobarbus, Anthony
Hath after thee ſent all thy Treaſure, with
His bounty over-plus. The Meſſenger
Came on my guard, and at thy Tent is now
Unloading of his Mules.
Eno. I give it you.
Sol. Mock not, Enobarbus,
I tell you true: Beſt you ſaf't the bringer
Out of the hoaſt, I muſt attend mine Office,
Or would have done't my ſelf. Your Emperor
Continues ſtill a Jove. Exit.
Enob. I am alone the Villain of the Earth,
And feele I am ſo moſt. Oh Anthony,
Thou Mine of bounty, how wouldſt thou have payed
My better ſervice, when my turpitude
Thou doſt ſo Crown with Gold. This blowes my heart
If ſwift thought break it not: a ſwifted mean
Shall out-ſtrike thought, but thought will do't. I feele
I fight againſt thee: No, I will go ſeek
Some Ditch, where to dye: the foul'ſt beſt fits
My latter part of life. Exit.
Alarum. Drummes and Trumpets.
Enter Agrippa.
Agrip. Retire, we have engag'd our ſelves too farre:
Cæſar himſelf has work, and our oppreſſion
Exceeds what we expected. Exit.

Alarums.
Enter Anthony, and Scarus wounded.
Scar. O my brave Emperour, this is fought indeed,
Had we done ſo at firſt, we had droven them home
With Clouts about their head. Farre off.
Ant. Thou bleed'ſt apace.
Scar. I had a wound here that was like a T,
But now 'tis made an H.
Ant. They doe retire.
Scar. We'il beat'em into Bench-holes, I have yet
Room for ſix ſcotches more.
Enter Eros.
Eros. They are beaten, Sir, and our advantage ſerves
For a fair victory.
Scar. Let us ſcore their backs,
And ſnatch'em up, as we take Hares behind,
'Tis a ſport to maule a Runner.
Ant. I will reward thee
Once for thy ſprightly comfort, and ten-fold
For thy good valour. Come thee on.
Scar. I'le halt after. Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter Anthony again in a March, Scarus, with others.

Ant. We have beat him to his Camp: Run one
Before, and let the Queen know of our gueſts: to morrow
Before the Sun ſhall ſee's, we'll ſpill the blood
That has to day eſcap'd. I thank you all,
For doughty handed are you, and have fought
Not as you ſerv'd the Cauſe, but as't had been
Each mans like mine: you have ſhewn all Hectors,
Enter the Citty, clip your Wives, your Friends,
Tell them your feats, whil'ſt they with joyfull teares
Waſh the congealement from your wounds, and kiſſe
The honour'd-gaſhes whole.
Enter Cleopatra.
Give me thy hand,
To this great Faiery, I'le commend thy acts,
Make her thanks bleſſe thee. O thou day oth' world,
Chain mine arm'd neck, leap thou, Attire and all
Through proof of Harneſſe to my part, and there
Ride on the paints triumphing.
Cleo. Lord of Lords,
Oh infinite Virtue, com'ſt thou ſmiling from
The worlds great ſnare uncaught.
Ant. My Nightingale,
We have beat them to their Beds.
What, Girl, though gray
Do ſomething mingle with our younger brown, yet ha we
A brain that nouriſhes our Nerves, and can
Get gole for gole of youth. Behold this man,
Commend unto his lips thy ſavouring hand,
Kiſſe it my Warriour: He hath fought to day,
As if a god in hate of Mankind, had
Deſtroyed in ſuch a ſhape.
Cleo. I'le give thee, Friend,
An Armour all of Gold: it was a Kings.
Ant. He has deſerv'd it, were it Carbunkled
Like holy Phœbus Carre. Give me thy hand,
Through Alexandria make a jolly March,
Bear our hackt Targets, like the men that owe them.
Had our great Palace the capacity
To Camp this hoaſt, we all would ſup together,
And drink Carowſes to the next dayes Fate

Which

Which promises Royall perill. Trumpeters
With brazen dinne blast you the Cities eare.
Make mingle with our ratling Tabourines,
That heaven and earth may strike their sounds together,
Applauding our reproach. Exeunt.

Enter a Century, and his Company, Enobarbus followes.

Cent. If we be not reliev'd within this houre,
We must return to th' Court of Guard: the night
Is shiny, and they say, we shall embattle
By th' second houre ith' Morn.
1. Watch. This last day was a shrewde one to's.
Enob. Oh bear me witnesse night.
2. What man is this?
1. Stand close, and list him.
Enob. Be witnesse to me (O thou blessed Moon)
When men revolted shall upon Record
Bear hatefull memory: poor Enobarbus did
Before thy face repent.
Cent. Enobarbus?
3. Peace: harke further.
Enob. Oh Soveraign Mistris of true Melancholly,
The poysonous damp of night dispunge upon me,
That life, a very Rebel to my will,
May hang no longer on me. Throw my heart
Against the flint and hardnesse of my fault,
Which being dried with grief, will break to powder,
And finish all foule thoughts: Oh Anthony,
Nobler then my revolt is infamous,
Forgive me in thine own particular,
But let the world rank me in Register
A Master leaver, and a fugitive:
Oh Anthony! Oh Anthony!
1. Let's speak to him.
Cent. Let's hear him, for the things he speaks
May concern Cæsar.
2. Let's doe so, but he sleeps.
Cent. Swoonds rather, for so bad a Prayer as his
Was never yet for sleep.
1. Go we to him.
2. Awake, sir, awake, speak to us.
1. Hear you, sir?
Cent. The hand of death hath raught him.
Drummes afarre off.
Harke how the Drummes demurely wake the sleepers:
Let us bear him to th' Court of Guard: he is of note:
Our hour is fully out.
2. Come on then, he may recover yet. Exeunt.

Enter Anthony, and Scarus, with their Army.

Ant. Their preparation is to day by Sea,
We please them not by Land.
Scar. For both, my Lord.
Ant. I would they'ld fight ith' Fire, or ith' Aire,
We'ld fight there too. But this it is, our Foot
Upon the hills adjoyning to the City
Shall stay with us. Order for Sea is given,
They have put forth the haven:
Where their appointment we may best discover,
And look on their endeavour. Exeunt.

Enter Cæsar, and his Army.

Cæs. But being charg'd, we will be still by Land,
Which as I tak't we shall, for his best force
Is forth to Man his Gallies. To the Vales,
And hold our best advantage. Exeunt.

Alarum afarre off, as at a Sea-fight.

Enter Anthony, and Scarus.

Ant. Yet they are not joyn'd:
Where yond Pine does stand, I shall discover all,
I'le bring the word straight, how 'tis like to go. Exit
Scar. Swallowes have built
In Cleopatraes Sailes their nests. The Auguries
Say, they know not, they cannot tell, look grimly,
And dare not speak their knowledge. Anthony
Is valiant, and dejected, and by starts
His fretted Fortunes give him hope and fear
Of what he has, and has not.

Enter Anthony.

Ant. All is lost:
This foule Ægyptian hath betrayed me:
My Fleet hath yielded to the Foe, and yonder,
They cast their Caps up, and Carowse together
Like friends long lost. Tripple-turn'd Whore, 'tis thou
Hast sold me to this Novice, and my heart
Makes onely Warres on thee. Bid them all flye:
For when I am reveng'd upon my Charme,
I have done all. Bid them all flye, be gone.
Oh Sun, thy uprise shall I see no more:
Fortune and Anthony part here, even here
Doe we shake hands? All come to this? The hearts
That pannelled me at heeles, to whom I gave
Their wishes, doe dis-Candy, melt their sweets
On blossoming Cæsar: and this Pine is barkt,
That over-top't them all. Betray'd I am.
Oh this false soule of Ægypt! this grave Charme,
Whose eye beck'd forth my Wars, and call'd them home:
Whose Bosome was my Crownet, my chief end,
Like a right Gypsie, hath at fast and loose
Beguil'd me, to the very heart of losse.
What Eros, Eros?

Enter Cleopatra.

Ah, thou Spell! Avant.
Cleo. Why is my Lord enrag'd against his Love?
Ant. Vanish, or I shall give thee thy deserving,
And blemish Cæsars Triumph. Let him take thee,
And hoist thee up to th' shouting Plebeians,
Follow his Chariot, like the greatest spot
Of all thy Sex. Most Monster-like be shewn
For poor'st Diminutives, for Dolts, and let
Patient Octavia plough thy visage up
With her prepared nailes. Exit Cleopatra.
'Tis well th'art gone,
If it be well to live. But better 'twere
Thou fell'st into my fury, for one death
Might have prevented many. Eros, hoa?
The shirt of Nessus is upon me, teach me
Alcides, thou mine Ancestor, thy rage.
Let me lodge Licas on the horns oth' Moon,
And with those hands that grasp't the heaviest Club,
Subdue my worthiest self: the Witch shall dye:
To the young Roman Boy she hath sold me, and I fall
Under his plot: she dyes for't. Eros, hoa? Exit.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, Mardian.

Cleo. Help me, my Woman: Oh he is more mad
Then Telamon for his Shield, the Boar of Thessaly
Was never so imboss't.
Char. To th' Monument, there lock your self,
And send him word you are dead:

The ſoule and body rive not more in parting,
Then greatneſſe going off.
Cleo. To th' Monument:
Mardian, go tell him I have ſlain my ſelf:
Say, that the laſt I ſpoke was Anthony,
And word it (prethee) pittiouſly. Hence, Mardian,
And bring me how he takes my death to th' Monument.
Exeunt.

Enter Anthony, and Eros.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'ſt me?
Eros. I, Noble Lord.
Ant. Sometime we ſee a cloud that's Dragoniſh,
A vapour ſometime, like a Bear, or Lyon,
A toward Cittadell, a pendant Rock,
A forked Mountain, or blew Promontory
With Trees upon't, that nodde unto the world,
And mock our eyes with Aire.
Thou haſt ſeen theſe ſignes,
They are black Veſper's Pageants.
Eros. I, my Lord.
Ant. That which is now a Horſe, even with a thought
The Rack diſſimes, and makes it indiſtinct
As water is in water.
Eros. It do's, my Lord.
Ant. My good Knave, Eros, now thy Captain is Even ſuch a body: here I am Anthony,
Yet cannot hold this viſible ſhape (my Knave)
I made theſe warres for Ægypt, and the Queen,
Whoſe heart I thought I had, for ſhe had mine:
Which whil'ſt it was mine, had annext unto't
A Million moe (now loſt) ſhe, Eros, has
Packt Cards with Cæſars, and falſe plaid my Glory
Unto an Enemy's triumph.
Nay, weep not, gentle Eros, there is left us
Our ſelves to end our ſelves.

Enter Mardian.

Oh thy vilde Lady, ſhe has robb'd me of my Sword.
Mar. No, Anthony,
My Miſtris lov'd thee, and her Fortunes mingled
With thine intirely.
Ant. Hence, ſawcy Eunuch, peace, ſhe hath betraid me,
And ſhall dye the death.
Mar. Death of one perſon can be paid but once,
And that ſhe has diſcharg'd. What thou would'ſt doe
Is done unto thy hand: the laſt ſhe ſpake
Was Anthony, moſt Noble Anthony:
Then in the midſt a tearing groan did break
The name of Anthony: it was divided
Between her heart and lips: ſhe tendred life
Thy name ſo buried in her.
Ant. Dead then?
Mar. Dead.
Ant. Unarme, Eros, the long dayes taske is done,
And we muſt ſleep: that thou depart'ſt hence ſafe
Does pay thy labour richly: go. Exit Mardian.
Oh, pluck off,
The ſeven-fold ſhield of Ajax cannot keep
The battery from my heart. Oh cleave my ſides.
Heart, once be ſtronger then thy Continent,
Crack thy fraile Caſe. Apace, Eros, apace:
No more a Souldier: bruiſed pieces go,
You have bin Nobly born. From me awhile. Exit Eros
I will o're-take thee, Cleopatra, and
Weep for my pardon. So it muſt be, for now
All length is Torture: ſince the Torch is out,
Lye down and ſtray no farther. Now all labour
Marres what it does: yea, very force entangles
It ſelf with ſtrength: Seale then and all is done.
Eros? I come, my Queen. Eros? Say for me,
Where Soules doe couch on Flowers, we'll hand in hand,
And with our ſprightly Port make the Ghoſtes gaze:
Dido, and her Æneas ſhall want Troops,
And all the haunt be ours. Come Eros, Eros.

Enter Eros.

Eros. What would my Lord?
Ant. Since Cleopatra died,
I have liv'd in ſuch diſhonour, that the gods
Deteſt my baſeneſſe. I, that with my Sword,
Quarter'd the World, and o're-green Neptunes back
With Ships, made Cities; condemn my ſelf, to lack
The Courage of a Woman, leſſe Noble minde
Then ſhe which by her death, our Cæſar tells
I am Conqueror of my ſelf. Thou art ſworn Eros,
That when the exigent ſhould come, which now
Is come indeed: when I ſhould ſee behind me
Th'inevitable proſecution of diſgrace and horrour,
That on my command, thou then would'ſt kill me.
Do't, the time is come: thou ſtrik'ſt not me,
'Tis Cæſar thou defeat'ſt. Put colour in my cheek.
Eros. The gods with-hold me,
Shall I doe that which all the Parthian Darts,
(Though Enemy) loſt ayme, and could not.
Ant. Eros,
Would'ſt thou be window'd in great Rome, and ſee
Thy Maſter thus with pleacht Armes, bending down
His corrigible neck, his face ſubdu'd
To penetrative ſhame; whil'ſt the wheel'd ſeat
Of fortunate Cæſar drawn before him, branded
His baſeneſſe that enſued.
Eros. I would not ſee't.
Ant. Come then: for with a wound I muſt be cur'd.
Draw that thy honeſt Sword which thou haſt worn
Moſt uſefull for thy Country.
Eros. Oh, ſir, pardon me.
Ant. When I did make thee free, ſwor'ſt thou not then
To doe this when I bad thee? Doe it at once,
Or thy precedent Services are all
But accidents unpurpos'd. Draw, and come.
Eros. Turn from me then that Noble countenance,
Wherein the worſhip of the whole world lies.
Ant. Loe thee.
Eros. My Sword is drawn.
Ant. Then let it doe at once
The thing why thou haſt drawn it.
Eros. My dear Maſter,
My Captain, and my Emperour. Let me ſay
Before I ſtrike this bloody ſtroke, farewell.
Ant. 'Tis ſaid man, and farewell.
Eros. Farewell great Chief. Shall I ſtrike now?
Ant. Now, Eros, Kills himſelf.
Eros. Why there then:
Thus I doe eſcape the ſorrow of Anthony's death.
Ant. Thrice-Nobler then my ſelf,
Thou teacheſt me: Oh valiant Eros, what
I ſhould, and could'ſt not, my Queen and Eros
Have by their brave inſtruction got upon me
A Nobleneſſe in Record. But I will be
A Bride-groom in my death, and run into't
As to a Lovers bed. Come then, and Eros,
Thy Maſter dies thy Schollar: to doe thus
I learnt of thee. How, not dead? not dead?
The Guard, how? oh diſpatch me.

Enter

Enter a Guard.

1. Guard. VVhat's the noyse?

Ant. I have done my work, ill friends:
Oh make an end of what I have begun.

2. The Starre is fain.

1. And time is at his Period.

All. Alass, and woe.

Ant. Let him that loves me, strike me dead.

1. Not I.

2. Nor I.

3. Nor any one. Exeunt.

Decre. Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers flye.
This Sword but shewn to Cæsar with this tidings,
Shall enter me with him.

Enter Diomedes.

Dio. VVhere's Anthony?

Decre. There, Diomed, there.

Diom. Lives he? wilt thou not answer man?

Ant. Art thou there, Diomed?
Draw thy sword, and give me
Sufficing strokes for death.

Dio. Most absolute Lord,
My Mistris Cleopatra sent me to thee.

Ant. VVhen did she send thee?

Diom. Now, my Lord.

Ant. VVhere is she? (feare

Diom. Lockt in her Monument: she had a Prophetying
Of what hath come to passe: for when she saw
(VVhich never shall be found) you did suspect
She had dispos'd with Cæsar, and that your rage
VVould not be purg'd, she sent you word she was dead:
But fearing since how it might work, hath sent
Me to proclaime the truth, and I am come
I dread, too late.

Ant. Too late, good Diomed: call my Guard I prethee.

Dio. VVhat hoa: the Emperours Guard.
The Guard, what hoa? Come, your Lord calls.

Enter four or five of the Guard of Anthony.

Ant. Bear me, good Friends, where Cleopatra bides,
'Tis the last service that I shall command you.

1. Woe, woe are we, sir, you may not live to wear
All your true Followers out.

All. Most heavy day.

Ant. Nay, good my fellowes, do not please sharp fate
To grace it with your sorrowes. Bid that welcome
Which comes to punish us, and we punish it
Seeming to bear it lightly. Take me up,
I have led you oft, carry me now, good friends,
And have my thanks for all. Exeunt bearing Anthony.

Enter Cleopatra, and her Maids aloft, with Charmian, and Iras.

Cleo. Oh Charmian, I will never go from hence.

Char. Be comforted, dear Madam.

Cleo. No, I will not:
All strange and terrible events are welcome,
But comforts we despise; our size of sorrow
Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great
As that which makes it.

Enter Diomed.

How now? is he dead?

Diom. His deaths upon him, but not dead.
Look out oth' other side your Monument,
His Guard have brought him hither.

Enter Anthony, and the Guard.

Cleo. O Sun,
Burn the great Sphere thou mov'st in, darkling stand
The varying shore oth' world. O Antony, Antony, Antony,
Help, Charmian, help, Iras, help: help, friends,
Below, let's draw him hither.

Ant. Peace,
Not Cæsars Valour hath o're-thrown Anthony,
But Anthony hath Triumpht on it self.

Cleo. So it should be,
That none but Anthony should conquer Anthony,
But woe 'tis so.

Ant. I am dying, Ægypt, dying: onely
I here importune death awhile, untill
Of many thousand kisses the poor last
I lay upon thy lips.

Cleo. I dare not, Dear,
Dear my Lord pardon: I dare not,
Least I be taken: not th'Imperious shew
Of the full-fortun'd Cæsar, ever shall
Be broach'd with me, if Knife, Drugs, Serpents have Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe:
Your Wife Octavia, with her modest eyes,
And still conclusion, shall acquire honour
Demuring upon me: but, come, come, Anthony,
Help me, my women, we must draw thee up:
Assist, good friends.

Ant. Oh quick, or I am gone,

Cleo. Here's sport indeed:
How heavy weighs my Lord?
Our strength is all gone into heavinesse,
That makes the weight. Had I great Juno's power,
The strong wing'd Mercury should fetch thee up,
And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little,
Wishers were ever Fooles. Oh come, come, come.

They heave Anthony aloft to Cleopatra.

And welcome, welcome. Dye when thou hast liv'd,
Quicken with kissing: had my lips that power,
Thus would I wear them out.

All. A heavy sight.

Ant. I am dying, Ægypt, dying.
Give me some Wine, and let me speak a little.

Cleo. No, let me speak, and let me raile so high,
That the false Huswife, Fortune, break her Wheele,
Provok'd by my offence.

Ant. One word (sweet Queen)
Of Cæsar seek your honour, with your safety. Oh.

Cleo. They doe not go together.

Ant. Gentle, hear me,
None about Cæsar trust, but Proculeius.

Cleo. My Resolution, and my hands, I'le trust,
None about Cæsar.

Ant. The miserable change now at my end,
Lament nor sorrow at: but please your thoughts
In feeding them with those my former Fortunes
Wherein I lived. The greatest Prince oth' world,
The Noblest: and doe not basely dye,
Not Cowardly put of my Helmet to
My Countryman. A Roman, by a Roman
Valiantly vanquish'd. Now my spirit is going,
I can no more.

Cleo. Noblest of men, woo't die?
Hast thou no care of me, shall I abide
In this dull world, which in thy absence is
No better then a Stye? Oh see, my women:
The Crown oth' earth doth melt. My Lord!
Oh wither'd is the Garland of the Warre,

The

Souldiers pole is fain: young Boyes and Girles
Are levell now with men: The oddes is gone,
And there is nothing left remarkable
Beneath the visiting Moon.
Char. Oh quietnesse, Lady.
Iras. She's dead too, our Soveraign.
Char. Lady.
Iras. Madam.
Char. Oh Madam, Madam, Madam.
Iras. Royall Ægypt: Empresse.
Char. Peace, peace, Iras.
Cleo. No more but in a Woman, and commanded
By such poor passion, as the Maid that Milks,
And does the meanest chares. It were for me
To throw my Scepter at the injurious gods,
To tell them that this World did equall theirs,
Till they had stoln our Jewel. All's but naught:
Patience is sottish, and impatience does
Become a Dog that's mad: then is it sin,
To rush into the secret house of death,
Ere death dart come to us? How doe you, Women?
What, what good cheer? Why how now, Charmian?
My Noble Girles? Ah women, women! Look,
Our Lamp is spent, it's out. Good Sirs, take heart,
We'll bury him: And then, what's brave, what Noble,
Let's do't after the high Roman fashion,
And make death proud to take us. Come, away,
This case of that huge Spirit now is cold.
Ah women, women! Come, we have no friend
But Resolution, and the briefest end.
Exeunt, bearing of Anthonies body.

Enter Cæsar, Agrippa, Dollabella, Menas, with his Counsel of Warre.

Cæsar. Go to him Dolabella, bid him yield,
Being so frustrate, tell him,
He mocks the pawses that he makes.
Dol. Cæsar, I shall.
Enter Decretas with the sword of Anthony.
Cæs. Wherefore is that? and what art thou that dar'st
Appear thus to us?
Dec. I am call'd Decretas,
Mark Anthony I serv'd, who best was worthy
Best to be serv'd: whil'st he stood up, and spoke
He was my Master, and I wore my life
To spend upon his haters. If thou please
To take me to thee, as I was to him,
I'le be to Cæsar: if thou pleasest not, I yield thee up my life.
Cæs. What is't thou say'st?
Dec. I say (Oh Cæsar) Anthony is dead.
Cæs. The breaking of so great a thing, should make
A greater crack. The round World
Should have shook Lyons into civil streets,
And Citizens to their dennes. The death of Anthony
Is not a single doome, in the name lay
A moity of the world.
Dec. He is dead, Cæsar,
Not by a publick minister of Justice,
Nor by a hired Knife, but that self-hand
Which writ his honour in the Acts it did,
Hath with the Courage which the heart did lend it,
Splitted the heart. This is his Sword,
I robb'd his wound of it: behold it stain'd
With his most Noble blood.
Cæs. Look you, sad friends,
The gods rebuke me, but it is a Tidings
To wash the eyes of Kings.
Dol. And strange it is,
That Nature must compell us to lament
Our most persisted deeds.
Men. His taints and honours may equall with him.
Dol. A Rarer spirit never
Did steere humanity: but you gods will give us
Some faults to make us men. Cæsar is touch'd.
Men. When such a spacious Mirror's set before him,
He needs must see himself.
Cæs. Oh Anthony,
I have followed thee to this, but we do launch
Diseases in our Bodies. I must perforce
Have shewn to thee such a declining day,
Or look on thine: we could not stall together,
In the whole world. But yet let me lament
With teares as Soveraign as the blood of hearts,
That thou my brother, my Competitor,
In top of all design; my Mate in Empire,
Friend and Companion in the front of Warre,
The Arme of mine own Body, and the heart
Where mine his thoughts did kindle; that our Starres
Unreconcilable, should divide our equalnesse to this.
Hear me, good friends,
But I will tell you at some meeter Season,
The businesse of this man looks out of him,
We'll hear him what he sayes.
Enter an Ægyptian.
Whence are you?
Ægyp. A poor Ægyptian yet, the Queen my Mistris
Confin'd in all, she has her Monument
Of thy intents, desires, instruction,
That she preparedly may frame her self
To th' way she's forc'd to.
Cæs. Bid her have good heart,
She soon shall know of us, by some of ours,
How honourable, and how kindly we
Determine for her. For Cæsar cannot leave to be ungentle.
Ægyp. So the gods preserve thee. Exit.
Cæs. Come hither Proculeius, go and say
We purpose her no shame: give her what comforts
The quality of her passion shall require;
Least in her greatnesse, by some mortall stroke
She doe defeat us. For her life in Rome
Would be eternall in our triumph: go,
And with your speediest bring us what she sayes,
And how you find of her.
Pro. Cæsar, I shall. Exit Proculeius.
Cæs. Gallus, go you along: where's Dolabella, to second Proculeius?
All. Dolabella.
Cæs. Let him alone: for I remember now
How he's employ'd: he shall in time be ready.
Go with me to my Tent, where you shall see
How hardly I was drawn into this Warre,
How calme and gentle I proceeded still
In all my Writings. Go with me, and see
What I can shew in this. Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Mardian.

Cleo. My desolation does begin to make
A better life: 'Tis paltry to be Cæsar:
Not being fortune, he's but fortunes knave,
A minister of her will: and it is great

To

To doe that thing that ends all other deeds,
Which ſhackles accidents, and bolts up change;
Which ſleeps, and never pallats more the dung,
The Beggar's Nurſe, and Cæſars.

Enter Proculeius.

Pro. Cæſar ſends greeting to the Queen of Ægypt,
And bids thee ſtudy on what fair demands
Thou mean'ſt to have him grant thee.

Cleo. What's thy name?

Pro. My name is Proculeius.

Cleo. Anthony
Did tell me of you, bad me truſt you, but
I doe not greatly care to be deceiv'd
That have no uſe for truſting. If your Maſter
Would have a Queen his Beggar, you muſt tell him,
That Majeſty, to keep decorum, muſt
No leſſe begge then a Kingdome: if he pleaſe
To give me conquer'd Ægypt for my Son,
He gives me ſo much of mine own, as I
Will kneele to him with thanks.

Pro. Be of good cheer:
Y'are faln into a Princely hand, fear nothing,
Make your full reference freely to my Lord,
Who is full of Grace, that it flowes over
On all that need. Let me report to him
Your ſweet dependency, and you ſhall find
A Conqueror that will pray in aid for kindneſſe,
Where he for Grace is kneel'd to.

Cleo. Pray you tell him,
I am his Fortunes Vaſſall, and I ſend him
The greatneſſe he has got. I hourely learn
A Doctrine of Obedience. And would gladly
Look him ith' Face.

Pro. This I'le report (dear Lady)
Have comfort, for I know your plight is pittied
Of him that caus'd it.

Char. You ſee how eaſily ſhe may be ſurpris'd:
Guard her till Cæſar come.

Iras. Royall Queen.

Char. Oh Cleopatra, thou art taken Queen.

Cleo. Quick, quick, good hands.

Pro. Hold, worthy Lady, hold:
Doe not your ſelf ſuch wrong, who are in this
Reliev'd, but not betraid.

Cleo. What of death too that rids our dogs of languiſh?

Pro. Cleopatra, doe not abuſe my Maſters bounty, by
Th'undoing of your ſelf: Let the world ſee
His Nobleneſſe well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.

Cleo. Where art thou, Death?
Come hither, come: Come, and take a Queen
VVorth many Babes and Beggars.

Pro. Oh temperance, Lady.

Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat, I'le not drink, ſir;
If idle talk will once be neceſſary
I'le not ſleep neither. This mortall houſe I'le ruine,
Doe Cæſar what he can. Know, ſir, that I
VVill not wait pinnion'd at your Maſters Court,
Not once to be chaſtis'd with the ſober eye
Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoiſt me up,
And ſhew me to the ſhouting Varlotry
Of cenſuring Rome? rather a ditch in Ægypt.
Be gentle, grave, unto me: rather on Nylus mudde
Lay me ſtark nak'd, and let the water-Flies
Blow me into abhorring; rather make
My Countreys high Pyramids my Gibbet,
And hang me up in Chains.

Pro. You doe extend
Theſe thoughts of horrour further then you ſhall
Finde cauſe in Cæſar.

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. Proculeius,
VVhat thou haſt done, thy Maſter Cæſar knowes,
And he hath ſent for thee: as for the Queen,
I'le take her to my Guard.

Pro. So Dolabella
It ſhall content me beſt: be gentle to her:
To Cæſar I will ſpeak what you ſhall pleaſe,
If you'll employ me to him. Exit Proculeius.

Cleo. Say, I would dye.

Dol. Moſt Noble Empreſſe, you have heard of me.

Cleo. I cannot tell.

Dol. Aſſuredly you know me.

Cleo. No matter, ſir, what I have heard or known:
You laugh when Boyes or VVomen tell their Dreames,
Is't not your trick?

Dol. I underſtand not, Madam.

Cleo. I dreamt there was an Emperour Anthony.
Oh ſuch another ſleep, that I might ſee
But ſuch another man.

Dol. If it might pleaſe ye.

Cleo. His face was as the heavens, and therein ſtuck
A Sun and Moon, which kept their courſe, and lighted
The little oth' Earth.

Dol. Moſt Soveraign Creature.

Cleo. His Legs beſtrid the Ocean, his rear'd Arme
Creſted the world: his voyce was propertied
As all the tuned Spheres, and that to friends:
But when he meant to quaile, and ſhake the Orbe,
He was as ratling Thunder. For his bounty,
There was no winter in't. An Anthony it was,
That grew the more by reaping: his delights
VVere Dolphin-like, they ſhew'd his back above
The Element they liv'd in; In his Livery
VValk'd Crowns and Crownets: Realmes and Iſlands
As plates dropt from his pocket.

Dol. Cleopatra.

Cleo. Think you there was, or might be ſuch a man
As this I dreamt of?

Dol. Gentle Madam, no.

Cleo. You Lye up to the hearing of the gods:
But if there be, or ever were one ſuch
Its paſt the ſize of dreaming: Nature wants ſtuffe
To vye ſtrange formes with fancy, yet t'imagine
An Anthony with Natures piece, 'gainſt Fancy,
Condemning ſhadowes quite.

Dol. Hear me, good Madam:
Your loſſe is as you ſelf, great; and you bear it
As anſwering to the weight, would I might never O're-take purſu'd ſucceſſe: but I doe feel
By the rebound of yours, a grief that ſuits
My very heart at root.

Cleo. I thank you, ſir:
Know you what Cæſar meanes to doe with me?

Dol. I am loth to tell you what, I would you knew.

Cleo. Nay, pray you, ſir.

Dol. Though he be honourable.

Cleo. He'll lead me then in triumph.

Dol. Madam, he will, I know't.

Enter Proculeius, Cæſar, Gallus, Mecenas, and others of his Train.

All. Make way there, Cæſar.

Cæſar

Cæſ. Which is the Queen of Ægypt.
Dol. It is the Emperor, Madam. Cleo. kneeles.
Cæſ. Ariſe, you ſhall not kneele:
I pray you riſe, riſe Ægypt.
Cleo. Sir, the gods will have it thus,
My Maſter and my Lord I muſt obey.
Cæſ. Take to you no hard thoughts,
The Record of what injuries you did us,
Though written in our fleſh, we ſhall remember
As things but done by chance.
Cleo. Sole Sir oth' world,
I cannot project mine own cauſe ſo well
To make it clear, but doe confeſſe I have
Been laden with like frailties, which before
Have often ſham'd our Sex.
Cæſ. Cleopatra, know,
We will extenuate rather, then inforce:
If you apply your ſelf to our intents,
Which towards you are moſt gentle, you ſhall finde
A benefit in this change, but if you ſeek
To lay on me a Cruelty, by taking
Anthony's courſe, you ſhall bereave your ſelf
Of my good purpoſes, and put your Children
To that deſtruction which I'le guard them from,
If thereon you relye. I'le take my leave.
Cleo. And may through all the world: 'tis yours, and we
Your Scutcheons, and your ſigns of Conqueſt ſhall
Hang in what place you pleaſe. Here, my good Lord.
Cæſ. You ſhall adviſe me in all for Cleopatra.
Cleo. This is the briefe: of Money, Plate, and Jewels
I am poſſeſt of, 'tis exactly valued,
Not petty things admitted. Whereas Seleucus?
Seleu. Here, Madam.
Cleo. This is my Treaſurer, let him ſpeak (my Lord)
Upon his perill, that I have reſerv'd
To my ſelf nothing. Speak the truth, Seleucus.
Seleu. Madam, I had rather ſeale my lips,
Then to my perill ſpeak that which is not.
Cleo. What have I kept back?
Sel. Enough to purchaſe what you have made known.
Cæſ. Nay, bluſh not, Cleopatra, I approve
Your wiſedome in the deed.
Cleo. See Cæſar: Oh behold,
How pomp is followed: mine will now be yours,
And ſhould we ſhift Eſtates, yours would be mine,
The ingratitude of this Seleucus, do's
Even make me wilde. Oh Slave, of no more truſt
Then love that's hir'd? What, goeſt thou back, thou ſhalt
Go back I warrant thee: but I'le catch thine eyes
Though they had wings. Slave, ſoule-leſſe, Villain, Dog,
O rarely baſe!
Cæſ. Good Queen, let us entreat you.
Cleo. O Cæſar, what a wounding ſhame is this,
That thou vouchſafing here to viſit me,
Doing the honour of thy Lordlineſſe
To one ſo meek, that mine own Servant ſhould
Parcel the ſumme of my diſgraces, by Addition of his Envy! Say (good Cæſar)
That I ſome Lady-trifles have reſerv'd,
Immoment toyes, things of ſuch Dignity
As we greet modern friends withall, and ſay
Some Nobler token I have kept apart
For Livia and Octavia, to induce
Their meditation, muſt I be unfolded
With one that I have bred: the gods! it ſmites me
Beneath the fall I have. Prethee go hence,
Or I ſhall ſhew the Cynders of my ſpirits
Through th' aſhes of my chance: Wer't thou a man,
Thou would'ſt have mercy on me.
Cæſ. Forbear, Seleucus.
Cleo. Be it known, that we the greateſt are miſ-thought
For things that others doe: and when we fall,
We anſwer others merits, in our name
Are therefore to be pitied.
Cæſ. Cleopatra,
Not what you have reſerv'd, nor what acknowledg'd
Put we ith' Roll of Conqueſt: ſtill be't yours,
Beſtow it at your pleaſure, and believe
Cæſar's no Merchant, to make prize with you
Of things that Merchants ſold. Therefore be cheer'd,
Make not your thoughts your priſons: No, dear Queen,
For we intend ſo to diſpoſe you, as
Your ſelf ſhall give us counſell: Feed, and ſleep:
Our care and pitty is ſo much upon you,
That we remain your friend, and ſo adieu.
Cleo. My Maſter, and my Lord.
Cæſ. Not ſo: Adieu.
Exeunt Cæſar, and his train.
Cleo. He words me, Girles, he words me,
That I ſhould not be noble to my ſelf.
But harke thee, Charmian.
Iras. Finiſh, good Lady, the bright day is done,
And we are for the darke.
Cleo. Hye thee again.
I have ſpoke already, and it is provided;
Go put it to the haſte.
Charm. Madam, I will.
Enter Dolabella.
Dol. Where's the Queen?
Char. Behold, ſir.
Cleo. Dolabella.
Dol. Madam, as thereto ſworn, by your command
Which my love makes Religion to obey)
I tell you this: Cæſar through Syria
Intends his journey, and within three dayes,
You with your Children will he ſend before,
Make your beſt uſe of this. I have perform'd
Your pleaſure, and my promiſe.
Cleo. Dolabella, I ſhall remain your debtor.
Dol. I your Servant:
Adieu, good Queen, I muſt attend on Cæſar. Exit.
Cleo. Farewell, and thanks.
Now, Iras, what think'ſt thou?
Thou, an Ægyptian Puppet, ſhalt be ſhewn
In Rome as well as I: Mechanick Slaves
With greaſie Aprons, Rules, and Hammers ſhall
Uplift us to the view. In their thick breaths,
Rank of groſſe Diet, ſhall we be enclouded,
And forc'd to drink their vapour.
Iras. The gods forbid.
Cleo. Nay, 'tis moſt certain, Iras: ſawcy Lictors
Will catch at us like Strumpets, and ſcall'd Rimers
Ballad us out a tune. The quick Comedians
Extemporally will ſtage us, and preſent
Our Alexandria Revels: Anthony
Shall be brought drunken forth, and I ſhall ſee
Some ſpeaking-Cleopatra-Boy my greatneſſe
Ith' poſture of a Whore.
Iras. O the good gods!
Cleo. Nay that's certain.
Iras. I'le never ſee't; for I am ſure my Nailes
Are ſtronger than mine eyes.

Cleo.

Cleo. Why that's the way to foole their preparation,
And conquer their most absurd intents.

Enter Charmian.

Now Charmian.
Shew me my Women like a Queen: Go fetch
My best Attires. I am again for Cidnus
To meet Marke Anthony. Sirrah Iras, go,
(Now, noble Charmian, we'll dispatch indeed,)
And when thou hast done this chare. I'le give thee leave
To play till Doomes-day: bring our Crown, and all.

A noyse within.

Wherefore this noyse?

Enter a Guardsman.

Guards. Here is a rurall Fellow,
That will not be deni'd your Highnesse presence,
He brings you Figs.

Cleo. Let him come in. Exit Guardsman.
How poor an Instrument
May doe a noble deed: he brings me liberty:
My resolution's plac'd, and I have nothing
Of woman in me: Now from head to foot
I am Marble constant: now the fleeting Moon
No Planet is of mine.

Enter Guardsman and Clown.

Guards. This is the Man.

Cleo. Avoid and leave him. Exit Guardsman.
Hast thou the pretty worme of Nylus there,
That kills and pains not?

Clow. Truly I have him: but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortall: those that doe dye of it, doe seldome or never recover.

Cleo. Remember'st thou any that have di'd on't?

Clo. Very many men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday, a very honest woman, but something given to lye, as a woman should not doe, but in the way of honesty, how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt: Truly, she makes a very good report oth'worme: but he that will believe all that they say, shall never be saved by half that they doe: but this is most fallible, the Worme's an odde Worme.

Cleo. Get thee hence, farewell.

Clow. I wish you all joy of the Worme.

Cleo. Farewell.

Clow. You must think this (look you) that the Worm will doe his kinde.

Cleo. I, I, farewell.

Clo. Look you, the Worme is not to be trusted, but in the keeping of wise people: for indeed, there is no goodnesse in the Worme.

Cleo. Take no care, it shall be heeded.

Clo. Very good: give it nothing I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Cleo. Will it eat me?

Clo. You must not think I am so simple, but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman: I know, that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dresse her not. But truly, these same whorson devils doe the gods great harme in their women: for in every ten that they make, the devils marre five.

Cleo. Well, get thee gone, farewell.

Clo. Yes forsooth, I wish you joy oth' worme. Exit.

Cleo. Give me my Robe, put on my Crown, I have Immortall longings in me. Now no more
The juice of Ægypts Grape shall moist his lip.
Yare, yare, good Iras, quick: me thinks I hear
Anthony call: I see him rowle himself
To praise my Noble Act. I hear him mock
The luck of Cæsar, which the gods give men
To excuse their after wrath. Husband, I come:
Now to that name, my courage prove my Title.
I am Fire, and Aire; my other Elements
I give no baser life. So, have you done?
Come then, and take the last warmth of my lips.
Farewell kinde Charmian, Iras, long farewell.
Have I the Aspick in my lips? Dost fall?
If thou and Nature can so gently part,
The stroke of death is as a Lovers pinch,
Which hurts, and is desir'd. Dost thou lie still?
If thus thou vanishest, thou tell'st the world
It is not worth leave taking.

Char. Dissolve thick Cloud and Rain, that I may say,
The gods themselves doe weep.

Cleo. This proves me base:
If she proves the curled Anthony,
He'll make demand of her, and spend that kisse
Which is my heaven to have. Come thou mortal wretch,
With thy sharp teeth this knot intrinsicate,
Of life at once untie: Poor venemous Foole,
Be angry and dispatch. Oh could'st thou speak,
That I might hear thee call great Cæsar Asse, unpolicied.

Char. Oh Eastern starre.

Cleo. Peace, peace:
Dost thou not see my Baby at my breast,
That sucks the Nurse asleep.

Char. O break! O break!

Cleo. As sweet as Balme, as soft as Aire, as gentle.
O Anthony! Nay I will take thee too.
What should I stay------- Dies.

Char. In this wild world? So fare thee well:
Now boast thee death, in thy possession lies
A Lasse unparalell'd. Downy Windows close,
And golden Phœbus never be beheld
Of eyes again so Royall: your Crowns away,
I'le mend it, and then play------

Enter the Guard rustling in, and Dolabella.

1. Guard. Where's the Queen?

Char. Speak softly, wake her not.

1. Cæsar hath sent.

Char. Too slow a Messenger.
Oh come apace, dispatch, I partly feel thee.

1. Approach hoa,
All's not well: Cæsar's beguil'd.

2. There's Dolabella sent from Cæsar: call him.

1. What work is here, Charmian?
Is this well done?

Char. It's well done, and fitting for a Princesse
Descended of so many Royall Kings.
Ah Souldier. Charmian dyes.

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. How goes it here?

2. Guard. All dead.

Dol. Cæsar, thy thoughts
Touch their effects in this: thy self art comming
To see perform'd the dreaded Act which thou
So sought'st to hinder.

Enter Cæsar and all his train, marching.

All. Make way there, make way for Cæsar.

Dol.

Dol. Oh, Sir, you are too ſure an Augurer:
That you did fear, is done.
Cæſar. Braveſt at the laſt,
She levell'd at our purpoſes, and being Royall
Took her own way: the manner of their deaths,
I doe not ſee them bleed.
Dol. Who was laſt with them?
1. Guard. A ſimple Countryman, that brought her Figs:
This was his Basket.
Cæſ. Poyſon'd then.
1. Guard. Oh Cæſar:
This Charmian liv'd but now, ſhe ſtood and ſpake:
I found her trimming up the Diadem,
On her dead Miſtris, tremblingly ſhe ſtood,
And on the ſudden dropt.
Cæſar. Oh noble weakneſſe:
If they had ſwallowed poyſon, 'twould appeare.
By externall ſwelling: but ſhe looks like ſleep,
As ſhe would catch another Anthony
In her ſtrong toyle of Grace.
Dol. Here on her breſt,
There is a vent of blood, and ſomething blown,
The like is on her Arme.
1. Guard. This an Aſpects traile
And theſe Fig-leaves have ſlime upon them ſuch
As th'Aſpick leaves upon the Caves of Nyle.
Cæſ. Moſt probable
That ſo ſhe dyed; for her Phyſician tells me
She hath purſu'd Concluſions infinite
Of eaſie wayes to dye. Take up her Bed,
And bear her Women from the Monument,
She ſhall be buried by her Anthony.
No Grave upon the earth ſhall clip in it
A pair ſo famous: high events as theſe
Strike thoſe that make them; and their ſtory is
No leſſe in pitty, than his glory which Brought them to be lamented. Our Army ſhall
In ſolemn ſhew, attend this Funerall,
And then to Rome. Come Dolabella, ſee
High Order in this great Solempity. Exeunt omnes.

FINIS.

The Tragedy of CYMBELINE.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter two Gentlemen.

1. Gent.

You do not meet a man but frowns.
Our bloods no more obey the heavens
Then our Courtiers:
Still seem as do's the Kings.

2. Gent. But what's the matter?

1. His daughter, and the heir of's Kingdome (whom
He purpos'd to his wives sole son, a Widow
That late he married) hath referr'd her self
Unto a poor, but worthy Gentleman. She's wedded,
Her husband banish'd; she imprison'd, all
Is outward sorrow, though I think the King
Be touch'd at very heart.

2. None but the King?

1. He that hath lost her too: so is the Queen,
That most desir'd the Match. But not a Courtier,
Although they wear their faces to the bent
Of the Kings looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the the thing they scoule at.

2. And why so?

1. He that hath miss'd the Princesse, is a thing
Too bad, for bad report: and he that hath her,
(I mean, that married her, alack good man,
And therefore banish'd) is a Creature, such,
As to seek through the Regions of the earth
For one, he like; there would be something failing
In him, that should compare. I do not think,
So fair an Outward, and such stuffe within
Endows a man, but he.

2. You speak him fair.

1. I do extend him (Sir) which himself,
Crush him together, rather then unfold
His measure dully.

2. What's his name and Birth?

1. I cannot delve him to the root: his father
Was call'd Sicillius, who did joyn his honour
Against the Romans, with Cassibelan,
But had his Titles by Tenantius, whom
He serv'd with Glory and admir'd Successe:
So gain'd the Sur-addition, Leonatus.
And had (besides this Gentleman in question)
Two other Sons, who in the Warrs o'th'time
Dy'd with their swords in hand. For which their father
Then old, and fond of issue, took such sorrow
That he quit Being; and his gentle Lady
Big of this Gentleman (our Theam) deceast
As he was born. The King he takes the Babe
To his protection, calls him Posthumus Leonatus,
Breeds him, and makes him of his Bed-chamber,
Puts to him all the Learnings that his time
Could make him the receiver of, which he took
As we do aire, fast as 'twas ministred,
And in's Spring, became a Harvest: Liv'd in Court
(Which rare it is to do) most prais'd, most lov'd,
A sample to the youngest: to th'more Mature,
A glasse that feated them: and to the graver,
A child that guided Dotards. To his Mistris,
(For whom he now is banish'd) her own price
Proclaims how she esteem'd him; and his Vertue
By her election may be truly read, what kind of man he is.

2. I honor him, even out of your report.
But pray you tell me, is she sole child to'th'King?

1. His only child?
He had two Sons (if this be worth your hearing,
Mark it) the eldest of them, at three years old
I'th'swathing cloathes, the other from their Nursery
Were stoln, and to this hour, no guesse in knowledge
Which way they went.

2. How long is this agoe?

1. Some twenty years.

2. That a Kings Children should be so convey'd,
So slackly guarded, and the search so slow
That could not trace them.

1. Howsoere 'tis strange,
Or that the negligence may well be laugh'dat:
Yet is it true sir.

2. I do well believe you,

1. We must forbear. Here comes the Gentleman,
The Queen, and Princesse. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the Queen, Posthumus, and Imogen

Que. No, be assur'd you shall not find me (Daughter)
After the slander of most Step-Mothers,
Evil-ey'd unto you. You're my Prisoner, but
Your Goaler shall deliver you the keys

That lock up your restraint. For you Posthumus,
So soon as I can win th'offended King,
I will be known your Advocate: marry yet
The fire of Rage is in him, and 'twere good
You lean'd unto his Sentence, with what patience
Your wisdome may inform you.
Post. Please your Highnesse,
I will from hence to day.
Que. You know the peril:
I'le fetch a turn about the Garden, pitying
The pangs of barr'd Affections, though the King
Hath charg'd you should not speak together. Exit.
Imo. O dissembling Curtesie! How fine this tyrant
Can tickle where she wounds? My dearest Husband,
I something fear my fathers wrath, but nothing
(Always reserv'd my holy duty) what
His rage can do on me. You must be gone,
And I shall here abide the hourly shot
Of angry eyes: not comforted to live,
But that there is this Jewell in the world,
That I may see again.
Post. My Queen, my Mistris:
O Lady, weep no more, lest I give cause
To be suspected of more tenderness
Then doth become a man. I will remain
The loyall'st husband, that did ere plight troth.
My residence in Rome, at one Florio's,
Who, to my Father was a friend, to me
Known but by Letter; thither write (my Queen)
And with mine eyes, I'le drink the words you send,
Though Ink be made of Gall.

Enter Queen.

Que. Be brief, I pray you:
If the King come, I shall incur, I know not
How much of his displeasure: yet I'le move him
To walk this way: I never do him wrong,
But he do's buy my injuries, to be friends.
Payes dear for my offences.
Post. Should we be taking leave
As long a terme as yet we have to live,
The loathnesse to depart, would grow: Adieu.
Imo. Nay, stay a little:
Were you but riding forth to aire your self,
Such parting were too petty. Look here (Love)
This Diamond was my Mothers; take it (Heart)
But keep it till you woo another Wife,
When Imogen is dead.
Post. How, how? Another?
You gentle gods, give me but this I have,
And seare up my embracements from a next,
With bonds of death. Remain, remain thou here,
While sense can keep it on: And sweetest, fairest,
As I (my poor self) did exchange for you
To your so infinite losse: so in our trifles
I still win of you. For my sake wear this,
It is a Manacle of Love, I'le place it
Upon this fairest Prisoner.
Imo. O the gods!
When shall we see again?

Enter Cymbeline, and Lords.

Post. Alack, the King.
Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid hence, from my sight:
If after this command thou fraught the Court
With thy unworthynesse, thou dyest. Away,
Thou'rt poison to my blood.
Post. The gods protect you,
And blesse the good Remainders of the Court:
I am gone. Exit.
Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death
More sharp then this is.
Cym. O disloyal thing,
That should'st repair my youth, thou heap'st
A years age on me.
Imo. I beseech you, sir,
Harme not your self with your vexation,
I am senseless of your wrath; a touch more rare
Subdues all pangs, all fears.
Cym. Past Grace? Obedience?
Imo. Past hope, and in despair, that way past Grace.
Cym. That might'st have had
The sole Son of my Queen.
Imo. O blessed that I might not: I chose an Eagle,
And did avoid a Puttock.
Cym. Thou took'st a Beggar, would'st have made my Throne, a Seat for basenesse.
Imo. No, I rather added a lustre to it.
Cym. O thou vild one!
Imo. Sir,
It is your fault that I have lov'd Posthumus:
You bred him as my Play-fellow, and he is
A man, worth any woman: Over-buyes me
Almost the sum he payes.
Cym. What? art thou mad?
Imo. Almost, Sir: heaven restore me: would I were
A Neat-heards Daughter, and my Leonatus
Our Neighbour-Shepheards Son.

Enter Queen.

Cym. Thou foolish thing;
They were again together: you have done
Not after our command. Away with her,
And pen her up.
Que. Beseech your patience: Peace
Dear Lady daughter, peace. Sweet Soveraign,
Leave us to our selves, and make your self some comfort
Out of your best advice.
Cym. Nay let her languish
A drop of blood a day, and being aged
Dye of this Folly. Exit.

Enter Pisanio.

Que. Fie, you must give away:
Here is your Servant. How now, Sir? What news?
Pis. My Lord your Son, drew on my Master.
Que. Hah?
No harme I trust is done?
Pisa. There might have been,
But that my Master rather plaid, then fought,
And had no help of Anger: they were parted
By Gentlemen, at hand.
Que. I am very glad on't.
Imo. Your Son's my fathers friend, he takes his part
To draw upon an Exile, O brave Sir,
I would they were in Affrick both together,
My self by with a Needle, that I might prick
The goer back. Why came you from your Master?
Pisa. On his command: he would not suffer me
To bring him to the haven: left these Notes
Of what commands I should be subject to,
When't please you to employ me.
Que. This hath been
Your faithfull Servant: I dare lay mine honour
He will remain so.
Pisa. I humbly thank your Highnesse.

Que.

Qu. Pray walk a while.
Imo. About some half hour hence,
Pray you speak with me;
You shall (at least) go see my Lord aboard.
For this time leave me. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Clotten, and two Lords.

1. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt; the Violence of Action hath made you reek as a Sacrifice: where aire comes out, aire comes in: there's none abroad so wholsome as that you vent.

Clot. If my Shirt were bloudy, then to shift it. Have I hurt him?

2. No faith: not so much as his patience.

1. Hurt him? His bodie's a passable Carkasse if he be not hurt. It is a thorough-fare for Steel if it be not hurt.

2. His Steel was in debt, it went oth' Back-side the Town.

Clot. The Villain would not stand me.

2. No, but he fled forward still, toward your face.

1. Stand you? you have Land enough of your own: But he added to your having, gave you some ground.

2. As many Inches, as you have Oceans (Puppies.)

Clot. I would they had not come between us.

2. So would I, till you had measur'd how long a fool you were upon the ground.

Clot. And that she should love this fellow, and refuse me.

2. If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damn'd.

1. Sir, as I told you alwayes: her Beauty and her Brain go not together. She's a good signe, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

2. She shines not upon Fools, lest the reflection Should hurt her.

Clot. Come, I'le to my Chamber: would there had been some hurt done.

2. I wish not so, unless it had bin the fall of an Ass, which is no great hurt.

Clot. You'll go with us?

1. I'le attend your Lordship.

Clot. Nay come, let's go together.

2. Well, my Lord.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Imogen, and Pisanio.

Imo. I would thou grew'st unto the shores oth' haven,
And question'dst every Sail: if he should write,
And I not have it, 'twere a Paper lost
As offer'd mercy is: What was the last
That he spake to thee?

Pisa. It was his Queen, his Queen.

Imo. Then wav'd his Handkerchief?

Pisa. And kist it, Madam.

Imo. Senseless Linnen, happier therein then I:
And that was all?

Pisa. No, Madam: for so long
As he could make me with his eye, or ear,
Distinguish him from others, he did keep
The Deck, with Glove, or Hat, or Handkerchief,
Still waving, as the fits and stirrs of's mind
Could best expresse how slow his soul sail'd on,
How swift his Ship.

Imo. Thou should'st have made him
As little as a Crow, or lesse, ere left
To after-eye him.

Pisa. Madam, so I did.

Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings;
Crack'd them, but to look upon him, till the diminution
Of space, had pointed him sharp as my Needle:
Nay, followed him, till he had melted from
The smallnesse of a Gnat, to aire: and then
Have turn'd mine eye, and wept. But, good Pisanio,
When shall we hear from him.

Pisa. Be assur'd, Madam,
With his next vantage.

Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had
Most pretty things to say: Ere I could tell him
How I would think on him at certain hours,
Such thoughts, and such: Or I could make him swear,
The She's of Italy should not betray
Mine Interest, and his Honour: or have charg'd him
At the sixt hour of Morn, at Noon, at Midnight,
T'encounter me with Orisons, for then
I am in heaven for him: Or ere I could,
Give him that parting kisse, which I had set
Betwixt two charming words, comes in my father,
And like the tyrannous breathing of the North,
Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a Lady.

Lad. The Queen (Madam)
Desires your highnesse Company.

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them dispatch'd,
I will attend the Queen.

Pisa. Madam, I shall. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Philario, Iachimo, Frenchman, Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iach. Believe it, Sir, I have seen him in Britain; he was then of a Cressent none, expected to prove so worthy, as since he hath been allowed the name of. But I could then have look'd on him, without the help of Admiration, though the Catalogue of his endowments had bin tabled by his side, and I to peruse him by Items.

Phil. You speak of him when he was lesse furnish'd, then now he is, with that which makes him both without and within,

French. I have seen him in France: we had very many there, could behold the Sun, with as firm eyes as he.

Iach. This matter of marrying his Kings Daughter, wherein he must be weighed rather by her value, then his own, words him (I doubt not) a great deal from the matter.

French. And then his banishment.

Iach. I, and the approbation of those that weep this lamentable divorce under her colours, are wonderfully to extend him, be it but to fortifie her judgement, which elſe an eaſie battery might lay flat, for taking a Beggar without leſſe quality. But how comes it, he is to ſojourn with you? how creeps acquaintance?

Phil. His father and I were Souldiers together, to whom I have bin often bound for no leſſe then my life.

Enter Poſthumus.

Here comes the Britain. Let him be ſo entertained amongſt you, as ſuits with Gentlemen of your knowing, to a ſtranger of his quality. I beſeech you all be better known to this Gentleman, whom I commend to you, as a Noble Friend of mine. How Worthy he is, I will leave to appear hereafter, rather then ſtory him in his own hearing.

Fren. Sir, we have known together in Orleance.

Poſt. Since when I have bin debter to you for courteſies, which I will be ever to pay, and yet pay ſtill.

Fren. Sir, you ore-rate my poor kindeſſe, I was glad I did atone my Countryman and you; it had bin pitty you ſhould have been put together, with ſo mortal a purpoſe, as then each bore, upon importance of ſo ſlight and trivial a nature.

Poſt. By your pardon, ſir, I was then a young Traveller, rather, ſhunn'd to go even with what I heard, then in my very action to be guided by others experiences: but upon my mended judgement (if I offend to ſay it is mended) my Quarrel was not altogether ſlight.

French. Faith yes, to be put to the arbitrement of Swords, and by ſuch two, that would by all likelyhood have confounded one the other, or have ſaln both.

Iach. Can we with manners, ask what was the difference?

Fren. Safely, I think, 'twas a contention in publick, which may (without contradiction) ſuffer the report. It was much alike an argument that fell out laſt night, where each of us fell in praiſe of our Country-Miſtreſſes. This Gentleman, at that time vouching (and upon warrant of bloudy affirmation) his to be more Fair, Vertuous, Wiſe, Chaſte, Conſtant, Qualified, and leſſe attemptible then any, the rateſt of our Ladies in France.

Iach. That Lady is not now living: this Gentlemans opinion by this worn out.

Poſt. She holds her Vertue ſtill, and I my mind.

Iach. You muſt not ſo far prefeire her, 'fore ours of Italy.

Poſt. Being ſo far provok'd as I was in France: I would abate her nothing, though I profeſſe my ſelf her Adorer, not her friend.

Iach. As fair, and as good: a kind of hand in hand compariſon, had been ſomething too fair, and too good for any Lady in Britany: if ſhe went before others. I have ſeen, as that Diamond of yours out-luſters many I have beheld. I could not believe ſhe excelled many: but I have not ſeen the moſt precious Diamond that is, nor you the Lady.

Poſt. I prais'd her, as I rated her: ſo do I my Stone.

Iach. What do you eſteem it at?

Poſt. More then the world enjoys.

Iach. Either your unparagon'd Miſtris is dead, or ſhe's out-priz'd by a trifle.

Poſt. You are miſtaken: the one may be ſold or given, or if there were wealth enough for the purchaſes, or merit for the gift. The other is not a thing for ſale, and only the gift of the gods.

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Poſt. Which by their Graces I will keep.

Iach. You may wear her in title yours: but you know ſtrange Fowle light upon neighbouring Ponds. Your Ring may be ſtolne too, ſo your brace of unprizeable Eſtimations, the one is but frail, and the other Caſual. A cunning Thief, or a (that way) accompliſh'd Courtier, would hazzard the winning both of firſt and laſt.

Poſt. Your Italy, contains none ſo accompliſh'd a Courtier to convince the honour of my Miſtris: it in the holding or loſſe of that, you terme her frail, I do nothing doubt you have ſtore of Thieves, notwithſtanding I fear not my Ring.

Phil. Let us leave here Gentlemen.

Poſt. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy Signior I thank him, makes no ſtranger of me, we are familiar at firſt.

Iach. With five times ſo much converſation, I ſhould get ground of your fair Miſtris; make her go back, even to the yielding, had I admittance, and opportunity to friend.

Poſt. No, no.

Iach. I dare thereupon pawn the moyty of my Eſtate, to your Ring, which in my opinion ore-values it ſomething: but I make my wager rather againſt your Confidence, then her Reputation. And to bar your offence herein too, I durſt attempt it againſt any Lady in the world.

Poſt. You are a great deal abus'd in too bold a perſwaſion, and I doubt not you ſuſtain what y'are worthy of, by your Attempt.

Iach. What's that?

Poſt. A Repulſe though your Attempt (as you call it) deſerve more; a puniſhment too.

Phi. Gentlemen, enough of this, it came in too ſuddenly, let it dye as it was born, and I pray you be better acquainted.

Iach. Would I had put my Eſtate, and my Neighbours on th'approbation of what I have ſpoke.

Poſt. What Lady would you chooſe to aſſail?

Iach. Yours, whom in conſtancy you think ſtands ſo ſafe. I will lay you ten thouſand Duckets to your Ring, that commend me to the Court where your Lady is, with no more advantage then the opportunity of a ſecond conference, and I will bring from thence, that honour of hers, which you imagine ſo reſerv'd.

Poſthumus. I will wage againſt your Gold, Gold to it: My Ring I hold dear as my finger, 'tis part of it.

Iach. You are a friend, and therein the wiſer: if you buy Ladies fleſh at a Million a Dram, you cannot preſerve it from tainting; but I ſee you have ſome Religion in you, that you fear.

Poſt. This is but a cuſtome in your tongue: you bear a graver purpoſe I hope.

Iach. I am the Maſter of my ſpeeches, and would under-go what's ſpoken, I ſwear.

Poſthu. Will you? I ſhall but lend my Diamond till your return: let there be Covenants drawn between's. My Miſtris exceeds in goodneſſe, the hugeneſſe of your unworthy things. I dare you to this match: here's my Ring.

Phil. I will have it no lay.

Iach. By the gods it is one: if I bring you no ſufficient teſtimony that I have enjoy'd the deareſt bodily part of your Miſtris: my ten thouſand Duckets are yours

ſo

so is your Diamond too: if I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in: She your Jewell, this your Jewell, and my Gold are yours: provided I have your commendation, for my more entertainment.

Post. I embrace these Conditions, let us have Articles betwixt us: onely thus far you shall answer, if you make your voyage upon her, and give me directly to understand, you have prevail'd, I am no further your Enemy, she is not worth our debate. If she remain unseduc'd, you not making it appear otherwise: for your ill opinion, and th'assault you have made to her chastity, you shall answer me with your Sword.

Iach. Your hand, a Covenant: we will have these things set down by lawfull Counsell, and straight away for Britain, lest the Bargain should catch cold, and starve: I will fetch my Gold, and have our two Wagers recorded.

Post. Agreed.

French. Will this hold, think you.

Phil. Signior Iachimo will not from it.
Pray let us follow 'em. Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Queen, Ladies, and Cornelius.

Que. Whiles yet the dew's on ground
Gather those Flowers,
Make haste. Who has the note of them?

Lad. I Madam.

Que. Dispatch. Exeunt Ladies.
Now Master Doctor, have you brought those drugs:

Cor. Pleaseth your highness, I: here they are, Madam:
But I beseech your Grace, without offence
(My Conscience bids me ask) wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poisonous Compounds,
Which are the moovers of a languishing death:
But though slow, deadly.

Que. I wonder, Doctor,
Thou ask'st me such a Question; have I not been Thy Pupill long? hast thou not learn'd me how
To make Perfumes? Distill? Preserve? Yea so,
That our great King himself doth woo me oft
For my Confections? having thus far proceeded,
(Unless thou think'st me devilish) is't not meet
That I did amplifie my judgement in
Other Conclusions? I will try the forces
Of these thy Compounds, on such Creatures as
We count not worth the hanging (but none humane)
To try the vigour of them, and apply
Allayments to their Act, and by them gather
Their several vertues, and effects.

Corn. Your highnesse
Shall from this practise, but make hard your heart:
Besides, the seeing these effects will be
Both noysome and infectious.

Que. O content thee.

Enter Pisanio.

Here comes a flattering Rascal, upon him
Will I first work: He's for his Master,
And enemy to my Son. How now Pisanio?
Doctor, your service for this time is ended,
Take your own way.

Cor. I do suspect you, Madam.
But you shall do no harme.

Que. Hark thee a word.

Cor. I do not like her. She doth think she has
Strange ling'ring poisons: I do know her spirit,
And will not trust one of her malice, with
A drug of such damn'd Nature. Those she has,
Will stupefie and dull the Sense a while,
Which first (perchance) she'll prove on Cats and Dogs,
Then afterward up higher: but there is
No danger in what shew of death it makes,
More then the locking up the Spirits a time,
To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd
With a most false effect: and I the truer,
So to be false with her.

Que. No further service, Doctor,
Untill I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave. Exit.

Que. Weeps she still (saist thou?)
Do'st thou think in time
She will not quench, and let instructions enter
Where folly now possesses? do thou work:
When thou shalt bring me word she loves my Son,
I'le tell thee on the instant, thou art then
As great as is thy Master: Greater, for
His Fortunes all lye speechlesse, and his name
Is at last gaspe. Return he cannot, nor
Continue where he is: to shift his being,
Is to exchange one misery with another,
And every day that comes, comes to decay
A dayes work in him. What shalt thou expect
To be depender of a thing that leans?
Who cannot be new built, nor has no friends
So much, as but to prop him? Thou tak'st up
Thou know'st not what: But take it for thy labour,
It is a thing I make, which hath the King
Five times redeem'd from death. I do not know
What is more Cordial. Nay I prethee take it,
It is an earnest of a farther good
That I mean to thee. Tell thy Mistris how
The case stands with her: do't, as from thy self:
Think what a chance thou changest on, but think
Thou hast thy Mistris still, to boot, my Son,
Who shall take notice of thee. I'le move the King
To any shape of thy Preferment, such
As thou'lt desire: and then my self, I chiefly,
That set thee on to this desert, am bound
To load thy merit richly. Call my women. Exit Pisanio.
Think on my words. A slye, and constant knave,
Not to be shak'd: the Agent for his Master,
And the Remembrancer of her, to hold
The hand fast to her Lord. I have given him that,
Which if he take, shall quite unpeople her
Of Leidgers for her Sweet: and which she after,
Except she bend her humor, shall be assur'd
To taste of too.

Enter Pisanio, and Ladies.

So, so: well done, well done:
The Violets, Cowslips, and the Prime-Roses
Bear to my Closset: Fare thee well, Pisanio,
Think on my words. Exit Queen, and Ladies.

Pisa. And shall doe:
But when to my good Lord, I prove untrue,
I'le choak my self: there's all I'le do for you. Exit.

Scena Septima.

Enter Imogen alone.

Imo. A Father cruel, and a Stepdame falſe,
A fooliſh Suiter to a Wedded Lady,
That hath her Husband baniſh'd: O, that Husband,
My ſupream Crown of grief, and thoſe repeated
Vexations of it. Had I bin Thief-ſtoln,
As my two Brothers, happy: but moſt miſerable
Is the deſire that's glorious. Bleſſed be thoſe
How mean ſo ere, that have their honeſt wills,
Which ſeaſons comfort. Who may this be? Fie.

Enter Piſanio, and Iachimo.

Piſa. Madam, a Noble Gentleman of Rome,
Comes from my Lord with Letters.
Iach. Change you, Madam!
The Worthy Leonatus is in ſafety,
And greets your Highneſſe dearly.
Imo. Thanks, good Sir,
You're kindly welcome.
Iach. All of her, that is out of door, moſt rich:
If ſhe be furniſh'd with a mind ſo rare,
She is alone th'Arabian-Bird; and I
Have loſt the wager. Boldneſſe be my Friend:
Arme me Audacity from head to foot,
Or like the Parthian I ſhall flying fight,
Rather directly flye.

Imogen reads.

He is one of the Nobleſt note, to whoſe kindneſſes I am moſt infinitely tyed. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your truſt. Leonatus.

So far I read aloud.
But even the very middle of my heart
Is warm'd by th'reſt, and take it thankfully.
You are as welcome (worthy Sir) as I
Have words to bid you, and ſhall find it ſo
In all that I can do.
Iach. Thanks faireſt Lady:
What are men mad? hath Nature given them eyes
To ſee this valuted Arch, and the rich Crop
Of Sea, and Land, which can diſtinguiſh 'twixt
The firey Orbes above, and the twinn'd Stones
Upon the number'd Beach, and can we not Partition make with Spectacles ſo precious
'Twixt fair, and foul?
Imo. What makes your admiration?
Iach. It cannot be ith'eye: for Apes, and Monkeys
'Twixt two ſuch She's, would chatter this way, and Contemne with mowes the other. Nor ith'judgement:
For Ideots in this caſe of favour, would
Be wiſely definit: Nor in the Appetite.
Sluttery to ſuch neat Excellence, oppos'd
Should make deſire vomit emptineſſe,
Not ſo allur'd to feed.
Imo. What is the matter trow?
Iach. The Cloyed will,
That ſatiate yet unſatisfi'd deſire, that Tub
Both fill'd and running: Ravening firſt the Lamb,
Longs after for the Garbage.
Imo. What, dear ſir,
Thus rap's you? Are you well?
Iach. Thanks, Madam, well: Beſeech you, ſir,
Deſire my Man's abode, where I did leave him:
He's ſtrange and peeviſh.
Piſa. I was going, Sir,
To give him welcome.
Imo. Continues well my Lord?
His health beſeech you?
Iach. Well, Madam.
Imo. Is he diſpos'd to mirth? I hope he is.
Iach. Exceeding pleaſant: none a ſtranger there,
So merry, and ſo gameſome: he is call'd
The Britain Reveller.
Imo. When he was here
He did incline to ſadneſſe, and oft times
Not knowing why.
Iach. I never ſaw him ſad.
There is a Frenchman his Companion, one
An eminent Monſieur, that it ſeems much loves
A Gallian-Girle at home. He furnaces
The thick ſides from him; whiles the jolly Britain,
(Your Lord I mean) laughs from's free lungs: cries oh,
Can my ſides hold, to think that man who knows
By Hiſtory, Report, or his own proof
What woman is, yea what ſhe cannot chooſe
But muſt be: will's free hours languiſh,
For aſſured bondage?
Imo. Will my Lord ſay ſo?
Iach. I Madam, with his eyes in flood with laughter,
It is a Recreation to be by
And hear him mock the Frenchman:
But heavens know ſome men are much too blame.
Imo. Not he I hope.
Iach. Not he:
But yet heavens bounty towards him, might
Be us'd more thankfully. In himſelf 'tis much;
In you which I account his beyond all Talents,
Whilſt I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pitty too.
Imo. What do you pitty, ſir?
Iach. Two Creatures heartily.
Imo. Am I one, ſir?
You look on me: what wrack diſcern you in me
Deſerves your pitty?
Iach. Lamentable: what
To hide me from the radiant Sun, and ſolace
I'th'Dungeon by a Snuff?
Imo. I pray you, ſir,
Deliver with more openneſſe your anſwers
To my demands. Why do you pitty me?
Iach. That others do
(I was about to ſay) enjoy your-------but
It is an office of the gods to venge it,
Not mine to ſpeak on't.
Imo. You do ſeem to know
Something of me, or what concerns me; pray you
Since doubting things go ill, often hurts more
Then to be ſure they do. For Certainties
Either are paſt remedies; or timely knowing,
The remedy then born. Diſcover to me
What both you ſpur and ſtop.
Iach. Had I this cheek
To bath my lips upon: this hand, whoſe touch,
(Whoſe very touch) would force the feelers ſoul
To th'oath of Loyalty. This object, which Takes Priſoner, the wild motion of mine eye,
Fixing it only here, ſhould I (damn'd then)

Slaver

Slaver with lips as common as the ſtaires
That mount the Capitol: joyn grypes, with hands
Made hard with hourly falſhood (falſhood as
With labour:) then by peeping in an eye
Baſe and illuſtrious as the ſmoaky light
That's fed with ſtinking Tallow: it were fit
That all the plagues of hell ſhould at one time
Encounter ſuch revolt.
Imo. My Lord, I fear
Has forgot Britain.
Iach. And himſelf, not I
Inclin'd to this intelligence, pronounce
The Beggery of his change: but 'tis your Graces
That from my muteſt Conſcience, to my tongue,
Charmes this report out.
Imo. Let me hear no more.
Iach. O deareſt ſoul: your Cauſe doth ſtrike my heart
With pitty, that doth make me ſick. A Lady
So fair, and faſtned to an Empery
Would make the great'ſt King double, to be partner'd
With Tomboyes hyr'd, with that ſelf-exhibition
Which your own Coffers yield: with diſeas'd ventures
That play with all infirmities for Gold,
Which rottenneſſe can lend Nature, Such boyl'd ſtuff
As well might poiſon Poiſon. Be reveng'd,
Or ſhe that bore you, was no Queen, and you
Recoyl from your great Stock.
Imo. Reveng'd:
How ſhould I be reveng'd? if this be true,
(As I have ſuch a heart, that both mine ears
Muſt not in haſte abuſe) if it be true,
How ſhall I be reveng'd?
Iach. Should he make me
Live like Diana's Prieſt, betwixt cold ſheets;
Whiles he is vaulting variable Ramps
In your deſpight, upon your purſe: revenge it.
I dedicate my ſelf to your ſweet pleaſure,
More Noble then that runnagate to your bed,
And will continue faſt to your Affection,
Still cloſe, as ſure.
Imo. What hoa, Piſanio?
Iach. Let my ſervice tender on your lips
Imo. Away, I do condemne mine ears, that have
So long attended thee. If thou wert honorable
Thou wouldſt have told this tale for Vertue, not
For ſuch an end thou ſeek'ſt, as baſe, as ſtrange:
Thou wrong'ſt a Gentleman, who is as far
From thy report, as thou from honor: and
Solicitſt here a Lady, that diſdains
Thee, and the Devil alike. What hoa, Piſanio?
The King my father ſhall be made acquainted
Of thy Aſſault: if he ſhall think it fit,
A ſawcy Stranger in his Court, to Mart
As is a Romiſh Stew, and to expound
His beaſtly mind to us; he hath a Court
He little cares for, and Daughter, whom
He not reſpects at all. What hoa, Piſanio?
Iach. O happy Leonatus, I may ſay,
The credit that thy Lady hath of thee
Deſerves thy truſt, and thy moſt perfect goodneſſe
Her aſſur'd credit, bleſſed live you long,
A Lady to the worthieſt ſir, that ever
Country call'd his: and you his Miſtris, only
For the moſt worthieſt fit. Give me your pardon.
I have ſpoke this to know if your Affiance
Were deeply rooted, and ſhall make your Lord,
That which he is, new ore; and he is one
The trueſt manner'd: ſuch a holy Witch,
That he inchants Societies into him:
Half all mens hearts are his.
Imo. You make amends.
Iach. He ſits amongſt men, like a deſcended god:
He hath a kind of honour ſets him off,
More then a mortal ſeeming. Be not angry
(Moſt mighty Princeſſe) that I have adventur'd
To try your taking of a falſe report, which hath
Honour'd with confirmation your great judgement,
In the election of a Sir, ſo rare,
Which you know, cannot erre. The Love I bear him,
Made me to fan you thus, but the gods made you
(Unlike all others) chaffeleſſe. Pray your Pardon.
Imo. All's well, ſir:
Take my power ith' Court for yours.
Iach. My humble thanks: I had almoſt forgot
T'intreat your Grace, but in a ſmall requeſt,
And yet of moment too, for it concerns,
Your Lord, my ſelf, and other Noble friends
Are partners in the buſineſſe.
Imo. Pray what is't?
Iach. Some dozen Romans of us, and your Lord
(The beſt feather of our wing) have mingled ſums
To buy a Preſent for the Emperor:
Which I (the factor for the reſt) have done
In France: 'tis Plate of rare device, and Jewels
Of rich and exquiſite forme, their values great,
And I am ſomething curious, being ſtrange,
To have them in ſafe ſtowage: May it pleaſe you
To take them in protection.
Imo. Willingly:
And pawn mine honor for their ſafety, ſince
My Lord hath intereſt in them, I will keep them
In my Bed chamber.
Iach. They are in a Trunk
Attended by my men: I will make bold
To ſend them to you, only for this night:
I muſt aboard to morrow,
Imo. O no, no.
Iach. Yes I beſeech you: or I ſhall ſhort my word
By length'ning my return. From Gallia,
I croſt the Seas on purpoſe, and on promiſe
To ſee your Grace.
Imo. I thank you for your pains:
But not away to morrow.
Iach. O I muſt Madam.
Therefore I ſhall beſeech you, if you pleaſe
To greet your Lord with writing, do't to night,
I have out-ſtood my time, which is material
To th'tender of our Preſent.
Imo. I will write:
Send your Trunk to me, it ſhall be ſafe kept,
And truly yielded you: you're very welcome. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Clotten, and the two Lords.

Clot. Was there ever man had ſuch luck? when I kiſt the Jack upon an up-caſt, to be hit away? I had an hundred pound on't; and then a whorſon Jack-an-Apes, muſt must take me up for swearing; as if I borrowed mine oaths of him, and might not spend them at my pleasure.

1. What got he by that? you have broke his pate with you Bowl.

2. If his wit had been like him that broke it: it would have run all out.

Clot. When a Gentleman is disposd to swear: it is not for any standers by to curtal his oaths. Ha?

2. No my Lord; nor crop the ears of them.

Clot. Whorson dog: I give him satisfaction? would he had bin one of my Rank.

2. To have smelt like a fool.

Clot. I am not vext more at any thing in the earth: a pox on't. I had rather not be so Noble as I am: they dare not fight with me, because of the Queen my Mother: every Jack-slave hath his belly full of fighting, and I must go up and down like a Cock, that no body can match.

2. You are a Cock and a Capon too, and you crow Cock, with your combe on.

Clot. Sayest thou?

2. It is not fit your Lordship should undertake every Companion, that you give offence to.

Clot. No, I know that: but it is fit I should commit offence to my inferiors.

2. I, it is fit for your Lordship only.

Clot. Why so I say.

1. Did you hear of a Stranger that's come to Court to night?

Clot. A Stranger, and I not know on't?

2. He's a Strange fellow himself, and knows it not.

1. There's an Italian come, and 'tis thought one of Leonatus friends.

Clot. Leonatus? A banish'd Rascal; and he's another, wheresoever he be. Who told you of this Stranger?

1. One of your Lordships Pages.

Clot. It is fit I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation in't?

2. You cannot derogate my Lord.

Clot. Not easily I think.

2. You are a fool granted, therefore your Issues being foolish, do not derogate.

Clot. Come, I'le go see this Italian: what I have lost to day at Bowls, I'le win to night of him. Come: go.

2. I'le attend your Lordship. Exit

That such a crafty Devil as is his Mother,
Should yield the world this Asse: a woman, that
Bears all down with her Brain, and this her Son,
Cannot take two from twenty for his heart,
And leave eighteen. Alas poor Princesse,
Thou divine Imogen, what thou endur'st,
Betwixt a Father by thy Step-dame govern'd,
A Mother hourly coyning plots: A Wooer,
More hateful then the foul expulsion is
Of thy dear husband, then that horrid Act
Of the divorce, he'ld make the heavens hold firme
The walls of thy dear honor. Keep unshak'd
That Temple thy fair mind, that thou maist stand
T'enjoy thy banish'd Lord: and this great Land. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Imogen, in her bed, and a Lady.

Imo. Who's there? my woman Helen?

Lad. Please you Madam.

Imo. What hour is it?

Lad. Almost midnight, Madam.

Imo. I have read three hours then:
Mine eyes are weak,
Fold down the Leaf where I have left: to bed
Take not away the Taper, leave it burning:
And if thou canst awake by four o'th'Clock,
I prithee call me: Sleep hath seiz'd me wholly.
To your protection I commend me, gods,
From Fairies, and the Tempters of the night,
Guard me beseech ye. Sleeps.

Iachimo from the Trunk.

Iach. The Crickets sing, and mans ore-labour'd sense
Repairs it self by rest: Our Tarquin thus
Did softly presse the Rushes, ere he waken'd
The Chastity he wounded. Cytherea,
How bravely thou becom'st thy Bed; fresh Lilly,
And whiter then the Sheets: that I might touch,
But kisse, one kisse. Rubies unparagon'd,
How dearly they do't: 'Tis her breathing that
Perfumes the Chamber thus: the flame oth' Taper
Bows toward her, and would under-peep her lids.
To see th'inclosed Lights, now Canopied
Under the windows, White and Azure lac'd
With Blew of heavens own tinct, but my designe's
To note the Chamber, I will write all down,
Such, and such pictures: there the window, such
Th'adornment of her Bed; the Arras, Figures,
Why such, and such: and the Contents oth'Story.
Ah, but some natural notes about her Body,
Above ten thousand meaner Moveables
Would testifie, t'enrich mine Inventory.
O sleep, thou Ape of death, lye dull upon her,
And be her sense but as a Monument,
Thus in a Chappel lying. Come off, come off;
As slippery as the Gordian-knot was hard.
'Tis mine, and this witnesse outwardly,
As strongly as the Conscience do's within:
To th'madding of her Lord. On her left breast
A mole Cinque-spotted: Like the Crimson drops
I'th'bottome of a Cowslip. Heres a Voucher,
Stronger then ever Law could make: this Secret
Will force him think I have pick'd the lock, and t'ane
The treasure of her honour. No more: to what end?
Why should I write this down, that's rivitted,
Screw'd to my memory. She hath bin reading late,
The Tale of Tereus, here the leaf 's turn'd down
Where Philomele gave up. I have enough,
To th'Trunk again, and shut the spring of it.
Swift, swift, you Dragons of the night, that dawning
May bear the Ravens eye: I lodge in fear,
Though this a heavenly Angel: hell is here.

Clock strikes.

One, two, three: time, time. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Clotten, and Lords.

1. Your Lordship is the most patient man in losse, the most coldest that turn'd up Ace.

Clot. It would make any man cold to loose.

1. But not every man patient, after the noble temper of your Lordship; You are most hot, and furious when you win.

Clot.

Winning will put any man into courage: if I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have Gold enough: it's almost morning, is't not?

1. Day, my Lord,

Clot. I would this Musick would come: I am advised. to give her Musick a mornings, they say it will penetrate

Enter Musitians.

Come on, tune: if you can penetrate here with your fingering, so: we'll try with tongue too: if none will do, let her remain: but I'le never give o're. First, a very excellent good conceited thing; after a wonderfull sweet aire, with admirable rich words to it, and then let her consider.

Song.

Hark, hark, the Lark at Heavens gate sings,
and Phœbus 'gins arise,
His Steeds to water at those Springs
on chalic'd Flowers that lies:
And winking Mary-buds begin to ope their Golden eyes
With every thing that pretty is, my Lady sweet arise:
Arise, arise.

So, get you gone: if this penetrate, I will consider your Musick the better: if it do not, it is a voice in her ears which Horse-hairs, and Calves-guts, nor the voice of unpaved Eunuch to boot, can never amend.

Enter Queen and Cymbeline.

2. Here comes the King.

Clot. I am glad I was up so late, for that's the reason I was up so early: he cannot choose but take this Service I have done, fatherly. Good morrow to your Majesty, and gracious Mother.

Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern daughter. Will she not forth?

Clot. I have assail'd her with Musicks, but she vouchsafes no notice.

Cym. The Exile of her Minion is too new.
She hath not yet forgot him, some more time
Must wear the print of his remembrance ou't,
And then she's yours.

Que. You are most bound to th'King,
Who lets go by no vantages, that may
Preferre you to his daughter: frame your self
To orderly solicits, and be friended
With aptnesse of the season: make denials
Encrease your services: so seem, as if
You were inspir'd to do those duties which
You tender to her: that you in all obey her.
Save when command to your dismission tends,
And therein you are senseless.

Clot. Senseless? Not so.

Mes. So like you (Sir) Ambassadours from Rome; The one is Caius Lucius.

Cym. A worthy Fellow,
Albeit he comes on angry purpose now;
But that's no fault of his: we must receive him
According to the honour of his Sender,
And towards himself, his goodnesse fore-spent on us
We must extend our notice: Our dear Son,
When you have given good morning to your Mistris,
Attend the Queen, and us, we have need
T'employ you towards this Roman.
Come our Queen. Exeunt.

Clot. If she be up, I'le speak with her: if not,
Let her lye still, and dream: by your leave hoa,
I know her women are about her: what
If I do line one of their hands: 'tis gold
Which buyes admittance (oft it doth) yea and makes
Diana's Rangers false themselves, yield up
Their Deer to'th'stand o'th Stealer: and 'tis gold
Which makes the True-man kill'd, and saves the Thief:
Nay, sometime hangs both Thief, and True-man: what
Can it not do, and undo: I will make
One of her women Lawyer to me, for
I yet not understand the case my self.
By your leave. Knocks.

Enter a Lady.

Lad. Who's there that knocks?

Clot. A Gentleman.

Lad. No more.

Clot. Yes, and a Gentlewomans Son.

Lad. That's more
Then some whose Taylors are as deer as yours,
Can justly boast of: what's your Lordships pleasure?

Clot. Your Ladies person, is she ready?

Lad. I, to keep her Chamber.

Clot. There is gold for you,
Sell me your good report.

Lad. How, my good name? or to report of you
What I shall think is good. The Princesse.

Enter Imogen.

Clot. Good morrow fairest, Sister your sweet hand.

Imo. Good morrow, sir, you lay out too much pains
For purchasing but trouble: the thanks I give,
Is telling you that I am poor of thanks,
And scarce can spare them.

Clot. Still I swear I love you.

Imo. If you'd but said so, 'twere as deep with me:
If you swear still, your recompence is still
That I regard it not.

Clot. This is no answer.

Imo. But that you shall not say, I yield being silent,
I would not speak. I pray you spare me, faith
I shall unfold equall discourtesie
To your best kindnesse: one of your great knowing
Should learn (being taught) forbearance.

Clot. To leave you in your madnesse, 'twere my sin,
I will not.

Imo. Fools are not mad folks.

Clot. Do you call me fool?

Imo. As I am mad I do:
If you'll be patient, I'le no more be mad,
That cures us both. I am much sorry (Sir)
You put me to forget a Ladies manners
By being so verbal: and learn now, for all,
That I which know my heart, do here pronounce
By th'very truth of it, I care not for you,
And am so near the lack of Charity
To accuse my self, I hate you: which I had rather
You felt, then make't my boast.

Clot. You sin against
Obedience, which you owe your father, for
The Contract you pretend with that base Wretch,
One, bred of Alms, and foster'd with cold dishes
With scraps oth'Court: It is no Contract, none;
And though it be allowed in meaner parties
(Yet who then he more mean) to knit their souls
(On whom there is no more dependancy
But Brats and Beggery) in self figur'd knot,
Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement, by

The consequence oth'Crown, and must not soyle
The precious note of it; with a base Slave,
A Hilding for a Livory, a Squires Cloth,
A Pantler; not so eminent.
Imo. Prophane Fellow:
Wert thou the Son of Jupiter, and no more,
But what thou art besides: thou wer't too base,
To be his Groom: thou wer't dignified enough
Even to the point of Envy, if 'twere made
Comparative for your Vertues, to be stil'd
The under Hangman of his Kingdome; and hated
For being preferr'd so well.
Clot. The South-Fog rot him.
Imo. He never can meet more mischance, then come
To be but nam'd of thee. His meanest Garment
That ever hath but clipt his body, is dearer
In my respect, then all the hairs above thee,
Were they all made such men: How now Pisanio?

Enter Pisanio.

Clot. His Garment? Now the devill.
Imo. To Dorothy my woman hye the presently.
Clot. His Garment?
Imo. I am sprighted with a fool,
Frighted, and angred worse: Go bid my woman
Search for a Jewell, that too casually
Hath left mine Arme: it was thy Masters. Shrew me
If I would lose it for a Revenew,
Of any Kings in Europe. I do think,
I saw't this morning: Confident I am.
Last night 'twas on my Arme: I kiss'd it,
I hope it be not gone, to tell my Lord
That I kisse ought but him.
Pisa. 'Twill not be lost.
Imo. I hope so: go and search.
Clot. You have abus'd me:
His meanest Garment?
Imo. I, I said so, sir,
If you will make't an Action, call witness to't.
Clot. I will enforme your Father.
Imo. Your Mother too:
She's my good Lady; and will conceive, I hope
But the worst of me. So I leave you, sir,
To th'worst of discontent. Exit.
Clot. I'le be reveng'd:
His meanest Garment? Well. Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Posthumus, and Philario.

Post. Fear it not, sir: I would I were so sure
To win the King, as I am bold, her honour
Will remain hers.
Phil. What means do you make to him?
Post. Not any: but abide the change of Time,
Quake in the present winters state, and wish
That warmer dayes would come: In these fear'd hopes
I barely gratifie your love; they failing
I must die much your debtor.
Phil. Your very goodnesse, and your company,
O're payes all I can do. By this your King,
Hath heard of Great Augustus: Caius, Lucius,
Will do's Commission throughly. And I think
He'll grant the Tribute: send th'Arrerages,
Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance
Is yet fresh in their grief.
Post. I do believe
(Statist though I am none, nor like to be)
That this will prove a War; and you shall hear
The Legion now in Gallia, sooner landed
In our not-fearing-Britain, then have tidings
Of any penny Tribute paid. Our Countrimen
Are men more order'd then when Julius Cæsar
Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage
Worthy his frowning at. Their discipline,
(Now mingled with their courages) will make known
To their Approvers, they are People, such
That mend upon the world. Enter Iachimo.
Phil. See Iachimo.
Post. The swiftest hearts, have posted you by land;
And Winds of all the Corners kiss'd your Sails.
To make your vessel nimble.
Phil. Welcome, sir.
Post. I hope the briefnesse of your answer, made
The speedinesse of your return.
Iach. Your Lady,
Is one of the fairest that I have look'd upon
Post. And therewithall the best, or let her beauty
Look thorough a Casement to allure false hearts,
And be false with them.
Iach. Here are Letters for you.
Post. Their tenure good I trust.
Iach. 'Tis very like.
Post. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain Court,
When you were there?
Iach. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.
Post. All is well yet,
Sparkles this Stone as it was wont, or is't not Too dull for your good wearing?
Iach. If I have lost it,
I should have lost the worth of it in Gold,
I'le make a journey twice as far, t'enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortnesse, which
Was mine in Britain, for the Ring is won.
Post. The Stones too hard to come by.
Iach. Not a whit,
Your Lady being so easie.
Post. Make not, sir,
Your losse, your Sport: I hope you know that we Must not continue friends.
Iach. Good sir, we must
If you keep Covenant: had I not brought
The knowledge of your Mistris home, I grant
We were to question farther; but I now
Professe my self the winner of her honour,
Together with your Ring; and not the wronger
Of her, or you, having proceeded but
By both your wills,
Post. If you can make't apparant
That you have tasted her in Bed; my hand,
And Ring is yours. If not the foul opinion
You had of her poor honour: gains, or looses,
Your Sword or mine, or Masterlesse leave both
To who shall find them.
Iach. Sir, my Circumstances
Being so nere the truth, as I will make them,
Must first induce you to believe: whose strength
I will confirme with oath, which I doubt not

You'll

You'll give me leave to ſpare, when you ſhall find
You need it not.
Poſt. Proceed.
Iach. Firſt, her Bed-chamber
(Where I confeſſe I ſlept not, but profeſſe
Had that was well worth watching) it was hang'd
With Tapiſtry of Silk, and Silver, the Story
Proud Cleopatra, when ſhe met her Roman,
And Cidnus ſwell'd above the Banks, or for
The preſſe of Boats, or Pride: A piece of Work
So bravely done, ſo rich, that it did ſtrive
In Workmanſhip, and Value, which I wonder'd
Could be ſo rarely, and exactly wrought
Since the true life on't was--------
Poſt. This is true:
And this you might have heard of here, by me,
Or by ſome other.
Iach. More particulars
Muſt juſtifie my knowledge
Poſt. So they muſt,
Or do your Honor injury.
Iach. The Chimney
Is South the Chamber, and the Chimney-piece
Chaſt Dian, bathing: never ſaw I figures
So likely to report themſelves; the Cutter
Was as another Nature dumb, out-went her,
Motion, and Breath left out.
Poſt. This is a thing
Which you might from Relation likewiſe read,
Being, as it is, much ſpoke of.
Iach. The Roofe o'th'Chamber,
With golden Cherubins is fretted. Her Andirons
(I had forgot them) were two winking Cupids
Of Silver, each on one foot ſtanding, nicely
Depending on their Brands.
Poſt. This is her honour:
Let it be granted you have ſeen all this (and praiſe
Be given to your remembrance) the deſcription
Of what is in her Chamber, nothing ſaves
The wager you have laid.
Iach. Then if you can
Be pale, I beg but leave to aire this Jewel: See,
And now 'tis up again: it muſt be married
To that your Diamond, I'le keep them.
Poſt. Jove-------
Once more let me behold it: Is it that
Which I left with her?
Iach. Sir (I thank her) that
She ſtript it from her Arme: I ſee her yet
Her pretty Action, did out-ſell her gift,
And yet enrich'd it too: ſhe gave it me,
And ſaid ſhe priz'd it once.
Poſt. May be, ſhe pluck'd it off
To ſend it me.
Iach. She writes ſo to you? doth ſhe?
Poſt. O no, no, no, 'tis true. Here take this too,
It is a Baſilisk unto mine eye,
Kills me to look on't: Let there be no Honour,
Where there is beauty: Truth, where ſemblance: Love,
Where there's another man. The Vows of Women,
Of no more bondage be, to where they are made,
Than they are to their Vertues, which is nothing:
O, above meaſure falſe.
Phil. Have patience, ſir,
And take your Ring again, 'tis not yet won;
It may be probable ſhe loſt it: or
Who knows if one of her women, being corrupted
Hath ſtoln it from her.
Poſt. Very true,
And ſo I hope he came by't: back my Ring,
Render to me ſome corporal ſigne about her
More evident then this: for this was ſtole.
Iach. By Jupiter, I had it from her Arme.
Poſt. Hark you, he ſwears: by Jupiter he ſwears.
'Tis true, nay keep the Ring; 'tis true: I am ſure
She ſhould not looſe it: her Attendants are
All ſworn, and honorable: they induc'd to ſteal it?
And by a Stranger? No, he hath enjoy'd her,
The Cognizance of her incontinency
Is this: ſhe hath bought the name of Whore, thus dearly.
There, take thy hyre, and all the fiends of hell
Divide themſelves between you.
Phil. Sir, be patient:
This is not ſtrong enough to be believ'd
Of one perſwaded well of.
Poſt. Never talk on't:
She hath been colted by him.
Iach. If you ſeek
For further ſatisfying; under her Breaſt
(Worthy her preſſing) lies a Mole, right proud
Of that moſt delicate Lodging. By my life
I kiſt it, and it gave me preſent hunger
To feed again, though full. You do remember
This ſtain upon her?
Poſt. I, and it doth confirm
Another ſtain, as big as Hell can hold,
Were there no more but it.
Iach. Will you hear more?
Poſt. Spare your Arithmetick,
Never count the Turns: Once, and a Million.
Iach. I'le be ſworn.
Poſt. No ſwearing:
If you will ſwear you have not don't, you lye,
And I will kill thee if thou do'ſt deny
Thou'ſt made me Cuckold.
Iach. I'le deny nothing.
Poſt. O that I had her here, to tear her Limb-meal;
I will go there and do't ith'Court, before
Her father. I'le do ſomething. Exit.
Phil. Quite beſides.
The Government of Patience. You have won:
Let's follow him, and pervert the preſent wrath
He hath againſt himſelf.
Iach. With all my heart. Exeunt.

Enter Poſthumus.

Poſt. Is there no way for Men to be, but Women
Muſt be half-workers? We are all Baſtards,
And that moſt venerable man, which I
Did call my father, was, I know not where
When I was ſtampt. Some Coyner with his Tools
Made me a counterfeit: yet my Mother ſeem'd
The Dian of that time: ſo doth my Wife
The Non-pareill of this. Oh Vengeance, Vengeance!
Me of my lawfull pleaſure ſhe reſtrain'd,
And pray'd me oft forbearance: did it with
A pudency ſo Roſie, the ſweet view on't
Might well have warm'd old Saturn:
That I thought her
As Chaſte, as un-Sunn'd Snow. Oh, all the devils!
This yellow Iachimo in an hour, was't not?

Or leſſe; at firſt? Perchance ſpoke not, but
Like a full Acorn'd Boar, a Jarmen on,
Cry'd oh, and mounted, found no oppoſition
But what he look'd for, ſhould oppoſe, and ſhe
Should from encounter guard. Could I find out
The Womans part in me, for there's no motion
That tends to vice in man, but I affirm
'tis the Womans part: be it Lying, note it,
The Womans: Flattering, hers: deceiving, hers:
Luſt, and rank thoughts, hers, hers: Revenges hers:
Ambitions, Covetings, change of Prides, Diſdain,
Nice-longing, Slanders, Mutability:
All faults that may be named, nay, that Hell knows,
Why hers, in part, or all: but rather all. For even to Vice
They are not conſtant, but are changing ſtill;
One Vice, but of a minute old, for one
Not half ſo old as that. I'le write againſt them,
Detеſt them, curſe them: yet 'tis greater Skill
In a true Hate, to pray they have their will:
The very Devils cannot plague them better. Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter in State, Cymbeline, Queen, Clotten, and Lords at one door, and at another, Caius, Lucius, and Attendants.

Cym. Now ſay, what would Auguſtus Cæſar with us?

Luc. When Julius Cæſar (whoſe remembrance yet
Lives in mens eyes, and will to Ears and Tongues
Be Theam, and hearing ever) was in this Brittain,
And Conquer'd it, Caſſibelan thine Unkle
(Famous in Cæſars praiſes, no whit leſſe
Then in his Feats deſerving it) for him,
And his ſucceſſion, granted Rome a Tribute,
Yearly three thouſand pounds; which (by thee) lately
Is left untender'd.

Que. And to kill the meruail,
Shall be ſo ever.

Clot. There be many Cæſars,
Ere ſuch another Julius: Britain's a world
By it ſelf, and we will nothing pay
For wearing our own Noſes.

Queen. That opportunity
Which then they had to take from's, to reſume
We have again. Remember, ſir, my Liege,
The Kings your Anceſtors, together with
The Natural bravery of your Iſle, which ſtands
As Neptunes Park, ribb'd, and pal'd in
With Oaks unſkaleable, and roaring Waters,
With Sands that will not bear your Enemies Boats
But ſuck them up to'th' Top-maſt. A kind of Conqueſt
Cæſar made here, but made not here his brag
Of came, and Saw, and Overcame: with ſhame
(The firſt that ever touch'd him) he was carried
From off our Coaſt, twice beaten; and his ſhipping
(Poor ignorant Baubles) on our terrible Seas
Like Egg-ſhels, mov'd upon their Surges crack'd
As eaſily 'gainſt our Rocks. For joy whereof,
The fam'd Caſſibelan, who was once at point
(Oh giglet Fortune) to maſter Cæſars ſword,
Made Luds-Town with rejoycing-Fires bright,
And Britains ſtrut with Courage.

Clot. Come, there's no more Tribute to be paid. Our Kingdome is ſtronger then it was at that time; and (as I ſaid) there is no more ſuch Cæſars, other of them may have crook'd Noſes, but to owe ſuch ſtrait Armes, none.

Cym. Son, let your Mother end.

Clot. We have yet many among us, can gripe as hard as Caſſibelan, I do not ſay I am one: but I have a hand. Why Tribute? Why ſhould we pay Tribute? If Cæſar can hide the Sun from us with a Blanket, or put the Moon in his pocket: we will pay him Tribute for light: elſe ſir, no more Tribute, pray you now.

Cym. You muſt know,
Till the injurious Romans, did extort
This Tribute from us, we were free. Cæſars Ambition,
Which ſwell'd ſo much, that it did almoſt ſtretch
The ſides o'th'world, againſt all colour here,
Did put the yoak upon's: which to ſhake off
Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon
Our ſelves to be, we do. Say then to Cæſar,
Our Anceſter was that Mulmutius, which
Ordain'd our Laws, whoſe uſe the ſword of Cæſar
Hath too much mangled: whoſe repair, and franchiſe,
Shall (by the power we hold) be our good deed,
Though Rome be therefore angry. Mulmutius made our laws
Who was the firſt of Britain, which did put
His brows within a golden Crown, and call'd
Himſelf a King.

Luc. I am ſorry Cymbeline,
That I am to pronounce Auguſtus Cæſar
(Cæſar that hath more Kings his Servants, then Thy ſelf Domeſtick Officers) thine Enemy.
Receive it from me then. War, and Confuſion
In Cæſars name pronounce I 'gainſt thee: Look
For fury, not to be reſiſted. Thus defi'd,
I thank thee for my ſelf.

Cym. Thou art welcome Caius,
Thy Cæſar Knighted me; my youth I ſpent
Much under him: of him, I gather'd Honour,
Which he, to ſeek of me again, perforce,
Behooves me keep at utterance. I am perfect,
That the Pannonians and Dalmatians, for
Their Liberties are now in Armes: a Preſident
Which not to read, would ſhew the Britains cold:
So Cæſar ſhall not find them.

Luc. Let proof ſpeak.

Clot. His Majeſty bids you welcome. Make paſtime with us a day, or two, or longer: if you ſeek us afterwards in other tearmes, you ſhall find us in our Salt-water-Girdle: if you beat us out of it, it is yours: if you fall in the adventure, our Crows ſhall fare the better for you; and there's an end.

Luc. So, ſir.

Cym. I know your Maſters pleaſure, and he mine:
All the Remain, is welcome.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Piſania reading of a Letter.

Piſ. How? of Adultery? Wherefore write you not
What Monſters her accuſe? Leonatus:
Oh Maſter, what a ſtrange infection

Is faln into thy ear? What falſe Italian,
(As poiſonous tongu'd, as handed) hath prevail'd
On thy too ready hearing? Diſloyal? No.
She's puniſh'd for her truth; and undergoes
More Goddeſs-like, then Wife-like; ſuch Aſſaults
As would take in ſome Virtue. Oh my Maſter,
Thy mind to her, is now as low, as were
Thy Fortunes. How? that I ſhould murther her,
Upon the Love, and truth, and vowes; which I
Have made to thy command? I her? Her bloud?
If it be ſo, to do good ſervice, never
Let me be counted ſerviceable. How look I,
That I ſhould ſeem to lack humanitie,
So much as this Fact comes to? Do't: the Letter.
That I have ſent her, by her own command,
Shall give thee opportunitie. Oh damn'd paper,
Black as the Ink that's on thee: ſenſeleſs bauble,
Art thou a Fœdarie for this act; thou look'ſt
So Virgin-like without? Loe here ſhe comes.

Enter Imogen.

I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

Imo. How no, Piſanio?

Piſ. Madam, here is a Letter from my Lord.

Imo. Who! thy Lord? that is my Lord Leonatus?
Oh, learn'd indeed were that Aſtronomer
That knew the Starres, as I his Characters,
Hel'd lay the Future open. You good gods,
Let what is here contain'd, relliſh of Love,
Of my Lord's health: of his content: yet not
That we two are a-ſunder, let that grieve him;
Some griefs are medcinable, that is one of them,
For it doth phyſick Love, of his content,
All but in that. Good Wax, thy leave: bleſt be
You Bees that make theſe Locks of counſel. Lovers,
And men in dangerous Bonds pray not alike.
Though Forfeitours you caſt in priſon, yet
You claſp young Cupid's tables: good Newes gods.

Iuſtice, and your Father's wrath (ſhould he take me in his Dominion) could not be ſo cruel to me, as you, (oh the deareſt of Creatures) would even renew me with your eyes. Take notice that I am in Cambria at Milford-Haven: what your own Love, will out of this adviſe you, follow. So he wiſhes you all happineſs, that remains loyal to his Vow, and your increaſing in Love.

Leonatus Poſthumus.

Oh for a Horſe with wings: Hear'ſt thou, Piſanio?
He is at Milford-Haven: Read, and tell me
How far 'tis thither. If one of mean affairs
May plod it in a week, why may not I
Glide thither in a day? then true Piſanio,
Who long'ſt like me, to ſee thy Lord; who long'ſt
(Oh let me bate) but not like me: yet long'ſt
But in a fainter kind. Oh not like me:
For mine's beyond, beyond: ſay, and ſpeak thick
(Love's Counſellor ſhould fill the bores of hearing,
To th'ſmothering of the Senſe) how far it is
To this ſame bleſſed Milford. And by th'way
Tell me how Wales was made ſo happy, as T'inherit ſuch a Haven. But firſt of all,
How may we ſteal from hence: and for the gap
That we ſhall make in time, from our hence-going,
And our return, to excuſe: but firſt, how get hence.
Why ſhould excuſe be borne or e're begot?
We'll talk of that hereafter. Prythee ſpeak,
How many ſcore of Miles may we well ride
'Twixt hour and hour?

Piſ. One ſcore 'twixt Sun, and Sun,
Madam's enough for you: and too much too.

Imo. Why, one that rode to's Execution, Man,
Could never go ſo ſlow: I have heard of Riding wagers,
Where Horſes have been nimbler then the Sands
That run i'th'Clocks behalf. But this is Foolrie,
Go, bid my Woman feign a ſickneſs, ſay
She'll home to her Father, and provide me preſently
A Riding Suit: No coſtlier then would fit
A Franklins Huſwife.

Piſ. Madam, you're beſt conſider.

Imo. I ſee before me (Man) nor here, nor here,
Nor what enſues but have a Fog in them,
That I cannot look through. Away, I prythee,
Do as I bid thee: there's no more to ſay:
Acceſſible is none but Milford way. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. A goodly day, not to keep houſe with ſuch,
Whoſe Roofe's as low as ours: Sleep Boyes, this gate
Inſtructs you how t'adore the Heavens; and bows you
To a mornings holy office. The Gates of Monarchs
Are Arch'd ſo high, that Giants may jet through
And keep their impious Turbands on, without
Good morrow to the Sun. Hail thou fair Heaven,
We houſe i'th'Rock, yet uſe thee not ſo hardly,
As prouder livers do.

Guid. Hail Heaven.

Arvir. Hail Heaven.

Bela. Now for our Mountain ſport, up to yond hill
Your leggs are young: I'le tread theſe Flats. Conſider,
When you above perceive me like a Crow,
That it is Place, which leſſens and ſets off
And you may then revolve what tales I have told you,
Of Courts of Princes; of the tricks in War.
This ſervice, is not Service; ſo being done,
But being ſo allowed. To apprehend thus,
Draws us a profit from all things we ſee:
And often to our comfort, ſhall we find
The ſharded Beetle, in a ſafer hold
Then is the full-wing'd Eagle. Oh this life,
Is Nobler, then attending for a check:
Richer, then doing nothing for a Babe:
Prouder then ruſtling in un-paid-for Silk:
Such gain the Cap of him, that makes him fine,
Yet keeps his Book uncroſs'd, no life to ours.

Gui. Out of your proof you ſpeak: we poor unfledg'd,
Have never wing'd from view o'th'neſt; nor know not
What Air's from home. Hap'ly this life is beſt,
(If quiet life be beſt) ſweeter to you
That have a ſharper known; Well correſponding
With your ſtiff Age; but unto us, it is
A Cell of Ignorance: travailing a bed,
A Priſon or a Debtor, that not dares
To ſtride a limit.

Arvi. What ſhould we ſpeak of
When we are old as you? when we ſhall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December? How
In this our pinching Cave, ſhall we diſcourſe

The freezing houres away? We have seen nothing:
We are beastly; subtle as the Fox for prey,
Like warlike as the Wolf, for what we eat:
Our Valour is to chase what flies: our Cage
We make a Quire, as doth the prison'd Bird,
And sing our Bondage freely.
Bel. How you speak?
Did you but know the Citie's Usuries,
And felt them knowingly: the Art o'th'Court,
As hard to leave, as keep: whose top to climb
Is certain falling: or so slipp'ry, that
The fear's as bad as falling. The toil o'th'War
A pain that only seems to seek our danger
I'th'name of Fame, and Honour, which dyes i'th'search,
And hath as oft a sland'rous Epitaph,
As Record of fair Act. Nay, many times
Doth ill deserve, by doing well: what's worse
Must curt'sie at the Censure. Oh Boyes, this Storie
The world may read in me: My bodie's mark'd
With Roman Swords; and my report was once
First with the best of Note. Cymbeline lov'd me,
And when a Souldier was the Theme, my name
Was not far off: then was I as a Tree
Whose boughes did bend with fruit. But in one night,
A Storm, or Robbery (call it what you will)
Shook down my mellow hangings: nay my Leaves,
And left me bare to weather.
Gui. Uncertain favour.
Bel. My fault being nothing (as I have told you oft)
But that two Villains, whose false Oathes prevail'd
Before my perfect Honour, swore to Cymbeline,
I was Confederate with the Romans: so
Followed my Banishment, and this twenty yeares,
This Rock, and these Demesnes, have been my World,
Where I have liv'd at honest freedome, payed
More pious debts to Heaven, then in all
The fore-end of my time. But, up to th'Mountains,
This is not Hunter's Language; he that strikes
The Venison first, shall be the Lord o'th'Feast,
To him the other two shall minister,
And we will fear no poison, which attends
In place of greater State:
I'le meet you in the Vallyes. Exeunt.
How hard it is, to hide the sparks of Nature?
These Boyes know little they are Sonnes to th'King,
Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.
They think they are mine,
And though train'd up thus meanly
I'th'Cave, whereon the Bow their thoughts do hit
The Roofes of Palaces, and Nature prompts them
In simple and low things, to Prince it, much
Beyond the trick of others. This Paladour,
The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, whom
The King his Father call'd Guiderius. Jove,
When on my three-foot stool I sit, and tell
The warlike feats I have done, his spirits fly out
Into my story: say thus mine Enemy fell,
And thus I set my foot on's neck, even then
The Princely bloud flows in his Cheek, he sweats,
Strains his young Nerves, and puts himself in posture
That acts my words. The younger Brother Cadwall,
Once Arviragus, in as like a figure
Strikes life into my speech, and shews much more
His own conceiving. Hark, the Game is rouz'd,
Oh Cymbeline. Heaven and my Conscience knows
Thou did'st unjustly banish me: whereon
At three, and two years old, I stole these Babes,
Thinking to bar thee of Succession, as
Thou reft'st me of my Lands. Euriphile,
Thou wast their Nurse, they took thee for their mother
And every day do honour to her Grave:
My self Belarius, that am Morgan call'd
They take for Natural Father. The Game is up. Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Pisanio and Imogen.

Imo. Thou told'st me when we came from horse, the place
Was near at hand: Ne're long'd my Mother so
To seem first, as I have now: Pisanio, Man:
Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind
That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh
From th'inward of thee? One, One, but painted thus
Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
Beyond self-explication. Put thy self
Into a haviour of less fear, e're wildness
Vanquish my staider Senses. What's the matter?
Why tender'st thou that Paper to me, with
A look untender? If't be Summer News
Smile to't before: if Winterly, thou need'st
But keep that count'nance still. My Husband's hand?
That Drug-damn'd Italy, hath out-crafted him,
And he's at some hard point. Speak man, thy tongue
May take off some extremity, which to read
Would be even mortal to me.
Pis. Please you read,
And you shall find me (wretched man) a thing
The most disdain'd of Fortune.

Imogen reads.

Thy Mistress (Pisanio) hath play'd the Strumpet in my Bed: the Testimonies whereof, lye bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak Surmises, but from proof as strong as my grief, and as certain as I expect my Revenge. That part, thou (Pisanio) must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers; let thine own hands take away her life: I shall give thee opportunity at Milford Haven. She hath my Letter for the purpose; where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done. thou art the Pander to her dishonour, and equally to me disloyal.

Pis. What shall I need to draw my Sword, the Paper
Hath cut her throat already. No, 'tis slander,
Whose edge is sharper then the Sword, whose tongue
Out-venoms all the Worms of Nile, whose breath
Rides on the posting winds, and doth belye
All corners of the World. Kings, Queens, and States,
Maids, Matrons, nay the secrets of the Grave
This viperous slander enters. What chear, Madam?
Imo. False to his Bed? What is it to be false?
To lye in watch there, and to think on him?
To weep 'twixt clock and clock? If sleep charge Nature,
To break it with a fearfull dream of him,
And cry my self awake? that's false to's bed? is it?
Pisa. Alas, good Lady.
Imo. I false? thy Conscience witness: Iachimo,
Thou did'st accuse him of Incontinencie,
Thou then look'dst like a Villain: now, me thinks

Thy

Thy favours good enough. Some Jay of Italy
(Whose Mother was her painting) hath betraid him:
Poor I am stale, a Garment out of fashion,
And for I am richer then to hang by th' walles,
I must be ript: To pieces with me: Oh!
Mens Vowes are womens Traitors. All good seeming
By thy revolt (oh Husband) shall be thought
Put on for Villany; not born wher't growes,
But worn a bait for Ladies.
Pisa. Good Madam, hear me.
Imo. True honest men being heard, like false Æneas,
Were in his time thought false: and Synons weeping
Did scandall many a holy teare: took pitty
From most true wretchednesse. So thou, Posthumus,
Wilt lay the leven to all proper men;
Goodly, and gallant, shall be false and perjur'd
From thy great faile: Come, Fellow, be thou honest,
Doe thou thy Masters bidding. When thou seest him,
A little witnesse my obedience. Look,
I draw the Sword my self, take it, and hit
The innocent Mansion of my Love (my Heart:)
Fear not, 'tis empty of all things, but Grief:
Thy Master is not there, who was indeed
The riches of it. Do his bidding, strike,
Thou may'st be valiant in a better cause;
But now thou seem'st a Coward.
Pis. Hence, vile Instrument,
Thou shalt not damn my hand.
Imo. Why, I must dye:
And if I doe not by thy hand, thou art
No Servant of thy Masters. Against Self-slaughter,
There is a prohibition so Divine
That cravens my weak hand: Come, here's my heart:
Something's afoot: Soft, soft, we'll no defence,
Obedient as the Scabbard. What is here,
The Scriptures of the Loyall Leonatus,
All turn'd to Heresie? Away, away,
Corrupters of my Faith, you shall no more
Be Stomachers to my heart: thus may poor Fooles
Believe false Teachers: Though those that are betraid
Doe feele the Treason sharply, yet the Traitor
Stands in worse case of woe. And thou, Posthumus,
That didd'st set up my disobedience 'gainst the King
My Father, and makes me put into contempt the suits
Of Princely Fellowes, shalt hereafter finde
It is no act of common passage, but
A strain of Rareness: and I grieve my self,
To think, when thou shalt be disedg'd by her,
That now thou tirest on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me. Prethee dispatch,
The Lamb entreats the Butcher. Where's thy Knife?
Thou art too slow to doe thy Masters bidding
When I desire it too.
Pis. Oh gracious Lady:
Since I receiv'd command to doe this businesse,
I have not slept one wink.
Imo. Do't, and to bed then.
Pis. I'le wake mine eye-balles first.
Imo. Wherefore then
Didd'st undertake it? Why hast thou abus'd
So many Miles, with a pretence? This place?
Mine Action? and thine own? Our Horses labour?
The time inviting thee? the perturb'd Court
For my being absent; whereunto I never
Purpose return. Why hast thou gone so farre
To be un-bent? when thou hast tane thy stand,
Th' elected Deer before thee?
Pis. But to win time
To loose so bad employment, in the which
I have consider'd of a course: good Lady,
Hear me with patience.
Imo. Talk thy Tongue weary, speak:
I have heard I am a Strumpet, and mine eare
Therein false strook, can take no greater wound,
Nor tent, to bottome that. But speak.
Pis. Then, Madam,
I thought you would not back again.
Imo. Most like,
Bringing me here to kill me.
Pis. Not so neither:
But if I were as wise, as honest, then
My purpose would prove well: it cannot be,
But that my Master is abus'd. Some Villain,
I, and singular in his Art, hath done you both
This cursed injury.
Imo. Some Roman Curtezan?
Pis. No, on my life:
I'le give him notice you are dead, and send him
Some bloody sign of it. For 'tis commanded
I should doe so: you shall be miss't at Court,
And that will well confirm it,
Imo. Why, good Fellow,
What shall I doe the while? Where bide? How live?
Or in my life, what comfort, when I am
Dead to my Husband?
Pis. If you'll back to th' Court.
Imo. No Court, no Father: nor no more adoe
With that harsh, noble, simple nothing?
That Clotten, whose Love-suit hath been to me
As fearfull as a Siege.
Pis. If not at Court,
Then not in Britain must you bide.
Imo. Where then?
Hath Britain all the Sun that shines? Day? Night?
Are they not but in Britain? Ith' worlds Volume
Our Britain seems as of it, but not in't:
In a great Poole a Swannes nest, prethee think
There's livers out of Britain.
Pis. I am most glad
You think of other Place: Th' Ambassador
Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To morrow. Now, if you could wear a minde
Dark, as your Fortune is, and but disguise
That which t'appear it self, must not yet be,
But by self-danger, you should tread a course
Pretty, and full of view: yea, happily, neer
The residence of Posthumus; so nigh (at last)
That though his Actions were not visible, yet
Report should render him hourely to your eare,
As truly as he moves.
Imo. Oh for such meanes,
Though perill to my modesty, not death on't
I would adventure.
Pis. Well then, here's the point:
You must forget to be a Woman: change
Command into Obedience. Fear and Niceness
(The Handmaids of all Women, or more truly Woman it pretty self) into a waggish courage,
Ready in gybes, quick-answer'd, saucy, and
As quarrellous as the Weazell: Nay, you must
Forget that rarest treasure of your Cheek,
Exposing it (but oh the harder heart,

Alack no remedy) to the greedy touch
Of common-kissing Titan: and forget
Your labour-some and dainty trimmes, wherein
You made great Juno angry.
Imo. Nay, be brief:
I see into thy end, and am almost
A man already.
Pis. First, make your self but like one,
Fore-thinking this. I have already fit
('Tis in my Cloak-bagge) Doublet, Hat, Hose, all
That answer to them: Would you in their serving,
(And with what imitation you can borrow
From youth of such a season) 'fore Noble Lucius
Present your self, desire his service: tell him
Wherein you're happy, which will make him know,
If that his head have eare in Musick, doubtlesse
With joy he will embrace you: for he's Honourable,
And doubling that, most holy. Your means abroad:
You have me rich, and I will never faile
Beginning, nor supplyment.
Imo. Thou art all the comfort
The Gods will diet me with. Prethee away,
There's more to be consider'd: but we'll even
All that good time will give us. This attempt,
I am Souldier too, and will abide it with
A Princes Courage. Away, I prethee.
Pis. Well, Madam, we must take a short farewell,
Lest being miss'd, I be suspected of
Your carriage from the Court. My Noble Mistris,
Here is a box, I had it from the Queen,
What's in't is precious: If you are sick at Sea,
Or Stomack-qualm'd at Land, a Dramme of this
Will drive away distemper. To some shade,
And fit you to your Manhood: may the Gods
Direct you to the best.
Imo. Amen: I thank thee, Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, Lucius, and Lords.

Cym. Thus farre, and so farewell.
Luc. Thanks, Royall Sir:
My Emperor hath wrote, I must from hence,
And am right sorry, that I must report ye
My Masters Enemy.
Cym. Our Subjects (Sir)
Will not endure his yoake; and for our self
To shew lesse Soveraignty then they, must needs
Appear un-Kinglike.
Luc. So, Sir: I desire of you
A Conduct over Land, to Milford-Haven.
Madam, all joy befall your Grace, and you.
Cym. My Lords, you are appointed for that Office:
The due of Honour in no point omit:
So farewell Noble Lucius.
Luc. Your hand, my Lord.
Clot. Receive it friendly: but from this time forth
I wear it as your Enemy.
Luc. Sir, the Event
Is yet to name the winner. Fare you well.
Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my Lords,
Till he have crost Severn. Happinesse. Exit Lucius, &c.

Qu. He goes hence frowning: but it honours us
That we have given him cause.
Clot. 'Tis all the better,
Your valiant Britains have their wishes in it.
Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the Emperor
How it goes here. It fits us therefore ripely,
Our Chariots, and our Horsemen be in readinesse:
The Powers that he already hath in Gallia
Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves
His warre for Britain.
Qu. 'Tis not sleepy businesse,
But must be look'd to speedily, and strongly.
Cym. Our expectation that it should be thus
Hath made us forward. But my gentle Queen,
Where is our Daughter? She hath not appear'd
Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd
The duty of the day. She looks as like
A thing more made of malice, then of duty,
We have noted it. Call her before us, for
We have been too light in sufferance.
Qu. Royall Sir,
Since the exile of Posthumus, most retir'd
Hath her life bin: the Cure whereof, my Lord,
'Tis time must doe. 'Beseech your Majesty,
Forbear sharp speeches to her. She's a Lady
So tender of rebukes, that words are strokes,
And strokes death to her.

Enter a Messenger.

Cym. Where is she, Sir? How
Can her contempt be answer'd?
Mes. Please you, Sir,
Her Chambers are all lock'd, and there's no answer
That will be given to th' loud of noise we make.
Qu. My Lord, when last I went to visit her,
She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close,
Whereto constrain'd by her infirmity,
She should that duty leave unpaid to you
Which daily she was bound to proffer: this
She wish'd me to make known: but our great Court
Made me too blame in memory.
Cym. Her doores lock'd?
Not seen of late? Grant Heavens, that which I
Fear, prove false. Exit.
Qu. Son, I say, follow the King.
Clot. That man of hers, Pisanio, her old Servant
I have not seen these two dayes. Exit.
Qu. Go, look after:
Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus,
He hath a Drugge of mine: I pray, his absence
Proceed by swallowing that. For he believes
It is a thing most precious. But for her,
Where is she gone? Haply despaire hath seiz'd her:
Or wing'd with fervour of her love, she's flown
To her desired Posthumus: gone she is,
To death, or to dishonour, and my end
Can make good use of either. She being down,
I have the placing of the Brittish Crown.

Enter Cloten.

How now, my Son?
Clot. 'Tis certain she is fled.
Go in and cheer the King, he rages, none
Dare come about him.
Qu. All the better: may
This night fore-stall him of the comming day. Exit Qu.
Clot. I love and hate her: for she's fair and Royall,
And that she hath all courtly parts more exquisite

Then

Then Lady, Ladies, Woman, from every one
The best she hath, and she of all compounded
Out-tells them all. I love her therefore, but Disdaining me, and throwing Favours on
The low Posthumus, slanders so her judgement,
That what's else rare, is choak'd: and in that point
I will conclude to hate her, nay indeed,
To be reveng'd upon her. For, when Fooles------

Enter Pisanio.

Who is here? What, are you packing, sirrah?
Come hither: Ah you precious Pander, Villain,
Where is thy Lady? In a word, or else
Thou art straight way with the Fiends.

Pis. Oh, good my Lord.

Clo. Where is thy Lady? Or, by Jupiter,
I will not aske again. Close Villain,
I'le have this secret from thy heart, or rip
Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus?
From whose so many weights of baseness, cannot
A dramme of worth be drawn.

Pis. Alass, my Lord,
How can she be with him? When was she miss'd?
He is in Rome.

Clot. Where is she, Sir? Come nearer:
No farther halting: satisfie me home,
What is become of her:

Pis. Oh, my all-worthy Lord.

Clo. All-worthy Villain,
Discover where thy Mistris is, at once,
At the next word: no more of worthy Lord:
Speak, or thy silence on the instant, is
Thy condemnation and thy death.

Pis. Then, sir,
This Paper is the history of my knowledge
Touching her flight.

Clo. Let's see't; I will pursue her
Even to Augustus Throne.

Pis. Or this, or perish.
She's farre enough, and what he learns by this,
May prove his travell, not her danger.

Clo. Humh.

Pis. I'le write to my Lord she is dead: Oh, Imogen,
Safe may'st thou wander, safe return agen.

Clot. Sirrah, is this Letter true?

Pis. Sir, as I think.

Clot. It is Posthumus's hand, I know't. Sirrah, if thou would'st not be a Villain, but doe me true service: undergo those employments wherein I should have cause to use thee with a serious industry, that is, what villainy soe're I bid thee doe to perform it, directly and truly, I would think thee an honest man: thou should'st neither want my meanes for thy relief, nor my voyce for thy preferment.

Pis. Well, my good Lord.

Clot. Wilt thou serve me? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare Fortune of that Beggar Posthumus, thou canst not in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou serve me?

Pis. Sir, I will.

Clo. Give me thy hand, here's my Purse. Hast any of thy late Masters Garments in thy possession?

Pisan. I have (my Lord) at my Lodging, the same Suit he wore, when he took leave of my Lady and Mistresse.

Clo. The first service thou do'st me, fetch that Suit hither; let it be thy first service, go.

Pis. I shall, my Lord. Exeunt.

Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven: (I forgot to aske him one thing, I'le remember't anon:) even there, thou villain, Posthumus, will I kill thee. I would these Garments were come. She said upon a time (the bitternesse of it, I now belch from my heart) that she held the very Garment of Posthumus, in more respect, then my Noble and naturall person; together with the adornment of my Qualities. With that Suit upon my back will I ravish her: first kill him, and in her eyes: there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the Ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body, and when my lust hath dined (which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the Cloathes that she so prais'd:) to the Court I'le knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despis'd me rejoycingly, and I'le be merry in my Revenge.

Enter Pisanio.

Be those the Garments?

Pis. I, my Noble Lord.

Clo. How long is't since she went to Milford-Haven?

Pis. She can scarce be there yet.

Clo. Bring this Apparell to my Chamber, that is the second thing that I have commanded thee. The third is, that thou wilt be a voluntary Mute to my design. Be but dutious, and true preferment shall tender it self to thee. My Revenge is now at Milford, would I had wings to follow it. Come and be true. Exit.

Pis. Thou bidd'st me to my losse: for true to thee,
Were to prove false, which I will never be
To him that is most true. To Milford, go,
And find not her, whom thou pursuest. Flow, flow
You heavenly blessings on her: This Fool's speed
Be crost with slowness; Labour be his meed. Exit.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Imogen alone.

Imo. I see a man's life is a tedious one,
I have tired my self: and for two nights together
Have made the ground my bed. I should be sick,
But that my resolution helps me: Milford,
When from the Mountain top Pisanio shew'd thee,
Thou was't within a kenne. Oh, Jove, I think
Foundations flye the wretched, such I mean,
Where they should be reliev'd. Two Beggars told me,
I could not misse my way. Will poor Folks lye
That have afflictions on them, knowing 'tis
A punishment, or triall? Yes; no wonder,
When Rich-ones scarce tell true. To lapse in Falsnesse
Is sorer, then to lye for Need: and Falshood
Is worse in Kings, then Beggars. My dear Lord,
Thou art one oth' false Ones: now I think on thee,
My hunger's gone; but even before, I was
At point to sink for Food. But what is this?
Here is a path to't: 'tis some savage hold:
I were best not call; I dare not call: yet Famine
Ere it clean o're-throw Nature, make it valiant.
Plenty and peace breeds Cowards, Hardnesse ever
Of Hardinesse is Mother. Hoa? who's here?
If any that's civil, speak, if savage,

Take, or lend. Hoa? no anſwer? then I'le enter,
Beſt draw my Sword; and if mine Enemy
But fear the Sword like me, he'll ſcarcely look on't.
Such a Foe, good Heavens. Exit.

Scena Septima.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. You Polidore have prov'd beſt Woodman, and
Are Maſter of the feaſt: Cadwall and I
Will play the Cook, and Servant, 'tis our match:
The ſweat of induſtry would dry, and dye
But for the end it works to. Come, our ſtomacks
Will make what's homely, ſavoury; Wearineſſe
Can ſnore upon the Flint, when reſty Sloth
Findes the Down-pillow hard. No peace be here,
Poor houſe, that keep'ſt thy ſelf.
Gui. I am througly weary.
Arvi. I am weak with toyle, yet ſtrong in appetite.
Gui. There is cold meat ith' Cave, we'll brouz on that
Whil'ſt what we have kill'd be Cook'd.
Bel. Stay, come not in:
But that it eats our victualls, I ſhould think
Here were a Faiery.
Gui. What's the matter, Sir?
Bel. By Jupiter an Angel: or if not,
An earthly Paragon. Behold Divineneſſe
No elder then a Boy.

Enter Imogen.

Imo. Good Maſter, harme me not:
Before I enter'd here, I call'd, and thought
To have begg'd, or bought, what I have took: good troth
I have ſtoln nought, nor would not, though I had found
Gold ſtrew'd ith' Floore. Here's money for my Meat,
I would have left it on the Boord ſo ſoon
As I had made my Meale: and parted
With Prayers for the Provider.
Gui. Money? Youth.
Arvi. All Gold and Silver rather turn doe durt,
As 'tis no better reckon'd, but of thoſe
Who worſhip durty gods.
Imo. I ſee you're angry:
Know, if you kill me for my fault, I ſhould
Have died, had I not made it.
Bel. Whether bound?
Imo. To Milford-Haven.
Bel. What's your name?
Imo. Fidele, Sir; I have a Kinſman, who
Is bound for Italy: he embark'd at Milford,
To whom being going, almoſt ſpent with hunger,
I am faln in this offence.
Bel. Prethee (fair youth)
Think us no Churles: nor meaſure our good mindes
By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd,
'Tis almoſt night, you ſhall have better cheere
Ere you depart, and thanks to ſtay and eat it:
Boyes, bid him welcome.
Gui. Were you a woman, youth,
I ſhould wooe hard, but be your Groom in honeſty;
I bid for you, as I doe buy.
Arvi. I'le make't my comfort
He is a man, I'le love him as my Brother:
And ſuch a welcome as I'ld give to him
(After long abſence) ſuch is yours. Moſt welcome:
Be ſprightly, for you fall 'mongſt friends.
Imo. 'Mongſt friends.
If Brothers: would it had bin ſo, that they
Had bin my Father's Sons, then had my prize
Bin leſſe, and ſo more equall ballaſting
To thee, Poſthumus.
Bel. He wrings at ſome diſtreſſe.
Gui. Would I could free't.
Arvi. Or I, what ere it be,
What pain it coſt, what danger: gods!
Bel. Harke, Boyes.
Imo. Great men
That had a Court no bigger then this Cave,
That did attend themſelves, and had the virtue
Which their own Conſcience ſeal'd them: laying by
That nothing-gift of differing Multitudes
Could not out-piece theſe twain. Pardon me gods,
I'ld change my ſex to be Companion with them,
Since Leonatus falſe.
Bel. It ſhall be ſo:
Boyes, we'll go dreſſe our Hunt. Fair, you come in;
Diſcourſe is heavy, faſting: when we have ſupp'd
We'll mannerly demand thee of thy Story.
So farre as thou wilt ſpeak it,
Gui. Pray draw near.
Arvi. The night to th' Owle,
And Morn to th' Larke leſſe welcome.
Imo. Thanks, Sir.
Arvi. I pray draw near. Exeunt.

Scena Octava.

Enter two Roman Senators, and Tribunes.

1. Sen. This is the tenour of the Emperors Writ;
That ſince the common men are now in Action
'Gainſt the Pannonians, and Dalmatians,
And that the Legions now in Gallia, are Full weak to undertake our Warres againſt
The faln-off Britains, that we doe incite
The Gentry to this buſineſſe. He creates
Lucius Pro-Conſull: and to you the Tribunes
For this immediate Levy, he commands
His abſolute Commiſſion. Long live Cæſar.
Tri. Is Lucius Generall of the Forces?
2. Sen. I.
Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?
1. Sen. With thoſe Legions
Which I have ſpoke of, whereunto your levy
Muſt be ſuppliant: the words of your Commiſſion
Will tye you to the Numbers and the time
Of their diſpatch.
Tri. We will diſcharge our duty. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Cloten alone.

Clot. I am near to th' place where they ſhould meet, if Piſanio have mapp'd it truly. How fit his Garments ſerve me? Why ſhould his Miſtris who was made by him that that made the Taylor, not be fit too? The rather (saving reverence of the Word) for 'tis said a Womans fitnesse comes by fits: therein I must play the Workman, I dare speak it to my self, for it is not Vain-glory for a man, and his Glasse, to conferre in his own Chamber; I mean, the Lines of my body are as well drawn as his; no lesse young, more strong, not beneath him in Fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in Birth, alike conversant in generall services, and more remarkable in single oppositions: yet this imperseverant Thing loves him in my despight. What Mortality is? Posthumus, thy head (which now is growing upon thy shoulders) shall within this houre be off, thy Mistris inforced, thy Garments cut to pieces before thy face: and all this done, spurn her home to her Father, who may (happily) be a little angry for my so rough usage: but my Mother having power of his testinesse, shall turn all into my commendations. My Horse is tyed up safe, out Sword, and to a sore purpose: Fortune put them into my hand: This is the very description of their meeting place and the fellow dares not deceive me. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, and Imogen from the Cave.

Bel. You are not well: Remain here in the Cave,
We'll come to you after hunting.
Arvi. Brother, stay here:
Are we not Brothers?
Imo. So man and man should be,
But Clay and Clay differs in dignity,
Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick,
Gui. Go you to hunting, I'le abide with him.
Imo. So sick I am not, yet I am not well:
But not so Citizen a wanton, as
To seem to dye, ere sick: So please you, leave me,
Stick to your Journall course: the breach of Custome,
Is breach of all. I am ill, but your being by me
Cannot amend me. Society is no comfort
To one not sociable: I am not very sick,
Since I can reason of it: pray you trust me here,
I'le rob none but my self, and let me dye
Stealing so poorly.
Gui. I love thee: I have spoke it,
How much the quantity, the weight as much,
As I doe love my Father.
Bel. What? how? how?
Arvi. If it be sin to say so (Sir) I yoak me
In my good Brothers fault: I know not why
I love this youth, and I have heard you say,
Love's reasons without reason. The Beer at door,
And a demand who is't shall dye, I'ld say
My Father, not this Youth.
Bel. Oh noble strain!
O worthinesse of Nature, breed of greatnesse!
"Cowards, Father, Cowards, and base things, Sire, base:
"Nature hath Meale and Bran; Contempt and Grace.
I'me not their Father, yet who this should be,
Doth miracle it self, lov'd before me.
'Tis the ninth hour oth' Morn.
Arvi. Brother, farewell.
Imo. I wish ye sport.
Arvi. You health.-----So please you, Sir.
Imo. These are kind Creatures.
Gods, what lyes I have heard:
Our Courtiers say, all's savage, but at Court:
Experience, oh thou disprov'st Report.
Th'imperious Seas breed Monsters; for the Dish,
Poor Tributary Rivers, as sweet fish:
I am sick still, heart-sick: Pisanio,
I'le now taste of thy Drugge.
Gui. I could not stirre him:
He said he was gentle, but unfortunate;
Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest.
Arvi. Thus did he answer me: yet said hereafter,
I might know more.
Bel. To th' field, to th' field:
We'll leave you for this time, go in, and rest.
Arvi. We'll not be long away.
Bel. Pray be not sick,
For you must be our Huswife.
Imo. Well or ill,
I am bound to you. Exit.
Bel. And shalt be ever.
This youth, how e're distrest, appeares he hath had Good Ancestors.
Arvi. How Angel-like he sings?
Gui. But his neat Cookery?
Arvi. He cut our Roots in Characters,
And sawc't our Broths, as Juno had been sick,
And he her Dieter.
Arvi. Nobly he yoaks
A smiling with a sigh: as if the sigh
Was that it was, for not being such a smile:
The smile mocking the sigh, that it would flye
From so divine a Temple, to commix
With windes that Sailors raile at.
Gui. I doe note,
That grief and patience rooted in them both,
Mingle their spurres together,
Arvi. Grow patient,
And let the stinking Elder (Grief) untwine
His perishing root, with the encreasing Vine.
Bel. It is great morning. Come away: who's there?

Enter Clotten.

Clot. I cannot find those Runagates, that Villain
Hath mock'd me. I am faint.
Bel. Those Runagates?
Means he not us? I partly know him, 'tis
Cloten, the Son oth' Queen. I fear some Ambush:
I saw him not these many yeares, and yet
I know 'tis he: we are held as Out-lawes; hence.
Gui. He is but one: you, and my brother search
What Companies are near; pray you away,
Let me alone with him.
Clot. Soft, what are you
That flye me thus? Some Villain Mountainers?
I have heard of such. What Slave art thou?
Gui. A thing,
More slavish did I ne're, then answering
A Slave without a knock.
Clot. Thou art a Robber,
A Law-breaker, a Villain: yield thee, Thief.
Gui. To whom? to thee? what art thou? Have not I
An Arme as big as thine? a Heart as big:
Thy words I grant are bigger: for I wear not
My Dagger in my mouth. Say what thou art:

Why

Why I should yield to thee?
Clo. Thou Villain base,
Know'st me not by my Cloathes?
Gui. No, nor thy Taylor, Rascall,
Who is thy Grandfather: He made those Cloathes,
Which (as it seems) make thee.
Clo. Thou precious Varlet,
My Taylor made them not.
Gui. Hence then, and thank
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some Foole,
I am loth to beat thee.
Clot. Thou injurious Thief,
Hear but my name, and tremble.
Gui. What's thy name?
Clo. Cloten, thou Villain.
Gui. Cloten, thou double Villain be thy name,
I cannot tremble at it, were it Toad, or Adder, Spider,
'Twould move sooner.
Clot. To thy further fear,
Nay, to thy meer Confusion, thou shalt know
I am Son to th' Queen.
Gui. I am sorry for't: not seeming
So worthy as thy Birth.
Clot. Art not afeard?
Gui. Those that I reverence, those I fear, the Wise:
At Fooles I laugh, not fear them.
Clot. Dye the death:
When I have slain thee with my proper hand,
I'le follow those that even now fled hence:
And on the Gates of Luds-Town set your heads:
Yield Rustick Mountaineer. Fight and Exeunt.

Enter Belarius and Arviragus.

Bel. No Company's abroad?
Arvi. None in the world: you did mistake him sure.
Bel. I cannot tell: long is it since I saw him,
But Time hath nothing blurr'd those lines of Favour
Which then he wore: the snatches in his voyce,
And burst of speaking were as his: I am absolute
'Twas very Cloten.
Arvi. In this place we left them;
I wish my Brother make good time with him,
You say he is so fell.
Bel. Being scarce made up,
I mean to man; he had not apprehension
Of roaring terrors: For defect of judgement
Is oft the cause of Fear.

Enter Guiderius.

But see thy Brother.
Gui. This Cloten was a Fool, an empty purse,
There was no mony in't: Not Hercules
Could have knock'd out his Brains, for he had none:
Yet I not doing this, the Foole had born
My head, as I doe his.
Bel. What hast thou done?
Gui. I am perfect what; cut off one Cloten's head,
Son to the Queen (after his own report)
Who call'd me Traitor, Mountaineer, and swore
With his own hand he'ld take us in,
Displace our heads, where (thanks to th' gods) they grow
And set them on Luds-Town.
Bel. We are all undone.
Gui. Why, worthy Father, what have we to loose,
But that he swore to take our Lives? the Law
Protects not us, then why should we be tender,
To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us?
Play Judge, and Executioner, all himself?
For we doe fear no Law. What company
Discover you abroad?
Bel. No single soule
Can we set eye on: but in all safe reason
He must have some Attendants. Though his Honour
Was nothing but mutation; I, and that
From one bad thing to worse: Not Frenzy,
Not absolute madnesse could so farre have rav'd
To bring him here alone, although perhaps
It may be heard at Court, that such as we
Cave here, haunt here, are Out-lawes, and in time
May make some stronger head, the which he hearing,
(As it is like him) might break out, and swear
He'ld fetch us in, yet is't not probable
To come alone, either so undertaking,
Or they so suffering: then on good ground we fear,
If we doe fear this body hath a taile
More perilous then the head.
Arvi. Let Ord'nance
Come, as the gods fore-say it, howsoe're
My Brother hath done well.
Bel. I had no minde
To hunt this day: The Boy Fideles sicknesse
Did make my way long forth.
Gui. With his own Sword,
Which he did wave against my throat, I have tane
His head from him: I'le throw't into the Creek
Behinde our Rock, and let it to the Sea,
And tell the Fishes, he's the Queens Son, Cloten,
That's all I reake. Exit.
Bel. I fear 'twill be reveng'd:
Would (Polidore) thou hadst not done't: though valour
Becomes thee well enough.
Arvi. Would I had done't:
So the Revenge alone pursu'd me: Polidore,
I love thee brotherly, but envy much
Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would Revenges
That possible strength might meet, would seek us through
And put us to our answer.
Bel. Well, 'tis done:
We'll hunt no more to day, nor seek for danger
Where there's no profit. I prethee to our Rock,
You and Eidele play the Cooks: I'le stay
Till hasty Polidore return, and bring him
To dinner presently.
Arvi. Poor sick Fidele.
I'le willingly to him, to gain his colour,
I'ld let a Parish of such Clotens blood,
And praise my self for charity, Exit.
Bel. Oh thou Goddesse,
Thou divine Nature; thy self thou blazon'st
In these two Princely Boyes: they are as gentle
As Zephires blowing below the Violet,
Not wagging his sweet head; and yet, as rough
(Their Royall blood enchaf'd) as the rud'st winde,
That by the top doth take the Mountain Pine,
And make him stoop to th' Vale. 'Tis wonder
That an invisible instinct should frame them
To Royalty unlearn'd, Honour untaught,
Civility not seen from other: Valour,
That wildly growes in them, but yields a crop
As if it had been sow'd: yet still it's strange
What Clotens being here to us portends,
Or what his death will bring us.

Enter Guiderius.

Gui. Where's my Brother?

I have ſent Clotens Clot-pole down the ſtreame ;
In Embaſſie to his Mother ; his Bodies hoſtage
For h s return. Solemn Muſick.
Bel. My ingenuous Inſtrument,
(Harke Polidore) it ſounds : but what occaſion
Hath Cadwall now to give it motion ? Hark.
Gui. Is he at home ?
Bel. He went hence even now.
Gui. What does he mean ?
Since death of my dear'ſt Mother
It did not ſpeak before. All ſolemn things
Should anſwer ſolemn Accidents. The matter ?
Triumphs for nothing, and lamenting toyes,
Is jollity for Apes, and grief for Boyes.
Is Cadwall mad ?

Enter Arviragus, with Imogen dead, bearing her in his Armes.

Bel. Look, here he comes,
And brings the dire occaſion in his Armes,
Of what we blame him for.
Arvi. The Bird is dead
That we have made ſo much on. I had rather
Have skipt from ſixteen yeares of Age, to ſixty :
To have turn'd my leaping time into a Crutch,
Then have ſeen this.
Gui. Oh ſweeteſt, faireſt Lilly :
My Brother weares thee not the one half ſo well,
As when thou grew'ſt thy ſelf.
Bel. Oh melancholly,
Who ever yet could ſound thy bottome ? Finde
The Ooze, to ſhew that Coaſt thy ſluggiſh care
Might eaſileſt harbour in. Thou bleſſed thing.
Jove knowes what man thou might'ſt have made : but I,
Thou dyed'ſt a more rare Boy, of Melancholly.
How found you him ?
Arvi. Starke, as you ſee :
Thus ſmiling as ſome Flye had tickled ſlumber,
Not as deaths dart being laugh'd at : his right Cheek
Repoſing on a Cuſhion.
Gui. Where ?
Arvi. O'th' floore :
His armes thus leagu'd, I thought he ſlept, and put
My clouted Brogues ftom off my feet, whoſe rudeneſſe
Anſwer'd my ſteps too loud.
Gui. Why, he but ſleeps :
If he be gone he'll make his Grave a Bed :
With Female Faieries will his Tombe be haunted,
And Wormes will not come to thee.
Arvi. With faireſt Flowers
Whil'ſt Sommer laſts, and I live here, Fidele,
I'le ſweeten thy ſad grave : thou ſhalt not lack
The Flower that's like thy face. Pale-Primroſe, nor
The azur'd Hare-bell, like thy Veins : no nor
The leaf of Eglantine, whom not to ſlander,
Out-ſweetned not thy breath : the Raddock would
With Charitable bill (Oh bill ſore ſhaming
Thoſe rich-left-heires, that let their Fathers lye
Without a Monument) bring thee all this,
Yea, and furr'd Moſſe beſides. When Flowers are none
To winter-ground thy Coarſe------
Gui. Prethee have done,
And doe not play in Wench-like words with that
Which is ſo ſerious. Let us bury him,
And not protract with admiration, what
Is now due debt. To th' grave.
Arvi. Say, where's ſhall's lay him ?
Gui. By good Euriphile, our Mother.
Arvi. Be't ſo :
And let us (Polidore) though now our voyces
Have got the manniſh crack, ſing him to th' ground
As once to our Mother : uſe like note, and words,
Save that Euriphile muſt be Fidele.
Gui. Cadwall,
I cannot ſing : I'le weep, and word it with thee,
For Notes of ſorrow, out of tune, are worſe
Then Prieſts, and Vanes that lye.
Arvi. We'll ſpeak it then.
Bel. Great griefs I ſee med'cine the leſſe, For Cloten
Is quite forgot. He was a Queens Son, Boyes,
And though he came our Enemy, remember
He was paid for that : thou mean, and mighty rotting
Together have one duſt, yet Reverence
(That Angel of the world) doth make diſtinction
Of place 'twixt high and low. Our Foe was Princely,
And though you took his life, as being our Foe,
Yet bury him, as a Prince.
Gui. Pray thee fetch him hither,
Therſites body is as good as Ajax,
VVhen neither are alive.
Arvi. If you'll go fetch him,
VVe'll ſay our Song the whil'ſt : Brother begin.
Gui. Nay Cadwall, we muſt lay his head to th' Eaſt,
My Father hath a reaſon for't.
Arvi. 'Tis true.
Gui. Come on then, and remove him.
Arvi. So, begin.

SONG.

Guid. Fear no more the heat oth' Sun,
Nor the furious Winters rages,
Thou thy worldly task haſt done,
Home art gone, and take thy wages.
Golden Lads and Girles all muſt,
As Chimney-Sweepers come to duſt.
Arvi. Fear no more the frown oth' Great,
Thou art paſt the Tirants ſtroake,
Care no more to cloathe and eate,
To thee the Reed is as the Oake :
The Scepter, Learning, Phyſick muſt,
All follow this and come to duſt.
Guid. Fear no more the Lightning flaſh.
Arvi. Nor th' all-dreaded Thunder-ſtone.
Gui. Fear no ſlander, Cenſure raſh.
Arvi. Thou haſt finiſh'd Joy and Moan.
Both. All Lovers young, all Lovers muſt,
Conſign to thee, and come to duſt.
Guid. No Exorciſer harme thee,
Arvi. Nor no witch-craft charme thee.
Guid. Ghoſt unlaid forbear thee.
Arvi. Nothing ill come near thee.
Both. Quiet conſummation have,
And renowned be thy grave.

Enter Belarius with the body of Cloten.

Gui. VVe have done our obſequies :
Come lay him down.
Bel. Here's few Flowers, but about midnight more :
The hearbs that have on them cold dew oth' night
Are ſtrewings fitt'ſt for Graves : upon their Faces.
You were as Flowers, now wither'd : even ſo
Theſe Herbelets ſhall, which we upon you ſtrew.
Come on away, apart upon our knees :
The ground that gave them firſt, has them again :
Their pleaſures here are paſt, ſo are their pain. Exeunt.

Imogen

Imogen awakes.

Yes, Sir, to Milford-Haven, which is the way?
I thank you: by yond bush? pray how farre thither?
'Ods pittikins: can it be six mile yet?
I have gone all night: 'faith, I'le lye down and sleep.
But soft: no Bedfellow? Oh Gods, and Goddesses!
These Flowers are like the pleasures of the World;
This bloody man the care on't. I hope I dreame:
For so I thought I was a Cave-keeper,
And Cook to honest Creatures. But 'tis not so:
'Twas but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing,
Which the Brain makes of Fumes. Our very eyes,
Are sometimes like our Judgements, blinde. Good faith
I trembie still with fear: but if there be
Yet left in heaven, as small a drop of pitty
As a Wrens eye; fear'd Gods, apart of it.
The Dreame's here still: even when I wake it is Without me, as within me: not imagin'd, felt.
A headlesse man? The Garments of Posthumus?
I know the shape of's Leg: this is his Hand:
His Foot Mercuriall: his Martiall Thigh
The Brawns of Hercules: but his Joviall face------
Murther in heaven? How? 'tis gone. Pisanio,
All curses madded Hecuba gave the Greeks,
And mine to boot, be darted on thee: thou
Conspir'd with that irregulous devil Clotten,
Hath here cut off my Lord. To write, and read,
Be henceforth treacherous. Damn'd Pisanio
Hath with his forg'd Letters (damn'd Pisanio)
From this most braveſt vessell of the world
Strook the main top! Oh Posthumus, alas,
Where is thy head? where's that? Aye me! where's that
Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart,
And left his head on. How should this be, Pisanio?
Tis he and Clotten. Malice and Lucre in them
Have laid this Woe here. Oh 'tis pregnant, pregnant!
The Drugge he gave me, which he said was precious
And Cordiall to me, have I not found it
Murd'rous to th' Senses? that confirmes it home:
This is Pisanio's deed, and Clotten: Oh!
Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood,
That we the horrider may seem to those
Which chace to finde us, Oh, my Lord! my Lord!

Enter Lucius, Captains, and a Soothsayer.

Cap. To them, the Legions garrison'd in Gallia
After your will, have croſt the Sea, attending
You here at Milford Haven, with your Ships:
They are in readinesse.

Luc. But what from Rome?

Cap. The Senate hath stirr'd up the Confiners,
And Gentlemen of Italy, most willing Spirits,
That promise Noble Service: and they come
Under the Conduct of bold Iachimo,
Syenna's Brother.

Luc. When expect you them?

Cap. With the next benefit oth' winde.

Luc. This forwardnesse
Makes our hopes fair. Command our present numbers
Be mustered, bid the Captains look to't. Now, Sir,
What, have you dream'd of late of this warres purpose.

Sooth. Last night the very gods shew'd me a vision
(I feast, and pray'd for their Intelligence) thus:
I saw Joves Bird, the Roman Eagle wing'd
From the Spungy South, to this part of the West,
There vanish'd in the Sun-beames, which portends
Unlesse my Sins abuse my Divination)
Succeſſe to th' Roman hoast.

Luc. Dreame often so,
And never false. Soft hoa, what Trunk is here?
Without his top? the ruine speaks, that sometime
It was a worthy building. How? a Page?
Or dead, or sleeping on him? but dead rather:
For Nature doth abhorre to make his bed
With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.
Let's see the Boyes face.

Cap. He's alive, my Lord.

Luc. He'll then instruct us of his body. Young one,
Inform us of thy Fortunes, for it seems
They crave to be demanded: who is this
Thou mak'st thy bloody Pillow? Or who was he
That (otherwise then noble Nature did)
Hath alter'd that good picture? What's thy interest
In this sad wrack? How cam't? Who is't?
What art thou?

Imo. I am nothing: or if not,
Nothing to be were better: This was my Master,
A very valiant Britain, and a good,
That here by Mountainers lies slain: Alas,
There are no more such Masters: I may wander
From East to Occident, cry our for Service,
Try many, all good: serve truly: never
Finde such another Master.

Luc. 'Lack, good youth:
Thou mov'st no lesse with thy complaining, then
Thy Master in bleeding: say his name, good Friend,

Imo. Richard du Camp: If I doe lye and doe,
No harme by it, though the Gods hear, I hope
They'll pardon it. Say you, Sir?

Luc. Thy name?

Imo. Fidele, Sir.

Luc. Thou do'st approve thy self the very same:
Thy name well fits thy Faith, thy Faith, thy Name:
Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not say
Thou shalt be so well master'd, but be sure
No lesse belov'd. The Roman Emperors Letters
Sent by a Consull to me, should no sooner
Then thine own worth preferre thee: Go with me.

Imo. I'le follow, Sir. But first, an't please the gods,
I'le hide my Master from the Flyes as deep
As these poor Pickaxes can dig: and when
With wild wood-leaves & weeds I ha' strew'd his grave,
And on it said a Century of prayers,
(Such as I can) twice o're, I'le weep, and sigh,
And leaving so his service, follow you,
So please you entertain me.

Luc. I, good youth,
And rather Father thee, then Master thee: My Friends,
The Boy hath taught us manly duties: Let us
Finde out the prettiest Dazied-Plot we can,
And make him with our Pikes and Partizans
A Grave: Come, Arme him: Boy he is preferr'd
By thee, to us, and he shall be interr'd
As Souldiers can. Be cheerfull, wipe thines eyes,
Some falls are means the happier to arise. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Cymbeline, Lords, and Pisanio.

Cym. Again: and bring we word how 'tis with her,
A Feaver with the absence of her Son;

A madneſs, of which her life's in danger: Heavens,
How deeply you at once do touch me. Imogen,
The great part of my comfort, gone: My Queen
Upon a deſperate bed, and in a time
When fearfull Warres point at me: Her Son gone,
So needfull for his preſent? It ſtrikes me, me, paſt
The hope of comfort. But for thee, Fellow,
Who needs muſt know of her departure, and
Doſt ſeem ſo ignorant, we'll inforce it from thee
By a ſharp torture.

Pif. Sir, my life is yours,
I humbly ſet it at your will: But for my Miſtreſs,
I nothing know where ſhe remains: why gone,
Nor when ſhe purpoſes return. Beſeech your Highneſs,
Hold me your loyal Servant.

Lord. Good my Liege,
The day that ſhe was miſſing, ſhe was here;
I dare be bound he's true, and ſhall perform
All parts of his ſubjection loyally. For Cloten,
There wants no diligence in ſeeking him,
And will no doubt be found.

Cym. The time is troubleſome:
We'll ſlip you for a ſeaſon, but with jealouſie
Do's yet depend.

Lord. So pleaſe your Majeſty,
The Roman Legions all from Gallia drawn,
Are landed on your Coaſt, with ſupply
Of Roman Gentlemen, by the Senate ſent.

Cym. Now for the Counſel of my Son and Queen,
I am amaz'd with matter.

Lord. Good my Liege,
Your preparation can affront no leſs (ready:
Then what you hear of. Come more, for more you're
The want is, but to put theſe powers in motion,
That long to move.

Cym. I thank you: let's withdraw
And meet the time, as it ſeeks us, We fear not
What can from Italy annoy us, but
We grieve at chances here. Away. Exeunt.

Pif. I heard no Letter from my Maſter, ſince
I wrote him Imogen was ſlain. 'Tis ſtrange:
Nor hear I from my Miſtreſs, who did promiſe
To yield me often tidings. Neither know I
What is betide to Cloten, but remain
Perplext in all. The Heavens ſtill muſt work:
Wherein I am falſe, I am honeſt: not true, to be true.
Theſe preſent warres ſhall find I love my Countrey,
Even to the note o'th'King, or I'le fall in them:
All other doubts, by time let them be cleer'd,
Fortune brings in ſome Boats, that are not ſteer'd. Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Gui. The noiſe is round about us.

Bel. Let us from it.

Arvi. What pleaſure, Sir, find we in life, to lock it
From Action, and Adventure?

Gui. Nay, what hope
Have we in hiding us? this way the Romans
Muſt, or for Britains ſlay us, or receive us
For barbarous and unnatural Revolts
During their uſe, and ſlay us after.

Bel. Sonnes,
We'll higher to the Mountains, there ſecure us
To the King's party there's no going: newneſs
Of Cloten's death (we being not known, not muſter'd Among the Bands) may drive us to a render
Where we have liv'd; and ſo extort from's that
Which we have done, whoſe anſwer would be death
Drawn on his torture.

Gui. This is (Sir) a doubt
In ſuch a time, nothing becoming you,
Nor ſatisfying us.

Arvi. It is not likely,
That when they hear their Roman horſes neigh,
Behold their quarter'd Fires; have both their eyes
And eares ſo cloyd importantly as now,
That they will waſte their time upon our note,
To know from whence we are.

Bel. Oh, I am known
Of many in the Army: Many yeares
(Though Clotten then but young) you ſee, not wore him
From my remembrance. And beſides, the King
Hath not deſerv'd my ſervice, nor your loves
Who find in my Exile, the want of Breeding;
The certainty of this hard life, aye hopeleſs
To have the courteſie your Cradle promis'd,
But to be ſtill hot Summer's tanlings, and
The ſhrinking Slaves of Winter.

Gui. Then be ſo,
Better to ceaſe to be. Pray, Sir, to th'Army:
I, and my Brother are not known; your ſelf
So out of thought, and thereto ſo o're-grown,
Cannot be queſtion'd.

Arvi. By this Sun that ſhines
I'le thither: what thing is it, that I never
Did ſee man dye, ſcarce ever look'd on bloud,
But that of Coward Hares, hot Goats, and Veniſon?
Never beſtrid a Horſe ſave one, that had
A Rider like my ſelf, who ne're wore Rowel,
Nor Iron on his heel? I am aſham'd
To look upon the holy Sun, to have
The benefit of his bleſt Beams, remaining
So long a poor unknown.

Gui. By heavens I'le go,
If you will bleſs me, Sir, and give me leave,
I'le take the better care: but if you will not,
The hazard therefore due fall on me, by
The hands of Romans.

Arvi. So ſay I, Amen.

Bel. No reaſon I (ſince of your lives you ſet
So ſlight a valuation) ſhould reſerve
My crack'd one to more care. Have with you Boyes:
If in your Countrey warres you chance to dye,
That is my Bed too (Lads) and there I'le lye.
Lead, lead; the time ſeems long, their bloud thinks ſcorn
Till it flie out, and ſhew them Princes born. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Poſthumus alone.

Poſt. Yea bloudy cloth, I'le keep thee: for I am wiſht
Thou ſhould'ſt be colour'd thus. You married ones,
If each of you would take this courſe, how many
Muſt murther Wives much better then themſelves

For

For wrying but a little? Oh Pisanio,
Every good Servant does not all Commands:
No Bond, but to do just ones. Gods, if you
Should have ta'ne vengeance on my faults, I never
Had liv'd to put on this: so had you saved
The noble Imogen to repent, and strook
Me (wretch) more worth your Vengeance. But alack,
You snatch from hence for little faults; that's love
To have them fall no more: you some permit
To second ills with ills, each Elder worse,
And make them dread it, to the doers thrift
But Imogen is your own, do your best wills,
And make me blest to obey. I am brought hither
Among th'Italian Gentry, and to fight
Against my Ladies Kingdome: 'tis enough
That (Britain) I have kill'd thy Mistress: Peace,
I'le give no wound to thee: therefore good Heavens,
Hear patiently my purpose. I'le disrobe me
Of these Italian weeds, and suit my self
As does a Britain Peazant: so I'le fight
Against the part I come with: so I'le die
For thee (O Imogen) even for whom my life
Is every breath, a death: and thus unknown,
Pitied, nor hated, to the face of peril
My self I'le dedicate. Let me make men know
More valour in me, then my habits show.
Gods, put the strength o'th'Leonati in me:
To shame the guise o'th'world, I will begin,
The fashion less without, and more within. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Lucius, Iachimo, and the Roman Army at one door: and the Britain Army at another: Leonatus Posthumus following like a poor Souldier. They march over, and go out. Then enter again in skirmish Iachimo and Posthumus: he vanquisheth and disarmeth Iachimo, and then leaves him.

Iac. The heavines and guilt within my bosome,
Takes off my manhood: I have belyed a Lady,
The Princess of this Countrey; and the air on't
Revengingly enfeebles me, or could this Carle,
A very drudge of Natures, have subdu'd me
In my profession? Knighthoods, and Honours borne
(As I wear mine) are titles but of scorn.
If that thy Gentry (Britain) go before
This Lowt, as he exceeds our Lords, the odds
Is, that we scarce are men, and you are gods. Exit.

The Battel continues, the Britains flye, Cymbeline is taken: then enter to his rescue, Bellarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. Stand, stand, we have the advantage of the ground,
The Lane is guarded: Nothing routs us, but
The villany of our fears.
Gui. Arvi. Stand, stand and fight.

Enter Posthumus, and seconds the Britains. They rescue Cymbeline, and Exeunt.

Then enter Lucius, Iachimo, and Imogen.

Luc. Away boy from the troops, and save thy self:
For friends kill friends, and the disorder's such
As War were hood-wink'd.
Iac. 'Tis their fresh supplies.
Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely: or betimes
Let's re-inforce, or fly. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Posthumus, and a Britain Lord.

Lor. Cam'st thou from where they made the stand?
Post. I did.
Though you it seems came from the Fliers.
Lo. I did.
Post. No blame to you, Sir, for all was lost,
But that the Heavens fought: the King himself
Of his wings destitute, the Army broken,
And but the backs of Britains seen; all flying
Through a straight Lane, the Enemy full-hearted,
Lolling the tongue with slaught'ring: having work
More plentifull, then tools to do't: strook down
Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling
Merely through fear, that the strait pass was damm'd
With dead-men, hurt behind, and Cowards living
To dye with length'ned shame.
Lo. Where was this Lane?
Post. Close by the battel, ditch'd, and wall'd with turfe,
Which gave advantage to an ancient Souldier
(An honest one I warrant) who deserv'd
So long a breeding, as his white beard came to,
In doing this for's Countrey. Athwart the Lane,
He, with two striplings (Lads more like to run
The Countrey base, then to commit such slaughter,
With faces fit for Masks, or rather fairer
Then those for preservation cas'd, or shame)
Made good the passage, cryed to those that fled,
Our Britain's hearts die flying, not our men,
To darkness fleet soules that fly backwards; stand,
Or we are Romans, and will give you that
Like beasts, which you shun beastly, and may save
But to look back in frown: Stand, stand. These three,
Three thousand confident, in act as many:
For three performers are the File, when all
The rest do nothing. With this word stand, stand,
Accommodated by the Place; more Charming
With their own Nobleness, which could have turn'd
A Distaff to a Lance, guilded pale looks;
Part shame, part spirit renew'd, that some turn'd coward
But by example (Oh a sin in War, Damn'd in the first beginners) 'gan to look
The way that they did, and to grin like Lyons
Upon the Pikes o'th'Hunters. Then began
A stop i'th Chaser; a Retire: Anon
A Rout, confusion thick: forthwith they flie
Chickens, the way which they stopt Eagles: Slaves
The strides the Victors made: and now our Cowards
Like Fragments in hard Voyages became
The life o'th'need: having found the back door open
Of the unguarded hearts: heavens, how they wound,
Some slain before, some dying; some their Friends
O're-born i'th former wave, ten chac'd by one,
Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty:
Those that would dye, or e're resist, are grown
The mortal bugs o'th'Field.

Lor.

Lord. This was a strange chance:
A narrow Lane, an old man, and two Boyes.
Post. Nay, do not wonder at it: you are made
Rather to wonder at the things you hear,
Then to work any. Will you Rime upon't,
And vent it for a Mock'ry? Here is one:
"Two Boyes, an Old-man (twice a Boy) a Lane,
"Preserv'd the Britains, was the Romans bane.
Lord. Nay, be not angry, Sir.
Post. Lack, to what end?
Who dares not stand his Foe, I'le be his Friend:
For if he'l do, as he is made to do,
I know he'l quickly fly my friendship too.
You have put me into Rime.
Lord. Farewell, you're angry. Exit.
Post. Still going? this is a Lord: Oh Noble misery
To be i'th'field, and ask what newes of me:
To day, how many would have given their Honours
To have sav'd their Carkasses? took heel to do't,
And yet dyed too. I, in mine own woe charm'd,
Could not find death, where I did hear him groan,
Nor feel him where he strook. Being an ugly Monster,
'Tis strange he hides him in fresh Cups, soft Beds,
Sweet words; or hath more ministers then we
That draw his knives i'th'war. Well, I will find him:
For being now a Favourer to the Britain,
No more a Britain, I have resum'd again
The part I came in. Fight I will no more,
But yield me to the veriest Hind, that shall Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is Here made by th'Roman; great the answer be,
Britains must take. For me, my Ransom's death,
On either side I come to spend my breath;
Which neither here I'le keep, nor bear again,
But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter two Captains, and Souldiers.

1. Great Jupiter be prais'd, Lucius is taken,
'Tis thought the old man, and his Sonnes, were Angels.
2. There was a fourth man, in a silly habit,
That gave th'Affront with them.
1. So 'tis reported:
But none of 'em can be found. Stand, who's there?
Post. A Roman,
Who had not now been drooping here, if seconds
Had answer'd him.
2. Lay hands on him: a Dog,
A leg of Rome shall not return to tell
What Crowes have peckt them here; he brags his service
As if he were of note: bring him to th'King.

Enter Cymbeline, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Pisanio, and Roman Captives. The Captains present Posthumus to Cymbeline, who delivers him over to a Gaoler.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Posthumus, and Gaoler.

Gao. You shall not now be stolne,
You have locks upon you:
So graze, as you find Pasture.
2. Gao. I, or a stomack.
Post. Most welcome Bondage: for thou art a way
(I think) to liberty: yet am I better
Then one that's sick o'th'Gout, since he had rather
Groan so in perpetuity, then be cur'd
By th'sure Physitian, Death; who is the key
T'unbarre these Locks. My conscience, thou art fetter'd
More then my shanks, and wrists: you good gods give me
The penitent Instrument to pick that Bolt,
Then free for ever. Is't enough I am sorry?
So Children temporal fathers do appease;
Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent,
I cannot do it better then in Gyves,
Desir'd, more then constrain'd, to satisfie
If of my freedome 'tis the main part, take
No stricter render of me, then my All.
I know you are more clement then vild men,
Who of their broken Debtors take a third,
A sixt, a tenth, letting them thrive again
On their abatement; that's not my desire.
For Imogen's dear life, take mine, and though
'Tis not so dear, yet 'tis a life, you coyn'd it,
'Tween man, and man, they waigh not every stamp:
Though light, take Pieces for the figure's sake,
(You rather) mine being yours: and so great Powres,
If you will take this Audit, take this life,
And cancel those cold Bonds. Oh Imogen,
I'le speak to thee in silence.

Solemn Musick. Enter (as in an Apparition) Sicilius Leonatus, Father to Posthumus, an old man, attired like a warriour, leading in his hand an ancient Matron his wife, and mother to Posthumus) with Musick before them. Then after other Musick, follows the two young Leonati (Brothers to Posthumus) with wounds as they dyed in the warres. They circle Posthumus round as he lyes sleeping.

Sicil. No more thou thunder-Master
shew thy spite, on Mortal flyes:
With Mars fall out, with Juno chide, that thy Adulteries
Rates, and Revenges.
Hath my poor Boy done ought but well,
whose face I never saw:
I dy'd whil'st in the womb he stai'd,
attending Natures Law.
Whose Father then (as men report, thou Orphans Father art)
Thou should'st have bin, and shielded him,
from this earth-vexing smart.
Moth. Lucina lent not me her aid,
but took me in my throwes,
That from me was Posthumus ript,
came crying 'mongst his Foes.
A thing of pity.
Sici. Great Nature like his Ancestry,
moulded the stuff so fair:
That he deserv'd the praise o'th'World,
as great Sicilius heir.
1. Bro. When once he was mature for man,
in Britain where was he
That could stand up his parallel?
or fruitfull object be?
In eye of Imogen, that best
could deem his dignity.
Moth. With Marriage therefore was he mockt to be exil'd, and thrown From Leonati Seat, and cast
from her his dearest one:
Sweet Imogen?
Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo, slight thing of Italy,

To taint his nobler heart & brain, with needleſs jealouſie,
And to become the geek and ſcorn o'th'others villany ?
2. Bro. For this, from ſtiller ſeats we came,
our Parents, and us twain,
That ſtriking in our Countries cauſe,
fell bravely, and were ſlain,
Our Fealty, & Tenantius right, with honour to maintain.
1. Bro. Like hardiment Poſthumus hath to Cymbeline perform'd: (journ'd
Then Jupiter, thou King of gods, why haſt thou thus ad-
The Graces for her Merits due, being all to dolors turn'd?
Sici. Thy Chryſtal window ope; look out
no longer exerciſe
Upon a valiant Race, thy harſh, and potent injuries:
Moth. Since (Jupiter) our Son is good,
take off his miſeries.
Sicil. Peep through thy Marble Manſion, help,
or we poor Ghoſts will cry
Toth' ſhining Synod of the reſt, againſt thy Deity.
Bro. Help (Jupiter) or we appeal, and from thy juſtice flye.
Jupiter deſcends in Thunder and Lightning, ſitting upon an Eagle: he throwes a Thunder-bolt. The Ghoſts fall on their knees.
Jup. No more you petty Spirits of Region low
Offend our hearing: huſh. How dare you Ghoſts
Accuſe the Thunderer, whoſe Bolt (you know)
Sky-planted, batters all rebelling Coaſts.
Poor ſhadows of Elizium, hence, and reſt
Upon your never-withering banks of Flowres.
Be not with mortal accidents oppreſt,
No care of yours it is, you know 'tis ours.
Whom beſt I love, I croſs: to make my gift
The more delay'd, delighted. Be content,
Your low-laid Son, our godhead will uplift:
His comforts thrive, his Tryals well are ſpent:
Our Jovial Star reign'd at his Birth, and in
Our Temple was he married: Riſe, and fade,
He ſhall be Lord of Lady Imogen,
And happier much by his Affliction made
This tablet lay upon his breaſt, wherein
Our pleaſure, his full Fortune, doth confine,
And ſo away: no farther with your dinne
Expreſs Impatience, leſt you ſtir up mine:
Mount Eagle, to my Palace Chryſtalline. Aſcends.
Sicil. He came in thunder, his Celeſtial breath
Was ſulphurous to ſmell: the holy Eagle
Stoop'd, as to foot us: his Aſcenſion is
More ſweet then our bleſt fields: his Royal Bird
Prunes the immortal wing, and cloyes his Beak,
As when his god is pleas'd.
All. Thanks Jupiter.
Sici. The Marble Pavement clozes, he is enter'd
His radiant Roof: Away, and to be bleſt
Let us with care perform his great beheſt. Vaniſh.
Poſt. Sleep, thou haſt bin a Grandſire, and begot
A Father to me: and thou haſt created
A Mother, and two Brothers. But (oh ſcorn)
Gone, they went from hence ſo ſoon as they were born;
And ſo I am awake. Poor Wretches, that depend
On Greatneſs, Favour; Dream as I have done,
Wake, and find nothing. But (alas) I ſwerve:
Many Dream not to find, neither deſerve,
And yet are ſteep'd in Favours; ſo am I
That have this Golden chance, and know not why:
What Fairies haunt this ground? a book? Oh rare one,
Be not, as is our fangled world, a Garment
Nobler then that it covers. Let thy effects
So follow, to be moſt unlike our Courtiers,
As good, as promiſe.
Reads.
When as a Lyon's whelp, ſhall to himſelf unknown without ſeeking find, and be embrac'd by a piece of tender Air: And when from a ſtately Cedar ſhall be lopt branches, which being dead many yeares, ſhall after revive, be joynted to the old Stock, and freſhly grow, then ſhall Poſthumus end his miſeries, Britain be fortunate, and flouriſh in Peace and Plenty.
'Tis ſtill a Dream: or elſe ſuch ſtuff as Mad-men
Tongue, and brain not: either both, or nothing,
Or ſenſeleſs ſpeaking, or a ſpeaking ſuch
As ſenſe cannot untie. But what it is,
The Action of my life is like it, which I'le keep
If but for ſympathy.
Enter Gaoler.
Gao. Come Sir, are you ready for death?
Poſt. Over-roaſted rather: ready long agoe.
Gao. Hanging is the word, Sir, if you be ready for that, you are well Cook'd.
Poſt. So if I prove a good repaſt to the Spectators, the diſh payes the ſhot.
Gao. A heavy reckoning for you, Sir: but the comfort is, you ſhall be called to no more payments, fear no more Tavern Bills, which are often the ſadneſs of parting, as the procuring of mirth: you come in faint for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink: ſorry that you have payed too much, and ſorry that you are payed too much: Purſe and Brain, both empty: the brain the heavier, for being too light; the Purſe too light, being drawn of heavineſs. Oh, of this contradiction you ſhall now be quit: Oh the charity of a penny Cord, it ſummes up thouſands in a trice: you have no true Debtor, and Creditor but it: of what's paſt, is, and to come, the diſcharge: your neck (Sir) is Pen, Book, and Counters: ſo the Acquittance follows.
Poſt. I am merrier to die, then thou art to live.
Gao. Indeed, Sir, he that ſleeps, feels not the Tooth-Ache: but a man that were to ſleep your ſleep, and a Hangman to help him to bed, I think he would change places with his Officer: for look you, Sir, you know not which way you ſhall go.
Poſt. Yes indeed do I, fellow.
Gao. Your death has eyes in's head then: I have not ſeen him ſo pictur'd: you muſt either be directed by ſome that take upon them to know, or to take upon your ſelf that which I am ſure you do not know: or jump the after-enquiry on your own peril: and how you ſhall ſpeed in your journies end, I think you'll never return to tell one.
Poſt. I tell thee, Fellow, there are none want eyes, to direct them the way I am going, but ſuch as wink, and and will not uſe them.
Gao. What an infinite mock is this, that a man ſhould have the beſt uſe of eyes, to ſee the way of blindneſs: I am ſure ſuch hanging's the way of winking.
Enter a Meſſenger.
Meſ. Knock off his Manacles, bring your Priſoner to the King.
Poſt. Thou bring'ſt good newes, I am call'd to be made free.
Gao. I'le be hang'd then.
Poſt. Thou ſhalt be then freer then a Gaoler; no boks for

for the dead. Exeunt.

Gao. Unleſſe a man would marry a Gallows, and beget young Gibbets, I never ſaw one ſo prone: yet on my Conſcience, there are verier Knaves deſire to live, for all he be a Roman: and there be ſome of them too that die againſt their wills: ſo ſhould I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good: O there were deſolation of Gaolers and Galowſes: I ſpeak againſt my preſent profit, but my wiſh hath a preferment in't. Exit.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Cymbeline, Bellarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Piſanio, and Lords.

Cym. Stand by my ſide you, whom the gods have made
Preſervers of my Throne: wo is my heart,
That the poor Souldier that ſo richly fought,
Whoſe rags, ſham'd gilded Armes, whoſe naked breſt
Stept before Targes of proof, cannot be found:
He ſhall be happy that can find him, if
Our Grace can make him ſo.

Bel. I never ſaw
Such Noble fury in ſo poor a Thing;
Such precious deeds, in one that promis'd nought
But beggery and poor looks.

Cym. No tidings of him?

Piſa. He hath bin ſearch'd among the dead, and living,
But no trace of him.

Cym. To my grief, I am
The heir of his reward, which I will adde
To you (the Liver, Heart, and Brain of Britain)
By whom (I grant) ſhe lives. 'Tis now the time
To ask of whence you are. Report it.

Bel. Sir,
In Cambria are we born, and Gentlemen:
Further to boaſt, were neither true, nor modeſt,
Unleſſe I adde, we are honeſt.

Cym. Bow your knees:
Ariſe my Knights oth'Battle, I create you
Companions to our perſon, and will fit you
With Dignities becoming your eſtates.

Enter Cornelius and Ladies.

There's buſineſſe in theſe faces: why ſo ſadly
Greet you our Victory? you look like the Romans,
And not oth'Court of Britain.

Corn. Hail great King,
To ſowre your happineſſe, I muſt report
The Queen is dead.

Cym. Whom worſe then a Phyſitian
Would this report become; but I conſider,
By Med'cine life may be prolong'd, yet death
Will ſeize the Doctor too. How ended ſhe?

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life,
Which (being cruel to the world) concluded
Moſt cruell to her ſelf. What ſhe confeſt,
I will report ſo pleaſe you. Theſe her Women
Can trip me, if I erre, who with wet cheeks
Were preſent when ſhe finiſh'd.

Cym. Prithee ſay.

Cor. Firſt, ſhe confeſt ſhe never lov'd you: only
Affected Greatneſſe got by you: not you:
Married your Royalty, was wife to your place:
Abhorr'd your perſon.

Cym. She alone knew this:
And but ſhe ſpoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Corn. Your daughter, whom ſhe bore in hand to love
With ſuch integrity, ſhe did confeſſe
Was a Scorpion to her ſight, whoſe life
(But that her flight prevented it) ſhe had
Tane off by poiſon.

Cym. O moſt delicate fiend!
Who is't can read a Woman? is there more?

Corn. More, ſir, and worſe. She did confeſſe ſhe had
For you a mortal Mineral, which being took,
Should by the minute feed on life, and lingring,
By inches waſte you. In which time, ſhe purpos'd
By watching, weeping, tendance, kiſſing, to
O'recome you with her ſhew: yes and in time
(When ſhe had fitted you with her craft, to work
Her Son into th'adoption of the Crown:
But failing of her end by his ſtrange abſence,
Grew ſhameleſſe deſperate, open'd (in deſpight
Of heaven, and men) her purpoſes: repented
The evils ſhe hatch'd, were not effected: ſo
Diſpairing, died.

Cym. Heard you all this, her Women?

Lad. We did, ſo pleaſe your highneſſe.

Cym. Mine eyes
Were not in fault, for ſhe was beautifull:
Mine ears that heard her flattery, nor my heart,
That thought her like her ſeeming. It had been vitious
To have miſtruſted her: yet (Oh my Daughter)
That it was folly in me, thou maiſt ſay,
And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all.

Enter Lucius, Iachimo, and other Roman priſoners, Leonatus behind, and Imogen.

Thou com'ſt not Caius now for Tribute, that
The Britains have rac'd out, though with the loſſe
Of many a bold one: whoſe Kinſmen have made ſuit
That their good ſouls may be appeas'd, with ſlaughter
Of you their Captives, which our ſelf have granted,
So think of your eſtate.

Luc. Conſider, ſir, the chance of War the day
Was yours by accident: had it gone with us,
We ſhould not when the bloud was cool, have threatned
Our Priſoners with the Sword. But ſince the gods
Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives
May be call'd ranſome, let it come: ſufficeth,
A Roman, with a Romans heart can ſuffer:
Auguſtus lives to think on't: and ſo much
For my peculiar care. This one thing only
I will entreat, my Boy (a Britain born)
Let him be ranſom'd: never Maſter had
A page ſo kind, ſo duteous, diligent,
So tender over his occaſions, true,
So feat, ſo Nurſe-like: let his vertue joyn
With my requeſt, which I'le make bold, your highneſſe
Cannot deny: he hath done no Britain harme,
Though he have ſerv'd a Roman. Save him (Sir)
And ſpare no bloud beſide.

Cym. I have ſurely ſeen him:
His favour is familiar to me: Boy,
Thou haſt look'd thy ſelf into my grace,
And art mine own. I know not why, wherefore,
To ſay, live boy: nere thank thy Maſter, live;
And ask of Cymbeline what Boon thou wilt,
Fitting my bounty, and thy ſtate, I'le give it:

Yea, though thou do demand a Priſoner,
The Nobleſt tane.
Imo. I humbly thank your Highneſſe.
Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good Lad,
And yet I know thou wilt.
Imo. No, no, alack,
There's other work in hand: I ſee a thing
Bitter to me as death: your life, good Maſter,
Muſt ſhuffle for it ſelf.
Luc. The Boy diſdains me,
He leaves me, ſcorns me: briefly dye their joyes,
That place them on the truth of Girls, and Boyes.
Why ſtands he ſo perplext?
Cym. What would'ſt thou Boy?
I love thee more, and more: think more and more
What's beſt to ask. Know'ſt him thou look'ſt on? ſpeak
Wilt have him live? Is he thy Kin? thy friend?
Imo. He is a Roman, no more kin to me,
Then I to your Highneſſe, who being born your vaſſail
Am ſomething nearer.
Cym. Wherefore ey'ſt thou him ſo?
Imo. I'le tell you (Sir) in private, if you pleaſe
To give me hearing.
Cym. I, with all my heart,
And lend my beſt attention. What's thy name?
Imo. Fidele, ſir.
Cym. Thou'rt my good youth, my Page,
I'le be thy Maſter: walk with me: ſpeak freely.
Bel. Is not this Boy reviv'd from death?
Arvi. One ſand another
Not more reſembles that ſweet Roſie Lad:
Who dyed, and was Fidele: what think you?
Gui. The ſame dead thing alive.
Bel. Peace, peace, ſee further; he eyes us not, forbear,
Creatures may be alike: wer't he, I am ſure
He would have ſpoke to us.
Gui. But we ſee him dead.
Bel. Be ſilent: let's ſee further.
Piſa. It is my Miſtris:
Since ſhe is living, let the time run on,
To good, or bad.
Cym. Come, ſtand thou by our ſide.
Make thy demand aloud. Sir, ſtep you forth,
Give anſwer to this boy, and do it freely,
Or by your Greatneſſe, and the grace of it
(Which is our honour) bitter torture ſhall
Winnow the truth from falſhood. On, ſpeak to him.
Imo. My boon is, that this Gentleman may tender
Of whom he had this Ring.
Poſt. What's that to him:
Cym. That Diamond upon your finger, ſay
How came it yours?
Iach. Thou'lt torture me to leave unſpoken, that
Which to be ſpoke wou'd torture thee.
Cym. How? me?
Iach. I am glad to be conſtrain'd to utter that
Which torments me to conceal. By Villany
I got this Ring: 'twas Leonatus Jewel,
Whom thou did'ſt baniſh: and, which more may grieve
As it doth me, a Nobler Sir ne're liv'd (thee,
'Twixt ſky and ground. Wilt thou hear more my Lord?
Cym. All that belongs to this.
Iach. That Paragon, thy daughter,
For whom my heart drops bloud, and my falſe ſpirits
Quail to remember. Give me leave, I faint.
Cym. My daughter what of her? Renew thy ſtrength
I had rather thou ſhoul'ſt live, while Nature will,
Then die ere I hear more: ſtrive man, and ſpeak.
Iach. Upon a time, unhappy was the clock
That ſtrook the hour: it was in Rome, accurſt
The Manſion where: 'twas at a feaſt, oh would
Our Viands had bin poiſon'd (or at leaſt
Thoſe which I heav'd to head:) the good Poſthumus,
(What ſhould I ſay? he was too good to be
Where ill men were, and was the beſt of all
Among'ſt the rar'ſt of good ones) ſitting ſadly,
Hearing us praiſe our Loves of Italy
For beauty, that made barren the ſwell'd boaſt
Of him that beſt could ſpeak: for Feature, laming
The Shrine of Venus, or ſtraight-pight Minerva,
Poſtures, beyond brief Nature. For Condition,
A ſhop of the qualities, that man
Loves woman for, beſides that hook of Wiving,
Fairneſſe, which ſtrikes the eye.
Cym. I ſtand on fire. Come to the matter.
Iach. All too ſoon I ſhall,
Unleſſe thou would'ſt grieve quickly. This Poſthumus,
Moſt like a Noble Lord, in love, and one
That had a Royal Lover, took his hint,
And (not diſpraiſing whom we prais'd, therein
He was as calme as vertue) he began
His Miſtris picture, which by his tongue, being made,
And then a mind put in't, either our brags
Were crack'd of Kitchin-Trulls, or his deſcription
Prov'd us unſpeaking ſots.
Cym. Nay, nay, to th'purpoſe.
Iach. Your daughters Chaſtity, (there it begins)
He ſpake of her, as Dian had hot dreams,
And ſhe alone were cold: Whereat, I wretch
Made ſcruple of his praiſe, and wag'd with him
Pieces of Gold, 'gainſt this, which then he wore
Upon his honor'd finger; to attain
In ſuit the place of's bed, and win this Ring
By hers, and mine Adultery: he (true Knight)
No leſſer of her honour confident
Then I did truly find her, ſtakes this Ring,
And would ſo, had it been a Carbuncle
Of Phœbus Wheel; and might ſo ſafely, had it
Bin all the worth of's Car. Away to Britain
Poſt I in this deſigne: well may you (Sir)
Remember me at Court, where I was taught
Of your chaſt Daughter, the wide difference
'Twixt Amorous, and Villanous. Being thus quench'd
Of hope, not longing; mine Italian brain,
'Gan in your duller Britain operate
Moſt vildly: for my vantage excellent.
And to be brief, my practiſe ſo prevail'd
That I return'd with ſimular proof enough,
To make the Noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his belief in her Renown,
With Tokens thus, and thus; averring notes
Of Chamber hanging, Pictures, this her Bracelet
(Oh cunning how I got it) nay ſome marks
Of ſecret on her perſon, that he could not
But think her bond of Chaſtity quite crack'd,
I having tane the forfeit, whereupon,
Me thinks I ſee him now.
Poſt. I, ſo thou do'ſt,
Italian fiend. Aye me, moſt credulous fool,
Egregious murtherer, Thief, any thing
That's due to all the Villains paſt, in being
To come. Oh give me Cord, Knife, or Poiſon,

Some

Some upright Juſticer. Thou King, ſend out
For tortures ingenious: it is I
That all th'abhorred things oth'earth amend
By being worſe then they. I am Poſthumus,
That kill'd thy Daughter: Villain-like, I lie,
That caus'd a leſſer villain then my ſelf,
A ſacrilegious Thief to do't. The Temple
Of Vertue was ſhe: yea, and ſhe her ſelf.
Spet, and throw ſtones, caſt myre upon me, ſet
The dogs oth'ſtreet to bait me: every villain
Be call'd Poſthumus Leonatus, and
Be villany leſſe then 'twas. Oh Imogen!
My Queen, my life, my wife: oh Imogen,
Imogen, Imogen.

Imo. Peace, my Lord, hear, hear.

Poſt. Shall's have a play of this?
Thou ſcornfull Page, there lie thy part,

Piſa. Oh Gentleman, help,
Mine and your Miſtris: Oh, my Lord Poſthumus,
You ne're kill'd Imogen till now: help, help,
Mine honor'd Lady.

Cym. Does the world go round?

Poſt. How comes theſe ſtaggers on me?

Piſa. Wake my Miſtris.

Cym. If this be ſo, the gods do mean to ſtrike me
To death with mortal joy.

Piſa. How fares my Miſtris.

Imo. Oh get thee from my ſight,
Thou gav'ſt me poiſon: dangerous Fellow hence,
Breath not where Princes are.

Cym. The tune of Imogen.

Piſa. Lady, the gods throw ſtones of ſulphure on me, if
That box I gave you, was not thought by me
A pretious thing, I had it from the Queen.

Cym. New matter ſtill.

Imo. It poyſon'd me.

Corn. Oh gods!
I left out one thing which the Queen confeſt,
Which muſt approve thee honeſt. If Piſanio
Have (ſaid ſhe) given his Miſtris that Confection
Which I gave him for Cordial, ſhe is ſerv'd,
As I would ſerve a Rat.

Cym. What's this, Cornelius?

Corn. The Queen (Sir) very oft importun'd me
To temper poiſons for her, ſtill pretending
The ſatisfaction of her knowledge, only
In killing Creatures vild, as Cats and Dogs
Of no eſteem, I dreading, that her purpoſe
Was of more danger, did compound for her
A certain ſtuff, which being tane, would ſeize
The preſent power of life, but in ſhort time,
All Offices of Nature, ſhould again
Do their due Functions. Have you tane of it?

Imo. Moſt like I did, for I was dead.

Bel. My Boyes, there was our error.

Gui. This is ſure Fidele.

Imo. Why did you throw your wedded Lady fro you?
Think that you are upon a Rock, and now
Throw me again.

Poſt. Hang there like fruit, my ſoul,
Till the tree die.

Cym. How now, my fleſh? my child?
What, mak'ſt thou me a dullard in this Act?
Wilt thou not ſpeak to me?

Imo. Your bleſſing, ſir.

Bel. Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not,
You had a motive for't.

Cym. My tears that fall
Prove holy-water on thee; Imogen,
Thy Mother's dead.

Imo. I am ſorry for't, my Lord.

Cym. Oh, ſhe was nought; and long of her it was
That we meet here ſo ſtrangely: but her Son
Is gone, we know not how, nor where.

Piſa. My Lord,
Now fear is from me, I'le ſpeak troth. Lord Clotten
Upon my Ladies miſſing, came to me
With his ſword drawn, foam'd at the mouth, and ſwore
If I diſcover'd not which way ſhe was gone,
It was my inſtant death. By accident,
I had a feigned Letter of my Maſters
Then in my pocket, which directed him
To ſeek her on the Mountains nere to Milford,
Where in a frenzy, in my Maſters Garments
(Which he inforc'd from me) away he poſts
With unchaſt purpoſe, and with oath to violate
My Ladies honour, what became of him,
I further know not.

Gui. Let me end the Story: I ſlew him there.

Cymb. Marry, the gods forefend.
I would not thy good deeds, ſhould from my lips
Pluck a hard ſentence: prithee valiant youth
Deny't again.

Gui. I have ſpoke it, and I did it.

Cym. He was a Prince.

Gui. A moſt incivil one. The wrongs he did me
Were nothing Prince-like; for he did provoke me
With Language that would make me ſpurn the Sea,
If it could to roar to me. I cut off's head,
And am right glad he is not ſtanding here
To tell this tale of mine,

Cym. I am ſorry for thee:
By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and muſt
Endure our Law: thou'rt dead.

Imo. That headleſſe man I thought had bin my Lord

Cym. Bind the offender,
And take him from our preſence,

Bel. Stay, Sir King.
This man is better then the man he ſlew,
As well deſcended as thy ſelf, and hath
More of thee merited, then a band of Clottens
Had ever ſcar for. Let his Armes alone,
They were not born for bondage.

Cym. Why old Souldier:
Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for
By taſting of our wrath? how of deſcent
As good as we?

Arvi. In that he ſpake too far.

Cym. And thou ſhalt die for't.

Bel. We will die all three,
But I will prove that two on's are as good
As I have given out him. My Sons, I muſt
For mine own part, unfold a dangerous ſpeech,
Though haply well for you.

Arvi. Your danger's ours.

Guid. And our good his.

Bel. Have at it then, by leave
Thou had'ſt (great King) a Subject, who
Was call'd Belarius.

Cym. What of him? he is a baniſh'd traitor.

Bel. He it is that hath
Aſſum'd this age: indeed a baniſh'd man,

I know how, a Traitor.
Cym. Take him hence,
The whole world ſhall not ſave him.
Bel. Not too hot;
Firſt pay me for the Nurſing of thy Sons,
And let it be confiſcate all, ſo ſoon
As I have receiv'd it.
Cym. Nurſing of my Sons?
Bel. I am too blunt, and ſawcy: here's my knee:
Ere I ariſe, I will preferre my Sons,
Then ſpare not the old Father. Mighty Sir,
Theſe two young Gentlemen that call me father,
And think they are my Sons, are none of mine,
They are the iſſue of your Loyns, My Liege,
And bloud of your begetting.
Cym. How? my iſſue.
Bel. So ſure as you, your fathers: I (old Morgan)
Am that Bellarius, whom you ſometime baniſh'd:
Your pleaſure was my near offence, my puniſhment
It ſelf, and all my treaſon that I ſuffer'd,
Was all the harme I did. Theſe gentle Princes
(For ſuch, and ſo they are) theſe twenty years
Have I train'd up; thoſe Arts they have, as I
Could put into them. My breeding was (Sir)
As your Highneſſe knows, their Nurſe Euriphile
(Whom for the Theft I wedded) ſtole theſe Children
Upon my Baniſhment: I mooy'd her too't,
Having receiv'd the puniſhment before
For that which I did then. Beaten for Loyalty,
Excited me to treaſon. Their dear loſſe,
The more of you 'twas felt, the more it ſhap'd
Unto my end of ſtealing them. But gracious Sir,
Here are your Sons again: and I muſt looſe
Two of the ſweet'ſt Companions in the World.
The benediction of theſe covering heavens
Fall on their heads like dew, for they are worthy
To in-lay heaven with Starrs.
Cym. Thou weep'ſt, and ſpeak'ſt:
The Service that you three have done, is more
Unlike, then this thou tell'ſt. I loſt my children,
If theſe be they, I know not how to wiſh
A pair of worthier Sons.
Bel. Be pleas'd a while:
This Gentleman, whom I call Polidore,
Moſt worthy Prince, as yours, is true Guiderius:
This Gentleman, my Cadwall, Arviragus.
Your younger Princely Son, he ſir, was lapt
In a moſt curious Mantle, wrought by th'hand
Of his Queen Mother, which for more probation
I can with eaſe produce.
Cym. Guiderius had
Upon his neck a Mole, a ſanguine Star,
It was a mark of wonder.
Bel. This is he,
Who hath upon him ſtill that naturall ſtamp:
It was wiſe Natures end, in the donation
To be his evidence now.
Cym. Oh, what am I
A Mother to the birth of three? Nere Mother
Rejoyc'd deliverance more; Bleſt, pray you be,
That after this ſtrange ſtarting from your Orbes,
You may reign in them now: Oh Imogen,
Thou haſt loſt by this a Kingdome.
Imo. No, my Lord:
I have got two worlds by't. Oh my gentle Brothers,
Have we thus met? Oh never ſay hereafter
But I am truceſt ſpeaker. You call'd me Brother
When I was but your Siſter: I you Brother,
When we were ſo indeed.
Cym. Did you ere meet?
Arvi. I my good Lord.
Gui. And at firſt meeting lov'd,
Continu'd ſo, untill we thought he died.
Corn. By the Queens Dram ſhe ſwallow'd.
Cym. O rare inſtinct!
When ſhall I hear all through? this fierce abridgement,
Hath to it Circumſtantial branches, which
Diſtinction ſhould be rich in. Where? how liv'd you?
And when came you to ſerve our Roman Captive?
How parted with your Brother? How firſt met them?
Why fled you from the Court? And whether theſe?
And your three motives to the Battle; with
I know not how much more ſhould be demanded,
And all the other by-dependances
From chance to chance? But not the time, nor place
Will ſerve our long Interrogatories. See,
Poſthumus Anchors upon Imogen;
And ſhe (like harmleſſe lightning) throws her eye
On him: her brothers, Me: her Maſter hitting
Each object with a Joy: the Counter-change
Is ſeverally in all. Let's quit this ground,
And ſmoak the Temple with our Sacrifices.
Thou art my Brother, ſo we'll hold thee ever.
Imo. You are my Mother too, and did relieve me:
To ſee this gracious ſeaſon.
Cym. All ore-joy'd
Save theſe in bonds, let them be joyfull too,
For they ſhall taſte our Comfort.
Imo. My good Maſter, I will yet do you ſervice.
Luc. Happy be you.
Cym. The forlorn Souldier that ſo Nobly fought
He would have well becom'd this place, and grac'd
The thankings of a King.
Poſt. I am, ſir,
The ſouldier that did company theſe three
In poor beſeeming: 'twas a fitment for
The purpoſe I then follow'd. That I was he,
Speak Iachimo, I had you down and might
Have made your finiſh.
Iach. I am down again:
But now my heavy Conſcience ſinks my knee,
As then your force did. Take that life, beſeech you,
Which I ſo often owe: but your Ring firſt,
And here your Bracelet of the trueſt Princeſſe
That ever ſwore her faith.
Poſt. Kneel not to me:
The power that I have on you is to ſpare you:
The malice towards you, to forgive you. Live
And deal with others better.
Cym. Nobly doom'd:
We'll learn our Freeneſſe of a Son-in-Law:
Pardon's the word to all.
Arvi. You holp us, ſir,
As you did mean indeed to be our Brother,
Joy'd are we, that you are.
Poſt. Your Servant, Princes. Good my Lord of Rome
Call forth your Sooth-ſayer: As I ſlept, me thought
Great Jupiter upon his Eagle back'd
Appear'd to me, with other ſprightly ſhews
Of mine own Kindred. When I wak'd, I found
This Labell on my boſome: whoſe containing
Is ſo from ſenſe in hardneſſe, that I can

Make

Make no Collection of it. Let him ſhew
His skill in the conſtruction.

Luc. Philarmonus.

Sooth. Here, my good Lord.

Luc. Read, and declare the meaning.

Reads.

When as a Lyon's whelp, ſhall to himſelf unknown, without ſeeking find, and be embrac'd by a piece of tender Air: and when from a ſtately Cedar ſhall be lopt branches, which being dead many yeares, ſhall after revive, be joynted to the old Stock, and freſhly grow, then ſhall Poſthumus end his miſeries, Britain be fortunate, and flouriſh in Peace, and Plenty.

Thou Leonatus art the Lyon's Whelp,
The fit and apt Conſtruction of thy name
Being Leonatus, doth import ſo much:
The piece of tender Air, thy virtuous daughter,
Which we call Mollis Aër, and Mollis Aër
We term it Mulier: which Mulier I divine
Is this moſt conſtant Wife, who even now
Anſwering the Letter of the Oracle,
Unknown to you unſought, were clipt about
With this moſt tender Air.

Cym. This hath ſome ſeeming.

Sooth. The lofty Cedar, Royal Cymbeline,
Perſonates thee: And thy lopt Branches, point
Thy two Sonnes forth: who by Belarius ſtoln
For many yeares thought dead, are now reviv'd
To the Majeſtick Cedar joyn'd; whoſe iſſue
Promiſes Britain, Peace and Plenty.

Cym. Well,
My Peace we will begin: And Caius Lucius,
Although the Victor, we ſubmit to Cæſar,
And to the Roman Empire; promiſing
To pay our wonted Tribute, from the which
We were diſſwaded by our wicked Queen,
Whom Heavens in juſtice both on her, and hers,
Have laid moſt heavy hand.

Sooth. The fingers of the Powres above, do tune
The harmony of this Peace: the Viſion
Which I made known to Lucius e're the ſtroke
Of this yet ſcarce-cold-Battel, at this inſtant
Is full accompliſh'd. For the Roman Eagle
From South to Weſt, on wing ſoaring aloft
Leſſen'd her ſelf, and in the Beams o'th'Sun
So vaniſh'd; which fore-ſhew'd our Princely Eagle
Th'Imperial Cæſar, ſhould again unite
His favour, with the Radiant Cymbeline,
Which ſhines here in the Weſt.

Cym. Laud we the gods,
And let our crooked Smoaks climb to their Noſtrils
From our bleſt Altars. Publiſh we this peace
To all our Subjects. Set we forward: let
A Roman, and a Britiſh Enſign wave
Friendly together; ſo through Lud's-Town march,
And in the Temple of great Jupiter
Our Peace we'll ratifie, Seal it with feaſts.
Set on there: Never was a VVar did ceaſe
(E're bloudy hands were waſh'd) with ſuch a Peace.

Exeunt.

FINIS.

The much admired Play,

CALLED,

PERICLES, PRINCE of TYRE.

With the true Relation of the whole History, Adventures, and Fortunes of the said Prince.

VVritten by VV. SHAKESPEARE, and published in his life time.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Gower.

TO sing a song that old was sung,
From ashes ancient Gower is come,
Assuming mans infirmities,
To glad your ear and please your eyes;
It hath been sung at Festivals,
On Ember eves, and holy-dayes,
And Lords and Ladies in their lives,
Have read it for restoratives.
The purchase is to make men glorious.
Et bonum quo Antiquius, eo melius.
If you, born in these latter times,
When wits more ripe, accept my Rimes;
And that to hear an old man sing,
May to your wishes pleasure bring:
I life would wish, and that I might
Waste it for you like Taper-light.
This Antioch, then, Antiochus the great,
Built up this City for his chiefest seat;
The fairest in all Syria.
I tell you what mine Authors say:
This King unto him took a Peer,
Who died, and left a female heir,
So bucksome, blithe, and full of face,
As heaven had lent her all his grace:
With whom the Father liking took,
And her to incest did provoke.
Bad child, worse father, to entice his own.
To evil should be done by none:
But custome, what they did begin,
Was with long use, counted no sin.
The beauty of this sinfull Dame,
Made many Princes thither frame,
To seek her as a bed-fellow,
In marriage pleasures, play-fellow:
Which to prevent, he made a Law,
To keep her still, and men in awe,
That who so askt her for his wife,
His Riddle told not, lost his life:
So for her many a wight did die,
As yon grim looks do testifie.
What ensues to the judgement of your eye,
I give my cause, who best can testifie. Exit.

Enter Antiochus, Prince Pericles, and followers.

Ant. Young Prince of Tyre, you have at large receiv'd
The danger of the task you undertake.
Per. I have (Antiochus) and with a soul emboldned
With the glory of her praise, think death no hazard,
In this enterprize.
Ant. Musick bring in our daughter, cloathed like a bride
For embracements, even of Jove himself;
At whose conception, till Lucina reign'd,
Nature this dowry gave, to glad her presence,
The Senate house of Planets all did sit,
To knit in her their best perfections.

Enter Antiochus Daughter.

Per. See where she comes, apparell'd like the Spring,
Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the King,
Of every vertue gives renown to men:
Her face the book of praises, where is read.
Nothing but curious pleasures as from thence,
Sorrow were ever rackt, and testy wrath
Could never be her mild companion.

you gods that made me man, and ſway in love,
That have inflam'd deſire with in my breſt,
To taſte the fruite of yon celeſtiall tree,
(Or die in the adventure) be my helpes,
As I am ſonne and ſervant to your will,
To compaſſe ſuch a bondleſſe happineſſe.
Anti. Prince Pericles.
Per. That would be ſonne to great Antiochus.
Anti. Before thee ſtands this faire Hesperides,
With golden fruite, but dangerous to be toucht:
For death like Dragons here affright thee hard?
Her face like heaven enticeth thee to view
Her countleſſe glory, which deſert muſt gaine:
And which without deſert, becauſe thine eye
Preſumes to reach, all the whole heape muſt dye,
Yon ſometimes famous Princes like thy ſelfe
Drawn by report, adventurous by deſire,
Tell thee with ſpeechleſſe tongues, and ſemblance pale,
That without covering ſave yon field of ſtarres,
Here they ſtand martyrs ſlaine in Cupids warres:
And with dead cheeks adviſe the to deſiſt,
For going on deaths net, whome none reſiſt.
Per. Antiochus I thank thee, who hath taught
My frail mortality to know it ſelfe,
And by thoſe fearefull obiects to prepare
This body, like to them, to what I muſt:
For death remembred, ſhould be like a Myrrour,
Who tels us, life's but breath, to truſt in error:
Ile make my will then, and as ſicke men do,
Who know the world, ſee heaven, but feeling woe,
Gripe not at earthly ioyes, as erſt they did.
So I bequeath a happy peace to you
And all good men, as every prince ſhould do,
My riches to the earth from whence they came:
But my vnſpotted fire of Love to you,
Thus ready for the way of life or death,
I waite the ſharpeſt blow (Antiochus)
Scorning advice. Reade the concluſion then.
Ant. Which read and not expounded, tis decreed
As theſe before thou thy ſelfe ſhalt bleed.
Daugh. Of all ſaid yet, thou prove proſperous,
Of all ſaid yet, I wiſh Thee happineſſe.
Per. Like a bold champion I aſſume the liſtes,
Nor aske advice of any other thought,
But faithfullneſſe and courage.

The Riddle.

I am no Viper, yet I feed
On mothers fleſh which did me breed:
I ſought a huſband, in which labour,
I found that kindneſſe in a father.
Hee's father, ſonne, and huſband milde,
I Mother, Wife, and yet his child.
How they may be, and yet in two,
As you will live, reſolve it you.

Sharp phyſick is the laſt? but O you Powers!
That gives heaven countleſſe eyes to view mens actes
Why could they not their ſights perpetually?
If this be true, which makes me pale to read it,
Faire glaſſe of light, I loved you, and could ſtill,
Were not this glorious Casket ſtor'd with ill:
But I muſt tell you, now my thoughts revolt,
for he's no man on whom perfections wait;
That knowing ſinne within, will touch the gate:
You are a fair Vyol, and your ſence the ſtrings,
Who finger'd to make man his lawfull muſick,
Would draw heaven down, and all the gods to hearken,
But being plaid upon before your time,
Hell only danceth at ſo harſh a chime:
Good ſooth I care not for you.
Anti. Prince Pericles, touch not upon thy life,
For that's an Article within our Law,
As dangerous as the reſt: your times expir'd,
Either expound now, or receive your ſentence.
Peri. Great King,
Few love to hear the ſins they love to act,
'Twould braid your ſelf too near for me to tell it:
Who hath a book of all that Monarchs do,
He's more ſecure to keep it ſhut, then ſhewn:
For vice repeated, is like the wandring wind,
Blows duſt in others eyes, to ſpread it ſelf;
And yet the end of all is bought thus dear,
The breath is gone, and the ſore eyes ſee clear.
To ſtop the aire would hurt them, the blind Mole caſt
Copt hills toward heaven, to tell the earth is throng'd
By mans oppreſſion, and the poor worme doth die for't.
Kings are earths Gods: in vice their law's their will,
And if Jove ſtray, who dares ſay, Jove doth ill.
It is enough you know it, and 'tis fit;
What being more known, grows worſe to ſmother it.
All love the womb that their Being bred,
Then give my tongue like leave to love my head.
Ant. Heaven that I had it; he has found the meaning,
But I will gloze with him. Young Prince of Tyre,
Though by the tenour of our ſtrict edict,
Your expoſition miſ-interpreting,
We might proceed to cancel off your daies;
Yet hope, ſucceeding from ſo fair a tree,
As your fair ſelf, doth tune us otherwiſe:
Forty daies longer we do reſpite you,
If by which time our ſecret be undone,
This mercy ſhews, we'll joy in ſuch a ſon:
And untill then, your entertain ſhall be
As doth befit our honour, and your worth. Exit.

Manet Pericles ſolus.

Per. How curteſie would ſeem to cover ſin,
When what is done is like an hypocrite,
The which is good in nothing but in ſight,
If it be true that I interpret falſe,
Then were it certain you were not ſo bad,
As with the foul Inceſt to abuſe your ſoul:
Where now you'r both a father and a ſon,
By your untimely claſpings with your child,
(Which pleaſures fits an husband, not a father)
And ſhe an eater of her mothers fleſh,
By the defiling of her parents bed,
And both like ſerpents are, who though they feed
On ſweeteſt flowers, yet they poiſon breed.
Antioch farewell, for wiſdome ſees, thoſe men
Bluſh not in actions blacker then the night,
Will ſhew no courſe to keep them from the light:
One ſin (I know) another doth provoke;
Murder's as near to luſt, as flame to ſmoak.
Poyſon and treaſon are the hands of ſin,
I, and the Targets to put off the ſhame;
Then leaſt my life be cropt to keep you clear,
By flight I'le ſhun the danger which I fear. Exit.

Enter Antiochus.

Anti. He hath found the meaning,
For which we mean to have his head,

He must not live to trumper forth my infamy,
Nor tell the world Antiochus doth sinne
In such a loathed manner.
And therefore instantly this Prince must die,
For by his fall my honour must keep high.
Who attends us here?

Enter Thaliard.

Thal. Doth your Highnesse call?

Anti. Thaliard, you are of our Chamber,
And our mind partakes her private actions
To your secresie; and for your faithfulness
We will advance you, Thaliard.
Behold, here's poison and here's gold,
We hate the Prince of Tyre, and thou must kill him.
It fits thee not to ask the reason why:
Because we bid it: say, is it done?

Thal. My Lord, 'tis done.

Enter a Messenger.

Ant. Enough. Let your breath cool your self, telling your haste.

Mess. My Lord, Prince Pericles is fled.

Ant. As thou wilt live, flye after; and as an arrow, shot from a well experient Archer, hits the mark his eye doth level at: so do thou never return, unless thou say, Prince Pericles is dead.

Thal. My Lord, if I can get him within my pistols length, I'le make him sure enough: so farewell to your Highness.

Anti. Thaliard adieu, till Pericles be dead,
My heart can lend no succour to my head. Exit.

Enter Pericles, Hellicanus, with other Lords.

Per. Let none disturb us:
Why should this change of thoughts,
The sad companion dull-ey'd melancholly,
By me so us'd, a guest as not an hour,
In the dayes glorious walk or peacefull night,
The tombe where grief should sleep, can breed me quiet,
Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine eyes shun them,
And danger which I fear'd, is at Antioch,
Whose arme seems far too short to hit me here,
Yet neither pleasures art can joy my spirits,
Nor yet the others distance comfort me:
Then it is thus, that passions of the mind,
That have their first conception by mis-dread,
Have after nourishment and life by care;
And what was first but fear, what might be done,
Grows elder now, and cares it be not done.
And so 'tis with me, the great Antiochus,
'Gainst whom I am too little to contend,
Since he's so great, can make his will his act,
Will think me speaking, though I swear to silence,
Nor boots it me to say I honour,
If he suspect I may dishonor him.
And what may make him blush in being known,
He'll stop the course by which it might be known,
With hostile forces he'll ore-spread the Land,
And with the stint of war will look so huge,
Amazement shall drive courage from the state:
Our men be vanquish'd, ere they do resist,
And subjects punisht, that never thought offence,
Which care of them, not pitty of my self,
Who once no more but as the tops of trees,
Which fence the roots they grow by, and defend them,
Make both my body pine, and soul to languish,
And punish that before that he would punish.

1. Lord. Joy and all comfort in your sacred breast.

2. Lord. And keep your mind till ye return to us peacefull and comfortable.

Hell. Peace, peace, and give experience tongue:
They do abuse the King that flatter him,
For flattery is the bellows blows up sin,
The thing the which is flattered, but a spark,
To which that spark gives heart and stronger glowing;
Whereas reproof obedient and in order,
Fits Kings as they are men, for they may erre,
When Signior Sooth here doth proclaim peace,
He flatters you, makes war upon your life.
Prince, pardon me, or strike me if you please,
I cannot be much lower then my knees.

Per. All leave us else: but let your cares ore-look
What shipping, and what ladings in our Haven,
And then return to us: Hellicanus thou hast
Moov'd us: what seest thou in our looks:

Hell. An angry brow, dread Lord.

Per. If there be such a dart in Princes frowns,
How durst thy tongue move anger to our face?

Hell. How dares the planets look up unto heaven,
From whence they have their nourishment?

Per. Thou know'st I have power to take thy life from thee

Hell. I have ground the axe my self,
Do you but strike the blow.

Per. Rise, prithee rise, sit down, thou art no flatterer,
I thank thee for it, and heaven forbid,
That Kings should let their ears hear their faults hid.
Fit Councellor, and servant for a Prince,
Who by thy wisdome makes a Prince thy servant,
What would'st thou have me do:

Hell. To bear with patience such griefs,
As you your self do lay upon your self.

Per. Thou speak'st like a Physician, Hellicanus,
That minister'st a potion unto me,
That thou would'st tremble to receive thy self.
Attend me then; I went to Antioch,
Whereas thou know'st (against the face of death)
I sought the purchase of a glorious beauty,
From whence an issue I might propigate,
Are armes to Princes, and bring joyes to Subjects.
Her face was to mine eye beyond all wonder,
The rest (hark in thine ear) as black as incest,
Which by my knowledge found, the sinfull father,
Seem'd not to strike, but smooth: But thou know'st this,
'Tis time to fear, when tyrants seem to kiss.
Which fear so grew in me, I hither fled,
Under the covering of a carefull night,
Who seem'd my good Protector: and being here,
Bethought what was past, what might succeed;
I knew him tyrannous, and tyrants fear
Decrease not, but grow faster then the years:
And should he think, as no doubt he doth,
That I should open to the listening air,
How many worthy Princes bloud were shed,
To keep his bed of blackness unlaid ope,
To lop that doubt, he'll fill this Land with armes,
And make pretence of wrong that I have done him,
When all for mine, if I may call offence,
Must feel warrs blow, who fears not innocence:
Which love to all, of which thy self art one,
Who now reprov'dst me for it.

Hell. Alas, sir.

Per. Drew sleep out of mine eyes, bloud from my cheeks,
Musings into my mind, with a thousand doubts
How I might stop their tempest ere it came,
And finding little comfort to relieve them,
I thought it princely charity to grieve for them.

Hell. Well, my Lord, since you have given me leave to speak,
Freely will I speak. Antiochus you fear,
And justly too I think you fear the tyrant,
Who either by publick war or private treason,
Will take away your life: therefore, my Lord, go travel for a while, till that his rage and anger be forgot; or till the Destinies do cut the thred of his life: your Rule direct to any, if unto me, day serves not light more faithfull then I'le be.

Per. I do not doubt thy faith,
But should he wrong my liberties in my absence?

Hell. We'll mingle our blouds together in the earth,
From whence we had our being, and our birth.

Per. Tyre, I now look from thee then, and to Tharsus
Intend my travel, where I'le hear from thee;
And by whose Letters I'le dispose my self,
The care I had and have of Subjects good,
On thee I lay, whose wisdomes strength can bear it,
I'le take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath,
Who shuns not to break one, will sure crack both:
But in our orbes we live so round and safe,
That time of both this truth shall nere convince,
Thou shewest a subjects shine, I a true Prince.

Enter Thaliard solus.

Thal. So, this is Tyre, and this is the Court, here must I kill King Pericles, and if I do it not, I am sure to be hang'd at home: it is dangerous.

Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow, and had good discretion, that being bid to ask what he would of the King, desired he might know none of his secrets. Now do I see he had some reason for it: for if a King bid a man be a villain, he is bound by the indenture of his oath to be one.

Husht, here comes the Lords of Tyre.

Enter Hellicanus, Escanes, with other Lords of Tyre.

Hell. You shall not need my fellow-Peers of Tyre, further to question me of your Kings departure. His sealed Commission left in trust with me, doth speak sufficiently, he's gone to travel.

Thal. How the King gone?

Hell. If further yet you will be satisfied, why (as it were unlicenc'd of your loves) he would depart? I'le give some light unto you: Being at Antioch.

Thal. What from Antioch?

Hell. Royal Antiochus (on what cause I know not) took some displeasure at him, at least he judged so: and doubting that he had erred or sinned, to shew his sorrow, he would correct himself; so puts himself unto the shipmans toyl, with whom each minute threatens life or death.

Thal. Well, I perceive I shall not be hanged now, although I would; but since he's gone, the Kings Seas must please: he scapte the Land, to perish at the Sea: I'le present my self, Peace to the Lords of Tyre.

Hell. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is welcome.

Thal. From him I come with message unto princely Pericles; but since my landing I have understood, your Lord hath betook himself to unknown travels, my message must return from whence it came.

Hell. We have no reason to desire it, commended to our Master, not to us; yet ere you shall depart, this we desire as friends to Antioch, we may feast in Tyre. Exeunt.

Enter Cleon the Governor of Tharsus, with his wife and others.

Cleon. My Dionisia, shall we rest us here,
And by relating tales of others griefs,
See if 'twill teach us to forget our own?

Dion. That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it,
For who digs hills because they do aspire,
Throws down one Mountain to cast up a higher:
O my distressed Lord, even such our griefs are,
Here they are but felt, and seen with mischiefs eyes,
But like to groves being topt, they higher rise.

Cleon. O Dionisia,
Who wanteth food, and will not say he wants it,
Or can conceal his hunger till he famish?
Our tongues and sorrowes do sound deep:
Our woes into the air, our eyes to weep,
Till tongues fetch breath that may proclaim
Them louder, that if heaven slumber, while
Their creatures want, they may awake
Their helpers, to comfort them.
I'le then discourse our woes felt several years,
And wanting breath to speak, help me with tears.

Dion. I'le do my best, sir.

Cle. This Tharsus, ore which I have the government,
A City, on whom plenty held full hand,
For riches strew'd her self even in the streets,
Whose towers bore heads so high, they kist the clouds,
And strangers nere beheld, but wonder'd at,
Whose men and dames so jetted and adorn'd,
Like one anothers glasse to trim them by:
Their tables were stor'd full, to glad the sight,
And not so much to feed on, as delight,
All poverty was scorn'd and pride so great,
The name of help grew odious to repeat.

Dion. Oh 'tis true.

Cleon. But see what heaven can do by this our change:
These mouths, who but of late, earth, sea, and ayre,
Were all too little to content and please,
Although they gave their creatures in abundance:
As houses are defil'd for want of use,
They are now starv'd for want of exercise;
Those pallats, who, not yet to savers younger,
Must have inventions to delight the taste,
Would now be glad of bread, and beg for it:
These mothers who to nouzle up their babes,
Thought nought too curious, are ready now
To eat those little darlings whom they loved,
So sharp are hungers teeth, that man and wife,
Draw lots who first shall die to lengthen life.
Here stands a Lord, and there a Lady weeping,
Here many sink, yet those which see them fall,
Have scarce strength left to give them burial.
Is not this true?

Dion. Our cheeks and hollow eyes do witnesse it.

Cleon. O let those Cities that of plenties cup,
And her prosperities so largely taste,
With their superfluous ryots hear these tears,
The misery of Tharsus may be theirs.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Where's the Lord Governor?

Cleon.

Cleon. Here, ſpeak out thy ſorrows, which thou bring'ſt in haſte, for comfort is too far for us to expect.

Lord. We have deſcried upon our neighbouring ſhore,
A portly ſail of ſhips make hitherward.

Cleon. I thought as much.
One ſorrow never comes but brings an heir,
That may ſucceed as his inheritour:
And ſo in ours; ſome neighbouring Nation,
Taking advantage of our miſery,
That ſtuft the hollow veſſels with their power,
To beat us down, the which are down already,
And make a conqueſt of unhappy me,
Whereas no glory is got to overcome.

Lord. That's the leaſt fear.
For by the ſemblance of their flags diſplaid, they bring us peace, and come to us as favourers, not as foes.

Cleon. Thou ſpeak'ſt like hymnes untuter'd to repeat,
Who makes the faireſt ſhew, means moſt deceit.
But bring they what they will, and what they can,
What need we fear, the ground's the loweſt,
And we are half way there: Go tell their General we attend him here, to know for what he comes, and whence he comes, and what he craves.

Lord. I go, my Lord.

Cleon. Welcome is peace, if he on peace conſiſt;
If warrs, we are unable to reſiſt.

Enter Pericles with attendants.

Per. Lord Governor, for ſo we hear you are,
Let not our ſhips and number of our men,
Be like a Beacon fired, to amaze your eyes,
We have heard your miſeries as far as Tyre,
And ſeen the deſolation of your ſtreets;
Nor come we to adde ſorrow to your tears,
But to releaſe them of their heavy load,
And theſe our ſhips, you happily may think
Are like the Trojan horſe, was ſtuft within
With bloudy veins expecting overthrow,
Are ſtor'd with corn, to make your needy bread,
And give them life, whom hunger ſtarv'd half dead.

Omnes. The gods of Greece protect you,
And we'll pray for you.

Per. Ariſe, I pray you, ariſe; we do not look for reverence, but for love, and harbourage for our ſelf, our ſhips, and men.

Cleon. The which when any ſhall not gratifie,
Or pay you with unthankfulneſſe in thought,
Be it our wives, our children or our ſelves,
The curſe of heaven and men ſucceed their evils:
Till when, the which (I hope) ſhall ne're be ſeen,
Your Grace is welcome to our Town and us.

Per. Which welcome we'll accept, feaſt here a while,
Untill our ſtars that frown, lend us a ſmile. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Gower.

Gower. Here have you ſeen a mighty King
His child, I wis, to inceſt bring:
A better Prince and benigne Lord,
That will prove awfull both in deed and word.
Be quiet then, as men ſhould be,
Till he hath paſt neceſſity:
I'le ſhew you thoſe in troubles reigne,
Looſing a myte, a Mountain gain:
The good in converſation,
To whom I give my benizon.
Is ſtill at Tharſus, where each man
Thinks all is writ he ſpoken can:
And to remember what he does,
Build his Statue to make him glorious:
But tydings to the contrary,
Are brought t'your eyes, what need ſpeak I.

Dumb ſhow.

Enter at one dooor Pericles talking with Cleon, all the Train with them. Enter at another door, a Gentleman with a letter to Pericles; Pericles ſhews the letter to Cleon, Pericles gives the Meſſenger a reward, and Knights him.

Exit Pericles at one door, and Cleon at another.

Good Hellican that ſtaid at home,
Not to eat hony like a Drone,
From others labours; for though he ſtrive
To killen bad, keep good alive:
And to fulfill his Princes deſire,
Sav'd one of all that haps in Tyre:
How Thaliard came full bent with ſin,
And had intent to murder him;
And that in Tharſus was not beſt,
Longer for him to make his reſt:
He doing ſo, put forth to Seas,
Where when men bin, there's ſeldome eaſe,
For now the wind begins to blow,
Thunder above, and deeps below,
Makes ſuch unquiet, that the ſhip
Should houſe him ſafe, is wrackt and ſplit,
And he (good Prince) having all loſt,
By waves, from coaſt to coaſt is toſt:
All periſhen of man, of pelf,
Ne ought eſcapen'd but himſelf;
Till fortune tired with doing bad,
Threw him aſhore to give him glad:
And here he comes; what ſhall be next,
Pardon old Gower, thus long's the Text.

Enter Pericles wet.

Per. Yet ceaſe your ire, you angry Stars of heaven,
Wind, Rain, and Thunder: Remember earthly man
Is but a ſubſtance that muſt yield to you:
And I (as fits my nature) do obey you.
Alas, the Seas hath caſt me on the Rocks,
Waſht me from ſhore to ſhore, and left my breath
Nothing to think on, but enſuing death:
Let it ſuffice the greatneſſe of your powers,
To have bereft a Prince of all his fortunes,
And having thrown him from your watry grave,
Here to have death in peace, is all he'll crave.

Enter three Fiſhermen.

1. What, to pelch?
2. Ha, come and bring away the Nets.
1. What patch-breech, I ſay.
3. What ſay you, Maſter?
1. Look how thou ſtirreſt now.
Come away, or I'le fetch thee with a wannion.
3. Faith Maſter, I am thinking of the poor men
That were caſt away before us, even now.
1. Alas poor ſouls, it grieved my heart to hear
What pittifull cries they made to us, to help them,
When (welladay) we could ſcarcely help our ſelves.
3. Nay Maſter, ſaid not I as much,
When I ſaw the Porpas how he bounſt and tumbled?
They ſay, they are half fiſh, half fleſh:
A plague on them, they ne're come but I look to be waſht.
Maſter, I marvel how the fiſhes live in the Sea?

1. Why as men do a Land,
The great ones eat up the little ones:
I can compare our rich Misers, to nothing so fitly
As to a Whale; he plaies and tumbles,
Driving the poor Fry before him,
And at last devour them all at a mouthfull.
Such Whales have I heard on a'th land,
Who never leave gaping, till they swallowed
The whole Parish, Church, Steeple, Bells and all.

Per. A pretty Moral.

3. But Master, if I had been the Sexton,
I would have been that day in the Beltrey.

2. Why man?

3. Because he should have swallowed me too,
And when I had been in his belly,
I would have kept such a jangling of the bells,
That he should never have left,
Till he cast Bells, Steeple, Church and Parish up again:
But if the good King Simonides were of my mind,

Per. Simonides?

3. We would purge the Land of these Drones,
That rob the Bee of her honny.

Per. How from the fenny subject of the sea
These fishers tell the infirmities of men,
And from their watry Empire recollect,
All that may men approve, or men detect.
Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen.

2. Honest, good fellow, what's that, if it be a day fits you,
Search out of the Kalender, and no body look after it?

Per. Y'may see the sea hath cast me upon your coast.

2. What a drunken knave was the sea,
To cast thee in our way.

Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind,
In that vast Tennis-Court, hath made the Ball
For them to play upon, intreats you pitty him:
He asks of you, that never us'd to beg.

1. No friend, cannot you beg?
Here's them in our Country of Greece,
Gets more with begging, then we can do with working.

2. Canst thou catch any Fishes then?

Per. I never practis'd it.

2. Nay then thou wilt starve sure; for here's nothing to be got now-a-daies, unless thou canst fish for't.

Per. What I have been, I have forgot to know;
But what I am, want teaches me to think on:
A man throng'd up with cold, my veins are chill,
And have no more of life, then may suffice
To give my tongue that heat to ask your help:
Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead,
For that I am a man, pray see me buried.

1. Die ke-tha, now gods forbid, I have a gown here, come put it on, keep thee warme: now afore me a handsome fellow: Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for all day, fish for fasting dayes and more; or Puddings and Flap-jacks, and thou shalt be welcome.

Per. I thank you, sir.

2. Hark you, my friend, You said you could not beg.

Per. I did but crave.

2. But crave? then I'le turn craver too,
And so I shall scape whipping.

Per. Why, are all your beggers whipt then?

2. Oh not all, my friend, not all: for if all your beggers were whipt, I would wish no better office, then to be Beadle. But Master, I'le go draw the Net.

Per. How well this honest mirth becomes their labour?

1. Hark you, sir, do you know where ye are?

Per. Not well.

1. I tell you, this is called Pantapolis,
And our King, the good Symonides.

Per. The good King Symonides, do you call him:

1. I sir, and he deserves so to be call'd,
For his peaceable reigne, and good government.

Per. He is a happy King, since he gains from
His Subjects, the name of good, by his government.
How far is his Court distant from this shore?

1. Marry, sir, half a daies journey: and I'le tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and to morrow is her birth-day, and there are Princes and Knights come from all parts of the world, to Just and Turney for her love.

Per. Were my fortunes equal to my desires,
I could wish to make one there.

2. O sir, things must be as they may: and what a man
Cannot get, he may lawfully deal for his wives soul.

Enter the two Fisher-men, drawing up a Net.

2. Help, Master, help, here's a fish hangs in the Net, like a poor mans right in the law, 'twill hardly come out. Ha bots on't, 'tis come at last, and 'tis turned to a rusty Armor.

Per. An Armor, friends, I pray you let me see it.
Thanks Fortune, yet that after all crosses,
Thou giv'st me somewhat to repair my self:
And though it was mine own part of mine heritage,
Which my dead father did bequeath to me,
With this strict charge, even as he left his life:
Keep it, my Pericles, it hath been a shield
'Twixt me and death; and pointed to this Brayse:
For that it saved me; keep it in like necessity:
The which the gods protect thee, Fame may defend thee.
It kept where I kept, I so dearly loved it,
Till the rough Seas (that spares not any man)
Took it in rage, though calm'd hath given't again:
I thank thee for't, my shipwrack now's no ill,
Since I have here my fathers gift in's will.

1. What mean you, sir?

Per. To beg of you (kind friends) this coat of worth,
For it was sometime Target to a King,
I know it by this mark: he loved me dearly,
And for his sake, I wish the having of it:
And that you'd guide me to your Soveraigns Court,
Where with it I may appear a Gentleman:
And if that ever my low fortune's better,
I'le pay your bounties; till then rest your debter.

1. Why, wilt thou turney for the Lady?

Per. I'le shew the vertue I have born in Armes.

1. Why take it, and the gods give thee good an't.

2. But hark you, my friend, 'twas we that made up this garment through the rough seams of the waters: there are certain condolements, certain vails; I hope, sir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had them.

Per. Believe it I will:
By your furtherance I am cloathed in Steel,
And spight of all the rupture of the sea,
This Jewell holds his building on my arme:
Unto thy value I will mount my self.
Upon a Courser, whose delightfull steps,
Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread;
Only (my friend) I yet am unprovided of a payre of Bases.

2. We'll sure provide, thou shalt have
My best gown to make thee a pair;
And I'le bring thee to the Court my self.

Per. Then honour be but a Goal to my will,
This day I'le rise, or else adde ill to ill.

Enter

Enter Simonides with attendants, and Thaisa.

Are the Knights ready to begin the Triumph?

1. Lord. They are, my Liege, and stay your comming, To present themselves.

King. Return them; we are ready, and our Daughter In honour of whose birth, these triumphs are, (here, Sits here like beauties child, whom Nature gat, For men to see, and seeing wonder at.

Thai. It pleaseth you (my royall father) to expresse My commendations great, whose merit's lesse.

King. It's fit it should be so; for Princes are A modell which heaven makes like it self: As Jewels lose their glory, if neglected, So Princes their Renownes, if not respected. 'Tis now your honour (Daughter) to entertain The labour of each Knight, in his device.

Thai. Which to preserve mine honour, I'le perform.

The first Knight passes by.

King. Who is the first, that doth preferre himself?

Thai. A Knight of Sparta (my renowned Father) And the device he beares upon his shield, Is a black Æthiope reaching at the Sun; The word; Lux tua vita mihi.

King. He loves you well, that holds his life of you.

The second Knight.

Who is the second, that presents himself?

Tha. A Prince of Macedon (my royall Father) And the device he beares upon his Shield, Is an armed Knight, that's conquer'd by a Lady. The Motto thus in Spanish. Pue Per doleera kee per forsa.

The third Knight.

King. And what's the third?

Thai. The third of Antioch; and his device A wreathe of Chivalry: the word, Me Pompey provexit apex.

The fourth Knight.

King. What is the fourth?

Thai. A burning Torch that's turn'd upside down; The word, Qui me alit me extinguit.

King. Which shewes that beauty hath his power and will, Which can as well enflame, as it can kill.

The fifth Knight.

Thai. The fifth, an hand environed with clouds, Holding out gold, that's by the touch-stone tri'd; The Motto thus: Sic spectanda fides.

The sixth Knight.

King. And what's the sixth and last, the which the Knight himself with such a gracefull courtesie deliverd?

Thai. He seems to be a stranger: but his Present is A withered Branch, that's onely green at top; The Motto, In hac spe vivo.

King. A pretty morall; from the dejected state wherein he is, he hopes by you his fortunes yet may flourish.

1. Lord. He had need mean better then his outward shew can any way speak in his just commend: For by his rusty out-side, he appeares to have practised more the Whipstock, then the Lance.

2. Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he comes to an honour'd triumph strangely furnisht.

3. Lord. And on set purpose let his armour rust Untill this day, to scowre it in the dust.

King. Opinion's but a foole, that make us scan The outward habit by the inward man. But stay, the Knights are comming, We will withdraw into the Gallery.

Great shouts, and all cry, the mean Knight.

Enter the King and Knights from Tilting.

King. Knights, to say you're welcome, were superfluous. I place upon the volume of your deeds, As in a Title page, your worth in armes, Were more then you expect, or more then's fit, Since every worth in shew commends it self: Prepare for mirth, for mirth comes at a feast. You are Princes, and my guests.

Thai. But you, my Knight and guest, To whom this wreathe of victory I give, And Crown you King of this dayes happinesse.

Per. 'Tis more by fortune (Lady) then by merit.

King. Call it by what you will, the day is yours, And here, I hope, is none that envies it: In framing an Artist, Art hath thus decreed, To make some good, but others to exceed, And you her labour'd Schollar: come, Queen oth' Feast, For (Daughter) so you are, here take your place: Martiall the rest, as they deserve their grace.

Knights. We are honoured much by good Symonides.

King. Your presence glads our days, honour we love, For who hates honour, hates the gods above.

Marsh. Sir, yonder is your place.

Per. Some other is more fit.

1. Knight. Contend not, sir, for we are Gentlemen, That neither in our hearts, nor outward eyes, Envy the great, nor doe the low despise.

Per. You are right courteous Knights.

King. Sit, sit, sit.

By Jove (I wonder) that is King of thoughts, These Cates resist me, he not thought upon.

Thai. By Juno (that is Queen of Marriage) All Viands that I eat doe seem unsavoury, Wishing him my meat: sure he's a gallant Gentleman.

King. He's but a country gentleman: has done no more Then other Knights have done; has broken a staffe, Or so; let it passe.

Thai. To me he seems a Diamond to Glasse.

Per. Yon King's to me, like to my Father's picture, Which tells me in that glory once he was, And Princes sat like starres about his Throne, And he the Sun, for them to reverence; None that beheld him, but like lesser lights, Did vaile their Crowns to his supreamacy; Where now his Son, like a Glo-worm in the night, The which hath fire in darknesse none in light: Whereby I see that Time's the King of men, For he's their Parents, and he is their grave, And gives them what he will, not what they crave.

King. What, are you merry, Knights?

Knights. Who can be other in this royall presence?

King. Here, with a cup that's stirr'd unto the brimme, As you doe love, fill to your Mistresse lips, We drink this health to you.

Knights. We thank your Grace.

King. Yet pawse a while; yon Knight doth sit too melancholly, As if the entertainment in our Court, Had not a shew might countervaile his worth: Note it not you, Thaisa;

Thai. What is't to me, my Father?

King. O, attend, my Daughter, Princes in this, should live like gods above, Who freely give to every one that come to honour them: And Princes not doing so, are like to Gnats, Which make a sound, but kill'd, are wondred at: Therefore to make his entrance now more sweet,

Here,

Here, lay we d ink this standing bowle of wine to him.
Thai. Alasse, my Father, it befits not me,
Unto a stranger Knight to be so bold,
He may my proffer take for an offence,
Since men take womens gifts for impudence.
King. How? doe as I bid you, or you'll move me else.
Thai. Now by the gods, he could not please me better.
King. And furthermore tell him, we desire to know of (him,
Of whence he is, his name and Parentage.
Thai. The King my Father (sir) hath drunk to you.
Per. I thank him.
Thai. Wishing it so much blood unto your life.
Per. I thank both him and you, and pledge him freely.
Thai. And further, he desires to know of you,
Of whence you are, your name and parentage.
Per. A Gentleman of Tyre, my name Pericles,
My education been in Arts and Armes.
Who looking for adventures in the world,
Was by the rough Seas reft of ships and men,
And after ship-wrack, driven upon this shore.
Thai. He thanks your Grace; names himself Pericles,
A Gentleman of Tyre, who only by misfortune of the seas,
Bereft of ships and men, cast on the shore.
King. Now by the gods, I pitty his misfortune,
And will awake him from his melancholly.
Come, Gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles,
And waste the time, which looks for other revels.
Even in your armours as you are addrest,
Will very well become a Souldiers dance:
I will not have excuse, with saying that
Loud Musick is too harsh for Ladies heads,
Since they love men in Armes, as well as beds.
They Dance.
So, this was well ask'd, 'twas well perform'd,
Come, sir, here's a Lady that wants breathing too:
And I have heard, you Knights of Tyre,
Are excellent in making Ladies trip,
And that their measures are as excellent.
Per. In those that practise them, they are (my Lord.)
King. Oh that's as much, as you would be deny'd
Of your fair courtesie: unclaspe, unclaspe.
They Dance.
Thanks, Gentlemen, to all; all have done well,
But you the best: Pages and lights, to conduct
These Knights unto their severall Lodgings:
Yours, sir, we have given order to be next our own.
Per. I am at your Graces pleasure.
King. Princes, it is too late to talk of love,
And that's the marke I know you levell at:
Therefore each one betake him to his rest,
To morrow, all for speeding doe their best.
Enter Hellicanus, and Escanes.
Hell. No, Escanes, know this of me,
Antiochus from incest liv'd not free:
For which, the most high gods not minding
Longer to with-hold the vengeance that
They had in store, due to his hainous
Capitall offence; even in the height and pride
Of all his glory, when he was seated in
A Chariot of an inestimable value, and his Daughter
With him; a fire from heaven came and shrivel'd
Up those bodies, even to loathing, for they so stunk,
That all those eyes ador'd them, ere their fall,
Scorn now their hand should give them buriall.
Escanes. It was very strange. (great,
Hell. And yet but justice; for though this King were
His greatnesse was no guard to barre heavens shaft.
By sin had his reward.
Escan. 'Tis very true.
Enter two or three Lords.
1. Lord. See, not a man in private conference,
Or counsell, hath respect with him but he.
2. Lord. It shall no longer grieve without reproof.
3. Lord. And curst be he that will not second it.
1. Lord. Follow me then: Lord Hellicane, a word.
Hell. With me? and welcome, happy day, my Lords.
1. Lord. Know that our griefs are risen to the top,
And now at length they over-flow their banks.
Hell. Your griefs, for what?
Wrong not your Prince you love.
1. Lord. Wrong not your self then, noble Hellican,
But if the Prince doe live, let us salute him,
Or know what ground's made happy by his breath:
If in the world he live, we'll seek him out:
If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there,
And be resolv'd, he lives to govern us:
Or dead, give's cause to mourn his Funerall,
And leave us to our free Election.
2. Lor. Whose death indeed, the strongest in our censure,
And knowing this Kingdome is without a head,
Like goodly buildings left without a Roof,
Soon fall to ruine: your noble self,
That best knowes how to rule, and how to reign.
We thus submit unto our Soveraign.
Omnes. Live, noble Hellican.
Hell. Try honours cause; forbear your suffrages:
If that you love Prince Pericles, forbear,
(Take I your wish, I leap into the Seas,
Where's hourely trouble, for a minutes ease)
A twelve-moneth longer, let me entreat you
To forbear the absence of your King;
If in which time expir'd, he not return,
I shall with aged patience bear your yoke.
But if I cannot win you to this love,
Go search like Nobles, like noble Subjects,
And in your search, spend your adventurous worth,
Whom if you finde, and winne unto return,
You shall like Diamonds sit about his Crown.
1. Lord. To wisedome, he's a foole that will not yield,
And since Lord Hellican enjoyneth us,
We with our travels will endeavour.
Hell. Then you love us, we you, and we'll clasp hands,
When Peeres thus knit, a Kingdome ever stands. Exit.
Enter the King reading of a Letter, at one door, and the Knights meet him.
1. Knight. Good morrow to the good Simonides.
King. Knights, from my Daughter this I let you know,
That for this twelve-moneth, she'll not undertake
A married life: her reason to her self is onely known,
Which yet from her by no meanes can I get.
2. Knight. May we not get accesse to her (my Lord)
King. Faith, by no meanes, she hath so strictly
Ti'd her to her Chamber, that 'tis impossible:
One twelve Moons more she'll wear Dianaes livery:
This by the eye of Cynthia hath she vowed,
And on her Virgin honour will not break.
3. Knig. Loth to bid farewell, we take our leaves. Exit.
King. So, they are well dispatcht,
Now to my daughters Letter; she tells me here,
She'll wed the stranger Knight,
Or never more to view nor day nor light.
'Tis well, Mistris, your choyce agrees with mine,

I like that well: nay how absolute she's in't,
Not minding whether I dislike or no.
Well, I doe commend her choyce, and will no longer
Have it be delayed: soft, here he comes,
I must dissemble it.

Enter Pericles.

Per. All fortune to the good Simonides.
King. To you as much: Sir, I am beholding to you,
For your sweet musick this last night:
I doe protest, my eares were never better fed
With such delightfull pleasing harmony.
Per. It is your Graces pleasure to commend,
Not my desert.
King. Sir, you are Musicks master.
Per. The worst of all her Schollars (my good Lord)
King. Let me aske you one thing.
What doe you think of my Daughter, sir?
Per. A most virtuous Princesse.
King. And she's fair too, is she not?
Per. As a fair day in Summer: wondrous fair.
King. Sir, my Daughter thinks very well of you,
I, so well, that you must be her Master,
And she will be your Schollar; therefore look to it.
Per. I am unworthy to be her Schoolmaster.
King. She thinks not so, peruse this writing else.
Per. What's here, a Letter, that she loves the Knight of
'Tis the King's subtilty to have my life: (Tyre?
Oh seek not to intrap me, gracious Lord,
A stranger and distressed Gentleman,
That never aim'd so high to love your Daughter,
But bent all offices to honour her.
King. Thou hast bewitcht my Daughter,
And thou art a Villain.
Per. By the gods I have not; never did thought
Of mine levy offence; nor never did my actions
Yet commence, a deed might gain her love,
Or your displeasure.
King. Traitor, thou lyest.
Per. Traitor!
King. I, Traitor.
Per. Even in his throat, unlesse it be a King,
That calls me Traitor, I return the lye.
King. Now by the gods I doe applaud his courage.
Per. My actions are as noble as my thoughts,
That never relisht of a base descent:
I came unto the Court for honours cause,
And not be a Rebel to her state:
And he that otherwise accounts of me,
This Sword shall prove, he's honours enemy.
King. No? here comes my Daughter, she can witness it.

Enter Thaisa.

Per. Then as you are as virtuous, as fair,
Resolve your angry Father, if my tongue
Did e're solicite, or my hand subscribe
To any syllable that made love to you?
Thai. Why, sir, if you had, who takes offence,
At that would make me glad?
King. Yea, mistris, are you so peremptory?
I am glad of it withall my heart, Aside.
I'le tame you, I'le bring you in subjection.
Will you, not having my consent,
Bestow your love and your affections,
Upon a stranger? who, for ought I know, Aside.
May be (nor can I think the contrary)
As great in blood as I my self.
Therefore hear you, Mistresse, either frame
Your will to mine; and you, sir, hear you,
Either be rul'd by me, or I'le make you-------
Man and Wife; nay, come your hands
And lips must seale it too: and being joyn'd,
I'le thus your hopes destroy, and for further grief,
God give you joy; what, are you both pleased?
Thai. Yes, if you love me, sir.
Per. Even as my life, or blood that fosters it.
King. What, are you both agreed?
Amb. Yes, if it please your Majesty.
King. It pleaseth me so well, that I will see you wed,
And then with what haste you can, get you to bed.

Enter Gower.

Now sleep slaked hath the rout,
No din but snores about the house,
Made louder by the ore-fee beast,
Of this most pompous marriage feast:
The Cat with eyne of burning coale,
Now couches from the Mouses hole;
And Cricket sing at the Ovens mouth,
Are the blither for their drouth:
Hymen hath brought the Bride to bed,
Where by the losse of Maiden-head,
A Babe is moulded, by attent,
And time that is so briefly spent,
With your fine fancies quaintly each,
What's dumbe in shew, I'le plain with speech.

Enter Pericles and Simonides at one door with attendants, a Messenger meets them, kneeles, and gives Pericles a Letter, Pericles shewes it Simonides, the Lords kneele to him; then enter Thaisa with childe, with Lychorida a Nurse, the King shewes her the Letter, she rejoyces: she and Pericles take leave of her Father, and depart.

By many a dearne and painfull pearch
Of Pericles, the carefull search,
By the four opposing Crignes,
Which the world together joynes,
Is made with all due diligence,
That horse and saile, and high expence,
Can steed the quest at last from Tyre,
Fame answering the most strange enquire,
To th' Court of King Simonides,
Are Letters brought, the tenour these:
Antiochus and his Daughter's dead,
The men of Tyrus, on the head
Of Hellicanus would set on
The Crown of Tyre, but he will none:
The mutiny, he there hastes t' oppresse,
Sayes to them, if King Pericles
Come not home in twice six Moones,
He, obedient to their doomes,
Will take the Crown: the summe of this Brought hither to Pentapolis,
Irony shed the Regions round,
And every one with claps can sound,
Our heir apparant is a King:
Who dreamt? who thought of such a thing?
Brief, he must hence depart to Tyre,
His Queen with child, makes her desire,
Which who shall crosse along to go,
Omit we all their dole and woe:
Lychorida her Nurse she takes,
And so to Sea; then vessell shakes,

On

On Neptunes billow, half the flood,
Hath their Keele cut: but fortune mov'd
Varies again, the grisly North
Disgorges such a tempest forth,
That as a Duck for life that drives,
So up and down the poor ship dives:
The Lady shreeks, and well-a-near,
Doth fall in travell with her fear:
And what ensues in this self storme,
Shall for it self, it self perform:
I nill relate, action may
Conveniently the rest convey;
Which might not? what by me is told,
In your imagination hold:
This Stage, the Ship, upon whose Deck,
The Seas tost Pericles, appeares to speak.

Enter Pericles on Shipboord.

Per. The God of this great vast, rebuke these surges
Which wash both heaven and hell, and thou that hast
Upon the windes command, bind them in Brasse,
Having call'd them from the deep, O still
Thy dearning dreadfull thunders; daily quench
Thy nimble sulpherous flashes: O how, Lychorida?
How does my Queen? then storm venomously,
Wilt thou spet all thy self? the Seamans whistle
Is a whisper in the eares of death,
Unheard Lychorida? Lucina, oh!
Divinest Patroness, and my Wife, gentle
To those that cry by night, convey thy Deity
Aboard our dancing Boat, make swift the pangs
Of my Queens travels. Now, Lychorida.

Enter Lychorida.

Lychor. Here is a thing too young for such a place,
Who if it had conceit, would dye, as I am like to doe:
Take in your armes this piece of your dead Queen.

Per. How? how, Lychorida?

Lychor. Patience, good sir, doe not assist the storme,
Here's all that is left living of our Queen;
A little Daughter, for the sake of it
Be manly, and take comfort.

Per. Oh you gods!
Why doe you make us love your goodly gifts,
And snatch them straight away?
We here below, recall not what we give,
And we therein may use honour with you.

Lychor. Patience, good sir, even for this charge.

Per. Now milde may be thy life,
For a more blusterous birth had never Babe:
Quiet and gentle thy conditions;
For thou art the rudelieſt welcome to this world,
That ever was Princes Childe: happy that followes,
Thou hast as chiding a Nativity,
As Fire, Aire, Water, Earth, and Heaven can make,
To harold thee from the wombe:
Even at the first, thy losse is more then can
Thy portage quite, with all thou canst finde here:
Now the good gods throw their best eyes upon it.

Enter two Saylors.

1. Sayl. What courage, sir? God save you.

Per. Courage enough, I doe not fear the flaw,
It hath done to me the worst: yet for the love
Of this poor Infant, this fresh new Sea-farer,
I would it would be quiet.

1. Sayl. Slack the bolins there; thou wilt not, wilt thou?
Blow and split thy self.

2. Sayl. But Sea-room, and the brine and cloudy billow kisse the Moon, I care not.

1. Sayl. Sir, your Queen must over-board,
The Sea works high, the winde is loud,
And will not lie till the Ship be cleared of the dead.

Per. That's your superstition.

1. Pardon us, sir; with us at Sea it still hath bin observed,
And we are strong in Eastern, therefore briefly yield her.

Per. As you think meet, for she must o're-board straight,
Most wretched Queen.

Lychor. Here she lies, sir.

Per. A terrible Child-bed hast thou had (my Dear)
No light, no fire, the unfriendly Elements
Forgot thee utterly, nor have I time
To bring thee hallowed to thy grave, but straight
Must cast thee scarcely Coffind, in oare,
Where for a Monument upon thy bones.
The ayre remaining lamps, the belching Whale,
And humming water must o'rewhelme thy Corps,
Lying with simple shells: Oh Lychorida,
Bid Nestor bring me Spices, Ink and Paper,
My Casket and my Jewels, and bid Nicander
Bring me the Sattin Coffin; lay the Babe
Upon the Pillow; hie thee, whiles I say
A Priestly farewell to her: suddenly, woman.

2. Sayl. Sir, we have a Chest beneath the hatches,
Caulkt and bittumed ready.

Per. I thank thee: Marriner say, what Coast is this?

2. Sayl. We are near Tharsus.

Per. Thither, gentle Marriner,
Alter thy course for Tyre: when canst thou reach it?

2. Sayl. By break of day, if the winde cease.

Per. O make for Tharsus,
There will I visit Cleon, for the Babe
Cannot hold out to Tyrus; there I'le leave it
At carefull nursing: go thy wayes, good Marriner,
I'le bring the body presently. Exit.

Enter Lord Cerymon with a Servant.

Cer. Phylemon, hoa.

Enter Philemon.

Phil. Doth my Lord call?

Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men;
It hath been a turbulent and stormy night.

Ser. I have been in many: but such a night as this,
Till now, I ne're endured.

Cer. Your Master will be dead ere you return,
There's nothing can be minist'red to nature,
That can recover him: give this to the Pothecary,
And tell me how it works.

Enter two Gentlemen.

1. Gent. Good morrow.

2. Gent. Good morrow to your Lordship.

Cer. Gentlemen, why doe you stirre so early?

1. Gent. Sir, our lodgings standing bleak upon the Sea,
Shook as if the earth did quake:
The very principies did seem to rend and all to topple,
Pure surprize and fear made me to leave the house.

2. Gent. That is the cause we trouble you so early,
'Tis not our husbandry.

Cer. O you say well.

1. Gent. But I much marvell that your Lordship
Having rich attire about you, should at these early houres
Shake off the golden slumber of repose; 'tis most strange,
Nature should be so conversant with pain,
Being thereto not compelled.

Cer. I hold it ever Virtue and Cunning.

Were

Were endowments greater, then Nobleneſs and Riches,
Careleſs heirs may the two latter darken and expend ;
But immortality attends the former,
Making a Man a God :
'Tis known, I ever have ſtudied Phyſick,
Through which ſecret Art, by turning o're Authority,
I have together with my practiſe, made familiar
To me and to my aide, the beſt infuſions that dwells
In vegetives, in Mettals, Stones : and can ſpeak of the Diſturbances that Nature works, and of her cures ;
Which doth give me a more content in courſe of true de- (light
Then to be thirſty after tottering Honour,
Or tye my pleaſure up in ſilken Bags,
To pleaſe the Fool and Death.

2. Gent. Your honour hath through Epheſus,
Poured forth your charity, and hundred call themſelves
Your Creatures ; who by you have been reſtored,
And not your knowledge, your perſonall pain,
But even your purſe ſtill open, hath built Lord Cerimon
Such ſtrong renown, as never ſhall decay.

Enter two or three with a Cheſt.

Ser. So, lift there.

Cer. What's that ?

Ser. Sir, even now did the Sea, toſſe up upon our ſhore
This Cheſt ; 'tis of ſome wrack.

Cer. Set it down, let us look upon it.

2. Gent. 'Tis like a Coffin, ſir.

Cer. What e're it be, 'tis wondrous heavy ;
Wrench it open ſtraight :
If the Seas ſtomack be o're-charg'd with gold,
'Tis a good conſtraint of Fortune it belches upon us.

2. Gent. 'Tis ſo, my Lord. (it up ?

Cer. How cloſe 'tis caulkt and bottom'd, did the ſea caſt

Ser. I never ſaw ſo huge a billow, ſir, as toſt it upon ſhore.

Cer. Wrench it open ; it ſmells moſt ſweetly in my (ſence.

2. Gent. A delicate Odour.

Cer. As ever hit my noſtrill : ſo, up with it.
Oh you moſt potent gods ! what's here, a Coarſe ?

1. Gent. Moſt ſtrange.

Cer. Shrowded in cloth of ſtate, balm'd and entreaſured
With full bags of Spices, a Paſport to Apollo,
Perfect me in the Characters.

Here I give to underſtand,
If e're this Coffin drive a land ;
I King Pericles have loſt
This Queen, worth all our mundane coſt :
Who finds her, give her burying,
She was the Daughter of a King.
Beſides this treaſure for a fee,
The gods requite his charity.

If thou liveſt Pericles, thou haſt a heart
That even cracks for woe : this chanc'd to night.

2. Gent. Moſt likely, ſir.

Cer. Nay certainly to night, for look how freſh ſhe
They were too rough, that threw her in the ſea. (looks,
Make a fire within, fetch hither all my boxes in my Cloſet,
Death may uſurpe on Nature many houres,
And yet the fire of life kindle again the o're-preſt ſpirits.
I heard of an Ægyptian that had nine houres been dead,
Who was by good appliance recovered.

Enter one with Napkins and Fire.

Well ſaid, well ſaid, the fire and cloathes,
The rough and wofull muſick that we have,
Cauſe it to ſound I beſeech you :
The Viall once more ; how thou ſtirreſt, thou block ?
The Muſick there : I pray you give her aire ;
Gentlemen, this Queen will live,
Nature awakes a warme breath out of her ;
She hath not been entranſt above five houres,
See how ſhe gins to blow into lifes flower again.

1. Gen. The heavens through you, encreaſe our wonder,
And ſets up your fame for ever.

Cer. She is alive, behold her eye-lids,
Caſes to thoſe heavenly jewels which Pericles hath loſt,
Begin to part their fringes of bright g old
The Diamonds of a moſt praiſed water doth appear,
To make the world twice rich, live, and make us weep,
To hear your fate, fair creature, rare as you ſeem to be.

She moves.

Thai. O dear Diana, where am I ? where's my Lord ?
What world is this ?

2. Gent. Is not this ſtrange ?

1. Gent. Moſt rare.

Cer. Huſh (my gentle neighbour) lend me your hands,
To the next chamber bear her, get linnen ;
Now this matter muſt be looke too, for the relapſe
Is mortall : come, come, and, Eſculapius, guide us.

They carry her away. Exeunt omnes.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Pericles at Tharſus, with Cleon and Dionizia.

Per. Moſt honoured Cleon, I muſt needs be gone,
My twelve moneths are expir'd, and Tyre ſtands
In a peace : you and your Lady take from my heart
All thankfulneſſe. The gods make up the reſt upon you.

Cleon. Your ſhakes of fortune, though they hate you
Mortally, yet glance full wondringly on us. (pleaſed

Dion. O your ſweet Queen ! that the ſtrict fates had
You had brought her hither to have bleſt mine eyes with

Per. We cannot but obey the powers above us ; (her.
Could I rage and rore as doth the Sea ſhe lies in,
Yet the end muſt be as 'tis : my gentle babe Marina,
Whom (for ſhe was born at Sea) I have named ſo,
Here, I charge your charity withall ; leaving her
The infant of your care, beſeeching you to give her
Princely training, that ſhe may be manner'd as ſhe is born.

Cleon. Fear not (my Lord) but think your Grace,
That fed my Country with your Corn ; for which,
The peoples prayers daily fall upon you, muſt in your Childe
Be thought on, if neglect ſhould therein make me vile,
The common body that's by you reliev'd,
Would force me to my duty ; but if to that,
My nature need a ſpurre, the gods revenge it
Upon me and mine, to the end of generation.

Per. I believe you, your honour and your goodneſſe,
Teach me toot without your vowes, till ſhe be married,
Madam, by bright Diana, whom we honour,
All unſiſter'd ſhall this heir of mine remain,
Though I ſhew will in't : ſo I take my leave :
Good Madam, make me bleſſed, in your care
In bringing up my Childe.

Dion. I have one my ſelf, who ſhall not be more dear to my reſpect than yours, my Lord.

Per

Per. Madam, my thanks and prayers.

Cleon. We'll bring your Grace to the edge of the shore, then give you up to the masked Neptune, and the gentlest windes of heaven.

Per. I will embrace your offer, come, dearest Madam: O no teares, Lychorida, no teares; look to your little Mistris, on whose grace you may depend hereafter: come, my Lord.

Enter Cerymon, and Thaisa.

Cer. Madam, this Letter, and some certain Jewels, Lay with you in your Coffer, which are at your command: Know you the Character?

Thai. It is, my Lords, that I was shipt at Sea, I well remember, even on my eaning time: but whether there delivered, by the holy gods, I cannot rightly say: but since King Pericles, my wedded Lord, I ne're shall see again, a vestall livery will I take me to, and never more have joy.

Cler. Madam, if this you purpose as ye speak,
Dianaes Temple is not distant farre,
Where you may abide till your date expire,
Moreover if you please, a Neece of mine,
Shall there attend you.

Thai. My recompence is thanks, that's all,
Yet my good will is great, though the gift small. Exit.

Enter Gower.

Gower. Imagine Pericles arriv'd at Tyre,
Welcom'd and settled to his own desire;
His wofull Queen we leave at Ephesus,
Unto Diana, there's a Votaresse.
Now to Marina bend your minde,
Whom our fast growing scene must finde
At Tharsus, and by Cleon train'd
In Musicks letters, who hath gain'd
Of education all the grace,
Which makes high both the art and place
Of generall wonder: but alack,
That monster Envy oft the wrack
Of earned praise, Marina's life
Seek to take off by treason's knife,
And in this kinde, our Cleon hath
One Daughter and a full grown wench,
Even ripe for Marriage sight: this Maid
Hight Philoten: and it is said
For certain in our story, she
Would ever with Marina be,
Be't when they weav'd the sleded silk,
With fingers long, small, white as milk,
Or when she would with sharp needle wound
The Cambrick, which she made more sound
By hurting it, or when to th' Lute
She sung, and made the night bed mute,
That still records within one, or when
She would with rich and constant pen,
Vaile to her Mistresse Dion still,
This Phyloten contends in skill
With absolute Marina: so
The Dove of Paphos might with the Crow
Vie feathers white. Marina gets
All praises, which are paid as debts,
And not as given, this so darks
In Phyloten all gracefull markes,
That Cleon's Wife with envy rare,
A present Murderer do's prepare
For good Marina, that her Daughter
Might stand peerlesse by this slaughter.
The sooner her vile thoughts to stead,
Lychorida our Nurse is dead,
And curst Dionizia hath
The pregnant instrument of wrath
Prest for this blow, the unborn event,
I doe commend to your content,
Onely I carried winged Time,
Poste on the lame feet of my rime,
Which never could I so convey,
Unlesse your thoughts went on my way.
Dionizia doth appear,
With Leonine a Murderer. Exit.

Enter Dionizia, and Leonine.

Dion. Thy oath remember, thou hast sworn to do it, 'tis but a blow, which never shall be known, thou canst not doe a thing in the world so soon, to yield thee so much profit, let not conscience which is but cold, inflaming thy love bosome, enflame too nicely; nor let pitty, which even women have cast off, melt thee, but be a souldier to thy purpose.

Leon. I will do't, but yet she is a goodly Creature.

Dion. The fitter then the gods should have her. Here she comes weeping for her onely Mistresse death: Thou art resolv'd?

Leon. I am resolv'd.

Enter Marina with a Basket of Flowers.

Mar. No: I will rob Tellus of her weed, to strew thy Grave with Flowers: the yellowes, blewes, the purple Violets and Marigolds, shall as a Carpet hang upon thy Grave, while Summer dayes doth last. Aye me, poor Maid, born in a tempest, when my Mother di'd: this world to me is like a lasting storme, hurrying me from my friends.

Dion. How now, Marina? why de'ye weep alone? How chance my Daughter is not with you? Doe not consume your blood with sorrowing, You have a Nurse of me. Lord? how your favour's Chang'd, with this unprofitable woe: Come give me your Flowers, ere the Sea marre it, Walk with Leonine, the aire is quick there, And it pierces and sharpens the stomack. Come, Leonine, take her by the arme, walk with her.

Mar. No I pray you, I'le not bereave you of your Servant.

Dion. Come, come, I love the King your Father, and your self, with more then forreign heart; we every day expect him here, when he shall come and finde our Paragon, to all reports thus blasted. He will repent the breadth of his great voyage, blame both my Lord and me, that we have taken no care to your best courses. Go I pray you, walk and be cheerfull once again; reserve that excellent complexion, which did steale the eyes of young and old. Care not for me, I can go home alone.

Mar. Well, I will go, but yet I have no desire to it.

Dion. Come, come, I know 'tis good for you: Walk half an houre, Leonine, at the least. Remember what I have said.

Leon. I warrant you, Madam.

Dion. I'le leave you, my sweet Lady, for a while: pray walk softly, doe not heat your blood: What, I must have a care of you.

Mar. My thanks, sweet Madam. Is the winde Westerly that blowes?

Leon. South-west.

Mar. When I was born, the winde was North.

Leon. Was't so?

Mar.

Mar. My Father, as Nurſe ſaith, did never fear, but cryed good Sea-men to the Sailors, galling his Kingly hands, hailing ropes, and claſping to the Maſt, endured a Sea that almoſt burſt the deck.

Leon. When was this?

Mar. When I was born, never was waves nor winde more violent, and from the ladder tackle, waſhes off a Canvas clymer, ha, ſaith one, wilt out? and with a dropping induſtry they skip from ſtern to ſtern: the Boat-ſwain whiſtles, and the Maſter calls and trebles their confuſion.

Leon. Come, ſay your prayers.

Mar. What mean you?

Leon. If you require a little ſpace for prayer, I grant it, pray, but be not tedious, for the gods are quick of ear, and I am ſworn to doe my work with haſte.

Mar. Why, will you kill me?

Leon. To ſatisfie my Lady.

Mar. Why would ſhe have me kill'd now? as I can remember by my troth, I never did hurt her in all my life, I never ſpake bad word, nor did ill turn to any living creature: believe me now, I never kill'd a Mouſe, nor hurt a Flye. I trod upon a worme once againſt my will, but I wept for it. How have I offended, wherein my death might yield her any profit, or my life imply her any danger?

Leon. My Commiſſion is not to reaſon of the deed, but do't.

Mar. You will not do't for all the world, I hope: you are well favoured, and your looks fore-ſhew you have a very gentle heart, I ſaw you lately when you caught hurt in parting two that fought: good-ſooth it ſhewed well in you, do ſo now, your Lady ſeeks my life, come you between, and ſave poor me the weaker.

Leon. I am ſworn, and will diſpatch.

Enter Pirates.

Pirat. 1. Hold villain.

Pirat. 2. A prize, a prize.

Pirat. 3. Half part mates, half part. Come lets have her aboard ſodainly. Exeunt.

Enter Leonine.

Leon. Theſe roguing thieves ſerve the great Pirate Valdes, and they have ſeized Marina, let her go, there's no hope ſhe will return: I'le ſwear ſhe's dead, and thrown into the Sea, but I'le ſee further, perhaps they will but pleaſe themſelves upon her, not carry her aboard, if ſhe remain,
Whom they have raviſht, muſt by me be ſlain.

Enter Pander, Boult and Bawd.

Pander. Boult.

Boult. Sir.

Pander. Search the market narrowly, Metaline is full of gallants, we loſt too much money this Mart, by being too Wenchleſſe.

Bawd. We were never ſo much out of creatures, we have but poor three, and they can doe no more then they can doe, and they with continuall action, are even as good as rotten.

Pander. Therefore let's have freſh ones what e're we pay for them, if there be not a conſcience to be us'd in every trade, we ſhall never proſper.

Bawd. Thou ſay'ſt true, 'tis not our bringing up of poor baſtards, as I think, I have brought ſome eleven.

Boult. I too eleven, and brought them down again, But ſhall I ſearch the market?

Bawd. What elſe, man? the ſtuffe we have, a ſtrong winde will blow it to pieces, they are ſo pittifully ſodden.

Pander. Thou ſay'ſt true, there's two unwholeſome in conſcience, the poor Tranſilvanian is dead that lay with the little baggage.

Boult. I, ſhe quickly poupt him, ſhe made him roaſt-meat for wormes, but I'le go ſearch the market. Exit.

Pand. Three or four thouſand Chickeens were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and ſo give over.

Bawd. Why, to give over I pray you? Is it a ſhame to get when we are old?

Pand. Oh our credit comes not in like the commodity, nor the commodity wages not with the danger: therefore, if in our youths we could pick up ſome pretty eſtate, 'twere not amiſſe to keep our door hatch'd; beſides the ſore termes we ſtand upon with the gods, will be ſtrong with us for giving o're.

Bawd. Come, other ſorts offend as well as we.

Pand. As well as we, I, and better too, we offend worſe, neither is our profeſſion any Trade, it's no calling: but here comes Boult.

Enter Boult with Pirates, and Mirana.

Boult. Come your wayes, my maſters, you ſay ſhe's a virgin?

Sayl. O ſir, we doubt it not.

Boult. Maſter, I have gone through for this piece you ſee, If you like her, ſo; if not, I have loſt my earneſt.

Bawd. Boult, has ſhe any qualities?

Boult. She has a good face, ſpeaks well, and has excellent good cloathes: there's no farther neceſſity of qualities can make her be refuſed.

Bawd. What's her price, Boult?

Boult. I cannot be bated one doit of a thouſand pieces.

Pand. Well, follow me, my Maſters, you ſhall have your money preſently: wife, take her in, inſtruct her what ſhe has to doe, that ſhe may not be raw in her entertainment.

Bawd. Boult, take you the markes of her, the colour of her haire, complexion, height, age, with warrant of her virginity, and cry; He that will give moſt, ſhall have her firſt. Such a maiden-head were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been: Get this done as I command you.

Boult. Performance ſhall follow.

Mar. Alack that Leonine was ſo ſlack, ſo ſlow:
He ſhould have ſtruck, not ſpoke;
Or that theſe Pirates, not enough barbarous,
Had not o're-board thrown me, for to ſeek my Mother.

Bawd. Why weep you, pretty one?

Mar. That I am pretty.

Bawd. Come, the gods have done their part in you.

Mar. I accuſe them not.

Bawd. You are light into my hands,
Where you are like to live.

Mar. The more's my fault, to ſcape his hands,
Where I was like to dye.

Bawd. I, and you ſhall live in pleaſure.

Mar. No.

Bawd. Yes indeed ſhall you, and taſte Gentlemen of all faſhions. You ſhall fare well; you ſhall have the difference of all complexions: what de'ye ſtop your eares?

Mar. Are you a woman?

Bawd. What would you have me to be, if I be not a woman?

Mar. An honeſt woman, or not a woman.

Bawd. Marry whip thee, Goſling: I think I ſhall have ſomething to doe with you. Come, y'are a young fooliſh ſapling, and muſt be bowed as I would have ye.

Mar. The gods defend me.

Bawd. If it pleaſe the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men must stirre you up: Boult's return'd.

Enter Boult.

Now, sir, hast thou cry'd her through the Market?

Boult. I have cri'd her almost to the number of her hairs, I have drawn her picture with my voice.

Baud. And prithee tell me, how do'st thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

Boult. Faith they listened to me, as they would have hearkned to thir fathers Testament. There was a Spaniards mouth so watered, that he went to bed to her very description.

Baud. We shall have him here to morrow with his best ruffe on.

Boult. To night, to night, but Mistris, do you know the French Knight that cowres i'th hams?

Baud. Who, Mounsieur Verollus?

Boult. I, he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation, but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to morrow.

Baud. Well, well, as for him he brought his disease hither, here he doth but repair it, I know he will come in our shadow, to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Boult. Well, if we had of every Nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this signe.

Baud. Pray you come hither a while, you have Fortunes comming upon you, mark me, you must seem to do that fearfully, which you commit willingly, despise profit, where you have most gain; to weep that you live as you do, makes pitty in your lovers seldome, but that pitty begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a meer profit.

Mar. I understand you not.

Boult. O take her home, mistris, take her home, these blushes of hers must be quencht with some present practise.

Baud. Thou sayest true ifaith, so they must, for your Bride goes to that with shame, which is her way to go with warrant.

Boult. Faith some do, and some do not, but Mistris, if I have bargain'd for the joynt.

Baud Thou maist cut a morsel off the spit.

Boult. I may so.

Baud. Who should deny it?
Come young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Boult. I by my faith, they shall not be changed yet.

Baud. Boult, spend thou that in the Town, report what a sojourner we have, you'll lose nothing by custome. When nature framed this piece, she meant thee a good turn, therefore say what a parragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report.

Boult. I warrant you mistris, thunder shall not so awake the beds of Eels, as my giving out her beauty stirs up the lewdly enclined, I'le bring home some to night.

Baud. Come your wayes, follow me.

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,
Untri'd I still my virgin knot will keep.
Diana aid my purpose.

Baud. What have we to do with Diana? pray you go with us. Exeunt.

Enter Cleon and Dionizia.

Dion. Why are you foolish, can it be undone?

Cleon. O Dionizia, such a piece of slaughter,
The Sun and Moon ne're look'd upon.

Dion. I think you'l turn a child again.

Cleon. Were I chief Lord of all this spacious world,
I'd give it to undo the deed. O Lady, much lesse in bloud then vertue, yet a Princess to equall any single Crown of the earth, in the justice of compare, O villain, Leonine, whom thou hast poison'd too, if thou had'st drunk to him, it had been a kindness becoming well thy face, what canst thou say, when Noble Pericles shall demand his child?

Dion. That she is dead. Nurses are not the fates to foster it, nor ever to preserve, she di'd at night, I'le say so, who can crosse it, unlesse you play the Innocent, and for an honest attribute, cry out she di'd by foul play.

Cleon. O go too, well, well, of all the faults beneath the heavens, the gods do like this worst.

Dion. Be one of those that thinks the pretty wrens of Tharsus will fly hence, and open this to Pericles; I do shame to think of what a Noble strain you are, and of how coward a spirit.

Cleon. To such proceeding, whoever but his approbation added, though not his whole consent, he did not flow from honorable courses.

Dion. Be it so then, yet none doth know but you how she came dead, nor none can know, Leonine being gone. She did disdain my child, and stood between her and her fortunes: none would look on her, but cast their gazes on Marina's face, whilst ours was blurred at, and held a Mawkin, not worth the time of day. It pierc'd me thorow, and though you call my course unnatural, you not your child well loving, yet I find it greets me as an enterprize of kindness perform'd to your sole daughter.

Cleon. Heavens forgive it.

Dion. And as for Pericles, what should he say? we wept after her hearse, and yet we mourn: her monument almost finished, and her Epitaph in glittering golden characters, expressa general praise to her, and care in us, at whose expence 'tis done.

Cleon. Thou art like the Harpie,
Which to betray, dost with thy Angels face,
Ceaze with thine Eagles talents.

Dion. You are like one, that superstitiously
Doth swear to th'gods, that winter kills the flies,
But yet I know, you'll do as I advise. Exit.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Gower.

Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short,
Sail seas in Cockles, have and wish but for't:
Making to take our imagination,
From bourn to bourn, Region to Region.
By you being Pard'ned, we commit no crime
To use one Language, in each several clime,
Where our scenes seem to live. I do beseech you
To learn of me, who stands in gaps to teach you.
The stages of our story, Pericles,
Is now again thwarting the wayward seas,
(Attended on by many a Lord and Knight)
To see his daughter, all his lives delight.
Old Hellicanus goes along behinde,
Is left to govern it: you hear in minde
Old Escanes, whom Hellicanus late
Advanc'd in time to great and high estate,
Well sailing ships, and bounteous windes have brought
This King to Tharsus, think this Pilate thought
So with his steerage, shall your thoughts grone
To fetch his Daughter home, who first is gone

Like

Like moats and ſhadowes ſee them move a while,
Your eares unto your eyes I le reconcile.

Enter Pericles at one door with all his train. Cleon and Dionizia at the other. Cleon ſhewes Pericles the Tombe, whereat Pericles makes lamentation, puts on Sack-cloth, and in a mighty paſſion departs.

Gower. See how belief may ſuffer by foule ſhow,
This borrowed paſſion ſtands for true old woe :
And Pericles in ſorrow all devour'd,
With ſighes ſhot through, and biggeſt teares o're-ſhowr'd.
Leaves Tharſus, and again imbarks, he ſweares
Never to waſh his face, nor cut his haires,
He put on Sack-cloth and to Sea he beares,
A tempeſt which his mortall Veſſell teares.
And yet he rides it out. Now take we our way
To the Epitaph for Marina, writ by Dionizia.

The faireſt, ſweeteſt, and beſt lies here,
Who withered in her ſpring of year :
She was of Tyrus the King's Daughter,
On whom foule death hath made this ſlaughter :
Marina was ſhe call'd, and at her birth,
That is, being proud, ſwallow'd ſome part of th'earth :
Therefore the earth fearing to be o'reflow'd
Hath Thetis birth-childe on the heavens beſtow'd.
Wherefore ſhe does and ſweares ſhe'll never ſtint,
Make raging Battry upon ſhores of flint.

No vizor does become black villany,
So well as ſoft and tender flattery.
Let Pericles believe his Dauhter's dead,
And bear his courſes to be ordered
By Lady Fortune, while our ſteare muſt play
His Daughter woe and heavy well-a-day.
In her unholy ſervice : Patience then,
And think you now are all in Metaline.

Enter two Gentlemen.

1. Gent. Did you ever hear the like?

2. Gent. No, nor never ſhall doe in ſuch a place as this, ſhe being once gone.

1. Gent. But to have Divinity preacht there, did you ever dreame of ſuch a thing?

2. Gent. No, no, come, I am for no more Bawdy Houſes, ſhall we go hear the Veſtalls ſing?

1. Gent. I'le doe any thing now that is virtuous, but I am out of the road of rutting for ever. Exeunt.

Enter the three Bawdes.

Pand. Well, I had rather then twice the worth of her ſhe had ne're come here.

Bawd. Fie, fie upon her, ſhe is able to frieze the god Priapus, and undoe a whole generation, we muſt either get her raviſht, or be rid of her, when ſhe ſhould doe for clyents her fitment, and doe me the kindneſſe of our profeſſion, ſhe has me her quirks, her reaſons, her maſter-reaſons, her prayers, her knees, that ſhe would make a Puritane of the Devil, if he ſhould cheapen a kiſſe of her.

Boult. Faith I muſt raviſh her, or ſhe'll diſfurniſh us of all our Cavaleers, and make all our Swearers Prieſts.

Pand. Now the poxe upon her green ſickneſſe for me.

Ba. Faith there's no way to be rid of it, but by the way to the Pox. Here comes the Lord Lyſimachus diſguiſed.

Boul. We ſhould have both Lord and Lown, if the peeviſh Baggage would but give way to cuſtomers.

Enter Lyſimachus.

Lyſ. How now, how a dozen of virginities?

Bawd. Now the gods bleſſe your Honour.

Boult. I am glad to ſee your Honour in good health.

Lyſ. You may ſo, 'tis the better for you, that your reſorters ſtand upon ſound Legs, how now? wholſome impunity have you, that a man may deale withall, and defie the Surgeon?

Bawd. We have one here, ſir, if ſhe would------
But there never came her like in Metaline.

Lyſ. If ſhe'd doe the deeds of darkneſſe, thou would'ſt ſay.

Bawd. Your honour knowes what 'tis to ſay well enough.

Lyſ. Well, call forth, call forth.

Boult. For fleſh and blood, ſir, white and red, you ſhall ſee a Roſe, and ſhe were a Roſe indeed, if ſhe had but-------

Lyſ. What prethee?

Boult. O ſir, I can be modeſt.

Lyſ. That dignifies the renown of a Bawd, no leſſe then it gives a good report to a number to be chaſte.

Enter Marina.

Bawd. Here comes that which growes to the ſtalke,
Never pluckt yet I can aſſure you.
Is ſhe not a fair creature?

Lyſ. Faith ſhe would ſerve after a long voyage at Sea,
Well, there's for you, leave us.

Bawd. I beſeech your honour give me leave a word,
And I'le have done preſently.

Lyſ. I beſeech you doe.

Bawd. Firſt, I would have you note, this is an honourable man.

Mar. I deſire to find him ſo, that I may worthily note him.

Bawd. Next, he's the Governour of this Country, and a man whom I am bound to.

Mar. If he govern the Countrey, you are bound to him indeed, but how honourable he is in that, I know not.

Bawd. Pray you without any more virginall fencing, will you uſe him kindly? he will line your Apron with Gold.

Mar. What he will doe graciouſly, I will thankfully receive.

Lyſ. Have you done?

Bawd. My Lord, ſhe's not pac't yet, you muſt take ſome pains to work her to your mannage, come, we will leave his Honour and her together. Exit Bawde.

Lyſ. Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar. What trade, Sir?

Lyſ. Why, I cannot name't but I ſhall offend.

Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade, pleaſe you to name it.

Lyſ. How long have you been of this profeſſion?

Mar. E're ſince I can remember.

Lyſ. Did you go to't ſo young, were you a gameſter at five, or at ſeven?

Mar. Earlier too, ſir, if now I be one,

Lyſ. Why the houſe you dwell in, proclaimes you to be a creature of ſale.

Mar. Doe you know this houſe to be a place of ſuch reſort, and will come into it? I hear ſay you are of honourable parts, and the Governour of this place.

Lyſ. Why? hath your principall made known unto you, who I am?

Mar. Who is my Principal?

Ly. Why your herb woman; she that sets seeds and roots of shame and iniquity. O you have heard some thing of my power, and so stand aloft for more serious wooing, but I protest to thee, prety one, my authority shall not see thee, or else look friendly upon thee; come bring me to some private place, come, come.

Mar. If you were born to honour, shew it now, if put upon you, make the judgement good, that thought you worthy of it.

Lys. How's this? how's this? some more, be sage.

Mar. For me that am a maid, though most ungentle Fortune have plac'd me in this Stie, where since I came, diseases have been sold dearer then Physick, O that the gods would set me free from this unhallow'd place, though they did change me to the meanest bird that flies i'th purer aire.

Lys. I did not think thou could'st have spoke so well, I ne're dream'd thou could'st; had I brought hither a corrupted mind, thy speech had altered it, hold, here's gold for thee, persever in that clear way thou goest, and the gods strengthen thee.

Mar. The good gods preserve you.

Ly. For my part, I came with no ill intent, for to me the very doors and windows savours vilely, fare thee well, thou art a piece of vertue, and I doubt not but thy training hath been Noble, hold, here's more gold for thee, a curse upon him, die he like a thief that robs thee of thy goodness, if thou dost hear from me, it shall be for thy good.

Boult. I beseech your honour, one piece for me.

Ly. Avant thou damned door-keeper, your house but for this virgin that doth prop it, would sink and overwhelm you, away.

Boult. How's this? we must take another course with you? if your peevish chastity, which is not worth a break-fast in the cheapest Country under the coap, shall undo a whole household, let me be gelded like a spaniel, come your wayes.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman shall execute it, come your way, we'll have no more gentlemen driven away, come your wayes I say.

Enter Bawd.

Bawd. How now, what's the matter?

Boult. Worse and worse, Mistris, she hath here spoken holy words to the Lord Lysimachus.

Bawd. O abominable.

Boult. He makes our profession as it were to stink before the face of the gods.

Bawd. Marry hang her up for ever.

Boult. The Nobleman would have dealt with her like a Nobleman, and she sent him away as cold as a Snow-ball, saying his prayers too.

Bawd. Boult, take her away, use her at thy pleasure, crack the glasse of her virginity, & make the rest malleable.

Boult. And if she were a thornier piece of ground then she is, she shall be ploughed.

Mar. Hark, hark, you gods.

Bawd. She conjures, away with her, would she had never come within my doors, Marry hang you, she's born to undo us, will you not go the way of women-kind? Marry come up my dish of chastity, with rosemary and bayse. Exit.

Boult. Come mistris, come your wayes with me.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. To take from you the jewel you hold so deer.

Mar. Prithee tell me one thing first.

Boult. Come now, your one thing.

Mar. What can'st thou wish thine enemy to be?

Boult. Why I could wish him to be my Master, or rather my Mistris.

Mar. Neither of these are so bad as thou art, since they do better thee in their command; thou hold'st a place, for which the pained'st fiend in hell would not in reputation change: thou art the damned door-keeper to every cushered that comes enquiring for his Tib; to the cholerick fitting of every rogue, thy ear is liable, thy food is such as hath been belcht on by infectious lungs.

Boult. What would you have me do? go to the warrs, would you, where a man may serve seven years for the losse of a leg, and have not money enough in the end to buy him a wooden one?

Mar. Do any thing but this thou dost, empty old receptacles, or common-shores of filth; serve by Indenture to the common hangman, any of these wayes are yet better then this: for what thou professest, a Baboon, could he speak, would own a name too dear: O, that the gods would safely deliver me from this place: here, here's gold for thee, if that thy Master would gain by me, proclaim that I can sing, weave, sowe, and dance, with other vertues, which I'le keep from boast, and will undertake all these to teach. I doubt not but this populous City will yield many schollars.

Boult. But can you teach all this you speak off?

Mar. Prove that I cannot, take me home again, and prostitute me to the basest groom that doth frequent your house.

Boult. Well, I will see what I can do for thee: If I can place thee I will.

Mar. But amongst honest women.

Boult. Faith my acquaintance lies little among them; but since my master and mistris hath bought you, there's no going but by their consent: therefore I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough. Come, I'le do for thee what I can, come your wayes. Exeunt.

Enter Gower.

Marina thus the Brothel scapes, and chances
Into an honest house, our story saies;
She sings like one immortal, and she dances
As goddess-like to her admired laies:
Deep Clearks she dumbs, and with her needle composes
Natures own shape, of bud, bird, branch or berry,
That even her art, sisters the natural Roses;
Her Inkle, Silk, Twine, with the rubied Cherry,
That pupils lacks she none of noble race,
Who pour their bounty on her, and her gain
She gives the cursed Bawd: Leave we her place,
And to her Father turn our thoughts again,
Where we left him at sea, tumbled and tost,
And driven before the wind, he is arrivd
Here where his daughter dwels, and on this Coast,
Suppose him now at Anchor: the City striv'd
God Neptunes annual feast to keep, from whence
Lysimachus our Tyrian ship espies,
His banners sable, trim'd with rich expence,
And to him in his Barge with fervour hyes.

In

In your ſuppoſing, once more put your ſight
On heavy Pericles, think this his Bark,
Where what is done in action (more of might Shall be diſcovered) pleaſe you ſit and hark. Exit.

Enter Hellicanus, to him two Saylors.

1. Sayl. Where is the Lord Hellicanus? he can reſolve you. O here he is, ſir, there is a Barge put off from Metaline, and in it is Lyſimachus the Governor, who craves to come aboard, what is your will?

Hell. That he have his, call up ſome gentlemen.

2. Sayl. Ho, Gentlemen, my Lord calls.

Enter two or three Gentlemen.

Hell. Gentlemen, there is ſome of worth would come aboard, I pray thee greet them fairly.

Enter Lyſimachus.

1. Sayl. Sir, this is the man that can in ought you would, reſolve you.

Lyſ. Hail, reverent ſir, the gods preſerve you.

Hell. And you to out-live the age I am, and die as I would do.

Lyſ. You wiſh me well; being on ſhore, honoring of Neptunes triumphs, ſeeing this goodly veſſel ride before us, I made to it, to know of whence you are.

Hell. Firſt, what is your place?

Lyſ. I am the Governor of this place you lie before.

Hell. Sir, our veſſel's of Tyre, in it the King, a man, who for this three months hath not ſpoken to any one, nor taken ſuſtenance, but to prolong his grief.

Lyſ. Upon what ground is his diſtemperance?

Hell. It would be too tedious to repeat, but the main grief ſprings from the loſſe of a beloved daughter, and a wife.

Lyſ. May we not ſee him?

Hell. You may, but bootleſs is your ſight, he will not ſpeak to any.

Lyſ. Let me obtain my wiſh.

Hell. Behold him, this was a goodly perſon, till the diſaſter that one mortal night drove him to this.

Lyſ. Sir King, all hail, the gods preſerve you, hail, Royal Sir.

Hell. It is in vain, he will not ſpeak to you.

Lord. Sir, we have a maid in Metaline, I durſt wager would win ſome words from him.

Lyſ. 'Tis well bethought, ſhe queſtionleſſe with her ſweet harmony, and other choſen attractions, would allure and make a battery through his defended parts, which now are mid-way ſtopt, ſhe is all happy, as the faireſt of all, and her fellow maids, now upon the levie ſhelter that abutts againſt the Iſland ſide.

Hell. Sure all effectleſs, yet nothing wee'l omit that bears recoveries name. But ſince your kindneſs we have ſtrecht thus farre, let us beſeech you, that for our gold we may have proviſion, wherein we are not deſtitute for want, but weary for the ſtaleneſs.

Lyſ. O, ſir, a courteſie, which if we ſhould deny, the moſt juſt God for every graffe would ſend a Caterpiller, and ſo inflict our Province: yet once more let me entreat to know at large the cauſe of your Kings ſorrow.

Hell. Sir, ſir, I will recount it to you; but ſee, I am prevented.

Enter Marina.

Lyſ. O here's the Lady that I ſent for.

Welcome fair one: Is't not a goodly preſent?

Hell. She's a gallant Lady.

Lyſ. She's ſuch a one, that were I well aſſur'd,
Came of a gentle kind and noble ſtock,
I'd wiſh no better choiſe, and think me rarely wed.
Fair and all goodneſſe that conſiſts in beauty,
Expect even here, where is a kingly patient,
If that thy proſperous and artificial fate,
Can draw him but to anſwer thee in ought,
Thy ſacred Phyſick ſhall receive ſuch pay,
As thy deſires can wiſh.

Mar. Sir, I will uſe my uttermoſt skill in his recovery, provided that none but I and my companion maid, be ſuffered to come near him.

Lyſ. Come, let us leave her, and the gods make her proſperous. The Song.

Lyſ. Markt he your muſick:

Mar. No, nor lookt on us.

Lyſ. See, ſhe will ſpeak to him.

Mar. Hail, ſir, my Lord, lend ear.

Per. Hum, ha.

Mar. I am a maid, my Lord, that nere before invited eyes, but have been gazed on like a Comet: ſhe ſpeaks, my Lord, that may be, hath endured a grief might equall yours, if both were juſtly weighed, though wayward fortune did maligne my ſtate, my derivation was from anceſtors who ſtood equivolent with mighty Kings, but time hath rooted out my parentage, and to the world and aukward caſualties, bound me in ſervitude, I will deſiſt, but there is ſomething glows upon my cheek, and whiſpers in mine ear, Go not till he ſpeak.

Per. My fortunes, parentage, good parentage to equal mine; was it not thus, what ſay you?

Mar. I ſaid, my Lord, if you did know my parentage, you would not do me violence.

Per. I do think ſo, pray you turn your eyes upon me, y'are like ſome-thing that, what Countrey-women hear of theſe ſhews?

Mar. No, nor of any ſhews, yet I was mortally brought forth, and am no other then I appear.

Per. I am great with woe, and ſhall deliver weeping: my deareſt wife was like this maid, and ſuch a one my daughter might have been: my Queens ſquare brows, her ſtature to an inch, as wand-like ſtraight, as ſilver voyc'ſt, her eyes as jewel-like, and caſt as richly, in pace another Juno. Who ſtarves the ears ſhe feeds, and makes them hungry, the more ſhe gives them ſpeech; where do you live?

Mar. Where I am but a ſtranger, from the deck you may diſcern the place.

Per. Where were you bred? and how atchiev'd you theſe endowments which you make more rich to owe?

Mar. If I ſhould tell my hiſtory, it would ſeem like lies diſdain'd in the reporting.

Per. Prithee ſpeak, falſeneſſe cannot come from thee, for thou lookeſt modeſt as Juſtice, and thou ſeem'ſt a Pallas for the crowned truth to dwell in, I will believe thee, and make my ſenſes credite thy relation, to points that ſeem impoſſible, for thou look'ſt like one I loved indeed; what were thy friends? Did'ſt thou not ſtay when I did puſh thee back; which was when I perceived thee that thou cam'ſt from good deſcent.

Mar. So indeed I did.

Per. Report thy parentage, I think thou ſaid'ſt thou had'ſt been toſt from wrong to injury, and that thou thought'ſt thought'ſt thy griefs might equall mine, if both were opened.

Mar. Some ſuch thing I ſaid, and ſaid no more, but what my thoughts did warrant me was likely.

Per. Tell thy ſtory, if thine conſidered prove the thouſand part of my endurance, thou art a man, and I have ſuffered like a girle, yet thou do'ſt look like patience, gazing on Kings graves, and ſmiling extremity out of act, what were thy friends? how loſt thou thy name, my moſt kind virgin? recount I do beſeech thee, Come ſit by me.

Mar. My name is Marina.

Per. Oh I am mockt, and thou by ſome inſenced god ſent hither to make the world to laugh at me.

Mar. Patience, good ſir, or here I'le ceaſe.

Per. Nay I'le be patient, thou little know'ſt how thou doeſt ſtartle me to call thy ſelf Marina.

Mar. The name was given me by one that had ſome power, my father and a King.

Per. How, a Kings daughter, and call'd Marina?

Mar. You ſaid you would believe me, but not to be a trouble of your peace, I will end here.

Per. But are you fleſh and bloud?
Have you a working pulſe, and are no Fairy?
Motion? well ſpeak on, where were you born?
And wherefore call'd Marina?

Mar. Call'd Marina, for I was born at ſea.

Per. At ſea? who was thy mother?

Mar. My mother was the Daughter of a King, who died the minute I was born, as my good Nurſe Lychorida hath oft delivered weeping.

Per. O ſtop there a little, this is the rareſt dream
That ere dull ſleep did mock ſad fools withall,
This cannot be my daughter; buried! well, where were you bred? I'le hear you more to the bottome of your ſtory and never interrupt you.

Mar. You ſcorn, believe me 'twere beſt I did give ore.

Per. I will believe you by the ſyllable of what you ſhall deliver, yet give me leave, how came you in theſe parts? where were you bred?

Mar. The King my Father did in Tharſus leave me,
Till cruel Cleon with his wicked wife,
Did ſeek to murther me: and having wooed a villain
To attempt it, who having drawn to do't,
A crew of Pyrats came and reſcued me,
Brought me to Metaline.
But, good ſir, whether will you have me? why do you weep?
It may be you think me an impoſture, no good faith. I am the daughter to King Pericles, if good King Pericles be.

Per. Hoe, Hellicanus?

Hell. Call's my Lord?

Per. Thou art a grave and noble Counſellor,
Moſt wiſe in general, tell me if thou can'ſt, what this maid is,
Or what is like to be, that thus hath made me weep?

Hell. I know not, but here's the Regent, ſir, of Metaline, ſpeaks nobly of her.

Lyſ. She never would tell her parentage,
Being demanded that, ſhe would ſit ſtill and weep.

Per. Oh Hellicanus, ſtrike me, honored ſir, give me a gaſh, put me to preſent pain, leaſt this great ſea of joyes ruſhing upon me, ore-bear the ſhores of my mortality, and drown me with their ſweetneſſe: Oh come hither.
Thou that beget'ſt him that did thee beget,
Thou that waſt born at ſea, buried at Tharſus,
And found at ſea again: O Hellicanus,
Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods, as loud
As thunder threatens us; this is Marina.
What was thy mothers name? tell me but that,
For truth can never be confirm'd enough,
Though doubts did ever ſleep.

Mar. Firſt, ſir, I pray what is your Title?

Per. I am Pericles of Tyre, but tell me now my Droun'd Queens name, as in the reſt you ſaid,
Thou haſt bin god-like perfect, the heir of Kingdomes,
And another like to Pericles thy father.

Mar. Is it not more to be your daughter, then to ſay, my Mothers name is Thaiſa? Thaiſa was my mother, who did end the minute I began.

Per. Now bleſſing on thee, riſe, thou art my child.
Give me freſh garments, mine own Hellicanus, ſhe is not dead at Tharſus, as ſhe ſhould have been by ſavage Cleon, ſhe ſhall tell thee all, when thou ſhalt kneel, and juſtifie in knowledge, ſhe is thy very Princes; who is this?

Hell. Sir, 'tis thee Governor of Metaline, who hearing of your melancholly, did come to ſee you.

Per. I embrace you; give me my robes;
I am wild in my beholding. Oh heaven bleſſe my girle.
But hark, what Muſick's this Hellicanus? my Marina,
Tell him ore point by point, for yet he ſeems to doat,
How ſure you are my daughter; but where's this muſick?

Hell. My Lord, I hear none.

Per. None? the muſick of the ſphears, liſt my Marina.

Lyſ. It is not good to croſſe him, give him way.

Per. Rareſt ſounds, do ye not hear?

Lyſ. Muſick, my Lord, I hear.

Per. Moſt heavenly muſick,
It nips me unto liſtning, and thick ſlumber
Hangs upon mine eyes, let me reſt,

Lyſ. A pillow for his head, ſo leave him all.
Well my companion friends, if this but anſwer to my juſt belief, I'le well remember you.

Actus Quintus.

Diana.

Diana. My Temple ſtands in Epheſus,
Hie thee thither, and do upon mine Altar ſacrifice. There when my maiden prieſts are met together, before all the people reveale how thou at ſea did'ſt loſe thy wife; to mourn thy croſſes with thy daughters call, and give them repitition to the like: or performe my bidding, or thou liveſt in woe: do't, and happy by my ſilver bow; awake and tell thy dream.

Per. Celeſtial Dian, Goddeſs Argentine,
I will obey thee: Hellicanus.

Per. My purpoſe was for Tharſus, there to ſtrike
The inhoſpitable Cleon, but I am for other ſervice firſt,
Toward Epheſus turn our blown ſayls,
Eftſoons I'le tell why; ſhall we refreſh us, ſir, upon your ſhore, and give you gold for ſuch proviſion as our intents will need.

Lyſ. Sir, with all my heart, and when you come aſhore, I have another ſleight.

Pericl. You ſhall prevaile, were it to woo my daughter, daughter, for it seems you have been noble towards her.

Lys. Sir, lend me your arme.

Per. Come, my Marina. Exeunt.

Enter Gower.

Now our sands are almost run,
More a little, and then dum.
This my last boon give me,
For such kindness must relieve me:
That you aptly will suppose,
What pageantry, what feats, what shews,
What Minstrelsie, what pretty din,
The Regent made in Metalin,
To greet the King; so he thrived,
That he is promised to be wived
To fair Marina, but in no wise,
Till he had done his sacrifice,
As Dian bad, whereto being bound,
The Interim pray, you all confound.
In feather'd briefness sayls are fill'd,
And wishes fall out as their will'd.
At Ephesus the Temple see,
Our King, and all his company.
That he can hither come so soon,
Is by your fancies thankfull doom. Exit.

Enter Pericles, Lysimachus, Hellicanus, Marina, and others.

Per. Hail Dian, to performe thy just command,
I here confess my self the King of Tyre.
Who frighted from my Country, did wed at Pentapolis, the fair Thaisa, at sea in childbed died she, but brought forth a Maid childe called Marina, whom, O goddesse, wears yet thy silver livery, she at Tharsus was nurst with Cleon, who at fourteen years he sought to murder, but her better stars brought her to Metaline, 'gainst whose shore riding, her fortunes brought the maid aboard to us, where by her own most clear remembrance, she made known her self my daughter.

Th. Voice and favour, you are, you are, O royal Pericles.

Per. What means the woman? she dies, help gentlemen.

Cer. Sir, if you have told Diana's Altar true, this is your wife.

Per. Reverend appearer, no, I threw her over-board with these very armes.

Cer. Upon this Coast, I warrant you.

Per. 'Tis most certain.

Cer. Look to the Lady; O she's but overjoy'd.
Early in blust'ring morn, this Lady was thrown upon this shore. I opened the Coffin, found these rich jewels, recovered her, and placed her here in Diana's Temple.

Per. May we see them?

Cer. Great sir, they shall be brought you to my house,
whether I invite you, look, Thaisa is recovered.

Thai. O let me look if he none of mine, my sanctity will to my sence bend no licentious ear, but curb it spight of seeing: O my Lord, are you not Pericles? like him you speak, like him you are: did you not name a tempest, a birth, and death?

Per. The voice of dead Thaisa.

Thai. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead and drown'd.

Per. Immortal Dian!

Thai. Now I know you better, when we with tears parted Pentapolis, the King my father gave you such a ring.

Per. This, this, no more, you gods, your present kindness makes my past miseries sport, you shall do well, that on the touching of her lips I may melt, and no more be seen; O come, be buried a second time within these armes.

Mar. My heart leaps to be gone into my mothers
bosome.

Per. Look who kneels here, flesh of thy flesh, Thaisa, thy burden at the sea, and call'd Marina, for she was yielded there.

Thai. Blest, and mine own.

Hell. Hail Madam, and my Queen.

Thai. I know you not.

Per. You have heard me say when I did flye from Tyre, I left behind an ancient substitute; can you remember what I call'd the man, I have nam'd him oft.

Thai. 'Twas Hellicanus then.

Per. Still confirmation, embrace him dear Thaisa,
this is he, now do I long to hear how you were found?
how possibly preserved? and who to thank (besides the gods) for this great miracle?

Thai. Lord Cerimon, my Lord, this man through whom the gods have shewn their power, that can from first to last resolve you.

Per. Reverend sir, the gods can have no mortal officer more like a god then you, will you deliver how this dead Queen re-lives?

Cer. I will, my Lord, beseech you first go with me unto my house, where shall be shewn you all was found with her; how she came plac'st here in the Temple, no need-full thing omitted.

Per. Pure Dian blesse thee for thy vision, I will offer night oblations to thee; Thaisa, this Prince, the fair betrothed of your daughter, shall marry at Pentapolis, and now this ornament that makes me look dismal, will I clip to forme, and what this fourteen years no razor toucht,
to grace thy marriage day, I'le beautifie.

Thai. Lord Cerimon hath letters of good credit, Sir,
my father's dead.

Per. Heavens make a Star of him, yet here, my Queen, we'll celebrate their Nuptials, and our selves will in that kingdome spend our following dayes; our son and daughter shall in Tyrus reign.

Lord Cerimon, we do our longing stay,
To hear the rest untold, Sir, lead's the way.

Exeunt omnes.

In Antiochus and his daughter, you have heard
Of monstrous lust, the due and just reward:
In Pericles his Queen and daughter seen,
Although assayl'd with Fortune fierce and keen,
Vertue preferred from fell destructions blast,
Led on by heaven, and crown'd with joy at last:
In Hellicanus may you well descry,
A figure of truth, of faith, of loyalty:
In reverend Cerimon there well appears,
The worth that learned charity aye wears.
For wicked Cleon and his wife, when Fame
Had spread their cursed deed, and honor'd name
Of Pericles, to rage the City turn,
That him and his, they in his Pallace burn:
The gods for murder seemed so content,
To punish, although not done, but meant.
So on your patiences ever more attending,
New joy wait on you, here our play hath ending.

The London PRODIGAL.

Written by W. Shakeſpeare.

Enter old Flowerdale and his brother.

Fath.

BRother, from Venice, being thus diſguis'd,
I come to prove the humours of my ſon:
How hath he born himſelf ſince my departure,
I leaving you his patron and his guide?

Unc. Ifaith, brother, ſo, as you will grieve to hear,
And I almoſt aſham'd to report it.

Fath. Why how is't, brother? what doth he ſpend
Beyond the allowance I left him?

Unc. How! beyond that? and far more: why, your exibition is nothing, he hath ſpent that, and ſince hath borrowed, proteſted with oaths, alledged kindred to wring money from me, by the love I bore his father, by the fortunes might fall upon himſelf, to furniſh his wants: that done, I have had ſince, his bond, his friend and friends bond, although I know that he ſpends is yours; yet it grieves me to ſee the unbridled wildneſſe that raigns over him.

Fath. Brother, what is the manner of his life? how is the name of his offences? if they do not relliſh altogether of damnation, his youth may priviledge his wantonneſſe: I my ſelf ran an unbridled courſe till thirty, nay almoſt till forty; well, you ſee how I am: for vice once looked into with the eyes of diſcretion, and well ballanced with the weights of reaſon, the courſe paſt, ſeems ſo abominable, that the Landlord of himſelf, which is the heart of his body, will rather intombe himſelf in the earth, or ſeek a new Tenant to remain in him, which once ſettled, how much better are they that in their youth have known all theſe vices, and left it, then thoſe that knew little, and in their age runs into it? Belive me, brother, they that die moſt vertuous, hath in their youth, lived moſt vicious, and none knows the danger of the fire, more then he that falls into it: But ſay, how is the courſe of his life? let's hear his particulars.

Unc. Why I'le tell you, brother, he is a continual ſwearer,
And a breaker of his oaths, which is bad.

Fath. I grant indeed to ſwear is bad, but not in keeping thoſe oaths is better: for who will ſet by a bad thing?
Nay by my faith, I hold this rather a vertue then a vice,
Well, I pray proceed.

Unc. He is a mighty brawler, and comes commonly by the worſt.

Fath. By my faith this is none of the worſt, neither, for if he brawl and be beaten for it, it will in time make him ſhun it: For what brings a man or child, more to vertue, then correction? What raigns over him elſe?

Unc. He is a great drinker, and one that will forget himſelf.

Fa. Obeſt of all, vice ſhould be forgotten: let him drink
So he drink not Churches. (on,
Nay and this be the worſt, I hold it rather happineſſe in
Then any iniquity. Hath he any more attendants? (him,

Unc. Brother, he is one that will borrow of any man.

Fa. Why you ſee ſo doth the ſea, it borrows of all the Currents in the world, to encreaſe himſelf. (ſmall

Un. I, but the ſea paies it again, & ſo will never your ſon.

Fath. No more would the ſea neither, if it were as dry as my ſon.

Unc. Then, brother, I ſee you rather like theſe vices in
Then any way condemne them. (your ſon,

Fath. Nay miſtake me not, brother, for though I ſlur them over now,
As things ſlight and nothing, his crimes being in the bud,
It would gall my heart, they ſhould ever raign in him.

Flow. Ho! who's within ho?

Flowerdale knocks within.

Unc. That's your ſon, he is come to borrow more money.

Fath. For Godſake give it out I am dead, ſee how he'll take it,
Say I have brought you news from his father.
I have here drawn a formal will, as it were from my ſelf,
Which I'le deliver him.

Unc. Go too, brother, no more: I will.

Flow. Uncle, where are you, Uncle? within.

Unc. Let my couſin in there.

Fath. I am a Saylor come from Venice, and my name is Chriſtopher.

Enter Flowerdale.

Flow. By the Lord, in truth Uncle.

Unc. In truth would a ſerv'd, couſin, without the Lord.

Flow. By your leave, Uncle, the Lord is the Lord of truth.
A couple of raſcalls at the gate, ſet upon me for my purſe.

Unc. You never come, but you bring a brawl in your mouth. (pound.

Flow. By my truth, Uncle, you muſt needs lend me ten

Unc. Give my couſin ſome ſmall beer here.

Flow. Nay look you, you turn it to a jeſt now, by this light, (rock,
I ſhould ride to Croydon Fayr, to meet ſir Lancelot Spur-
I ſhould have his daughter Luce, and for ſcurvy
Ten pound, a man ſhall loſe nine hundred three-ſcore

and

and odde pounds, and a daily friend beside, by this hand, Uncle, 'tis true.

Unk. Why, any thing is true for ought I know.

Flow. To-tee now: why you shall have my bond Uncle, or Tom Whites, James Brocks: or Nick Halls, as good rapier and dagger men, as any be in England, let's be damn'd if we do not pay you, the worst of us all will not damne our selves for ten pound. A pox of ten pound.

Unc. Cousin, this is not the first time I have believ'd you.

Flow. Why trust me now, you know not what may fall: If one thing were but true, I would not greatly care, I should not need ten pound, but when a man cannot be believ'd, there's it.

Unc. Why what is it, cousin?

Flow. Marry this Uncle, can you tell me if the Katernhue be come home or no?

Unc. I marry is't.

Flow. By God I thank you for that news. What is't in the pool can you tell?

Unc. It is; what of that? (me

Flow. What? why then I have six pieces of velvet sent I'le give you a piece, Uncle: for thus said the letter, A piece of Ash-colour, a three-pil'd black, a colour'd, de- A crimson, a sad green, and a purple: yes ifaith. (roy,

Unc. From whom should you receive this?

Flow. From who? why from my father? with commendations to you, Uncle, and thus he writes: I know, saith he, thou hast much troubled thy kind Unkle, whom God-willing at my return I will see amply satisfied; Amply, I remember was the very word; so God help me.

Unc. Have you the letter here?

Flo. Yes I have the letter here, here is the letter: no, yes, no, let me see, what breeches wore I on Saterday; let me see, a Tuesday, my Calymanka, a Wednesday, my peach-colour Sattin, a Thursday my Vellure, a Friday my Calymanka again, a Saterday, let me see, a Saterday, for in those breeches I wore a Saterday is the letter: O my riding breeches, Uncle, those that you thought had been velvet, In those very breeches is the letter.

Unc. When should it be dated?

Flow. Marry Didissimo tertios Septembris, no, no, tridissimo tertios Octobris, I Octobris, so it is.

Unc. Dicditimo tertios Octobris: and here receive I a letter that your father died in June: how say you, Kester?

Fath. Yes truly, sir, your father is dead, these hands of mine holp to winde him.

Flow. Dead?

Fath. I, sir, dead.

Flow. 'Sbloud, how should my father come dead?

Fath. Ifaith sir, according to the old Proverb, The child was born, and cryed, became man, After fell sick, and died.

Unc. Nay, cousin, do not take it so heavily.

Flow. Nay I cannot weep you extempory, marry some two or three dayes hence, I shall weep without any stintance. But I hope he dyed in good memory.

Fath. Very well, sir, and set down every thing in good order, And the Katherine and Hue you talkt of, I came over in; And I saw all the bills of lading, and the velvet That you talkt of, there is no such aboard.

Flo. By God I assure you, then there is knavery abroad.

Fath. I'le be sworn of that: there's knavery abroad, Although there were never a piece of velvet in Venice.

Flow. I hope he died in good estate. (will,

Fath. To the report of the world he did, and made his Of which I am an unworthy bearer.

Flow. His will, have you his will?

Fath. Yes, sir, and in the presence of your Uncle, I was willed to deliver it.

Unc. I hope, cousin, now God hath blessed you with wealth, you will not be unmindfull of me.

Flow. I'le do reason, Unkle; yet ifaith I take the denial of this ten pound very hardly.

Unc. Nay I deny'd you not.

Flow. By God you deni'd me directly.

Unc. I'le be judg'd by this good-fellow.

Fath. Not directly, sir.

Flow. Why he said he would lend me none, and that had wont to be a direct denial, if the old phrase hold: Well, Uncle, come we'll fall to the Legasies, In the name of God, Amen.

Item, I bequeath to my brother Flowerdale, three hundred pounds, to pay such trivial debts as I owe in London.

Item, to my son Mat Flowerdale, I bequeath two bail of false dice, Videllicet, high men and low men, fullomes, stop cater traies, and other bones of function.

Flow. 'Sbloud what doth he mean by this?

Unc. Proceed, Cousin.

Flow. These precepts I leave him, let him borrow of his For of his word no body will trust him. (oath, Let him by no means marry an honest woman, For the other will keep her self. Let him steal as much as he can, that a guilty conscience May bring him to his destinate repentance, I think he means hanging. And this were his last will and Testament, the Devil stood laughing at his beds feet while he made it. 'Sbloud, what doth he think to fop off his posterity with Paradoxes.

Fath. This he made, sir, with his own hands.

Flow. I, well, nay come, good Uncle, let me have this ten pound, Imagine you have lost it, or rob'd of it, or misreckon'd your self so much: any way to make it come easily off, good Uncle.

Unc. Not a penny.

Fath. Ifaith lend it him, sir, I my self have an estate in the City worth twenty pound, all that I'le ingage for him, he saith it concerns him in a marriage.

Flow. I marry doth it, this is a fellow of some sense, this: come, good Uncle.

Unc. Will you give your word for it, Kester?

Fath. I will, sir, willingly.

Unc. Well, cousin, come to me some hour hence, you shall have it ready.

Flow. Shall I not fail?

Unc. You shall not, come or send.

Flow. Nay I'le come my self.

Fath. By my troth, would I were your worships man.

Flow. What? would'st thou serve?

Fath. Very willingly, sir.

Flow. Why I'le tell thee what thou shalt do, thou saist thou hast twenty pound, go into Burchin Lane, put thy self into cloaths, thou shalt ride with me to Croyden Fayr.

Fath. I thank you, sir, I will attend you.

Flow. Well, Uncle, you will not fail me an hour hence.

Unc. I will not, cousin.

Flow. What's thy name, Kester? Fath. I, sir.

Flo. Well, provide thy self: Uncle, farewell till anon.

Exit Flowerdale.

Unc. Brother, how do you like your son?

Fath. Ifaith brother, like a mad unbridled colt,

Or

Or as a Hawk, that never ſtoop'd to lure:
The one muſt be tamed with an iron bit,
The other muſt be watch'd, or ſtill ſhe is wild,
Such is my ſon, a while let him be ſo;
For counſel ſtill is follies deadly foe.
I'le ſerve his youth, for youth muſt have his courſe,
For being reſtrain'd, it makes him ten times worſe:
His pride, his riot, all that may be nam'd,
Time may recall, and all his madneſſe tam'd.

Enter Sir Lancelot, Maſter Weathercock, Daffidill, Artichoak, Luce, and Frank.

Lance. Sirrha Artichoak, get you home before,
And as you proved your ſelf a calf in buying,
Drive home your fellow calfes that you have bought.

Arti. Yes forſooth, ſhall not my fellow Daffidill go along with me.

Lance. No, ſir, no, I muſt have one to wait on me.

Arti. Daffadill, farewell, good fellow Daffidill,
You may ſee, miſtris, I am ſet up by the halves,
Inſtead of waiting on you, I am ſent to drive home calves.

Lance. Ifaith Frank, I muſt turn away this Daffidill,
He's grown a very fooliſh ſawcy fellow.

Fran. Indeed-law, father, he was ſo ſince I had him:
Before he was wiſe enough, for a fooliſh ſerving-man.

Wea. But what ſay you to me, Sir Lancelot?

Lan. O, about my daughters, well I will go forward,
Here's two of them, God ſave them: but the third,
O ſhe's a ſtranger in her courſe of life,
She hath refuſed you, Maſter Weathercock.

Wea. I by the Rood, Sir Lancelot, that ſhe hath,
But had ſhe tri'd me, ſhe ſhould a found a man of me indeed.

Lan. Nay be not angry, ſir, at her danial,
She hath refus'd ſeaven of the worſhipfull'ſt and worthieſt houſe-keepers this day in Kent:
Indeed ſhe will not marry I ſuppoſe.

Wea. The more fool ſhe.

Lance. What is it folly to love Charity?

Wea. No, miſtake me not, Sir Lancelot,
But 'tis an old proverb, and you know it well,
That women dying maids, lead apes in hell.

Lance. That's a fooliſh proverb, and a falſe.

Wea. By the maſs, I think it be, and therefore let it go:
But who ſhall marry with Miſtris Frances?

Fran. By my troth they are talking of marrying me,

Luce. Peace, let them talk: (ſiſter,
Fools may have leave to prattle as they walk.

Daff. Senteſſes ſtill, ſweet Miſtris,
You have a wit, and it were your Allablaſter.

Luce. Ifaith and thy tongue trips trench-more.

Lance. No of my Knight-hood, not a ſuter yet:
Alas God help her, ſilly girle, a fool, a very fool:
But there's the other black-brows a ſhrewd girle,
She hath wit at will, and ſuters two or three:
Sir Arthur Green-ſheld one, a gallant Knight,
A valiant Souldier, but his power but poor.
Then there's young Oliver, the Devon-ſhire lad,
A wary fellow, marry full of wit,
And rich by the Rood, but there's a third all aire,
Light as a feather, changing as the wind: young Flower-

Wea. O he, ſir, he's a deſperate dick indeed. (dale.
Bar him your houſe.

Lance. Fye, not ſo, he's of good parentage.

Wea. By my faie and ſo he is, and a proper man.

Lance. I proper enough, had he good qualities.

Wea. I marry, there's the point, Sir Lancelot:
For th ere's an old ſaying,
Be he rich, or be he poor,
Be he high, or be he low:
Be he born in Barn or Hall,
'Tis manners makes the man and all.

Lance. You are in the right, Maſter Weathercock.

Enter Mounſieur Civet.

Civet. Soul, I think I am ſure croſſed,
Or witcht with an owle, I have haunted them, Inne after Inne, Booth after Booth, yet cannot find them; ha, yonder they are, that's ſhe, I hope to God 'tis ſhe, nay I know 'tis ſhe now, for ſhe treads her ſhooe a little awry.

Lance. Where is this Inne? we are paſt it, Daffidill.

Daff. The good ſigne is here, ſir, but the black gate is before.

Civet. Save you, ſir, I pray may I borrow a piece of a word with you?

Daff. No pieces, ſir.

Civ. Why then the whole.
I pray, ſir, what may yonder Gentlewomen be?

Daf. They may be Ladies, ſir, if the deſtinies and mortality work.

Civ. What's her name, ſir.

Daff. Miſtris Frances Spurcock, Sir Lancelot Spurcock's daughter.

Civ. Is ſhe a maid, ſir?

Daff. You may ask Pluto, and dame Proſerpine that:
I would be loth to be ridelled, ſir.

Civ. Is ſhe married I mean, ſir?

Daff. The Fates know not yet what ſhooe-maker ſhall make her wedding ſhooes.

Civ I pray where Inne you ſir? I would be very glad to beſtow the wine of that Gentlewoman.

Daff. At the George, ſir.

Civ. God ſave you, ſir.

Daff. I pray your name, ſir?

Civ. My name is Maſter Civet, ſir.

Daff. A ſweet name, God be with you, good Maſter Civet. Exit Civet.

Lance. A, have we ſpi'd you ſtout S. George?
For all your dragon, you had beſt ſell's good wine:
That needs no Ivy-buſh: well, we'll not ſit by it,
As you do on your horſe, this room ſhall ſerve:
Drawer, let me have ſack for us old men:
For theſe girls and knaves ſmall wines are beſt.
A pinte of Sack, no more.

Draw. A quart of Sack in the three Tuns,

Lance. A pinte, draw but a pinte, Daffidill,
Call for wine to make your ſelves drink.

Fran. And a cup of ſmall beer, & a cake, good Daffidill.

Enter young Flowerdale.

Flow. How now, fie, ſit in the open room, now good Sir Lancelot, and my kind friend, worſhipfull Maſter Weathercock.
What at your pinte, a quart for ſhame.

Lan. Nay Royſter, by your leave we will away.

Flow. Come, give's ſome Muſick, we'll go dance,
Be gone Sir Lancelot, what, and fair day too?

Lan. 'Twere fouly done, to dance within the fayr,

Flow. Nay if you ſay ſo, faireſt of all faires,
Then I'le not dance, a pox upon my Taylor,
He hath ſpoyl'd me a peach-colour ſattin ſute,
Cut upon cloth of ſilver; but if ever the Raſcal ſerve me ſuch another trick, I'le give him leave, ifaith, to put me in the calender of fools: and you, and you, Sir Lancelot; and Maſter Weathercock, my gold-ſmith too on tother ſide, I beſpoke thee, Luce, a carkenet of gold, and thought thou ſhould'ſt a had it for a Fayring, and the Rogue puts me in rerages for Orient Pearle: but thou ſhalt have it by ſunday night, wench.

Enter the Drawer.

Draw. Sir, here is one that hath ſent you a pottle of renniſh wine, brewed with Roſe-water.

Flow. To me?

Draw. No, ſir, to the Knight; and deſires his more acquaintance.

Lance. To me? what's he that proves ſo kind?

D. ff. I have a trick to know his name, ſir,
He hath a months mind here to Miſtris Frances, his name
Is Maſter Civet.

Lance. Call him in, Daffidill.

Flow. O, I know him, ſir, he is a fool,
But reaſonable rich, his father was one of theſe leaſe-mongers, theſe corn-mongers, theſe mony-mongers, but he never had the wit to be a whore-monger.

Enter Maſter Civet.

Lan. I promiſe you, ſir, you are at too much charge.

Civ. The charge is ſmall charge, ſir,
I thank God my father left me where withall, if it pleaſe you, ſir, I have a great mind to this Gentlewoman here, in the way of marriage.

Lan. I thank you, ſir: pleaſe you to come to Lewſome to my poor houſe, you ſhall be kindly welcome: I knew your father, he was a wary husband: to pay here Drawer.

Draw. All is paid, ſir: this Gentleman hath paid all.

Lance. Ifaith you do us wrong,
But we ſhall live to make amends ere long:
Maſter Flowerdale, is that your man?

Flow. Yes faith, a good old knave.

Lance. Nay then I think you will turn wiſe,
Now you take ſuch a ſervant:
Come, you'll ride with us to Lewſome, let's away,
'Tis ſcarce two hours to the end of day. Exeunt.

Enter Sir Arthur Green-ſhood, Oliver, Lieutenant and Souldiers.

Arth. Lieutenant, lead your Souldiers to the ſhips,
There let them have their coats, at their arrival
They ſhall have pay: farewell, look to your charge.

Sol. I, we are now ſent away, and cannot ſo much as ſpeak with our friends.

Oli. No man what ere you uſed a zutch a faſhion, thick you cannot take your leave of your vreens.

Arth. Fellow no more, Lieutenant lead them off.

Sol. Well, if I have not my pay and my cloaths,
I'le venture a running away, though I hang for't.

Arth. Away ſirrha, charme your tongue.

Exeunt Souldiers.

Oli. Bin you a preſſer, ſir?

Arth. I am a commander, ſir, under the King.

Oli. Sfoot man, and you be nere zutch a commander Shud a ſpoke with my vreens before I chid agone, ſo ſhud.

Arth. Content your ſelf man, my authority will ſtretch to preſſe ſo good a man as you.

Oli. Preſſe me? I devy, preſſe ſcoundrels, and thy meſſels: preſſe me, chee ſcorns thee ifaith: For ſeeſt thee, here's a worſhipfull knight knows, cham not to be preſſed by thee.

Enter Sir Lancelot Weathercock, young Flowerdale, old Flowerdale, Luce, Frank.

Lan. Sir Arthur, welcome to Lewſome, welcome by my troth,
What's the matter man, why are you vext?

Oli. Why man he would preſſe me.

Lan. Ofie, Sir Arthur, preſs him? he is a man of reckoning.

Wea. I that he is, Sir Arthur, he hath the nobles,
The golden ruddocks he.

Ar. The fitter for the warrs: and were he not in faWith your worſhips, he ſhould ſee, (your
That I have power to preſſe ſo good as he.

Oli. Chill ſtand to the triall, ſo chill.

Flow. I marry ſhall he, preſſe-cloath and karſie,
White pot and drowſen broth: tut, tut, he cannot.

Oli. Well, ſir, though you ſee vlouten cloth and karſie, chee a zeen zutch a karſie coat wear out the town ſick a zilken Jacket, as thick a one you wear.

Flow. Well ſed vlitan vlattan.

Oli. A and well ſed cocknell, and boe-bell too: what doeſt think cham aveard of thy zilken coat, no fer yere thee.

Lance. Nay come no more, be all lovers and friends.

Wea. I 'tis beſt ſo, good Maſter Oliver.

Flow. Is your name Maſter Oliver I pray you?

Oly. What tit and be tit, and grieve you.

Flow. No but I'd gladly know if a man might not have a fooliſh plot out of Maſter Oliver to work upon.

Oli. Work thy plots upon me, ſtand a ſide, work thy fooliſh plots upon me, chill ſo uſe thee, thou wert never ſo uſed ſince thy dam bound thy head, work upon me?

Flow. Let him come, let him come.

Oli. Zyrrha, zyrrha, if it were not for ſhame, chee would a given thee zutch a whiſter poop under the ear, chee would have made thee a vanged another at my feet: ſtand a ſide let me looſe, cham all of a vlaming fire-brand; ſtand aſide.

Flow. Well I forbear you for your friends ſake.

Oli. A vig for all my vreens, do'ſt thou tell me of my vreens?

Lan. No more, good maſter Oliver, no more, Sir Arthur. And maiden, here in the ſight of all your ſuters, every man of worth, I'le tell you whom I faineſt would preferre to the hard bargain of your marriage bed: ſhall I be plain among you Gentlemen?

Arth. I, ſir, 'tis beſt.

Lance. Then, ſir, firſt to you, I do confeſſe you a moſt gallant Knight, a worthy Souldier, and an honeſt man: but honeſty maintains a French-hood, goes very ſeldome in a Chain of Gold, keeps a ſmall train of ſervants: hath few friends: and for this wilde oats here, young Flowerdale, I will not judge, God can work myracles, but he were better make a hundred new, then thee a thrifty and an honeſt one.

Wea. Believe me he hath hit you there, he hath touched you to the quick, that he hath.

Flow. Woodcock a my ſide, why, Maſter Weathercock, you know I am honeſt, howſoever trifles.

Wea. Now by my troth, I know no otherwiſe,
O, your old mother was a dame indeed:
Heaven hath her ſoul, and my wives too I truſt:
And your good father, honeſt Gentleman,
He is gone a journey as I hear, far hence.

Flow. I God be praiſed, he is far enough,
He is gone a pilgrimage to Paradiſe.
And left me to cut a caper againſt care,
Luce look on me that am as light aire.

Luce. Ifaith I like not ſhadows, bubbles, broth,
I hate a light a love, as I hate death.

Lance. Girle, hold thee there: look on this Devonſhire lad:
Fat, fair, and lovely, both in purſe and perſon.

Oli. Well, ſir, cham as the Lord hath made me,

You

You know me well iwis, cha have three-score pack of karſay, and Blackeen hall, and chief credit beſide, and my fortunes may be ſo good as an others, ze it may.

Lance. 'Tis you I love, whatſoever others ſay?

Arth. Thanks faireſt.

Flow. What would'ſt thou have me quarrel with him?

Fath. Do but ſay he ſhall hear from you.

Lan. Yet Gentleman, howſoever I preferre this Devon-ſhire ſuter.

I'le enforce no love, my daughter ſhall have liberty to chooſe whom ſhe likes beſt: in your love-ſuite proceed. Not all of you, but onely one muſt ſpeed.

Wea. You have ſaid well: indeed right well.

Enter Artichoak.

Arti. Miſtris, here's one would ſpeak with you, my fellow Daffidill hath him in the ſeller already, he knows him, he met him at Croydon fair.

Lance. O, I remember, a little man.

Arti. I a very little man.

Lance. And yet a proper man.

Arti. A very proper, very little man.

Lance. His name is Mounſieur Civet.

Arti. The ſame, ſir.

Lance. Come Gentlemen, if other ſuters come,
My fooliſh daughter will be fitted too:
But Delia my ſaint, no man dare move,

Exeunt at all but young Flowerdale and Oliver, and old Flowerdale.

Flow. Hark you, ſir, a word.

Oli. What ha an you ſay to me now?

Flow. Ye ſhall hear from me, and that very ſhortly.

Oli. Is that all, vare thee well, chee vere thee not a vig.

Exit Oliver.

Flow. What if ſhould come more? I am fairly dreſt.

Fath. I do not mean that you ſhall meet with him,
But preſently we'll go and draw a Will:
Where we'll ſet down Land, that we never ſaw,
And we will have it of ſo large a ſum,
Sir Lancelot ſhall intreat you take his daughter:
This being formed, give it Maſter Weathercock,
And make Sir Lancelots daughter heir of all:
And make him ſwear never to ſhow the Will
To any one, untill that you be dead.
This done, the fooliſh changling Weathercock,
Will ſtraight diſcourſe unto Sir Lancelot,
The forme and tenor of your Teſtament,
Nor ſtand to pauſe of it be rul'd by me:
What will enſue, that ſhall you quickly ſee.

Flow. Come let's about it; if that a Will, ſweet Kit,
Can get the Wench, I ſhall renown thy wit.

Exeunt.

Enter Daffidill.

Daff. Miſtris, ſtill froward?
No kind looks unto your Daffidill, now by the gods.

Luce. Away you fooliſh knave, let my hand go.

Daff. There is your hand, but this ſhall go with me:
My heart is thine, this is my true loves fee.

Luce. I'le have your coat ſtript o're your ears for this,
You ſawcy raſcall.

Enter Lancelot and Weathercock.

Lance. How now maid, what is the news with you?

Luce. Your man is ſomething ſawcie. Exit Luce.

Lance. Go too, ſirrha, I'le talk with you anon.

Daff. Sir, I am a man to be talked withall,
I am no horſe I tro:
I Know my ſtrength, then no more then ſo.

Wea. A by the matkins, good Sir Lancelot, I ſaw him the other day hold up the Bucklers, like an Hercules, Ifaith God-a-mercy Lad, I like thee well.

Lan. I, I, like him well, go ſirrha, fetch me a cup of wine,
That ere I part with Maſter Weathercock,
We may drink down our farewell in French wine.

Wea. I thank you, ſir, I thank you, friendly Knight,
I'le come and viſit you, by the mouſe-foot I will:
In the mean time, take heed of cutting Flowerdale,
He is a deſperate dick I warrant you,

Lance. He is, he is: fill Daffidill, fill me ſome wine,
Ha, what wears he on his arme?
My daughter Lucies braceler, I 'tis the ſame:
Ha to you Maſter Weathercock.

Wea. I thank you, ſir: Here Daffidill, an honeſt fellow and a tall thou art: well: I'le take my leave, good night, and hope to have you and all your daughters at my poor houſe, in good ſooth I muſt.

Lance. Thanks Maſter Weathercock, I ſhall be bold to trouble you be ſure.

Wea. And welcome, heartily farewell. Exit Weath.

Lance. Sirrha, I ſaw my daughters wrong, and withall her Bracelet on your arme; off with it: and with it my livery too: have I care to ſee my daughter matched with men of Worſhip, and are you grown ſo bold? go, ſirrha, from my houſe, or I'le whip you hence.

Daff. I'le not be whipt, ſir, there's your Livery.
This is a Servingmans reward, what care I,
I have means to truſt to: I ſcorn ſervice I.

Exit Daffidill.

Lance. I a luſty knave, but I muſt let him go,
Our ſervants muſt be taught, what they ſhould know.

Enter Sir Arthur and Luce.

Luce. Sir, as I am a maid, I do affect you above any Suter that I have, although that Souldiers ſcarce know how to love.

Arth. I am a Souldier, and a Gentleman,
Knows what belongs to War, what to a Lady:
What man offends me, that my ſword ſhall right:
What woman loves me, I am her faithfull Knight.

Luce. I neither doubt your valour, nor your love, but there be ſome that bares a Souldiers forme, that ſwears by him they never think upon, goes ſwaggering up and down from houſe to houſe, crying God payes: and,

Arth. Ifaith, Lady, I'le deſcry you ſuch a man,
Of them there be many which you have ſpoke of,
That bare the name and ſhape of Souldiers,
Yet God knows very ſeldome ſaw the War:
That haut your Taverns, and your ordinaries,
Your Ale-houſes ſometimes, for all a-like
To uphold the brutiſh humor of their minds,
Being marked down, for the bondmen of deſpair:
Their mirth begins in wine, but ends in bloud,
Their drink is clear, but their conceits are mud.

Luce. Yet theſe are great Gentlemen Souldiers,

Arth. No they are wretched ſlaves,
Whoſe deſperate lives doth bring them timeleſſe graves.

Luce. Both for your ſelf, and for your forme of life,
If I may chooſe, I'le be a Souldiers wife.

Enter Sir Lancelot and Oliver.

Oli. And tyt truſt to it, ſo then.

Lance. Aſſure your ſelf,
You ſhall be married with all ſpeed we may:
One day ſhall ſerve for Frances and for Luce,

Oli. Why che wood vain know the time, for providing Wedding Rayments.

Lance

Lance. Why no more but this, first get your assurance made touching my daughters Joynter, that dispatched, we will in two daies make provision.

Oli. Why man, chil have the writings made by to morrow.

Lance. To morrow be it then, let's meet at the Kings head in Fish-street.

Oli. No, fie man, no, let's meet at the Rose at Temple-That will be nearer your Counsellor and mine. (Bar,

Lance. At the Rose be it then, the hour nine,
He that comes last, forfeits a pinte of wine.

Oli. A pinte is no payment, let it be a whole quart, or (nothing.

Enter Artichoak.

Arti. Master, here is a man would speak with Master Oliver, he comes from young Master Flowerdale.

Oli. Why chill speak with him, chill speak with him.

Lance. Nay, son Oliver, I'le surely see,
What young Flowerdale hath sent to you.
I pray God it be no quarrel.

Oli. Why man, if he quarrel with me, chill give him his hands full.

Fath. God save you, good Sir Lancelot.

Lance. Welcome honest friend.

Enter old Flowerdale.

Fath. To you and yours my Master wisheth health,
But unto you, sir, this, and this he sends:
There is the length, sir, of his Rapier,
And in that paper shall you know his mind.

Oli. Here, chil meet him my friend, chill meet him.

Lance. Meet him, you shall not meet the Ruffin, fie.

Oli. And I do not meet him, chill give you leave to call Me Cut, where is't, sirrha? where is't? where is't?

Fath. The Letter shows both time and place,
And if you be a man, then keep your word.

Lan. Sir, he shall not keep his word, he shall not meet.

Fath. Why let him choose, he'll be the better known
For a base rascal, and reputed so.

Oli. Zirrha, zirrha: and 'twere not an old fellow, and sent after an arrant, chid give thee something, but chud be no mony: But hold thee, for I see thou art somewhat testorn, hold thee, there's vorty shillings, bring thy Master a veeld, chil give the vorty more, look thou bring him, chill mall him tell him, chil mar his dancing tressels, chil use him, he was nere so used since his dam bound his head, chil make him for capering any more chy vor thee.

Fath. You seem a man, stout and resolute,
And I will so report, what ere befall.

Lance. And fall out ill, assure thy Master this,
I'le make him fly the Land, or use him worse.

Fath. My Master, sir, deserves not this of you,
And that you'll shortly finde.

Lan. Thy Master is an unthrift, you a knave,
And I'le attach you first, next clap him up:
Or have him bound unto his good behaviour.

Oli. I wood you were a sprite if you do him any harm for this: And you do, chil nere see you, nor any of yours, while chil have eyes open: what do you think, chil be abaffelled up and down the town for a messel, and a scoundrel, no chy bor you: zirrha chil come, zay no more, chil come tell him.

Fath. Well, sir, my Master deserves not this of you,
And that you'll shortly finde. Exit.

Oli. No matter, he's an unthrift, I defie him.

Lan. No, gentle son, let me know the place.

Oli. Now chye vor you.

Lan. Let me see the Note.

Oli. Nay, chil watch you for zutch a trick.
But if chee meet him, zo, if not, zo: chil make him know me, or chil know why I shall not, chil vare the worse.

Lan. What will you then neglect my daughters love?
Venture your state and hers, for a loose brawl?

Oli. Why man, chil not kill him, marry chil veze him too, and again; and zo God be with you vather.
What man we shall meet to morrow. Exit.

Lan. Who would have thought he had bin so desperate.
Come forth my honest servant Artichoak.

Enter Artichoak.

Arti. Now, what's the matter? some brawl toward, I warrant you.

Lan. Go get me thy sword bright scowred, thy buckler mended, O for that knave, that villain Daffidill would have done good service. But to thee.

Arti. I, this is the tricks of all you Gentlemen, when you stand in need of a good fellow. O for that Daffidill, O where is he? but if you be angry, and it be but for the wagging of a straw, then out a doors with the knave, turn the coat over his ears. This is the humour of you all.

Lan. O for that knave, that lusty Daffidill.

Arti. Why there 'tis now: our years wages and our vails will scarce pay for broken swords and bucklers that we use in our quarrels. But I'le not fight if Daffidill be a tother side, that's flat.

Lan. 'Tis no such matter man, get weapons ready, and be at London ere the break of day: watch near the lodging of the Devon-shire Youth, but be unseen: and as he goes out, as he will go out, and that very early without doubt.

Arti. What, would you have me draw upon him,
As he goes in the street?

Lance. Not for a world man, into the fields.
For to the field he goes, there to meet the desperate Flowerdale:
Take thou the part of Oliver my son, for he shall be my son,
And marry Luce: Do'st understand me, knave? (Daffidill.

Arti. I, sir, I do understand you, but my young Mistris might be better provided in matching with my fellow

Lad. No more; Daffidill is a knave.
That Daffidill is a most notorious knave. Exit.

Enter Weathercock.

Master Weathercock, you come in happy time, The desperate Flowerdale hath writ a Challenge: And who think you must answer it, but the Devon-shire man, my son Oliver.

Wea. Marry I am sorry for it, good Sir Lancelot,
But if you will be rul'd by me, we'll stay the fury.

Lance. As how I pray?

Wea. Marry I'le tell you, by promising young Flowerdale the red lipped Luce.

Lan. I'le rather follow her unto her grave.

Wea. I, Sir Lancelot, I would have thought so too, but you and I have been deceived in him, come read this Will, or Deed, or what you call it, I know not: Come, come, your Spectacles I pray.

Lan. Nay, I thank God, I see very well.

Wea. Marry God blesse your eyes, mine hath bin dim almost this thirty years.

Lance. Ha, what is this? what is this?

Wea. Nay there is true love indeed, he gave it to me but this very morn, and bad me keep it unseen from any one, good youth, to see how men may be deceived.

Lan. Passion of me, what a wretch am I to hate this loving youth, he hath made me, together with my Luce he loves so dear, Executors of all his wealth.

Wea. All,

Wea. All, all, good man, he hath given you all.

Lan. Three ships now in the Straits, & homeward bound,
Two Lordships of two hundred pound a year:
The one in Wales, the other in Gloster-shire:
Debts and accounts are thirty thousand pound,
Plate, Money, Jewels, sixteen thousand more,
Two houses furnished well in Cole-man street:
Beside whatsoever his Uncle leaves to him,
Being of great demeans and wealth at Peckham.

Wea. How like you this good Knight? how like you this?

Lan. I have done him wrong, but now I'le make amends,
The Devon-shire man shall whistle for a wife,
He marry Luce, Luce shall be Flowerdale's.

Wea. Why that is friendly said, let's ride to London and prevent their match, by promising your daughter to that lovely Lad.

Lance. We'll ride to London, or it shall not need,
We'll crosse to Dedford-strand, and take a boat:
Where be these knaves? what Artichoak, what Fop?

Enter Artichoak.

Ar. Here be the very knaves, but not the merry knaves.

Lan. Here take my Cloak, I'le have a walk to Dedford.

Arti. Sir, we have be been scouring of our Swords and Bucklers for your defence.

Lance. Defence me no defence, let your swords rust, I'le have no fighting: I, let blows alone, bid Delia see all things be in readinesse against the wedding, we'll have two at once, and that will save charges, Master Weather-cock. Arti. Well we will do it sir. Exeunt.

Enter Civet, Frank, and Delia.

Civ. By my troth this is good luck, I thank God for this. In good sooth I have even my hearts desire: sister Delia, now I may boldly call you so, for your father hath frank and freely given me his daughter Franck.

Fran. I by my troth, Tom, thou hast my good will too, for I thank God I longed for a husband, and would I might never stir, for one his name was Tom.

Delia. Why, sister, now you have your wish.

Civ. You say very true, sister Delia, and I prethee call me nothing but Tom: and I'le call thee sweet heart, and Frank: will it not do well sister Delia?

Delia. It will do very well with both of you.

Fran. But Tom, must I go as I do now when I am married?

Civ. No Franck, I'le have thee go like a Citizen
In a garded gown, and a French-hood.

Fran. By my troth that will be excellent indeed.

Delia. Brother, maintain your wife to your estate,
Apparel you your self like to your father:
And let her go like to your ancient mother,
He sparing got his wealth, left it to you,
Brother take heed of pride, some bids thrift adieu.

Civ. So as my father and my mother went, that's a jest indeed, why she went in a fringed gown, a single Ruffe, and a white Cap.
And my father in a mocado coat, a pair of red Sattin Sleeves, and a Canvis back.

Del. And yet his wealth was all as much as yours.

Civ. My estate, my estate, I thank God, is forty pound a year in good leases and tenements, besides twenty mark a year at Cuckolds-haven, and that comes to us all by inheritance.

Delia. That may indeed, 'tis very fitly plied,
I know not how it comes, but so it falls out
That those whose Fathers have died wondrous rich,
And took no pleasure but to gather wealth,
Thinking of little that they leave behind:
For them they hope, will be of their like minde.
But falls out contrary, forty years sparing
Is scarce three seaven years spending, never caring
What will ensue, when all their coyn is gone,
And all to late, then Thrift is thought upon:
Oft have I heard, that Pride and Riot kist,
And then repentance cryes, for had I wist.

Civ. You say well, sister Delia, you say well: but I mean to live within my bounds: for look you, I have set down my rest thus far, but to maintain my wife in her French Hood, and her Coach, keep a couple of Geldings and a brace of Gray-hounds, and this is all I'le do.

Del. And you'll do this with forty pound a year?

Civ. I, and a better penny, sister.

Fran. Sister, you forget that at Cuckolds-Haven.

Civet. By my troth well remembred, Frank, I'le give thee that to buy thee pinns.

Delia. Keep you the rest for points, alas the day,
Fools shall have wealth, though all the world say nay:
Come, brother, will you in, dinner staies for us.

Civ. I, good sister, with all my heart.

Fran. I by my troth, Tom, for I have a good stomack.

Civ. And I the like, sweet Frank, no sister
Do not think I'le go beyond my bounds.

Delia. God grant you may not. Exeunt.

Enter young Flowerdale and his Father, with foyles in their hands.

Flow. Sirrha Kit, tarry thou there, I have spied Sir Lancelot, and old Weathercock coming this way, they are hard at hand, I will by no means be spoken withall.

Fath. I'le warrant you, go get you in.

Enter Lancelot and Weathercock.

Lan. Now, my honest friend, thou dost belong to Mr (Flowerdale?

Fath. I do, sir.

Lance. Is he within, my good fellow?

Fath. No, sir, he is not within.

Lan. I prethee if he be within, let me speak with him.

Fath. Sir, to tell you true, my Master is within, but indeed would not be spoke withall: there be some realmes that stands upon his reputation, therefore he will not admit any conference till he hath shook them off.

Lance. I prithee tell him his very good friend Sir Lancelot Spurcock, intreats to speak with him.

Fath. By my troth, sir, if you come to take up the matter between my Master and the Devon-shire man, you do but beguile your hopes, and loose your labour.

Lan. Honest friend, I have not any such thing to him, I come to speak with him about other matters.

Fath. For my Master, sir, hath set down his resolution, Either to redeem his honor, or leave his life behind him.

Lance. My friend, I do not know any quarrel, touching thy Master or any other person, my businesse is of a different nature to him, and I prithee to tell him.

Fath. For howsoever the Devon-shire man is, my Ma Mind is bloudy: that's a round O, (ster's
And therefore, sir, intreaties is but vain:

Lan. I have no such thing to him, I tell thee once again.

Fath. I will then so signifie to him. Exit Father.

Lance. A sirrha, I see this matter is hotly carried.
But I'le labour to dissuade him from it,

Enter Flowerdale.

Good morrow Master Flowerdale.

Flow. Good morrow, good Sir Lancelot, good morrow, Master Weathercock.
By my troth, Gentlemen, I have been a reading over

Nick

Nick Machivel, I find him
Good to be known, not to be followed:
A peſtilent humane fellow, I have made
Certain anatations of him ſuch as they be:
And how is't, Sir Lancelot? ha? how is't?
A mad world, men cannot live quiet in it.

Lan. Maſter Flowerdale, I do underſtand there is ſome (jar
Between the Devon-ſhire man and you.

Fath. They, ſir? they are good friends as can be.

Flo. Who Maſter Oliver & I? as good friends as can be.

La. It is a kind of ſafety in you to deny it, & a generous
Silence, which too few are indued withall: But, ſir, ſuch
A thing I hear, and I could wiſh it otherwiſe.

Flow. No ſuch thing, Sir Lancelot, a my reputation,
As I am an honeſt man.

Lance. Now I do believe you then, if you do
Ingage your reputation there is none.

Flow. Nay I do not ingage my reputation there is not,
You ſhall not bind me to any condition of hardneſſe:
But if there be any thing between us, then there is,
If there be not, then there is not: be, or be not, all is one.

Lance. I do perceive by this, that there is ſomething between you, and I am very ſorry for it.

Flow. You may be deceived, Sir Lancelot, the Italian
Hath a pretty ſaying, Queſto? I have forgot it too,
'Tis out of my head, but in my tranſlation
If't hold thus, thou haſt a friend, keep him; If a foe trip him.

Lan. Come, I do ſee by this there is ſomewhat between
And before God I could wiſh it otherwiſe. (you,

Flow. Well what is between us, can hardly be altered:
Sir Lancelot, I am to ride forth to morrow,
That way which I muſt ride, no man muſt deny
Me the Sun, I would not by any particular man,
Be denied common and general paſſage. If any one
Saith Flowerdale, thou paſſeſt not this way:
My anſwer is, I muſt either on or return,
But return is not my word, I muſt on:
If I cannot, then make my way, nature
Hath done the laſt for me, and there's the fine.

Lan. Mr. Flowerdale, every man hath one tongue,
And two ears, nature in her building,
Is a moſt curious work-maſter.

Flow. That is as much to ſay, a man ſhould hear more
Then he ſhould ſpeak.

Lan. You ſay true, and indeed I have heard more,
Then at this time I will ſpeak.

Flow. You ſay well.

Lan. Slanders are more common then troths Maſter
But proof is the rule for both. (Flowerdale:

Flow. You ſay true, what do you call him
Hath it there in his third canton?

Lan. I have heard you have bin wild: I have believ'd it.

Flow. 'Twas fit, 'twas neceſſary.

Lance. But I have ſeen ſomewhat of late in you,
That hath confirmed in me an opinion of
Goodneſſe toward you.

Flow. If faith ſir, I am ſure I never did you harme:
Some good I have done, either to you or yours,
I am ſure you know not, neither is it my will you ſhould.

Lance. I, your will, ſir.

Flow. I my will, ſir: 'ſfoot do you know ought of my Begod and you do, ſir, I am abuſed. (will,

Lan. Go Mr. Flowerdale, what I know I know:
And know you thus much out of my knowledge,
That I truly love you. For my daughter,
She's yours. And if you like a marriage better
Then a brawl, all quirks of reputation ſet aſide, go with me preſently: And where you ſhould fight a bloudy battle, you ſhall be married to a lovely Lady.

Flow. Nay but, Sir Lancelot?

Lan. If you will not imbrace my offer, yet aſſure your ſelf thus much, I will have order to hinder your encounter.

Flow. Nay but hear me, Sir Lancelot.

Lance. Nay ſtand not you upon imputative honor,
'Tis meerly unſound, unprofitable, and idle:
Inferences your buſineſſe is to wedde my daughter, therefore give me your preſent word to do it, I'le go and pro-
provide the maid, therefore give me your preſent reſolu-tion, either now or never.

Flow. Will you ſo put me to it?

Luce. I a fore God, either take me now, or take me never.
Elſe what I thought ſhould be our match, ſhall be our part-
So fare you well for ever. (ing,

Flow. Stay: fall out, what may fall, my love
Is above all: I will come.

Lance. I expect you, and ſo fare you well.

Exit Sir Lancelot.

Fath. Now, ſir, how ſhall we do for wedding apparel?

Flow. By the Maſs that's true: now help Kit,
The marriage ended, we'll make amends for all.

Fath. Well, no more, prepare you for your Bride,
We will not want for cloaths, what ſo ere betide.

Flow. And thou ſhalt ſee, when once I have my Dower,
In mirth we'll ſpend,
Full many a merry hour:
As for this wench, I not regard a pin,
It is her gold muſt bring my pleaſures in.

Fath. Is't poſſible, he hath his ſecond living,
Forſaking God, himſelf to the devil giving:
But that I knew his mother firme and chaſt,
My heart would ſay, my head ſhe had diſgrac't:
Elſe would I ſwear, he never was my ſon,
But her fair mind, ſo foul a deed did ſhun.

Enter Uncle.

Unc. How now, brother, how do you find your ſon?

Fath. O brother, heedleſſe as a libertine,
Even grown a Maſter in the School of Vice,
One that doth nothing, but invent deceit:
For all the day he humours up and down,
How he the next day might deceive his friend,
He thinks of nothing but the preſent time:
For one groat ready down, he'll pay a ſhilling,
But then the lender muſt needs ſtay for it.
When I was young, I had the ſcope of youth,
Both wild, and wanton, careleſſe and deſperate:
But ſuch mad ſtrains, as he's poſſeſt withall,
I thought it wonder for to dream upon.

Unc. I told you ſo, but you would not believe it.

Fath. Well I have found it, but one thing comforts me
Brother, to morrow he's to be married
To beauteous Luce, Sir Lancelot Spurcocks daughter.

Unc. Is't poſſible?

Fath. 'Tis true, and thus I mean to curb him;
This day, brother, I will you ſhall arreſt him:
If any thing will tame him, it muſt be that,
For he is rank in miſchief, chained to a life,
That will increaſe his ſhame, and kill his wife.

Unc. What arreſt him on his wedding day?
That were unchriſtian, and an unhumane part:
How many couple even for that very day,
Hath purchaſt ſeven years ſorrow afterward?

For-

Forbear, him then to day, do it to morrow,
And this day mingle not his joy with sorrow.
Fath. Brother, I'le have it done this very day,
And in the view of all, as he comes from Church:
Do but observe the course that he will take,
Upon my life he will forswear the debt:
And for we'll have the sum shall not be slight,
Say that he owes you neer three thousand pound:
Good brother let it be done immediately.
Unc. Well, seeing you will have it so,
Brother I'le do't, and straight provide the Sheriff.
Fath. So brother, by this means shall we perceive
What Sir Lancelot in this pinch will do:
And how his wife doth stand affected to him,
Her love will then be tried to the uttermost:
And all the rest of them. Brother, what I will do,
Shall harm him much, and much avail him too. Exit.
Oli. Cham ashured thick be the place, that the scoundrel
Appointed to meet me, if a come, zo: if a come not, zo.
And che war avise, he would make a Coystrel an us,
Ched vese him, and che vang him in hand, che would
Hoyst him, and give it him too and again, zo chud:
Who bin a there, Sir Arthur, chill stay aside.
Ar. I have dog'd the Devon-shire man into the field,
For fear of any harme that should befall him:
I had an inckling of that yesternight,
That Flowerdale and he should meet this morning:
Though of my soul, Oliver fears him not,
Yet for I'd see fair play on either side,
Made me to come, to see their valours tri'd.
Good morrow to Master Oliver.
Oli. God an good morrow.
Arth. What Master Oliver, are you angry?
Oli. What an it be, tyt and grieven you?
Arth. Not me at all, sir, but I imagine
By your being here thus armed,
You stay for some that you should fight withall.
Oli. Why and he do, che would not dezire you to take his part.
Arth. No by my troth, I think you need it not,
For he you look for, I think means not to come.
Oli. No, and che war ashure of that, ched avese him in another place. Enter Daffidill.
Daff. O, Sir Arthur, Master Oliver, aye me,
Your Love, and yours, and mine, sweet Mistris Luce,
This morning is married to young Flowerdale.
Arth. Married to Flowerdale! 'tis impossible.
Oli. Married man? che hope thou do'st but jest:
To make an a volowten merriment of it.
Daff. O 'tis too true. Here comes his Uncle.
Enter Flowerdale, Sheriff, Officers.
Unc. Good morrow, Sir Arthur, good morrow, M. Oliv.
Oli. God and good morn, M. Flowerdale. I pray tellen us,
Is your scoundrel kinsman married? (me.
Ar. M. Oliver, call him what you will, but he is married
To Sir Lancelot's daughter here.
Unc. Sir Arthur, unto her?
Oli. I, ha the old vellow zerved me thick a trick?
Why man, he was a promise, chill chud a had her,
Is a zitch a vox, chill look to his water che vor him.
Unc. The musick playes; they are coming from the Church.
Sheriff, do your office: fellows, stand stoutly to it.
Enter all to the Wedding.
Oli. God give you joy, as the old zaid Proverb is, and some zorrow among. You met us well, did you not?
Lance. Nay, be not angry, sir, the fault is in me,
I have done all the wrong, kept him from coming to the field to you, as I might, sir, for I am a Justice, and sworn to keep the peace.
Wea. I marry is he, sir, a very Justice, and sworn to keep the peace, you must not disturb the weddings.
Lan. Nay, never frown nor storm, sir, if you do,
I'le have an order taken for you.
Oli. Well, well, chill be quiet.
Wea. M. Flowerdale, Sir Lancelot, look you who here is? M. Flowerdale.
Lance. M. Flowerdale, welcome with all my heart.
Flow. Uncle, this is she ifaith: Master Under-sheriff Arrest me? at whose sute? draw Kit.
Unc. At my sute, sir.
Lan. Why what's the matter, M. Flowerdale?
Unc. This is the matter, sir, this unthrift here,
Hath cozened you, and hath had of me,
In several sums three thousand pound.
Flow. Why, Uncle, Uncle.
Vnc. Cousin, Cousin, you have Uncled me;
And if you be not staid, you'll prove
A cozoner unto all that know you,
Lance. Why, sir, suppose he be to you in debt
Ten thousand pound, his state to me appears,
To be at least three thousand by the year.
Vnc. O, sir, I was too late informed of that plot,
How that he went about to cozen you:
And form'd a will, and sent it to your good
Friend there Master Weathercock, in which was Nothing true, but brags and lies.
Lan. Ha, hath he not such Lordships, Lands, and Ships?
Vnc. Not worth, a groat, not worth a half-penny he.
Lance. I pray tell us true, be plain, young Flowerdale.
Lan. My Uncle here's mad, & disposed to do me wrong,
But here's my man, an honest fellow
By the Lord, and of good credit, knows all is true.
Fath. Not I, sir, I am too old to lie, I rather know
You forg'd a will, where every line you writ,
You studied where to coat your Lands might lye.
Wea. And I prithee, where be thy honest friends?
Fath. Ifaith no where, sir, for he hath none at all.
Wea. Benedicity, we are ore reached I believe.
Lan. I am cozen'd, and my hopefull'st child undone.
Flow. You are not cozen'd, nor is she undone,
They slander me, by this light, they slander me:
Look you, my Unkle here's an Usurer, & would undo me,
But I'le stand in Law, do you but bail me, you shall do no more:
You, brother Civet, and Master Weathercock, do but Bail me, and let me have my marriage money
Paid me, and we'll ride down, and there your own
Eyes shall see, how my poor Tenants there will welcome
You shall but bail me, you shall do no more, (me.
And you greedy gnat, their bail will serve.
Unc. I sir, I'le ask no better bail.
Lan. No, sir, you shall not take my bail, nor his,
Nor, my son Civets, I'le not be cheated, I,
Sheriff, take your prisoner, I'le not deal with him:
Let's Uncle make false Dice with his false bones,
I will not have to do with him: mocked, gull'd, & wrong'd.
Come Girle, though it be late it falls out well,
Thou shalt not live with him in beggers hell.
Luc. He is my Husband, and high heaven doth know,
With what unwillingnesse I went to Church,
But you enforced me, you compelled me to it:

The holy Church-man pronounc'd theſe words but now,
I muſt not leave my Husband in diſtreſſe:
Now I muſt comfort him, not go with you.
Lance. Comfort a cozener? on my curſe forſake him:
Luc. This day you cauſed me on your curſe to take him:
Do not I pray my grieved ſoul oppreſſe,
God knows my heart doth bleed at his diſtreſſe.
Lan. O M. Weathercock, I muſt confeſs I forc'd her to Led with opinion his falſe will was true. (this match.
Wea. A, he hath over-reached me too.
Lan. She might have liv'd like Delia, in a happy Virgins ſtate.
Delia. Father, be patient, ſorrow comes too late.
Lance. And on her knees ſhe begg'd and did entreat,
If ſhe muſt needs taſte a ſad marriage life,
She craved to be Sir Arthur Greenſheild's Wife.
Ar. You have done her and me the greater wrong.
Lance. O take her yet.
Arthur. Not I.
Lanc. Or M. Oliver, accept my Child, and half my wealth is yours.
Oli. No, ſir, chill break no Lawes.
Luce. Never fear, ſhe will not trouble you.
Delia. Yet, ſiſter, in this paſſion doe not run headlong to confuſion. You may affect him, though not follow him.
Frank. Doe, ſiſter, hang him, let him go.
Wea. Doe faith, Miſtreſſe Luce, leave him.
Luc. You are three groſſe fooles, let me alone,
I ſwear I'le live with him in all moan.
Oli. But an he have his Legs at liberty,
Cham aveard he will never live with you.
Art. I, but he is now in huckſters handling for running away.
Lanc. Huswife, you hear how you and I am wrong'd, and if you will redreſſe it yet you may:
But if you ſtand on tearmes to follow him,
Never come near my ſight, nor look on me,
Call me not Father, look not for a Groat,
For all the portion I will this day give Unto thy ſiſter Frances.
Fran. How ſay you to that, Tom? I ſhall have a good
Beſides I'le be a good Wife, and a good Wife, (deale,
Is a good thing I can tell.
Civ. Peace, Franck, I would be ſorry to ſee thy ſiſter
Caſt away, as I am a Gentleman.
Lance. What, are you yet reſolved?
Luc. Yes, I am reſolved.
Lanc. Come then away, or now, or never come.
Luc. This way I turn, go you unto your feaſt,
And I to weep, that am with grief oppreſt.
Lanc. For ever flie my ſight: come, Gentlemen,
Let's in, I'le help you to far better Wives then her.
Delia, upon my bleſſing talk not to her,
Baſe Baggage, in ſuch haſte to beggery?
Unc. Sheriffe, take your priſoner to your charge.
Flo. Unckle, be-god you have us'd me very hardly;
By my troth, upon my wedding Day.

Exeunt all: young Flowerdale, his Father, Unckle, Sheriffe, and Officers.

Luc. O, M. Flowerdale, but hear me ſpeak,
Stay but a little while, good M. Sheriffe,
If not for him, for my ſake pitty him:
Good ſir, ſtop not your eares at my complaint,
My voyce growes weak, for womens words are faint.
Flow. Look you, ſhe kneeles to you.
Unc. Fair maid, for you, I love you with my heart,
And grieve, ſweet ſoul, thy fortune is ſo bad,
That thou ſhould'ſt match with ſuch a graceleſſe Youth,
Go to thy Father, think not upon him,
Whom Hell hath mark'd to be the ſon of ſhame.
Luc. Impute his wildneſſe, ſir, unto his youth,
And think that now is the time he doth repent:
Alaſs, what good or gain can you receive,
To impriſon him that nothing hath to pay?
And where nought is, the King doth loſe his due,
O pitty him as God ſhall pitty you.
Unc. Lady, I know his humours all too well,
And nothing in the world can doe him good,
But miſery it ſelf to chain him with.
Luc. Say that your debts were paid, then is he free?
Unc. I, Virgin, that being anſwered, I have done.
But to him that is all as impoſſible,
As I to ſcale the high Piramidies.
Sheriffe, take your Priſoner, Maiden, fare thee well.
Luc. O go not yet, good M. Flowerdale:
Take my word for the debt, my word, my bond.
Flow. I, by God, Unckle, and my bond too.
Luc. Alaſs, I ne're ought nothing but I paid it;
And I can work, alaſs, he can doe nothing:
I have ſome friends perhaps will pity me,
His chiefeſt friends doe ſeek his miſery.
All that I can, or beg, get, or receive,
Shall be for you: O doe not turn away:
Me thinks within a face ſo reverent,
So well experienced in this tottering world,
Should have ſome feeling of a maidens grief:
For my ſake, his Fathers and your Brothers ſake,
I, for your ſouls ſake that doth hope for joy,
Pitty my ſtate, doe not two ſoules deſtroy.
Unc. Fair maid, ſtand up, not in regard of him,
But in pitty of thy hapleſſe choyce,
I doe releaſe him: M. Sheriffe, I thank you:
And Officers, there is for you to drink.
Here, maid, take this money, there is a hundred Angels;
And for I will be ſure he ſhall not have it,
Here, Keſter, take it you, and uſe it ſparingly,
But let not her have any want at all.
Dry your eyes, Niece, doe not too much lament
For him, whoſe life hath been in riot ſpent:
If well he uſeth thee, he gets him friends,
If ill, a ſhamefull end on him depends.
Exit Uncle.
Flow. A plague go with you for an old fornicator:
Come, Kit, the money, come, honeſt Kit.
Fath. Nay by my faith, ſir, you ſhall pardon me.
Flow. And why, ſir, pardon you? give me the money,
You old Raſcall, or I ſhall make you.
Luc. Pray hold your hands, give it him honeſt friend.
Fath. If you be ſo content, withall my heart.
Flow. Content, ſir, 'sblood ſhe ſhall be content
Whether ſhe will or no. A rattle-baby come to follow me?
Go, get you gone to the greaſie chuffe your Father,
Bring me your Dowry, or never look on me.
Fath. Sir, ſhe hath forſook her Father, and all her friends for you.
Flow. Hang thee, her friends and Father altogether.
Fath. Yet part with ſomething to provide her lodging.
Flo. Yes, I mean to part with her and you, but if I part with one Angel, hang me at a poſte. I'le rather throw throw them at a cast at Dice, as I have done a thousand of their fellowes.

Fath. Nay then I will be plain degenerate, boy,
Thou hadst a Father would have been ashamed.

Flow. My Father was an Asse, an old Asse.

Fath. Thy Father? proud licentious villain:
What are you at your foyles? I'le foyle with you.

Luc. Good sir, forbear him.

Fath. Did not this whining woman hang on me,
I'de teach thee what it was to abuse thy Father:
Go hang, beg, starve, Dice, Game, that when all is gone
Thou may'st after despaire and hang thy self.

Luce. O doe not curse him.

Fath. I doe not curse him, and to pray for him were vain,
It grieves me that he beares his Fathers name.

Flow. Well, you old Rascall, I shall meet with you:
Sirrah, get you gone, I will not strip the livery
Over your eares, because you paid for it:
But doe not use my name, sirrah, doe you hear? look you doe not
Use my name, you were best.

Fath. Pay me the twenty pound then that I lent you,
Or give me security when I may have it.

Flow. I'le pay thee not a penny, and for security, I'le give thee none.
Minckins, look you doe not follow me, look you doe not:
If you doe, Beggar, I shall slit your nose.

Luce. Alass, what shall I doe?

Flow. Why turn whore, that's a good trade,
And so perhaps I'le see thee now and then.

Exit Flowerdale.

Luce. Alass-the-day that ever I was born.

Fath. Sweet Mistresse, doe not weep, I'le stick to you.

Luce. Alass, my friend, I know not what to doe,
My Father and my friends, they have despised me:
And I a wretched Maid, thus cast away,
Knows neither where to go, nor what to say.

Fath. It grieves me at the soul, to see her teares
Thus stain the crimson Roses of her cheeks:
Lady, take comfort, doe not mourn in vain,
I have a little living in this Town,
The which I think comes to a hundred pound,
All that and more shall be at you disposse;
I'le strait go help you to some strange disguise,
And place you in a service in this Town:
Where you shall know all, yet your self unknown:
Come grieve no more, where no help can be had,
Weep not for him, that is more worse then bad.

Luce. I thank you, sir.

Enter Sir Lancelot, Master Weathercock and them.

Oli. Well, cha a bin zerved many a sluttish trick,
But such a lerripoop as thick ych was ne're a sarved.

Lance. Son Civet, Daughter Frances, bear with me,
You see how I am pressed down with inward grief,
About that luckless Girl, your sister Luce:
But 'tis falu out with me, as with many families beside,
They are most unhappy, that are most beloved.

Civ. Father, 'tis so, 'tis even falu out so,
But what remedy? set hand to your heart, and let it pass:
Here is your Daughter Frances and I, and we'll not say,
We'll bring forth as witty Children, but as pretty
Children as ever she was: tho she had the prick
And praise for a pretty wench: But, Father, done is
The mouse, you'll come?

Lance. I, son Civet, I'le come.

Civ. And you, Master Oliver?

Oli. I, for che a vext out this veast, chill see if a gan
Make a better veast there.

Civ. And you, Sir Arthur?

Ar. I, sir, although my heart be full,
I'le be a partner at your wedding feast.

Civ. And welcome all indeed, and welcome; come, Franck, are you ready?

Fran. Jesnue how hasty these Husbands are, I pray,
Father, pray to God to blesse me.

Lance. God blesse thee, and I doe: God make thee (wise,
Send you both joy, I wish it with wet eyes.

Fran. But, Father, shall not my sister Delia go along with us?
She is excellent good at Cookery, and such things.

Lance. Yes marry shall she: Delia, make you ready.

Deli. I am ready, sir, I will first go to Greenwitch,
From thence to my Cousin Chesterfield, and so to London.

Civ. It shall suffice, good sister Delia, it shall suffice,
But fail us not, good sister, give order to Cooks, and o-thers,
For I would not have my sweet Franck
To soile her fingers.

Fran. No by my troth not I, a Gentlewoman, and a married Gentlewoman too, to be companions to Cooks,
And Kitchin-boyes, not I, ifaith, I scorn that.

Civ. Why, I doe not mean thou shalt, sweet heart,
Thou seest I doe not go about it: well, farewell too:
You, Gods pitty M. Weathercock, we shall have your company too?

Wea. With all my heart, for I love good cheer.

Civ. Well, God be with you all, come, Franck.

Fra. God be with you, Father, God be with you, sir Arthur, Master Oliver, and Master Weathercock, Sister,
God be with you all: God be with you, Father, God be with you every one.

Wea. Why, how now, Sir Arthur? all a mort, Master Oliver, how now man?
Cheerely, sir Lancelot, and merily say,
Who can hold that will away.

Lance. I, she is gone indeed, poor Girl, undone,
But when these be self-willed, children must smart.

Ar. But, sir, that she is wronged, you are the chiefest cause,
Therefore 'tis reason you redresse her wrong.

Wea. Indeed you must, Sir Lancelot, you must.

Lance. Must? who can compell me, M. Weathercock?
I hope I may doe what I list.

Wea. I grant you may, you may do what you list.

Oli. Nay, but and you be well eviscn, it were not good,
By this vrampolnesse, and vrowardnesse, to cast away
As prety a dowssabell, as am chould chance to see
In a summers day: chill tell you what thall doe,
Chill go spy up and down the Town, and see if I
Can hear any tale or tidings of her,
And take her away from thick a messell, vor cham
Ashured, heel but bring her to the spoile,
And so var you well, we shall meet at your son Civet's.

Lance. I thank you, sir, I take it very kindly.

Arti. To find her out, I'le spend my deareft blood.

Exit both.

So well I loved her, to affect her good.

Lance. O, Master Weathercock, what hap had I, to force my Daughter.
From Master Oliver, and this good Knight?
To one that hath no goodnesse in his thought.

Wea. Ill luck, but what remedy?

Lance. Yes, I have almost devised a remedy,
Young Flowerdale is shure a prisoner.

Wea. Shure, nothing more shure.
Lance. And yet perhaps his Unkle hath released him.
Wea. It may be very like, no doubt he hath.
Lance. Well if he be in prison, i'le have warrants
To tache my daughter till the law be tried,
For I will shue him upon cozenage.
Wea. Marry may you, and overthrow him too.
Lance. Nay that's not so; I may chance be scoft,
And sentence past with him.
Wea. Believe me, so he may, therefore take heed.
Lance. Well howsoever, yet I will have warrants,
In prison, or at liberty, all's one:
You will help to serve them, master Weathercock?

Exeunt omnes.

Enter Flowerdale.

Flow. A plague of the devil, the devil take the dice,
The dice, and the devil, and his damme go together:
Of all my hundred golden angels,
I have not left me one denier:
A pox of come a five, what shall I doe?
I can borrow no more of my credit:
There's not any of my acquaintance, man, nor boy,
But I have borrowed more or lesse of:
I would I knew where to take a good purse,
And go clear away, by this light I'le venture for it,
Gods lid my sister Delia,
I'le rob her, by this hand.

Enter Delia and Artichoake.

Delia. I prethee, Artichoake, goe not so fast,
The weather is hot, and I am something weary.
Art. Nay I warrant you, mistres Delia, I'le not tire you
With leading, we'll go an extream moderate pace.
Flow. Stand, deliver your purse.
Art. O Lord, thieves, thieves.

Exit Artichoake.

Flow. Come, come, your purse Lady, your purse.
Delia. That voice I have heard often before this time,
What, brother Flowerdale become a thiefe?
Flow. I, a plague ont, I thank your father;
But sister, come, your money, come:
What the world must find me, I am borne to live,
'Tis not a sin to steal, when none will give.
Delia. O God, is all grace banisht from thy heart,
Think of the shame that doth attend this fact.
Flow. Shame me no shames, come give me your purse,
I'le bind you, sister, least I fare the worse.
Delia. No, bind me not, hold, there is all I have,
And would that money would redeem thy shame.

Enter Oliver, Sir Arthur, and Artichoake.

Arti. Thieves, thieves, thieves. (Delia,
Oli. Thieves, where man? why how now, mistresse
Ha you a liked to bin a robbed?
Deli. No, master Oliver, 'tis master Flowerdale, he did but jest with me.
Oliv. How, Flowerdale, that scoundrell? sirrah, you meten us well, vang the that.
Flow. Well, sir, I'le not meddle with you, because I have a charge.
Delia. Here, brother Flowerdale, I'le lend you this same money.
Flow. I thank you, sister.
Oliv. I wad you were ysplit, and you let the mezell have a penny;
But since you cannot keep it, chil keep it my self.
Art. 'Tis pity to relieve him in this sort,
Who makes a triumphant life his dayly sport.
Delia. Brother, you see how all men censure you,
Farewell, and I pray God amend your life.
Oliv. Come, chil bring you along, and you safe enough
From twenty such scoundrells as thick an one is,
Farewell and be hanged, zyrrah, as I think so thou
Wilt be shortly, come, sir Arthur.

Exit all but Flowerdale.

Flow. A plague go with you for a karsie rascall:
This Devonshire man I think is made all of Pork,
His hands made onely for to heave up packs:
His heart as fat and big as his face,
As differing far from all brave gallant minds,
As I to serve the Hoggs, and drink with Hindes,
As I am very near now: well what remedie,
When money, means, and friends, do grow so small,
Then farewell life, and there's an end of all.

Exeunt omnes.

Enter Father, Luce like a Dutch Frow, Civet, and his wife mistresse Frances.

Civ. By my troth God a mercy for this, good Chri- (stopher,
I thank thee for my maid, I like her very well,
How doest thou like her, Frances?
Fran. In good sadnes, Tom, very well, excellent well,
She speaks so prettily, I pray what's your name?
Luce. My name, forsooth, be called Tanikin.
Fran. By my troth a fine name: O Tanikin, you are excellent for dressing one head a new fashion.
Luce. Me sall doe every ting about da head.
Civ. What Countrey woman is she, Kester?
Fath. A Dutch woman, sir.
Civ. Why then she is outlandish, is she not?
Fath. I, Sir, she is.
Fran. O then thou canst tell how to help me to cheeks and ears?
Luce. Yes, mistresse, very vell.
Fath. Cheeks and ears, why, mistresse Frances, want you cheeks and ears? me thinks you have very fair ones.
Fran. Thou art a fool indeed, Tom, thou knowest what I mean.
Civ. I, I, Kester, 'tis such as they wear a their heads,
I prethee, Kit, have her in, and shew her my house.
Fath. I will, sir, come Tanikin.
Fran. O Tom, you have not bussed me to day, Tom.
Civ. No Frances, we must not kisse afore folkes,
God save my Franck,

Enter Delia, and Artichoak.

See yonder, my sister Delia is come, welcome, good sister.
Fran. Welcome, good sister, how do you like the tire of my head?
Delia. Very well, sister.
Civ. I am glad you're come, sister Delia, to give order for Supper, they will be here soon.
Arti. I, but if good luck had not served, she had
Not bin here now, filching Flowerdale had like
To pepper'd us, but for master Oliver, we had bin robbed.
Delia. Peace, sirrah, no more.
Fath. Robbed! by whom?
Arti. Marry by none but by Flowerdale, he is turned thiefe.
Civ. By my faith, but that is not well, but God be (praised
For your escape, will you draw near, sister?
Fath. Sirrah, come hither, would Flowerdale, he that was my master, a robbed you, I prethee tell me true?
Arti. Yes ifaith, even that Flowerdale, that was thy master.

Hold

Fath. Hold thee, there is a French Crown, and speak no more of this.

Arti. Not I, not a word, now do I smell knavery: In every purse Flowerdale takes, he is halfe: And gives me this to keep counsel, not a word I.

Fath. Why God a mercy.

Fran. Sister, look here, I have a new Dutch maid, And she speaks so fine, it would do your heart good.

Civ. How do you like her, sister?

Del. I like your maid well.

Civ. Well, dear sister, will you draw near, and give directions for supper, guesse will be here presently.

Del. Yes, brother, lead the way, I'le follow you.

Exit all but Delia and Luce.

Hark you, Dutch Frow, a word.

Luce. Vat is you. villwit me?

Del. Sister Luce, 'tis not your broken language, Nor this same habit, can disguise your face From I that know you: pray tell me, what means this?

Luce. Sister, I see you know me, yet be secret: This borrowed shape that I have tane upon me, Is but to keep my self a space unknown, Both from my father, and my neerest friends: Untill I see how time will bring to passe, The desperate course of Master Flowerdale.

Del. O he is worse then bad, I prithee leave him, And let not once thy heart to think on him.

Luce. Do not perswade me once to such a thought, Imagine yet, that he is worse then nought: Yet one lovers time may all that ill undo, That all his former life did run into. Therefore, kind sister, do not disclose my estate, If e're his heart doth turn, 'tis n'ere too late.

Del. Well, seeing no counsel can remove your mind, I'le not disclose you, that art wilfull blind.

Luc. Delia, I thank you, I now must please her eyes, My sister Frances, neither fair nor wise. Exeunt.

Enter Flowerdale solus.

Flow. On goes he that knows no end of his journey, I have passed the very utmost bounds of shifting, I have no course now but to hang my self: I have lived since yesterday two a clock, of a Spice-cake I had at a burial: and for drink, I got it at an Ale-house among Porters, such as Will bear out a man, if he have no mony indeed. I mean out of their companies, for they are men Of good carriage. Who comes here? The two Cony-catchers, that won all my mony of me. I'le trie if they'll lend me any.

Enter Dick and Rafe.

What, M. Richard, how do you?
How do'st thou, Rafe? By God, gentlemen, the world Grows bare with me, will you do as much as lend Me an Angel between you both, you know you Won a hundred of me the other day.

Raf. How, an Angel? God damn us if we lost not every Penny within an hour after thou wert gone.

Flo. I prithee lend me so much as will pay for my supper, I'le pay you again, as I am a Gentleman.

Rafe. Ifaith, we have not a farthing, not a mite: I wonder at it, M. Flowerdale, You will so careleslely undo your self: Why you will lose more money in an hour, Then any honest man spends in a year; For shame betake you to some honest Trade, And live not thus so like a Vagabond. Exit both.

Flow. A Vagabond indeed, more villains you: They gave me counsel that first cozen'd me: Those Devils first brought me to this I am, And being thus, the first that do me wrong. Well, yet I have one friend left in store. Not far from hence there dwells a Cokatrice, One that I first put in a Sattin gown, And not a tooth that dwells within her head, But stands me at the least in twenty pound: Her will I visit now my Coyn is gone, And as I take it here dwells the Gentlewoman. What ho, is Mistris Apricock within?

Enter Ruffin.

Ruff. What sawcie Rascal is that which knocks so bold, O, is it you, old spend-thrift? are you here? One that is turned Cozener about the town: My Mistris saw you, and sends this word by me, Either be packing quickly from the door, Or you shall have such a greeting sent you straight, As you will little like on, you had best be gone.

Flow. Why so, this is as it should be, being poor, Thus art thou served by a vile painted whore. Well, since thy damned crew do so abuse thee, I'le try of honest men, how they will use me.

Enter an ancient Citizen.

Sir, I beseech you to take compassion of a man, One whose Fortunes have been better then at this instant they seem to be: but If I might crave of you so much little portion, as would bring me to my friends, I should rest thankfull, untill I had requited so great a curtesie.

Citiz. Fie, fie, young man, this course is very bad, Too many such have we about this City; Yet for I have not seen you in this sort, Nor noted you to be a common beggar, Hold, there's an Angel to bear your charges, Down, go to your friends, do not on this depend, Such bad beginnings oft have worser ends. Exit Cit.

Flow. Worser ends: nay, if it fall out No worse then in old Angels I care not, Nay, now I have had such a fortunate beginning, I'le not let a six-penny-purse escape me: By the Masse, here comes another.

Enter a Citizens wife with a torch before her.

God blesse you, fair Mistris.
Now would it please you, Gentlewoman, to look into the wants of a poor Gentleman, a younger brother, I doubt not but God will treble restore it back again, one that never before this time demanded penny, half-penny, nor farthing.

Cit. Wife. Stay Alexander, now by troth a very proper man, and 'tis great pitty: hold, my friend, there's all the money I have about me, a couple of shillings, and God blesse thee.

Flow. Now God thank you, sweet Lady: if you have any friend, or Garden-house, where you may imploy a poor Gentleman as your friend, I am yours to command in all secret service.

Citiz. W. I thank you, good friend, I prithee let me see that again I gave thee, there is one of them a brasse shilling, give me them, and here is half a crown in gold.

He gives it her.

Now out upon thee, Rascal, secret service: what doest thou make of me? it were a good deed to have thee whipt:

whipt: now I have my money again, I'le ſee thee hanged before I give thee a penny: ſecret ſervice: on good Alexander. Exit both.

Flow. This is villainous luck, I perceive diſhoneſty
Will not thrive: here comes more, God forgive me,
Sir Arthur, and M. Oliver, aforegod, I'le ſpeak to them,
God ſave you, Sir Arthur: God ſave you, M. Oliver.

Oli. Bin you there, zirrha, come will you ytaken your ſelf
To your tools, Coyſtrel?

Flow. Nay, M. Oliver, I'le not fight with you,
Alas, ſir, you know it was not my doings,
It was onely a plot to get Sir Lancelot's daughter:
By God, I never meant you harme.

Oli. And whore is the Gentlewoman thy wife, Mezel?
Whore is ſhe, Zirrha, ha?

Flow. By my troth, M. Oliver, ſick, very ſick;
And God is my Judge, I know not what means to make for her, good Gentlewoman.

Oli. Tell me true, is ſhe ſick? tell me true itch viſe 'thee.

Flow. Yes faith, tell you true: M. Oliver, if you would do me the ſmall kindneſſe, but to lend me forty ſhillings:
So God help me, I will pay you ſo ſoon as my ability ſhall
make me able, as I am a Gentleman.

Oli. Well, thou zaiſt thy wife is zick: hold, there's vorty ſhillings, gived it to thy wife, look thou give it her, or I ſhall zo veze thee, thou wert not zo vezed this zeven year, look to it.

Arth. Ifaith, M. Oliver, it is in vain
To give to him that never thinks of her.

Oli. Well, would che could yvind it.

Flow. I tell you true, Sir Arthur, as I am a gentleman.

Oli. Well, farewell zirrha: come, Sir Arthur.
Exit both.

Flow. By the Lord, this is excellent.
Five golden Angels compaſt in an hour,
If this trade hold, I'le never ſeek a new.
Welcome ſweet gold, and beggery adieu.

Enter Uncle and Father.

Unc. See, Keſter, if you can find the houſe.

Flow. Whoſe here, my Uncle, and my man Keſter?
By the Maſſe 'tis they.
How do you, Uncle, how do'ſt thou, Keſter?
By my troth, Uncle, you muſt needs lend
Me ſome money, the poor Gentlewoman
My wife, ſo God help me, is very ſick,
I was rob'd of the hundred Angels
You gave me, they are gone.

Unc. I, they are gone indeed, come, Keſter, away.

Flow. Nay, Uncle, do you here? good Uncle.

Unc. Out Hypocrite, I will not hear thee ſpeak,
Come leave him, Keſter.

Flow. Keſter, honeſt Keſter.

Fath. Sir, I have nought to ſay to you,
Open the door to my kin, thou had'ſt beſt
Lockt faſt, for there's a falſe knave without.

Flow. You are an old lying Raſcal,
So you are.
Exit both.

Enter Luce.

Luce. Vat is de matter, Vat be you, yonker?

Flow. By this light a Dutch Frow, they ſay they are Kind, by this light I'le try her. (cal'd

Luce. Vat be you, yonker, why do you not ſpeak?

Flow. By my troth, ſweet heart, a poor Gentleman that would deſire of you, if it ſtand with your liking, the bounty of your purſe.

Enter Father.

Luce. O here God, ſo young an Armine.

Flow. Armine, ſweet-heart, I know not what you mean by that, but I am almoſt a beggar.

Luce. Are you not a married man, vere bin your vife?
Here is all I have, take dis.

Flow. What gold, young Frow? this is brave.

Fath. If he have any grace, he'll now repent.

Luce. Why ſpeak you not, were be your vife?

Flow. Dead, dead, ſhe's dead, 'tis ſhe hath undone me?
Spent me all I had, and kept Raſcals under my noſe to brave me.

Luce. Did you uſe her vell?

Flow. Uſe her, there's never a Gentlewoman in England could be better uſed then I did her, I could but Coach her, her Diet ſtood me in forty pound a month, but ſhe is dead and in her grave, my cares are buried.

Luce. Indeed dat vas not ſcone.

Fath. He is turned more devil then he was before.

Flow. Thou do'ſt belong to Maſter Civet here, do'ſt thou not?

Luce. Yes, me do.

Flow. Why there's it, there's not a handfull of plate
But belongs to me, God's my Judge:
If I had ſuch a wench as thou art,
There's never a man in England would make more
Of her, then I would do, ſo ſhe had any ſtock.
They call within.
O why Tanikin.

Luce. Stay, one doth call, I ſhall come by and by again.

Flow. By this hand, this Dutch wench is in love with me,
Were it not admirall to make her ſteal
All Civet's Plate, and run away.

Fath. 'Twere beaſtly. O M. Flowerdale,
Have you no fear of God, nor conſcience:
What do you mean, by this vild courſe you take?

Flow. What do I mean? why, to live, that I mean.

Fath. To live in this ſort, fie upon the courſe,
Your life doth ſhow, you are a very coward.

Flow. A coward, I pray in what?

Fath. Why you will borrow ſix-pence of a boy.

Flow. 'Snails, is there ſuch a cowardiſe in that? I dare
Borrow it of a man, I, and of the talleſt man
In England, if he will lend it me:
Let me borrow it how I can, and let them come by it how they dare.
And it is well known, I might a rid out a hundred times
If I would, ſo I might.

Fath. It was not want of will, but cowardiſe,
There is none that lends to you, but know they gain:
And what is that but onely ſtealth in you?
Delia might hang you now, did not her heart
Take pitty of you for her ſiſters ſake.
Go get you hence, leaſt lingering here you ſtay,
You fall into their hands you look not for.

Flow. I'le tarry here, till the Dutch Frow
Comes, if all the devils in hell were here.
Exit Father.

Enter Sir Lancelot, M. Weathercock, and Artichoak.

Lan. Where is the door? are we not paſt it Artichoak?

Arti-

Arti. By th'Maſſe here's one, I'le ask him, do you hear, ſir?
What, are you ſo proud? do you hear, which is the way
To M. Civet's houſe? what, will you not ſpeak?
O me, this is filching Flowerdale.
Lance. O wonderful, is this lewde villain here?
O you cheating Rogue, you Cut-purſe, Cony-catcher,
What ditch, you villain, is my Daughters grave?
A cozening raſcal, that muſt make a will,
Take on him that ſtrict habit, very that:
When he ſhould turn to angel, a dying grace,
I'le Father-in-Law you, ſir, I'le make a will:
Speak villain, where's my Daughter?
Poyſoned, I warrant you, or knocked a the head:
And to abuſe good Maſter Weathercock, with his forged will,
And Maſter Weathercock, to make my grounded reſolution,
Then to abuſe the Devonſhire Gentlemen:
Go, away with him to priſon.
Flow. Wherefore to priſon? ſir, I will not go.

Enter Maſter Civet, his Wife, Oliver, Sir Arthur, Father, Vnckle, and Delia.

Lance. O here's his Unckle, welcome, Gentlemen, welcome all:
Such a cozener, Gentlemen, a murderer too
For any thing I know, my Daughter is miſſing,
Hath been looked for, cannot be found, a vild upon thee.
Vnc. He is my kinſman, although his life be vild,
Therefore, in Gods name, doe with him what you will.
Lance. Marry to priſon.
Flow. Wherefore to priſon, ſnick-up? I owe you nothing.
Lan. Bring forth my daughter then, away with him.
Flow. Go ſeek your daughter, what do you lay to my charge?
Lance. Suſpition of murder, go, away with him.
Flow. Murder your dogs, I murder your daughter?
Come, Uncle, I know you'll bail me.
Unc. Not I, were there no more,
Then I the Jaylor, thou the priſoner.
Lance. Go, away with him.

Enter Luce like a Frow.

Luce. O my life, where will you ha de man?
Vat ha de yonker done?
Wea. Woman, he hath kill'd his wife.
Luce. His wife, dat is not good, dat is not ſeen.
Lance. Hang not upon him, huſwife, if you do I'le lay you by him.
Luce. Have me no, and or way do you have him,
He tell me dat he love me heartily.
Fran. Lead away my maid to priſon, why, Tom, will you ſuffer that?
Civ. No, by your leave, Father, ſhe is no vagrant:
She is my Wives Chamber-maid, and as true as the skin between any mans browes here.
Lance. Go to, you're both fooles: Son Civet,
Of my life this is a plot,
Some ſtragling counterfeit profer'd to you:
No doubt to rob you of your Plate and Jewels:
I'le have you led away to priſon, Trull.
Luce. I am no Trull, neither outlandiſh Frow,
Nor he, nor I ſhall to the priſon go:
Know you me now? nay never ſtand amazed.
Father, I know I have offended you,
And though that duty wills me bend my knees
To you in duty and obedience;
Yet this wayes do I turn, and to him yield
My love, my duty, and my humbleneſſe.
Lance. Baſtard in nature, kneel to ſuch a ſlave?
Luce. O M. Flowerdale, if too much grief
Have not ſtopt up the organs of your voice,
Then ſpeak to her that is thy faithfull wife,
Or doth contempt of me thus tie thy tongue:
Turn not away, I am no Æthiope,
No wanton Creſſed, nor a changing Hellen:
But rather one made wretched by thy loſs.
What turn'ſt thou ſtill from me? O then
I gueſs thee wofull'ſt among hapleſſe men.
Flow. I am indeed, wife, wonder among wives!
Thy chaſtity and vertue hath infuſed
Another ſoul in me, red with defame,
For in my bluſhing cheeks is ſeen my ſhame.
Lance. Out Hypocrite, I charge thee truſt him not.
Luce. Not truſt him, by the hopes after bliſs,
I know no ſorrow can be compar'd to his.
Lan. Well, ſince thou wert ordain'd to beggery,
Follow thy fortune, I defie thee.
Oli. Ywood che were ſo well ydouſſed as was ever white cloth in tocking mill, an che ha not made me weep.
Fath. If he hath any grace he'll now repent.
Arth. It moves my heart.
Wea. By my troth I muſt weep, I cannot chooſe.
Unc. None but a beaſt would ſuch a maid miſuſe.
Flow. Content thy ſelf, I hope to win his favour,
And to redeem my reputation loſt:
And, Gentlemen, believe me, I beſeech you,
I hope your eyes ſhall behold ſuch change,
As ſhall deceive your expectation.
Oli. I would che were ſplit now, but che believe him.
Lance. How, believe him.
Wea. By the Matkins, I do.
Lan. What do you think that e're he will have grace?
Wea. By my faith it will go hard.
Oli. Well, che vor ye he is changed: and, M. Flowerdale, in hope you been ſo, hold there's vorty pound toward your zetting up: what be not aſhamed, vang it man, vang it, be a good husband, loven to your wife: and you ſhall not want for vorty more, I che vor thee.
Arth. My means are little, but if you'll follow me,
I will inſtruct you in my ableſt power:
But to your wife I give this Diamond,
And prove true Diamond fair in all your life.
Flow. Thanks, good Sir Arthur: M. Oliver,
You being my enemy, and grown ſo kind,
Binds me in all endeavour to reſtore.
Oli. What, reſtore me no reſtorings, man,
I have vorty pound more here, vang it:
Zouth chill devie London elſe: what, do not think me
A Mezel or a Scoundrel, to throw away my money? che have an hundred pound more to pace of any good ſpotation: I hope your under and your Uncle will vollow my zamples.
Unc. You have gueſt right of me, if he leave off this courſe of life, he ſhall be mine Heir.
Lan. But he ſhall never get a groat of me;
A Cozener, a Deceiver, one that kill'd his painfull
Father, honeſt Gentleman, that paſſed the fearfull
Danger of the ſea, to get him living & maintain him brave.

Wea.

Wea. What hath he kill'd his father?
Lance. I, sir, with conceit of his vild courses.
Fath. Sir, you are misinformed.
Lan. Why, thou old knave, thou told'st me so thy self,
Fath. I wrong'd him then: and toward my Master's (Stock,
There's twenty Nobles for to make amends.
Flow. No Kester, I have troubled thee, and wrong'd thee more,
What thou in love gives, I in love restore.
Fran. Ha, ha, sister, there you plaid bo-peep with Tom, what shall I give her toward houshold?
Sister Delia, shall I give her my Fan?
Del. You were best ask your husband.
Fran. Shall I, Tom?
Civ. I do Frank, I'le buy thee a new one, with a longer (handle.
Fran. A russet one, Tom.
Civ. I with russet feathers.
Fran. Here, sister, there's my Fan toward houshold, to keep you warme.
Luce. I thank you, sister.
Wea. Why this is well, and toward fair Luces Stock, here's forty shillings: and forty good shillings more, I'le give her marry. Come Sir Lancelot., I must have you friends.
Lance. Not I, all this is counterfeit,
He will consume it, were it a Million.
Fath. Sir, what is your daughters dower worth?
Lance. Had she been married to an honest man,
It had been better then a thousand pound.
Fath. Pay it him, and I'le give you my bond,
To make her joynter better worth then three.
Lance. Your bond, sir, why what are you?
Fath. One whose word in London though I say it,
Will passe there for as much as yours.
Lan. Wert not thou late that unthrifts serving-man?
Fath. Look on me better, now my fear is off.
Nere muse man at this metamorphosie.
Lance. Master Flowerdale.
Flow. My father, O I shame to look on him.
Pardon, dear father, the follies that are past.
Fath. Son, son, I do, and joy at this thy change,
And applaud thy fortune in this vertuous maid,
Whom heaven hath sent to thee to save thy soul.
Luce. This addeth joy to joy, high heaven be prais'd.
Wea. M. Flowerdale, welcome from death, good Mr. Flowerdale.
'Twas sed so here, 'twas sed so here good faith.
Fath. I caus'd that rumour to be spread my self,
Because I'd see the humours of my son,
Which to relate the circumstance is needlesse:
And sir ha, see you run no more into that same disease!
For he that's once cured of that maladie,
Of Riot, Swearing, Drunkenness, and Pride,
And falls again into the like distresse,
That fever is deadly, doth till death indure:
Such men die mad as of a calenture.
Flow. Heaven helping me, I'le hate the course as hell.
Unc. Say it, and do it Cousin, all is well.
Lan. Well, being in hope you'll prove an honest man,
I take you to my favour. Brother Flowerdale,
Welcome with all my heart: I see your care
Hath brought these acts to this conclusion,
And I am glad of it, come let's in and feast.
Oli. Nay zoft you a while, you promised to make
Sir Arthur and me amends, here is your wisest
Daughter, see which an's she'll have.
Lan. A Gods name, you have my good will, get hers.
Oli. How say you then Damsel, tyters hate?
Delia. I sir, am yours.
Oli. Why, then send for a Vicar, and chill have it
Dispatched in a trice, so chill.
Del. Pardon me, sir, I mean I am yours,
In love, in duty: and affection.
But not to love as wife, shall nere be said,
Delia was buried, married, but a maid.
Arth. Do not condemne your self for ever
Vertuous fair, you were born to love.
Oli. Why you say true, Sir Arthur, she was ybore to it,
So well as her mother: but I pray you shew us
Some samples or reasons why you will not marry?
Del. Not that I do condemne a married life,
For 'tis no doubt a sanctimonious thing:
But for the care and crosses of a wife,
The trouble in this world that children bring,
My vow is in heaven in earth to live alone,
Husbands howsoever good, I will have none.
Oli. Why then, chill live a Batchelor too,
Che zet not a vig by a wife, if a wife zet not a vig
By me: Come, shall's go to dinner?
Fath. To morrow I crave your companies in Mark-lane:
To night we'll frolick in M. Civet's house,
And to each health drink down a full Carouse,

FINIS.

The History of the Life and Death of THOMAS Lord CROMWELL.

Enter three Smiths, Hodge, and two other, old Cromwell's men.

Hodge.

COme, Masters, I think it be past five a clock,
Is it not time we were at work?
My old Master he'll be stirring anon.

1. I cannot tell whether my old Master will be stirring or no: but I am sure I can hardly take my afternoon's nap, for my young Master Thomas,
He keeps such a quile in his studie,
With the Sun, and the Moon, and the seven Starres,
That I do verily think he'll read out his wits.

Hodge. He skill of the starres? there's good-man Car of Fulham,
He that carried us to the strong Ale, where goody Trundel
Had her maid got with child: O, he knows the Starres,
He'll tickle you Charles Wain in nine degrees:
That same man will tell goody Trundel
When here Ale shall miscarry, only by the starres.

2. I, that's a great virtue indeed, I think Thomas
Be no body in comparison to him.

1. Well, Masters, come, shall we to our Hammers?

Hod. I, content; first let's take our mornings draught,
And then to work roundly.

2. I, agreed, go in Hodge. Exeunt omnes.

Enter young Cromwell.

Crom. Good morrow, morn, I do salute thy brightness,
The night seems tedious to my troubled soul:
Whose black obscuritie binds in my mind
A thousand sundry cogitations:
And now Aurora with a lively dye,
Adds comfort to my spirit that mounts on high.
Too high indeed, my state being so mean:
My studie like a mineral of Gold,
Makes my heart proud, wherein my hope's inroll'd;
My Books is all the wealth I do possess, Here within
And unto them I have ingag'd my heart; they must beat
O, Learning, how divine thou seems to me! with their
Within whose armes is all felicity. Hammers.
Peace with your hammers, leave your knocking there,
You do disturb my study and my rest;
Leave off, I say, you mad me with the noise.

Enter Hodge, and the two Men.

Hod. Why, how now, Master Thomas, how now;
Will you not let us work for you?

Crom. You fret my heart, with making of this noise.

Hod. How, fret your heart? I but Thomas, you'll
Fret your father's purse if you let us from working.

2. I, this 'tis for him to make him a Gentleman:
Shall we leave work for your musing? that's well ifaith;
But here comes my old Master now.

Enter old Cromwell.

Old Crom. You idle knaves, what are you loytring now?
No Hammers walking, and my work to doe?
What, not a heat among your work to day? (at all.

Hod. Marry, sir, your son Thomas will not let us work

Old Crom. Why knave I say, have I thus cark'd & car'd,
And all to keep thee like a Gentleman,
And dost thou let my servants at their work;
That sweat for thee, knave? labour thus for thee?

Crom. Father, their Hammers do offend my Studie.

Old. Crom. Out of my doors, knave, if thou lik'st it not:
I cry you mercy, are your eares so fine?
I tell thee, knave, these get when I do sleep;
I will not have my Anvil stand for thee.

Crom. There's money, father, I will pay your men.

He throws Money among them.

Old Crom. Have I thus brought thee up unto my cost,
In hope that one day thou would'st relieve my age,
And art thou now so lavish of thy coin,
To scatter it among these idle knaves?

Crom. Father, be patient, and content your self,
The time will come I shall hold gold as trash:
And here I speak with a presaging soul,
To build a Pallace where now this Cottage stands,
As fine as is King Henrie's house at Sheen.

Old Crom. You build a house? you knave, you'll be a
Now afore God all is but cast away (beggar;
That is bestowed upon this thriftless Lad,
Well, had I bound him to some honest trade,
This had not been; but it was his mother's doing,
To send him to the University:
How? build a House where now this Cottage stands,
As fair as that at Sheen? he shall not hear me,
A good Boy Tom, I con thee thank Tom,
Well said Tom, grammarcies Tom:
In to your work, knaves; hence saucie Boy.

Exeunt all but young Cromwell.

Cro. Why

Cro. Why should my birth keep down my mounting spirit?
Are not all creatures subject unto time?
To time, who doth abuse the world,
And fills it full of hodge-podge bastardy;
There's legions now of beggars on the earth,
That their original did spring from Kings,
And many Monarchs now, whose Fathers were
The riffe-raffe of their age; for time and fortune
Weares out a noble train to beggery;
And from the Dunghill minions doe advance
To state: and mark, in this admiring world
This is but course, which in the name of Fate
Is seen as often as it whirles about:
The River Thames that by our door doth passe,
His first beginning is but small and shallow,
Yet keeping on his course growes to a Sea.
And likewise Wolsey, the wonder of our age,
His birth as mean as mine, a Butchers Son;
Now who within this Land a greater man?
Then, Cromwell, cheer thee up, and tell thy soul,
That thou may'st live to flourish and controule.

Enter old Cromwell.

Old Crom. Tom Cromwell, what Tom I say.

Crom. Doe you call, sir?

Old Crom. Here is Master Bowser come to know if you have dispach'd his petition for the Lords of the Council, or no.

Crom. Father, I have, please you to call him in.

Old Crom. That's well said, Tom, a good Lad, Tom.

Enter Master Bowser.

Bow. Now, Mr. Cromwell, have you dispatch'd this petition?

Crom. I have, sir, here it is, please you peruse it.

Bow. It shall not need, we'll read it as we go by water.
And, Master Cromwell, I have made a motion
May doe you good, and if you like of it.
Our Secretary at Antwerpe, sir, is dead,
And the Merchants there hath sent to me,
For to provide a man fit for the place:
Now I doe know none fitter than your self.
If with your liking it stand, Master Cromwell.

Crom. With all my heart, sir, and I much am bound,
In love and duty for your kindnesse shown.

Old Crom. Body of me, Tom, make haste, least some body
Get between thee and home, Tom.
I thank you, good Master Bowser, I thank you for my Boy,
I thank you alwayes, I thank you most heartily, sir:
Ho, a Cup of Beer here for Master Bowser.

Bow. It shall not need, sir: Master Cromwell, will you go?

Crom. I will attend you, sir.

Old Crom. Farewell, Tom, God blesse thee, Tom,
God speed thee, good Tom. Exeunt omnes.

Enter Bagot a Broker solus.

Bag. I hope this day is fatal unto some,
And by their losse must Bagot seek to gain.
This is the Lodging of Master Friskiball,
A liberall Merchant, and a Florentine,
To whom Banister owes a thousand pound,
A Merchant-Banckrupt, whose Father was my Master.
What doe I care for pity or regard,
He once was wealthy, but he now is fain,
And this morning have I got him arrested
At the suit of Master Friskiball,
And by this meanes shall I be sure of Coyn,
For doing this same good to him unknown:
And in good time, see where the Merchant comes.

Enter Friskiball.

Good morrow to kind Master Friskiball.

Fris. Good morrow to your self, good Master Bagot,
And whats the newes your are so early stirring?
It is for gain, I make no doubt of that.

Bag. It is for the love, sir, that I bear to you.
When did you see your debtor Banister?

Fris. I promise you, I have not seen the man
This two moneths day, his poverty is such,
As I doe think he shames to see his friends.

Bag. Why then assure your self to see him straight,
For at your suit I have arrested him,
And here they will be with him presently.

Fris. Arrest him at my suit? you were too blame,
I know the mans misfortunes to be such,
As he's not able for to pay the debt,
And were it known to some, he were undone.

Bag. This is your pittifull heart to think it so,
But you are much deceiv'd in Banister:
Why, such as he will break for fashion sake,
And unto those they owe a thousand pound,
Pay scarce a hundred: O, sir, beware of him,
The man is lewdly given, to Dice and Drabs,
Spends all he hath in Harlots companies,
It is no mercy for to pity him:
I speak the truth of him, for nothing else,
But for the kindnesse that I bear to you.

Fris. If it be so, he hath deceiv'd me much,
And to deale strictly with such a one as he,
Better severe than too much lenity:
But here is Master Banister himself,
And with him, as I take't, the Officers.

Enter Banister, his Wife, and two Officers.

Ban. O, Master Friskiball, you have undone me:
My state was well nigh overthrown before,
Now altogether down-cast by your meanes.

Mist. Ba. O, Mr. Friskiball, pity my husband's case,
He is a man hath liv'd as well as any,
Till envious Fortune, and the ravenous Sea
Did rob, disrobe, and spoil us of our own.

Fris. Mistresse Banister, I envy not your husband,
Nor willingly would I have us'd him thus:
But that I hear he is so lewdly given,
Haunts wicked company, and hath enough
To pay his debts, yet will not be known thereof.

Ban. This is that damned Broker, that same Bagot,
Whom I have often from my Trencher fed:
Ingratefull villain for to use me thus.

Bag. What I have said to him is nought but truth.

Mi. Ba. What thou hast said springs from an envious heart.
A Cannibal that doth eat men alive:
But here upon my knee believe me, sir,
And what I speak, so help me God, is true,
We scrace have meat to feed our little Babes:
Most of our Plate is in that Broker's hand,
Which had we money to defray our debts,
O think, we would not bide that penury:
Be mercifull, kind Master Friskiball,
My husband, children, and my self will eat
But one meale a day, the other will we keep and sell,

Fri. Go to, I see thou art an envious man:
Good Mistris Banister, kneel not to me,
I pray rise up, you shall have your desire.
Hold officers; be gone, there's for your pains,
You know you owe to me a thousand pound,
Here take my hand, if e're God make you able;
And place you in your former state again,
Pay me: but if still your fortune frown,
Upon my faith I'le never ask you crown:
I never yet did wrong to men in thrall,
For God doth know what to my self may fall.
Ban. This unexpected favour undeserved,
Doth make my heart bleed inwardly with joy:
Nere may ought prosper with me is my own,
If I forget this kindness you have shown.
Mi. Ba. My children in their prayers both night and (day,
For your good fortune and success shall pray.
Fri. I thank you both; I pray go dine with me,
Within these three dayes, if God give me leave,
I will to Florence to my native home.
Bagot, hold, there's a Portague to drink,
Although you ill deserved it by your merit;
Give not such cruel scope unto your heart;
Be sure the ill you do will be requited:
Remember what I say, Bagot, farewell.
Come, Master Banister, you shall with me,
My fare's but simple, but welcome heartily.
Exit all but Bagot.

Bag. A plague go with you, would you had eat your last,
Is this the thanks I have for all my pains?
Confusion light upon you all for me:
Where he had wont to give a score of Crowns,
Doth he now foyst me with a Portague:
Well, I will be revenged upon this Banister.
I'le to his Creditors, buy all the debts he owes,
As seeming that I do it for good will,
I am sure to have them at an easie rate;
And when 'tis done, in Christendome he stayes not,
But I'le make his heart t'ake with sorrow,
And if that Banister become my debter,
By heaven and earth I'le make his plague the greater.
Exit Bagot.

Enter Chorus.

Cho. Now Gentlemen imagine, that young Cromwell is
In Antwerp, Ledger for the English Merchants:
And Banister to shun this Bagots hate,
Hearing that he hath got some of his debts,
Is fled to Antwerp, with his wife and children,
Which Bagot hearing is gone after them:
And thither sends his bills of debt before,
To be revenged on wretched Banister,
What doth fall out, with patience sit and see,
A just requital of false trecherie. Exit.

Enter Cromwell in his study, with bags of money before him, casting of account.

Crom. Thus far my reckoning doth go straight & even.
But, Cromwell, this same plodding fits not thee;
Thy mind is altogether set on travel,
And not to live thus cloystered, like a Nun;
It is not this same trash, that I regard,
Experience is the jewel of my heart.
Enter a Post.
Post. I pray, sir, are you ready to dispatch me?
Cro. Yes, here's those summes of money you must carry.
You go so far as Frankford, do you not?
Post. I do, sir.
Crom. Well, prithee make all the hast thou can'st,
For there be certain English Gentlemen
Are bound for Venice, and may happily want,
And if that you should linger by the way:
But in hope that you will make good speed,
There's two Angels to buy you spurrs and wands.
Post. I thank you, sir, this will adde wings indeed.
Crom. Gold is of power to make an Eagles speed.

Enter Mistris Banister.

What Gentlewoman is this, that grieves so much?
It seems she doth addresse her self to me.
Mi. Ban. God save you, sir, pray is your name Master
Cromwell?
Crom. My name is Thomas Cromwell, Gentlewoman.
Mi. Ban. Know you not one Bagot, sir, that's come to Antwerp?
Crom. No, trust me, I never saw the man,
But here are bills of debt I have received
Against one Banister a Merchant fallen into decay.
Mi. Ba. Into decay indeed, long of that wretch:
I am the wife to wofull Banister,
And by that bloudy villain am pursu'd,
From London, here to Antwerp:
My husband he is in the Governors hands,
And God of heaven knows how he'll deal with him,
Now, sir, your heart is framed of milder temper,
Be mercifull to a distressed soul,
And God no boubt will treble blesse your gain.
Crom. Good Mistris Banister, what I can, I will,
In any thing that lies within my power.
Mi. Ban. O speak to Bagot, that same wicked wretch,
An Angels voice may move a damned devil.
Crom. Why is he come to Antwerp, as you hear?
Mi. Ban. I heard he landed some two hours since.
Crom. Well, Mistris Banister, assure your self,
I'le speak to Bagot in your own behalf,
And win him t'all the pitty that I can:
Mean time, to comfort you, in your distresse,
Receive these Angels to relieve your need,
And be assured, that what I can effect:
To do you good, no way I will neglect. (heart.
Mi. Ban. That mighty God that knows each mortals
Keep you from trouble, sorrow, grief and smart.
Exit Mistris Banister.
Crom. Thanks, curteous woman,
For thy hearty prayer:
It grieves my soul to see her misery,
But we that live under the work of fate,
May hope the best, yet knows not to what state
Our starrs and destinies hath us assign'd,
Fickle is Fortune, and her face is blind,

Enter Bagot solus.

Bag. So all goes well, it is as I would have it,
Banister, he is with the Governor:
And shortly shall have gyves upon his heels.
It glads my heart to think upon the slave;
I hope to have his body rot in prison,
And after here, his wife to hang her self,
And all his children die for want of food.
The Jewels I have brought to Antwerp

Are reckon'd to be worth five thousand pound,
Which scarcely stood me in three hundreth pound;
I bought them at an easie kind of rate,
I care not which way they came by them
That sold them me, it comes not near my heart;
And least they should be stoln, as sure they are,
I thought it meet to sell them here in Antwerp,
And so have left them in the Governour's hand,
Who offers me within two hundreth pound
Of all my price: but now no more of that,
I must go see and if my Bills be safe,
The which I sent to Master Cromwell,
That if the wind should keep me on the sea,
He might arrest him here before I came:
And in good time, see where he is: God save you, sir.

Crom. And you, pray pardon me, I know you not.

Bag. It may be so, sir, but my name is Bagot,
The man that sent to you the Bills of debt.

Crom. O, the man that pursues Banister,
Here are the Bills of debt you sent to me:
As for the man, you know best where he is;
It is reported y'ave a flintie heart,
A mind that will not stoop to any pittie;
An eye that knows not how to shed a tear,
A hand that's alwayes open for reward:
But, Master Bagot, would you be ruled by me,
You should turn all these to the contrary;
Your heart should still have feeling of remorse,
Your mind, according to your state, be liberal
To those that stand in need, and in distress;
Your hand to help them that do stand in want,
Rather then with your poise to hold them down,
For every ill turn show your self more kind,
Thus should I doe, pardon, I speak my mind.

Bag. I, sir, you speak to hear what I would say,
But you must live I know, as well as I:
I know this place to be Extortion,
And 'tis not for a man to keep safe here,
But he must lye, cog, with his deerest friend;
And as for pitty, scorn it, hate all conscience:
But yet I do commend your wit in this,
To make a show, of what I hope you are not,
But I commend you, and 'tis well done;
This is the onely way to bring your gain.

Crom. My gain? I had rather chain me to an Oare,
And like a slave there toil out all my life,
Before I'de live so base a slave as thou.
I, like an Hypocrite, to make a show
Of seeming virtue, and a Devil within?
No, Bagot, if thy conscience were as clear,
Poor Banister ne're had been troubled here.

Bag. Nay, good Master Cromwell, be not angry, sir,
I know full well that you are no such man,
But if your conscience were as white as Snow,
It will be thought that you are otherwise.

Crom. Will it be thought I am otherwise?
Let them that think so, know they are deceiv'd;
Shall Cromwell live to have his faith misconster'd?
Antwerp, for all the wealth within thy Town,
I will not stay here full two houres longer:
As good luck serves, my accounts are all made even,
Therefore I'le straight unto the Treasurer;
Bagot, I know you'll to the Governour,
Commend me to him, say I am bound to travel,
To see the fruitfull parts of Italy;
And as you ever bore a Christian mind,
Let Banister some favour of you find.

Bag. For your sake, sir, I'le help him all I can,
To starve his heart out e're he gets a groat;
So, Master Cromwell, do I take my leave,
For I must straight unto the Governour.

Exit Bagot.

Crom. Farewell, sir, pray you remember what I said:
No, Cromwell, no, thy heart was ne're so base,
To live by falshood, or by brokery;
But 't falls out well, I little it repent,
Hereafter, time in travel shall be spent.

Enter Hodge, his Father's man.

Hod. Your son Thomas, quoth you, I have been Thomast; I had thought it had been no such matter to a gone by water: for at Putney I'le go you to Parish-Garden for two pence, sit as still as may be, without any wagging or joulting in my guttes, in a little Boat too: here we were scarce some four mile in the great green Water, but I thinking to go to my afternoons unchines, as 'twas my manner at home, but I felt a kind of rising in my guttes: at last one a the Sailers spying of me, be a good cheer sayes he, set down thy victuals, and up with it, thou hast nothing but an Eele in thy belly: Well, to't went I, to my victuals went the Sailers, and thinking me to be a man of better experience then any in the shippe, asked me what Wood the ship was made of: they all swore I tould them as right as if I had been acquainted with the Carpenter that made it; at last we grew near Land, and I grew villanous hungry, went to my bagge, the Devil a bit there was, the Sailers had tickled me; yet I cannot blame them, it was a part of kindness, for I in kindnesse told them what Wood the ship was made of, and they in kindness eat up my victuals, as indeed one good turn asketh another: well, would I, could I, find my Master Thomas in this Dutch Town, he might put some English Beer into my belly. (come:

Crom. What, Hodge, my father's man, by my hand welHow doth my Father? what's the newes at home?

Hod. Master Thomas, ô God, Master Thomas, your hand, glove and all, this is to give you to understanding that your Father is in health, and Alice Downing here hath sent you a Nutmeg, and Best Makewater a race of Ginger, my fellow Will and Tom hath between them sent you a dozen of Points, and goodman Toll, of the Goat, a pair of Mittons, my Self came in person, and this is all the newes.

Cro. Gramarcy, good Hodge, & thou art welcome to me,
But in as ill a time thou comest as may be;
For I am travelling into Italy,
What say'st thou, Hodge, wilt thou bear me company?

Hod. Will I bear thee company, Tom? what tell'st me of Italy? were it to the furthest part of Flanders, I would go with thee, Tom; I am thine in all weale and woe, thy own to command; what, Tom, I have passed the rigorous waves of Neptune's blasts, I tell you, Thomas, I have been in danger of the Flouds, and when I have seen Boreas begin to play the Ruffin with us, then would I down a my knees, and call upon Vulcan.

Crom. And why upon him?

Hod. Because, as this same fellow Neptune is God of the Seas, so Vulcan is Lord over the Smiths, and therefore I being a Smith, thought his Godhead would have some care yet of me.

Crom. A good conceit: but tell me, hast thou din'd yet?

Hodge.

Hod. Thomas, to ſpeak the truth, not a bit yet, I.
Crom. Come, go with me, thou ſhalt have cheer good (ſtore:
And farewell Antwerp, if I come no more.
Hod. I follow thee, ſweet Tom, I follow thee.
Exeunt ambo.

Enter the Governour of the Engliſh Houſe, Bagot, Baniſter, his Wife, and two Officers.

Gover. Is Cromwell gone then? ſay you M. Bagot,
What diſlike, I pray? what was the cauſe?
Bag. To tell you true, a wilde brain of his own,
Such youth as they cannot ſee when they are well:
He is all bent to travell, that's his reaſon,
And doth not love to eat his bread at home.
Gov. Well, good fortune with him, if the man be gone.
We hardly ſhall find ſuch a man as he,
To fit our turns, his dealings were ſo honeſt.
But now, ſir, for your Jewels that I have,
What doe you ſay? what, will you take my price?
Bag. O, ſir, you offer too much under foot.
Gov. 'Tis but two hundred pound between us, man,
What's that in payment of five thouſand pound?
Bag. Two hundred pound, birlady ſir, 'tis great,
Before I got ſo much it made me ſweat.
Gov. Well, Maſter Bagot, I'le proffer you fairly,
You ſee this Merchant, Maſter Baniſter,
Is going now to priſon at your ſute:
His ſubſtance all is gone, what would you have?
Yet in regard I knew the man of wealth,
Never diſhoneſt dealing, but ſuch miſhaps
Hath faln on him, may light on me or you:
There is two hundred pound between us,
We will divide the ſame, I'le give you one,
On that condition you will ſet him free:
His ſtate is nothing, that you ſee your ſelf,
And where nought is the King muſt loſe his right.
Bag. Sir, ſir, you ſpeak out of your love,
'Tis fooliſh love, ſir, ſure to pitty him:
Therefore content your ſelf, this is my minde,
To doe him good I will not bait a penny.
Ban. This is my comfort, though thou do'ſt no good,
A mighty ebbe follows a mighty flood.
Mi. Ba. O thou baſe wretch, whom we have foſtered,
Even as a Serpent for to poyſon us,
If God did ever right a womans wrong,
To that ſame God I bend and bow my heart,
To let his heavy wrath fall on thy head,
By whom my hopes and joyes are butchered.
Bag. Alaſs, fond woman, I prethee pray thy worſt.
The Fox fares better ſtill when he is curſt.

Enter Maſter Bowſer a Merchant.

Gov. Maſter Bowſer! your welcome, ſir, from England,
What's the beſt newes? how doth all our friends?
Bow. They are all well, and doe commend them to you:
There's Letters from your Brother and your Son:
So fare you well, ſir, I muſt take my leave,
My haſte and buſineſſe doth require ſo.
Gov. Before you dine, ſir? what, go you out of town?
Bow. Ifaith unleſſe I hear ſome newes in town,
I muſt away, there is no remedy.
Gov. Maſter Bowſer, what is your buſineſſe, may I know it?
Bow. You may, ſir, and ſo ſhall all the City.
The King of late hath had his treaſury robb'd,
And of the choyſeſt jewels that he had:
The value of them was ſeven thouſand pounds,
The fellow that did ſteale theſe jewels is hanged,
And did confeſſe that for three hundred pound,
He ſold them to one Bagot dwelling in London:
Now Bagot's fled, and as we hear, to Antwerpe,
And hither am I come to ſeek him out,
And they that firſt can tell me of his newes,
Shall have a hundred pound for their reward.
Ban. How juſt is God to right the innocent?
Gov. Maſter Bowſer, you come in happy time,
Here is the villain Bagot that you ſeek,
And all thoſe jewels have I in my hands:
Officers, look to him, hold him faſt.
Bagot. The Devil ought me a ſhame, and now he hath paid it.
Bow. Is this that Bagot? fellowes, bear him hence,
We will not now ſtand for his reply;
Lade him with Irons, we will have him tri'd
In England where his villanies are known.
Bag. Miſchief, confuſion, light upon you all,
O hang me, drown me, let me kill my ſelf,
Let go my armes, let me run quick to hell.
Bow. Away, bear him away, ſtop the ſlaves mouth.
They carry him away.
Mi. Ba. Thy works are infinite, great God of heaven.
Gov. I heard this Bagot was a wealthy fellow.
Bow. He was indeed, for when his goods were ſeized,
Of Jewels, Coyn, and Plate within his houſe,
Was found the value of five thouſand pound,
His furniture fully worth half ſo much,
Which being all ſtrain'd for the King,
He franckly gave it to the Antwerpe Merchants,
And they again, out of their bounteous mind,
Have to a brother of their Company,
A man decay'd by fortune of the Seas,
Given Bagot's wealth, to ſet him up again,
And keep it for him, his name is Baniſter.
Gov. Maſter Bowſer, with this happy newes,
You have revived two from the gates of death,
This is that Baniſter, and this his Wife.
Bow. Sir, I am glad my fortune is ſo good,
To bring ſuch tidings as may comfort you.
Ban. You have given life unto a man deem'd dead,
For by theſe newes my life is newly bred.
Mi. Ba. Thanks to my God, next to my Soveraign King,
And laſt to you that theſe good newes doe bring.
Gov. The hundred pound I muſt receive, as due
For finding Bagot, I freely give to you.
Bow. And, Maſter Baniſter, if ſo you pleaſe,
I'le bear you company, when you croſſe the Seas.
Ban. If it pleaſe you, ſir, my company is but mean,
Stands with your liking, I'le wait on you.
Gov. I am glad that all things doe accord ſo well:
Come, Maſter Bowſer, let us to dinner:
And, Miſtreſſe Baniſter, be merry, woman,
Come, after ſorrow now let's cheer your ſpirit,
Knaves have their due, and you but what you merit.
Exeunt omnes.

Enter Cromwell and Hodge in their Shirts, and without Hats.

Hodg. Call ye this ſeeing of faſhions?

Marry

Marry would I had ſtaid at Putney ſtill,
O, Maſter Thomas, we are ſpoiled, we are gone.
Crom. Content thee man, this is but fortune,
Hod. Fortune, a plague of this Fortune, it makes me go wet-ſhod, the rogues would not leave me a ſhooe to my feet; for my Hoſe, they ſcorned them with their heels; but for my Doublet and Hat, O Lord, they embraced me, and unlaced me, and took away my cloathes, and ſo disgraced me.
Crom. Well, Hodge, what remedy?
What ſhift ſhall we make now?
Hodg. Nay I know not, for begging I am naught, for ſtealing worſe: by my troth I muſt even fall to my old trade, to the Hammer and the Horſe-heels again: but now the worſt is, I am not acquainted with the humour of the Horſes in this country; whether they are not coltiſh, given much to kicking, or no, for when I have one leg in my hand, if he ſhould up and lay tother on my chops, I were gone, there lay I, there lay Hodge.
Crom. Hodge, I believe thou muſt work for us both.
Hod. O, Maſter Thomas, have not I told you of this? have not I many a time and often, ſaid, Tom, or Maſter Thomas, learn to make a Horſe-ſhooe, it will be your own another day: this was not regarded. Hark you, Thomas, what do you call the fellows that rob'd us?
Crom. The Bandetti.
Hod. The Bandetti, do you call them, I know not what they are called here, but I am ſure we call them plain Thieves in England: O, Tom, that we were now at Putney, at the Ale there.
Crom. Content thee, man, here ſet up theſe two Bills,
And let us keep our ſtanding on the Bridge:
The faſhion of this country is ſuch,
If any ſtranger be oppreſſed with want,
To write the manner of his miſery,
And ſuch as are diſpos'd to ſuccour him,
Will do it, what, haſt thou ſet them up?
Hod. I they're up, God ſend ſome to read them,
And not only to read them, but alſo to look on us:
And not altogether look on us, One ſtands at one end,
But to relieve us, O cold, cold, cold. and one at tother.

Enter Friſkiball the Merchant, and reads the Bills.

Friſ. What's here? two Engliſhmen rob'd by the Bandetti,
One of them ſeems to be a Gentleman:
'Tis pitty that his fortune was ſo hard,
To fall into the deſperate hands of thieves.
I'le queſtion him, of what eſtate he is,
God ſave you, ſir, are you an Engliſhman?
Crom. I am, ſir, a diſtreſſed Engliſhman.
Friſ. And what are you, my friend.
Hod. Who I, ſir, by my troth I do not know my ſelf, what I am now, but, ſir, I was a Smith, ſir, a poor Farrier of Putney, that's my Maſter, ſir, yonder, I was robbed for his ſake, ſir.
Friſ. I ſee you have been met by the Bandetti,
And therefore need not ask how you came thus:
But Friſkiball, why do'ſt thou queſtion them
Of their eſtate, and not relieve their need?
Sir, the coyn I have about me is not much:
There's ſixteen Duckets for to cloath your ſelves,
There's ſixteen more to buy your diet with,
And there's ſixteen to pay for your horſe-hire:
'Tis all the wealth you ſee, my purſe poſſeſſes,
But if you pleaſe for to enquire me out,
You ſhall not want for ought that I can do,
My name is Friſkiball, a Florence Merchant:
A man that alwayes loved your nation.
Crom. This unexpected favour at your hands,
Which God doth know, if ever I ſhall requite it,
Neceſſity makes me to take your bounty,
And for your gold can yield you naught but thanks,
Your charity hath help'd me from deſpair;
Your name ſhall ſtill be in my hearty prayer.
Friſ. It is not worth ſuch thanks, come to my houſe,
Your want ſhall better be reliev'd then thus.
Crom. I pray excuſe me, this ſhall well ſuffice,
To bear my charges to Bononia,
Whereas a noble Earl is much diſtreſſed:
An Engliſhman, Ruſſel the Earl of Bedford
Is by the French King ſold unto his death,
It may fall out, that I may do him good:
To ſave his life, I'le hazard my heart bloud:
Therefore, kind ſir, thanks for your liberal gift,
I muſt be gone to aid him, there's no ſhift.
Friſ. I'le be no hinderer to ſo good an act,
Heaven proſper you, in that you go about:
If Fortune bring you this way back again,
Pray let me ſee you: ſo I take my leave,
All good a man can wiſh, I do bequeath. Exit Friskib.
Cro. All good that God doth ſend, light on your head,
There's few ſuch men within our Climate bred.
How ſay you now, Hodge, is not this good fortune?
Hod. How ſay you, I'le tell you what, Maſter Thomas,
If all men be of this Gentlemans mind,
Let's keep our ſtandings upon this Bridge,
We ſhall get more here, with begging in one day,
Then I ſhall with making Horſeſhooes in a whole year.
Crom. No, Hodge, we muſt be gone unto Bononia,
There to relieve the noble Earle of Bedford:
Where if I fail not in my policy,
I ſhall deceive their ſubtle treachery.
Hod. Nay, I'le follow you, God bleſſe us from the thieving Bandetti again. Exeunt.

Enter Bedford and his Hoſt.

Bed. Am I betraid, was Bedford born to die,
By ſuch baſe ſlaves, in ſuch a place as this?
Have I eſcap'd ſo many times in France,
So many Battels have I over-paſſed,
And made the French ſtir, when they heard my name;
And am I now betraid unto my death?
Some of their hearts bloud, firſt ſhall pay for it.
Hoſt. They do deſire, my Lord, to ſpeak with you.
Bed. The traitors do deſire to have my bloud,
But by my Birth, my Honour, and my Name:
By all my hopes, my Life ſhall coſt them dear.
Open the door, I'le venter out upon them,
And if I muſt die, then I'le die with Honour.
Hoſt. Alas, my Lord, that is a deſperate courſe,
They have begirt you, round about the houſe:
Their meaning is to take you priſoner,
And ſo to ſend your body unto France.
Bed. Firſt ſhall the Ocean be as dry as ſand,
Before alive they ſend me unto France:
I'le have my body firſt bored like a Sive,
And die as Hector, 'gainſt the Mermydons,
E're France ſhall boaſt, Bedford's their priſoner,

Trecherous

Treacherous France, that 'gainſt the law of armes:
Hath here betraid thy enemy to death:
But be aſſured, my bloud ſhall be revenged,
Upon the beſt lives that remains in France:
Stand back, or elſe thou run'ſt upon thy death.

Enter Servant.

Meſſ. Pardon, my Lord, I come to tell your honour
That they have hired a Neapolitan,
Who by his Oratory, hath promiſed them
Without the ſhedding of one drop of bloud,
Into their hands, ſafe to deliver you,
And therefore craves, none but himſelf may enter,
And a poor ſwain that attends on him. Exit ſervant.

Bed. A Neopolitan? bid him come in,
Were he as cunning in his Eloquence,
As Cicero the famous man of Rome,
His words would be as chaffe againſt the wind.
Sweet tongu'd Uliſſe, that made Ajax mad,
Were he and his tongue in this ſpeaker's head,
Alive he winnes me not; then 'tis no conqueſt.

Enter Cromwell like a Neapolitan, and Hodge with him.

Crom. Sir, are you the Maſter of the houſe?
Hoſt. I am, ſir.
Crom. By this ſame token you muſt leave this place,
And leave none but the Earl and I together,
And this my Peſant here to tend on us. (good.
Hoſt. With all my heart, God grant you do ſome
Exit Hoſt. Cromwell ſhuts the door.
Bed. Now, ſir, what's your will with me?
Crom. Intends your Honour, not to yield your ſelf?
Bed. No good-man gooſe, not while my ſword doth laſt;
Is this your eloquence for to perſwade me?
Crom. My Lord, my eloquence is for to ſave you;
I am not, as you judge, a Neopolitan,
But Cromwell your ſervant, and an Engliſhman.
Bed. How? Cromwell? not my Farrier's ſon?
Crom. The ſame, ſir, and am come to ſuccour you.
Hod. Yes faith, ſir, and am I Hodge, your poor Smith;
Many a time and oft have I ſhooed your Dapper Gray.
Bed. And what avails it me, that thou art here?
Crom. It may avail, if you'll be rul'd by me;
My Lord, you know the men of Mantua,
And theſe Bononians are at deadly ſtrife,
And they, my Lord, both love and honour you;
Could you but get out of the Mantua port,
Then were you ſafe, deſpight of all their force.
Bed. Tut, man thou talk'ſt of things impoſſible;
Do'ſt thou not ſee, that we are round beſet,
How then is't poſſible, we ſhould eſcape?
Crom. By force we cannot, but by policie:
Put on the apparel here that Hodge doth wear,
And give him yours; the States they know you not,
For as I think, they never ſaw your face,
And at a watch-word muſt I call them in,
And will deſire, that we two ſafe may paſs
To Mantua, where I'le ſay my buſineſs lies;
How doth your honour like of this device?
Bed. O, wondrous good: But wilt thou venture, Hodge?
Hod. Will I? O noble Lord, I do accord, in any thing
I can;
And do agree, to ſet thee free, do Fortune what ſhe can.
Bed. Come then, let's change our apparel ſtraight.
Crom. Go, Hodge, make haſte, leſt they chance to call.
Hod. I warrant you I'le fit him with a Sute.
Exeunt Earl & Hodge.
Crom. Heavens grant this policie doth take ſucceſs,
And that the Earl may ſafely ſcape away.
And yet it grieves me for this ſimple wretch,
For fear they ſhould offer him violence;
But of two evils 'tis beſt to ſhun the greateſt,
And better is it that he live in thrall,
Then ſuch a noble Earl as he ſhould fall.
Their ſtubborn hearts, it may be will relent;
Since he is gone, to whom their hate is bent.
My Lord, have you diſpatched?

Enter Bedford like the Clown, and Hodge in his cloak and his hat.

Bed. How doſt thou like us, Cromwell, is it well?
Crom. O, my good Lord, excellent: Hodge, how do'ſt feel thy ſelf?
Hod. How do I feel my ſelf? why, as a Noble man ſhould do.
O how I feel Honour come creeping on,
My Nobility is wonderfull melancholy:
Is it not moſt Gentleman-like to be melancholy?
Crom. Yes, Hodge; now go ſit down in the ſtudy,
And take ſtate upon thee.
Hod. I warrant you, my Lord, let me alone to take ſtate upon me: but hark, my Lord, do you feel nothing bite about you?
Bed. No, truſt me, Hodge.
Hod. I, they know they want their old paſture; 'tis a ſtrange thing of this vermin, they dare not meddle with Nobility.
Crom. Go take thy place, Hodge, I will call them in.
Hodge ſits in the Study, & Cromwell calls in the States.
All is done, enter and if you pleaſe.

Enter the States, and Officers with Halberts.

Gov. What, have you won him? will he yield himſelf?
Crom. I have, an't pleaſe you, and the quiet Earl
Doth yield himſelf to be diſpoſed by you.
Gov. Give him the money that we promis'd him:
So let him go, whither he pleaſe himſelf.
Crom. My buſineſs, ſir, lies unto Mantua;
Pleaſe you to give me ſafe conduct thither.
Gov. Go, and conduct him to the Mantua Port,
And ſee him ſafe delivered preſently. Exit Cromwell,
Go draw the curtains, let us ſee the Earl: and Bedford.
O, he is writing, ſtand apart a while.
Hod. Fellow William, I am not as I have been; I went from you a Smith, I write to you as a Lord: I am at this preſent writing, among the Polonian Caſiges. I do commend my Lordſhip to Raphe and to Roger, to Bridget and to Dority, and ſo to all the youth of Putney.
Gov. Sure theſe are the names of Engliſh Noblemen,
Some of his ſpecial friends, to whom he writes:
But ſtay, he doth addreſs himſelf to ſing.
Here he ſings a Song
My Lord, I am glad you are ſo frolick and ſo blithe;
Believe me, Noble Lord, if you knew all,
You'd change your merry vein to ſudden ſorrow.
Hod. I change my merry vein? no, thou Bononian, no;
I am a Lord, and therefore let me go;
And do defie thee and thy Caſiges:
Therefore ſtand off, and come not near my Honour.

Gov. My

Gov. My Lord, this jesting cannot serve your turn.
Hod. Do'st think, thou black Bononian beast,
That I do flout, do gibe, or jest;
No, no, thou Bear-pot, know that I,
A Noble Earl, a Lord par-dy.
Gov. What means this Trumpet's sound?
A Trumpet sounds. Enter a Messenger.
Cit. One come from the States of Mantua.
Gov. What, would you with us, speak, thou man of Mes. Men of Bononia, this my message is, (Mantua?
To let you know the Noble Earle of Bedford
Is safe within the Town of Mantua,
And wills you send the pesant that you have,
Who hath deceived your expectation;
Or else the States of Mantua have vowed,
They will recall the truce that they have made,
And not a man shall stirre from forth your Town,
That shall return unlesse you send him back.
Gov. O this misfortune, how it mads my heart?
The Neopolitan hath beguiled us all:
Hence with this fool, what shall we doe with him,
The Earl being gone? a plague upon it all.
Hod. No I'le assure you, I am no Earl, but a Smith, sir,
One Hodge, a Smith at Putney, sir:
One that hath gulled you, that hath bored you, sir.
Gov. Away with him, take hence the fool you came for.
Hod. I, sir, and I'le leave the greater fool with you.
Mes. Farewell, Bononians. Come, friend, along with me.
Hod. My friend, afore, my Lordship will follow thee.
Exit.
Gov. Well, Mantua, since by thee the Earl is lost,
Within few dayes I hope to see thee croft. Ex. om.
Enter Chorus.
Cho. Thus far you see how Cromwell's fortune passed.
The Earle of Bedford being safe in Mantua,
Desires Cromwell's company into France,
To make requitall for his courtesie:
But Cromwell doth deny the Earl his suit,
And tells him that those parts he meant to see,
He had not yet set footing on the Land,
And so directly takes his way to Spain:
The Earl to France, and so they both doe part.
Now let your thoughts as swift as is the wind,
Skip some few yeares, that Cromwell spent in travell.
And now imagine him to be in England,
Servant unto the Master of the Rolles:
Where in short time he there began to flourish,
An hour shall show you what few yeares did cherish.
Exit.

The Musick playes, they bring out the banquet. Enter Sir Christopher Hales, Cromwell, and two Servants

Hales. Come, sirs, be carefull of your Masters credit;
And as our bounty now exceeds the figure
Of common entertainment, so doe you
With looks as free as is your Masters soule,
Give formal welcome to the thronged tables,
That shall receive the Cardinals followers,
And the attendants of the great Lord Chancellor.
But all my care, Cromwell, depends on thee:
Thou art a man differing from vulgar form,
And by how much thy spirit is ranckt 'bove these,
In a most learned, yet unaffecting spirit.
Good Cromwell, cast an eye of fair regard
'Bout all my house, and what this ruder flesh,
Through ignorance, or wine, doe miscreate,
Salve thou with courtesie: if welcome want,
Full bowles, and ample banquets will seem scant.
Crom. Sir, whatsoever lies in me,
Assure you I will shew my utmost duty. Exit Crom.
Hales. About it then, the Lords will straight be here:
Cromwell, thou hast those parts would rather suite
The service of the state then of my house:
I look upon thee with a loving eye,
That one day will prefer thy destiny.
Enter Messenger.
Mess. Sir, the Lords be at hand,
Hales. They are welcome, bid Cromwell straight attend us,
And look you all things be in perfect readinesse.

The Musick playes. Enter Cardinal Wolsey, Sir Thomas Moore and Gardiner.

Wol. O, Sir Christopher, you are too liberall: what, a banquet too?
Hal. My Lords, if words could show the ample welcome,
That my free heart affords you, I could then become a prater:
But I now must deale like a feast Polititian
With your Lordships, deferre your welcome till the banquet end,
That it may then salve our defect of fare:
Yet welcome now, and all that tend on you.
Wol. Thanks to the kind Master of the Rolles.
Come and sit down, sit down, Sir Thomas Moore:
'Tis strange, how that we and the Spaniard differ,
Their dinner is our banquet, after dinner,
And they are men of active disposition:
This I gather, that by their sparing meat,
Their bodies are more fitter for the Warres:
And if that famine chance to pinch their mawes,
Being us'd to fast, it breeds lesse pain.
Hal. Fill me some Wine: I'le answer Cardinal Wolsey:
My Lord, we English-men are of more freer soules,
Then hunger-starv'd, and ill-complexion'd 'Spaniards;
They that are rich in Spain, spare belly food,
To deck their backs with an Italian hood,
And Silks of Civil: and the poorest Snake,
That feeds on Lemmons, Pilchers, and ne're heated
His pallet with sweet flesh, will bear a case,
More fat and gallant then his starved face,
Pride, the Inquisition, and this belly-evil,
Are in my judgement Spains three-headed Devil.
Mo. Indeed it is a plague unto their Nation,
Who flagger after in blind imitation.
Hal. My Lords, with welcome, I present your Lordships a solemn health.
Mo. I love health well, but when as healths doe bring
Pain to the head, and bodies surfetting:
Then cease I healths: nay spill not, friend,
For though the drops be small,
Yet have they force, to force men to the wall.
Wol. Sir Christopher, is that your man? (guist,
Hal. And like your Grace, he is a Schollar, and a Lin-
One that hath travelled many parts of Christendome,
my Lord.
Wol. My friend, come nearer, have you been a traveller?

Crom.

Crom. My Lord, I have added to my knowledge, the Low Countreys,
France, Spain, Germany, and Italy:
And though small gain of profit I did find,
Yet did it please my eye, content my mind.
Wol. What do you think of the several States;
And Princes Courts as you have travelled?
Crom. My Lord, no Court with England may compare,
Neither for State, nor civil government:
Lust dwells in France, in Italy, and Spain,
From the poor pesant, to the Princes train,
In Germany, and Holland, Riot serves,
And he that most can drink, most he deserves:
England I praise not: for I here was born,
But that she laugheth the others unto scorn.
Wol. My Lord, there dwells within that spirit,
More then can be discern'd by outward eye;
Sir Christopher, will you part with your man?
Hal. I have sought to proffer him to your Lordship,
And now I see he hath preferr'd himself?
Wol. What is thy name?
Crom. Cromwell, my Lord.
Wol. Then, Cromwell, here we make thee solliciter of (our causes,
And neerest next our self:
Gardiner, give you kind welcome to the man.

Gardiner embraces him.

Moor. My Lord, you are a royal Winner.
Hath got a man, besides your bounteous dinner,
Well, Knight, pray we come no more:
If we come often, thou maist shut thy door.
Wol. Sir Christopher, had'st thou given me,
Half thy lands, thou couldest not have pleased me
So much as with this man of thine,
My infant thoughts do spell:
Shortly his fortune shall be lifted higher,
True industry, doth kindle Honours fire,
And so, kind Master of the Rolls, farewell.
Hal. Cromwell, farewell.
Crom. Cromwell takes his leave of you
That ne're will leave to love, and honour you.
Exeunt.

Enter Chorus.

The Musick playes as they go out.

Cho. Now Cromwells highest fortunes doth begin.
Wolsey that lov'd him, as he did his life:
Committed all his treasure to his hands,
Wolsey is dead, and Gardiner his man
Is now created Bishop of Winchester:
Pardon if we omit all Wolsey's life,
Because our play depends on Cromwells death,
Now sit and see his highest state of all;
His height of rising: and his sodain fall,
Pardon the errors is already past,
And live in hope the best doth come at last:
My hope upon your favour doth depend,
And look to have your liking ere the end. Exit.

Enter Gardiner Bishop of Winchester, the Dukes of Norfolk, and of Suffolk, Sir Thomas Moor, Sir Christopher Hales, and Cromwell.

Nor. Master Cromwell, since Cardinal Wolsey's death,
His Majestie is given to understand,
There's certain billes and writings in your hand,
That much concerns the state of England:
My Lord of Winchester, is it not so?
Gar. My Lord of Norfolk, we two were whilome fellows,
And Master Cromwell, though our Masters love:
Did bind us, while his love was to the King,
It is no boot now to deny those things,
Which may be prejudicial to the State:
And though that God hath rais'd my fortune higher,
Then any way I look'd for, or deserv'd.
Yet my life, no longer with me dwell,
Then I prove true unto my Soveraigne.
Suff. What say you, M. Cromwell? have you those writings, I, or no?
Crom. Here are the writings, and upon my knees,
I give them up, unto the worthy Dukes,
Of Suffolk, and of Norfolk: he was my Master,
And each vertuous part
That lived in him, I tender'd with my heart,
But what his head complotted 'gainst the State,
My Countries love, commands me that to hate.
His sudden death, I grieve for, not his fall,
Because he sought to work my Countries thrall.
Suff. Cromwell, the King shall hear of this thy duty;
Whom I assure my self, will well reward thee:
My Lord, let's go unto his Majesty,
And show those writings which he longs to see.
Exit Norfolk and Suffolk.

Enter Bedford hastily.

Bed. How now, whose this, Cromwell?
By my soul, welcome to England:
Thou once did'st save my life, did'st thou not, Cromwell?
Crom. If I did so, 'tis greater glory for me that you remember it,
Then for my self vainly to report it.
Bed. Well, Cromwell, now is the time,
I shall commend thee to my Soveraigne:
Cheer up thy self, for I will raise thy State,
A Russel yet was never found ingrate. Exit.
Hal. O how uncertain is the wheel of State,
Who lately greater then the Cardinal,
For fear, and love; and now who lower lies?
Gay honours, are but Fortunes flatteries,
And whom this day, pride and promotion swells,
To morrow, envy and ambition quells.
Mo. Who sees the Cob-web intangle the poor Flie,
May boldly say the wretches death is nigh.
Gar. I know his state, and proud ambition,
Was too too violent to last over-long.
Hal. Who soars too near the Sun, with golden wings,
Melts them, to ruine his own fortune brings.

Enter the Duke of Suffolk.

Suf. Cromwell, kneel down in King Henrie's name,
Arise Sir Thomas Cromwell, thus begins thy fame.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk.

Norf. Cromwell, the Majesty of England,
For the good liking, he conceives of thee:
Makes thee Master of the Jewel house,
Chief Secretary to himself, and withall,
Creates thee one of his Highness Privie Council.

Enter

Enter the Earl of Bedford.

Bed. Where is sir Thomas Cromwell? is he Knighted?
Suff. He is, my Lord.
Bed. Then, to adde Honour to his Name,
The King creates him Lord Keeper of his privy Seal,
And Master of the Rolls;
Which you, sir Christopher, do now enjoy;
The King determines higher place for you. (sett.
Crom. My Lords, these honours are too high for my de-
Moor. O content thee, man, who would not chuse it?
Yet thou art wise, in seeming to refuse it.
Gard. Here's Honours, Titles and Promotions;
I fear this climbing, will have a sudden fall.
Norf. Then come, my Lords, let's altogether bring,
This new-made Counsellor to England's King.
Exeunt all but Gardiner.
Gard. But Gardiner means his glory shall be dim'd:
Shall Cromwell live a greater man then I?
My envy with his honour now is bred,
I hope to shorten Cromwell by the head. Exit.

Enter Friskiball, very poor.

Fris. O Friskiball, what shall become of thee?
Where shalt thou go, or which way shalt thou turn?
Fortune that turns her too unconstant wheel,
Hath turn'd thy wealth and riches in the Sea,
All parts abroad where-ever I have been,
Grows weary of me, and denies me succour;
My debters they, that should relieve my want,
Forswear my money, say they owe me none:
They know my state too mean, to bear out Law;
And here in London, where I oft have been,
And have done good to many a wretched man,
And now most wretched here, despis'd my self;
In vain it is, more of their hearts to try;
Be patient therefore, lay thee down and die.
He lies down.

Enter good-man Seely, and his Wife Joan.

Seely. Come Joan, come, let's see what he'll do for us now? I wis we have done for him, when many a time and often he might have gone a hungry to bed.
Wife. Alas man, now he is made a Lord, he'll never look upon us; he'll fulfill the old Proverb, Set Beggars a horse-back, and they'll ride: a, well-a-day for my Cow; such as he hath made us come behind-hand, we had never pawn'd our Cow else to pay our Rent.
Seely. Well Joan, he'll come this way: and by God's dickers I'le tell him roundly of it, and if he were ten Lords: a shall know that I had not my Cheese and my Bacon for nothing.
Wife. Do you remember Husband, how he would mouch upon my Cheese-cakes, he hath forgot this now, but now we'll remember him.
Seely. I, we shall have now three flapps with a Fox tail: but ifaith I'le gibber a joint, but I'le tell him his own: stay, who comes here? O, stand up, here he comes, stand up.

Enter Hodge very fine, with a Tip-staff, Cromwell, the Mace carried before him; Norfolk, and Suffolk, and attendants.

Hod. Come, away with these Beggars here, rise up, sirrah; Come out, good people; run before there ho.
Friskiball riseth, and stands a far off.
Seely. I, we are kicked away now; we come for our own; the time hath been, he would a looked more friendly upon us: And you, Hodge, we know you well enough, though you are so fine.
Crom. Come hither, sirrah: stay, what men are these?
My honest Host of Hounslow, and his wife;
I owe thee money, father, do I not?
Seely. I, by the body of me, dost thou; would thou wouldest pay me, good four pound it is, I have a the Post at home.
Crom. I know 'tis true; sirrah, give him ten Angels,
And look your wife, and you do stay to dinner:
And while you live, I freely give to you,
Four pound a year, for the four pound I ought you.
Seely. Art not changed, art old Tom still?
Now God bless thee, good Lord Tom:
Home Joan, home; I'le dine with my Lord Tom to day,
And thou shalt come next week.
Fetch my Cow; home Joan, home.
Wife. Now God bless thee, my good Lord Tom;
I'le fetch my Cow presently.

Enter Gardiner.

Crom. Sirrah, go to yon stranger, tell him I desire him
Stay to dinner: I must speak with him.
Gard. My Lord of Norfolk, see you this same Bubble?
That same puffe; but mark the end, my Lord, mark the end.
Norf. I promise you, I like not something he hath done;
But let that pass: the King doth love him well.
Crom. Good morrow to my Lord of Winchester:
I know you bear me hard, about the Abbey lands.
Gard. Have I not reason, when Religion is wronged?
You had no colour for what you have done.
Crom. Yes, the abolishing of Antichrist,
And of his Popish order from our Realm:
I am no enemy to Religion,
But what is done, it is for England's good:
What did they serve for, but to feed a sort
Of lazy Abbots, and of full-fed Fryers?
They neither plow, nor sow, and yet they reap
The fat of all the Land, and suck the poor:
Look what was theirs, is in King Henrie's hands,
His wealth before lay in the Abbey lands.
Gard. Indeed these things you have alledg'd, my Lord,
When, God doth know, the infant yet unborn,
Will curse the time, the Abbies were pul'd down:
I pray now where is Hospitality?
Where now may poor distressed people go,
For to relieve their need, or rest their bones,
When weary travel doth oppress their limmes?
And where religious men should take them in,
Shall now be kept back by a Mastive dog:
And thousand thousand --------
Nor. O my Lord, no more: things past redress,
'Tis bootless to complain.
Crom. What shall we to the Convocation-house?
Nor. We'll follow you, my Lord, pray lead the way.

Enter old Cromwell, like a Farmer.

Old Crom. How? one Cromwell made Lord Keeper, since I left Putney, And

And dwelt in York-shire? I never heard better newes:
I'le see that Cromwell, or it shall go hard.
Crom. My aged Father! state set aside:
Father, on my knee I crave your blessing:
One of my Servants go and have him in,
At better leisure will we talk with him.
Old Crom. Now if I die, how happy were the day,
To see this comfort rains forth showers of joy.
Exit old Cromwell.
Not. This duty in him showes a kind of grace.
Crom. Go on before, for time drawes on apace.
Exeunt all but Friskiball.
Fris. I wonder what this Lord would have with me,
His man so strictly gave me charge to stay:
I never did offend him to my knowledge:
Well, good or bad, I mean to bide it all,
Worse then I am, now never can befall.

Enter Banister and his Wife.

Ba. Come, Wife, I take it be almost dinner time,
For Mr. Newton, and Mr. Crosbie sent to me
Last night, they would come dine with me,
And take their bond in; I pray thee hie thee home,
And see that all things be in readinesse.
Mi. Ba. They shall be welcome, Husband, I'le go
But is not that man Master Friskiball? (before
She runs and embraces him.
Ba. O heavens! it is kind Master Friskiball:
Say, sir, what hap hath brought you to this passe?
Fris. The same that brought you to your misery.
Ba. Why would you not acquaint me with your state?
Is Banister your poor friend forgot?
Whose goods, whose love, whose life and all is yours.
Fris. I thought your usage would be as the rest,
That had more kindnesse at my hands then you,
Yet look'd ascance whenas they saw me poor.
Mi. Ba. If Banister should bear so base a heart,
I never would look my husband in the face,
But hate him as I would a Cockatrice.
Ba. And well thou mightest, should Banister deal so,
Since that I saw you, sir, my state is mended:
And for the thousand pound I owe to you,
I have it ready for you, sir, at home:
And though I grieve your fortune is so bad:
Yet that my hap's to help you makes me glad:
And now, sir, will it please you walk with me.
Fris. Not yet I cannot, for the Lord Chancellor,
Hath here commanded me to wait on him,
For what I know not, pray God it be for good.
Ba. Never make doubt of that, I'le warrant you,
He is as kind a noble Gentleman,
As ever did possesse the place he hath.
Mi. Ba. Sir, my Brother is his Steward, if you please,
We'll go along and bear you company:
I know we shall not want for welcome there?
Fris. Withall my heart: but what's become of Bagot?
Ba. He is hanged for buying Jewels of the Kings.
Fris. A just reward for one so impious,
The time drawes on, sir, will you go along.
Ba. I'le follow you, kind Master Friskiball.
Exeunt omnes.

Enter two Merchants.

1. Now, Master Crosbie, I see you have a care
To keep your word, in payment of your money.
2. By my faith I have reason upon a Bond,
Three thousand pounds is too much to forfeit,
Yet I doubt not, Master Banister.
1. By my faith your summe is more then mine,
And yet I am not much behind you too,
Considering that to day I paid at Court.
2. Masse, and well remembred:
What's the reason the Lord Cromwell's men
Wear such long Skirts upon their Coats?
They reach down to their very Hams.
1. I will resolve you, sir, and thus it is;
The Bishop of Winchester, that loves not Cromwell,
As great men are envied as well as lesse,
A while a go there was a jar between them,
And it was brought to my Lord Cromwell's ear,
That Bishop Gardiner would sit on his Skirts,
Upon which word he made his men long blew Coats,
And in the Court wore one of them himself:
And meeting with the Bishop, quoth he, my Lord,
Here's Skirts enough now for your Grace to sit on:
Which vexed the Bishop to the very heart;
This is the reason why they wear long Coats.
2. 'Tis alwayes seen, and mark it for a rule,
That one great man will envy still another:
But 'tis a thing that nothing concerns me:
What, shall we now to Master Banister's?
1. I, come, we'll pay him royally for our dinner. Ex.

Enter the Usher and the Shewer, the meat goes over the Stage.

Usher. Uncover there, Gentlemen.

Enter Cromwell, Bedford, Suffolk, Old Cromwell, Friskiball, good-man Seely, and attendants.

Crom. My noble Lords of Suffolk and Bedford,
Your Honours welcome to poor Cromwell's house:
Where is my Father? nay, be covered Father,
Although that duty to these noble men doth challenge it,
Yet I'le make bold with them.
Your head doth bear the calender of care:
What? Cromwell covered, and his Father bare?
It must not be. Now, sir, to you;
Is not your name Friskiball? and a Florentine.
Fris. My name was Friskiball, till cruell fate,
Did rob me of my name, and of my state.
Crom. What fortune brought you to this Countrey now?
Fris. All other parts hath left me succourlesse,
Save onely this, because of debts I have hope to gain, for to relieve my want.
Crom. Did you not once upon your Florence bridge,
Help a distressed man, robb'd by the Bandetti,
His name was Cromwell?
Fris. I never made my brain a Calender of any good I did,
I alwayes lov'd this nation with my heart.
Crom. I am that Cromwell that you there reliev'd,
Sixteen Duckets you gave me for to cloath me,
Sixteen to bear my charges by the way,
And sixteen more I had for my Horse hire,
There be those severall summes justly return'd:
Yet it injustice were, that serving at my need,
For to repay them without interest:
Therefore receive of me these four severall Bags;

In each of them there is four hundred Marke,
And bring to me the names of all your debtors,
And if they will not see you paid, I will.
O God forbid, that I should see him fall,
That helpt me in my greatest need of all.
Here stands my Father that first gave me life,
Alass, what duty is too much for him?
This man in time of need did save my life,
And therefore cannot doe too much for him.
By this old man I oftentimes was fed,
Else might I have gone supperlesse to bed.
Such kindnesse have I had of these three men,
That Cromwell no way can repay agen.
Now in to dinner, for we stay too long,
And to good stomacks is no greater wrong.
Exeunt omnes.

Enter Gardiner in his Study, and his man.

Gard. Sirrah, where be those men I caus'd to stay?
Ser. They do attend your pleasure, Sir, within.
Gard. Bid them come hither, and stay you without,
For by those men the Fox of this same land,
That makes a Goose of better then himself,
Must worried be unto his latest home,
Or Gardiner will fail in his intent.
As for the Dukes of Suffolk and of Norfolk,
Whom I have sent for to come speak with me;
Howsoever outwardly they shadow it,
Yet in their hearts I know they love him not;
As for the Earl of Bedford, he is but one,
And dares not gain-say what we do set down.

Enter the two Witnesses.

Now, my friends, you know I sav'd your lives,
When by the Law you had deserved death;
And then you promised me upon your Oathes,
To venture both your lives to do me good.
Both Wit. We swore no more then that we will perform.
Gard. I take your words, and that which you must do,
Is service for your God, and for your King;
To root a Rebell from this flourishing Land,
One that's an enemy unto the Church:
And therefore must you take your solemn Oathes,
That you heard Cromwell, the Lord Chancellor,
Did wish a Dagger at King Henrie's Heart:
Fear not to swear it, for I heard him speak it;
Therefore we'll shield you from ensuing harmes.
2. Wit. If you will warrant us the deed is good,
We'll undertake it.
Gard. Kneel down, and I will here absolve you both;
This Crucifix I lay upon your heads,
And sprinckle Holy-water on your browes:
The deed is meritorious that you do,
And by it shall you purchase Grace from Heaven.
1. Now sir we'll undertake it, by our Soules.
2. For Cromwell never loved none of our sort.
Gard. I know he doth not, and for both of you,
I will prefer you to some place of worth;
Now get you in, until I call for you,
For presently the Dukes mean to be here. Exeunt Wit.
Cromwell, sit fast, thy time's not long to reign;
The Abbies that were pul'd down by thy means,
Is now a mean for me to pull thee down:
Thy pride also thy own head lights upon,
For thou art he hath chang'd Religion:
But now no more, for here the Dukes are come.

Enter Suffolk, Norfolk, and the Earl of Bedford.

Suff. Good even to my Lord Bishop.
Nor. How fares my Lord? what, are you all alone?
Gard. No, not alone, my Lords, my mind is troubled:
I know your honours muse wherefore I sent,
And in such haste: What came you from the King?
Norf. We did, and left none but Lord Cromwell with him.
Gard. O what a dangerous time is this we live in?
There's Thomas Wolsey, he's already gone,
And Thomas Moor, he followed after him:
Another Thomas yet there doth remain,
That is far worse then either of those twain;
And if with speed, my Lords, we not pursue it,
I fear the King and all the Land will rue it.
Bed. Another Thomas? pray God it be not Cromwell.
Gard. My Lord of Bedford, it is that Traitor Cromwell.
Bed. Is Cromwell false? my heart will never think it.
Suff. My Lord of Winchester, what likelihood,
Or proof have you of this his treachery.
Gard. My Lord, too much, call in the men within;

Enter the Witnesses.

These men, my Lord, upon their Oathes affirm,
That they did hear Lord Cromwell in his Garden,
Wished a Dagger sticking at the Heart
Of our King Henry, what is this but Treason?
Bed. If it be so, my heart doth bleed with sorrow.
Suff. How say you, friends; what, did you hear these words?
1. Wit. We did, an't like your grace.
Norf. In what place was Lord Cromwell when he spake them?
2. Wit. In his Garden; where we did attend a suite,
Which we had waited for two yeares and more.
Suff. How long is't since you heard him speak these words?
2. Wit. Some half a year since.
Bed. How chance that you conceal'd it all this time?
1. Wit. His Greatnes made us fear, that was the cause.
Gard. I, I, his Greatnes, that's the cause indeed;
And to make his Treason here more manifest,
He calls his servants to him round about,
Tells them of Wolsey's life, and of his fall,
Sayes that himself hath many enemies,
And gives to some of them a Park, or Mannor,
To others Leases, Lands to other some:
What need he do this in his prime of life,
An if he were not fearfull of his death?
Suff. My Lord, these likelihoods are very great.
Bed. Pardon me, Lords, for I must needs depart;
Their proofs are great, but greater is my heart.
Exit Bedford.
Norf. My friends, take heed of that which you have said;
Your soules must answer what your tongues report:
Therefore take heed, be wary what you do.
2. Wit. My Lord, we speak no more but truth.
Norf. Let them depart, my Lord of Winchester;
Let these men be close kept
Until the day of tryal.
Gard. They shall, my Lord; ho, take in these two men.
Exeunt Witnesses.
My Lords, if Cromwell have a publick Tryal,
That which we do, is void, by his denial;

You

You know the King will credit none but him.
Nor. 'Tis true; he rules the King even as he pleases.
Suff. How shall we do for to attache him then?
Gard. Marry, my Lords, thus, by an Act he made himself,
With an intent to intrap some of our lives;
And this it is: If any Counsellor
Be convicted of high treason;
He shall be executed without a publick triall.
This Act my Lords, he caus'd the King to make.
Suff. A did indeed, and I remember it;
And now it is like to fall upon himself.
Nor. Let us not slack it, 'tis for Englands good;
We must be wary, else he'll go beyond us.
Gar. Well hath your Grace said, my Lord of Norfolk.
Therefore, let us presently to Lambeth,
Thither comes Cromwell, from the Court to night;
Let us arrest him, send him to the Tower:
And in the morning, cut off the traitors head.
Norf. Come then about it, let us guard the town,
This is the day that Cromwell must go down.
Gar. Along my Lords, well, Cromwell is halfe dead;
He shak'd my heart, but I will shave his head. Exeunt.

Enter Bedford solus.

Bed. My soul is like a water troubled,
And Gardiner is the man that makes it so;
O Cromwell, I do fear thy end is near:
Yet I'le prevent their malice if I can;
And in good time, see where the man doth come;
Who little knows how near's his day of doom.

Enter Cromwell with his train, Bedford makes as though he would speak to him: he goes on.

Cro. You'r well encountred, my good Lord of Bedford,
Pray Pardon me, I am sent for to th'King,
And do not know the businesse yet my self;
So fare you well, for I must needs be gone.
Exit all the train.
Bed. You must, well, what remedy?
I fear too soon you must be gone indeed,
The King hath businesse, but little do'st thou know,
Whose busie for thy life: thou think'st not so.

Enter Cromwell and the train again.

Crom. The second time well met my Lord of Bedford.
I am very sorry that my haste is such,
Lord Marquess Dorset being sick to death,
I must receive of him the privy Seale
At Lambeth, soon my Lord, we'll talk our fill.
Exit the train.
Bed. How smooth and easie is the way to death.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My Lord, the Dukes of Norfolk and of Suffolk,
Accompanied with the Bishop of Winchester,
Intreats you to come presently to Lambeth,
On earnest matters that concerns the State.
Bed. To Lambeth, so: go fetch me pen and ink,
I and Lord Cromwell there shall talk enough:
I, and our last, I fear, and if he come.
He writes a Letter.
Here, take this Letter, and bear it to Lord Cromwell,
Bid him read it, say it concerns him near,
Away, be gone, make all the haste you can,
To Lambeth do I go, a wofull man. Exit.

Enter Cromwell and his train.

Crom. Is the Barge ready? I will straight to Lambeth,
And if this one dayes businesse, once were past,
I'd take my ease to morrow after trouble,
How now my friend, would'st thou speak with me?
The messenger brings the Letter, he puts it in his pocket.
Mes. Sir, here's a Letter from my Lord of Bedford.
Crom. O good my friend, commend me to thy Lord,
Hold, take those Angels, drink them for thy pains.
Mes. He doth desire your Grace to read it,
Because he sayes it doth concern you near.
Crom. Bid him assure himself of that, farewell,
To morrow, tell him, he shall hear from me,
Set on before there, and away to Lambeth.
Exeunt omnes.

Enter Winchester, Suffolk, Norfolk, Bedford, Serjeant at armes, the Herald, and Halberts.

Gar. Halberts stand close unto the water side,
Serjeant at armes, be bould in your office,
Herald, deliver your Proclamation.
Her. This is to give notice to all the Kings subjects,
The late Lord Cromwell, Lord Chancellor of England,
Vicar general over the Realm,
Him to hold and esteem as a traitor,
Against the Crown and dignity of England:
So God save the King.
Gar. Amen.
Bed. Amen, and root thee from the land,
For whil'st thou livest truth cannot stand.
Nor. Make a lane there, the traitor is at hand,
Keep back Cromwell's men:
Drown them if they come on, Serjeant your office?

Enter Cromwell, they make a lane with their Halberts.

Cro. What means my Lord of Norfolk by these words?
Sirs, come along.
Gar. Kill them, if they come on.
Ser. Lord Cromwell, in King Henries name,
I do arrest your honour of high treason.
Crom. Serjeant, me of treason?
Cromwell's men offer to draw.
Suff. Kill them, if they draw a sword.
Crom. Hold, I charge you, as you love me, draw not a sword,
Who dares accuse Cromwell of treason now?
Gar. This is no place to reckon up your crime,
Your Dove-like looks were view'd with serpents eyes.
Crom. With serpents eyes indeed, by thine they were,
But, Gardiner, do thy worst, I fear thee not,
My faith compar'd with thine, as much shall pass,
As doth the Diamond excell the glass:
Attach'd of treason, no accusers by,
Indeed what tongue dares speak so foul a lie?
Nor. My Lord, my Lord, matters are too well known,
And is it time the King had note thereof.
Crom. The King, let me go to him face to face,
No better triall I desire then that,
Let him but say, that Cromwell's faith was fained,
Then Let my Honour, and my Name be stained:

If ever my heart against the King was set,
O let my soule in judgement answer it,
Then if my faith's confirmed with his reason,
'Gainst whom hath Cromwell then committed treason?
Suf. My Lord, your matter shall be tried,
Mean time with patience content your self.
Crom. Perforce I must with patience be content:
O, dear friend Bedford, dost thou stand so near?
Cromwell rejoyceth one friend sheds a tear:
And whether is't? which way must Cromwell now?
Gar. My Lord, you must unto the Tower:
Lieutenant, take him to your charge.
Crom. Well, where you please, yet before I part,
Let me conferre a little with my men.
Gar. As you go by water so you shall.
Crom. I have some businesse present to impart.
Nor. You may not stay, Lieutenant, take your charg.
Crom. Well, well, my Lord, you second Gardiners text.
Norfolk, farewell, thy turn will be the next.
Exit Cromwell and the Lieutenant.
Gar. His guilty Conscience makes him rave, my Lord.
Nor. I, let him talk, his time is short enough.
Gar. My Lord of Bedford, come, you weep for him,
That would not shed a tear for you.
Bed. It grieves me for to see his sudden fall.
Gar. Such successe wish I unto Traitors all. Exeunt.

Enter two Citizens.

1. Why? can this newes be true? is't possible?
The great Lord Cromwell arrested upon Treason,
I hardly will believe it can be so.
2. It is too true, sir, would it were otherwise,
Condition I spent half the wealth I have;
I was at Lambeth, saw him there arrested,
And afterward committed to the Tower.
1. What was't for Treason that he was committed?
2. Kind, Noble Gentleman: I may rue the time;
All that I have, I did enjoy by him,
And if he die, then all my state is gone.
1. It may be hoped that he shall not die,
Because the King did favour him so much.
2. O, sir, you are deceived in thinking so:
The grace and favour he had with the King,
Hath caus'd him have so many enemies:
He that in Court secure will keep himself,
Must not be great, for then he is envied at.
The Shrub is safe, when as the Cedar shakes,
For where the King doth love above compare,
Of others they as much more envied are.
1. 'Tis pitty that this noble man should fall,
He did so many charitable deeds.
2. 'Tis true, and yet you see in each estate,
There's none so good, but some one doth him hate,
And they before would smile him in the face,
Will be the formost to doe him disgrace:
What, will you go along unto the Court?
1. I care not if I doe, and hear the newes,
How men will judge what shall become of him.
2. Some men will speak hardly, some will speak in pity,
Go you to the Court, I'le go into the City,
There I am sure to hear more newes then you.
1. Why then soon will we meet again. Exeunt.

Enter Cromwell in the Tower.

Crom. Now, Cromwell, hast thou time to meditate,
And think upon thy state, and of the time:
Thy honours came unsought, I, and unlooked for,
They fall as sudden, and unlooked for too:
What glory was in England that I had not?
Who in this Land commanded more then Cromwell?
Except the King, who greater then my self?
But now I see what after ages shall,
The greater men, more sudden is their fall.
And now I doe remember, the Earl of Bedford
Was very desirous for to speak to me:
And afterward sent unto me a Letter,
The which I think I have still in my Pocket,
Now may I read it, for I now have leisure,
And this I take it is. He reads the Letter.

My Lord, come not this night to Lambeth,
For if you doe, your state is overthrown.
And much I doubt your life, and if you come:
Then if you love your self, stay where you are.

O God, had I but read this Letter,
Then had I been free from the Lyons paw:
Deferring this to read untill to morrow,
I spurn'd at joy, and did embrace my sorrow.

Enter the Lieutenant of the Tower and Officers.

Now, Master Lieutenant, when's this day of death?
Lieu. Alass, my Lord, would I might never see it:
Here are the Dukes of Suffolk and of Norfolk,
Winchester, Bedford, and Sir Richard Ratcliffe,
With others, but why they come I know not.
Crom. No matter wherefore, Cromwell is prepar'd,
For Gardiner has my life and state insnar'd:
Bid them come in, or you shall doe them wrong,
For here stands he, whom some thinks lives too long,
Learning kills Learning, and, instead of Ink
To dip his Pen, Cromwell's heart blood doth drink.

Enter all the Nobles.

Norf. Good morrow, Cromwell, what, alone so sad?
Crom. One good among you, none of you are bad:
For my part, it best fits me be alone,
Sadnesse with me, not I with any one.
What, is the King acquainted with my cause?
Norf. We have, and he hath answered us, my Lord.
Crom. How shall I come to speak with him my self.
Gard. The King is so advertised of your guilt,
He will by no meanes admit you to his presence.
Crom. No way admit me, am I so soon forgot?
Did he but yesterday embrace my neck,
And said that Cromwell was even half himself,
And is his Princely eares so much bewitched
With scandalous ignominy, and slanderous speeches,
That now he doth deny to look on me?
Well, my Lord of Winchester, no doubt but you
Are much in favour with his Majesty,
Will you bear a Letter from me to his Grace?
Gar. Pardon me, I'le bear no Traitors Letters.
Crom. Ha, will you doe this kindesse then?
Tell him by word of mouth what I shall say to you.
Gard. That will I.
Crom. But on your honour will you?
Gar. I, on my honour.
Crom. Bear witnesse, Lords.

Tell

Tell him, when he hath known you;
And try'd your faith but half so much as mine,
He'll find you to be the falſeſt hearted man
In England: Pray tell him this.
Bed. Be patient, good my Lord, in theſe extremities.
Crom. My kind and honourable Lord of Bedford,
I know your honour alwayes lov'd me well,
But, pardon me, this ſtill ſhall be my theam,
Gardiner is the cauſe makes Cromwell ſo extream:
Sir Ralph Sadler, pray a word with you;
You were my man, and all that you poſſeſs
Came by my means, to requite all this,
Will you take this Letter here of me,
And give it with your own hands to the King.
Sad. I kiſs your hand, and never will I reſt,
E're to the King this be delivered. Exit Sadler.
Crom. Why yet Cromwell hath one Friend in ſtore.
Gard. But all the haſte he makes ſhall be but vain;
Here's a diſcharge for your Priſoner,
To ſee him executed preſently:
My Lord, you heare the tenor of your life.
Crom. I do embrace it, welcome my laſt date,
And of this gliſtering world I take laſt leave;
And, Noble Lords, I take my leave of you:
As willingly I go to meet with death,
As Gardiner did pronounce it with his breath;
From Treaſon is my heart as white as Snow,
My death onely procured by my Foe:
I pray commend me to my Soveraign King,
And tell him in what ſort his Cromwell dy'd,
To looſe his head before his cauſe was try'd:
But let his Grace, when he ſhall hear my name,
Say onely this, Gardiner procur'd the ſame.

Enter young Cromwell.

Liev. Here is your Son come to take his leave.
Crom. To take his leave?
Come hither, Harry Cromwell;
Mark, Boy, the laſt words that I ſpeak to thee;
Flatter not Fortune, neither fawn upon her;
Gape not for ſtate, yet loſe no ſpark of honour;
Ambition, like the plague ſee thou eſchew it;
I die for Treaſon, Boy, and never knew it;
Yet let thy faith as ſpotleſs be as mine,
And Cromwell's virtues in thy face ſhall ſhine:
Come, go along and ſee me leave my breath,
And I'le leave thee upon the floor of death.
Son. O father, I ſhall die to ſee that wound,
Your bloud being ſpilt will make my heart to ſound.
Crom. How, Boy, not look upon the Axe?
How ſhall I do then to have my head ſtrook off?
Come on, my child, and ſee the end of all,
And after ſay that Gardiner was my fall.
Gard. My Lord, you ſpeak it of an envious heart,
I have done no more then Law and equity.
Bed. O, my good Lord of Winchester, forbeare;
It would better ſeemed you to been abſent,
Then with your words diſturb a dying man.
Crom. Who me, my Lord? no: he diſturbs not me,
My mind he ſtirres not, though his mighty ſhock
Hath brought moe Peers heads down to the block.
Farewell, my Boy, all Cromwell can bequeath,
My hearty bleſſing, ſo I take my leave.
Hang. I am your death's-man, pray my Lord forgive me.
Cro. Even with my ſoul, why man thou art my Doctor,
And bring'ſt me precious Phyſick for my Soul;
My Lord of Bedford, I deſire of you,
Before my death a corporal embrace.
Bedford comes to him, Cromwell embraces him.
Farewell, great Lord, my love I do commend:
My heart to you, my ſoul to heaven I ſend;
This is my joy, that e're my body fleet,
Your honour'd armes is my true winding-ſheet;
Farewell, dear Bedford, my peace is made in heaven;
Thus falls great Cromwell a poor ell in length,
To riſe to unmeaſur'd height, winged with new ſtrength.
The land of Wormes, which dying men diſcover,
My ſoul is ſhrin'd with heaven's celeſtial cover.
Exeunt Cromwell and the Officers, and others.
Bed. Well, farewell Cromwell, the trueſt friend
That ever Bedford ſhall poſſeſs again,
Well, Lords, I fear when this man is dead,
You'll wiſh in vain that Cromwell had a head.

Enter one with Cromwell's head.

Offi. Here is the head of the deceaſed Cromwell.
Bed. Pray thee go hence, and bear his head away,
Unto his body, interre them both in clay.

Enter Sir Ralph Sadler.

Sad. How now my Lords, what is Lord Cromwell dead?
Bed. Lord Cromwell's body now doth want a head.
Sad. O God, a little ſpeed had ſav'd his life,
Here is a kind Reprieve come from the King,
To bring him ſtraight unto his Majeſty.
Suff. I, I, ſir Ralph, Reprieves come now too late.
Gar. My conſcience now tells me this deed was ill,
Would Chriſt that Cromwell were alive again.
Nor. Come let us to the King, whom well I know,
Will grieve for Cromwell, that his death was ſo.
Exeunt omnes.

THE PROLOGUE.

THE doubfull Title (Gentlemen) prefixt
Upon the Argument we have in hand,
May breed ſuſpence, and wrongfully diſturb
The peacefull quiet of your ſetled thoughts:
To ſtop which ſcruple, let this brief ſuffice.
It is no pamper'd Glutton we preſent,
Nor aged Counſellor to youthfull ſin;
But one, whoſe vertue ſhone above the reſt,
A valiant Martyr, and a vertuous Peer,
In whoſe true faith and loyalty expreſt
Unto his Soveraigne, and his Countries weal:
We ſtrive to pay that tribute of our love
Your favours merit: Let fair truth be grac'd,
Since forg'd invention former time defac'd.

Sheriff.

MY Lords I charge ye in his Highneſs name,
To keep the peace, you and your followers.

Her. Good M. Sheriff, look unto your ſelf.

Pow. Do ſo, for we have other buſineſſe.

Proffer to fight again.

Sher. Will ye diſturb the Judges, and the Aſſize? Hear the King's Proclamation, ye were beſt.

Pow. Hold then, let's hear it.

Her. But be brief, ye were beſt.

Bail. O yes.

Davy. Coſſone, make ſhorter O, or ſhall mar your Yes.

Bail. O yes.

Owyn. What, has her nothing to ſay, but O yes?

Bay. O yes.

Da. O nay, py coſs plut, down with her, down with her. A Poweſſe, a Poweſſe.

Gough. A Herbert, a Herbert, and down with Poweſſe.

Helter skelter again.

Sher. Hold in the King's name, hold.

Owyn. Down with a kanaves name, down.

In this fight the Bailiff is knock'd down, and the Sheriff and the other run away.

Her. Poweſſe, I think thy welſh and thou do ſmart.

Pow. Herbert, I think my ſword came near thy heart.

Her. Thy hearts beſt bloud ſhall pay the loſs of mine.

Gough. A Herbert, a Herbert.

Davy. A Poweſſe, a Poweſſe.

As they are fighting, enter the Mayor of Hereford, his Officers and Towns-men with Clubs.

Mai. My Lords, as you are Liege-men to the Crown,
True Noblemen, and ſubjects to the King,
Attend his highneſſe Proclamation,
Commanded by the Judges of Aſſize,
For keeping peace at this aſſembly.

Her. Good M. Maior of Hereford, be brief.

Mai. Serjeant, without the ceremonies of O yes,
Pronounce aloud the Proclamation.

Ser. The Kings Juſtices, perceiving what publick miſchief may enſue this private quarrel: in his Majeſties name, do ſtraightly charge and command all perſons, of what degree ſoever, to depart this City of Hereford, except ſuch as are bound to give attendance at this Aſſize, and that no man preſume to wear any weapon, eſpecially Welſh-hooks, Forreſt Bills.

Owyn. Haw? No pill nor Wells hoog? ha?

Mai. Peace, and hear the Proclamation.

Ser. And that the Lord Poweſs do preſently diſperſe and diſcharge his retinue, and depart the City in the Kings peace, he and his followers, on pain of impriſonment.

Dav. Haw? pud her Lord Paweſs in priſon? A Paweſs A Paweſs. Coſſoon, her will live and tye with her Lord.

Gough. A Herbert, a Herbert.

In this fight the Lord Herbert is wounded, and falls to the ground, the Maior & his company cry for clubs: Poweſs runs away, Gough and Herberts faction are buſie about him. Enter the two Judges, the Sheriff, and his Bayliffs afore them, &c.

1. Jud. Where's the Lord Herbert? Is he hurt or ſlain?

Sher. He's here, my Lord.

2. Jud. How fares his Lordſhip, friends?

Gough. Mortally wounded, ſpeechleſs, he cannot live.

1. Jud. Convey him hence, let not his wounds take air,
And get him dreſt with expedition.

Exit L. Herbert and Gough.

M. Mayor of Hereford M. Sheriff o'th Shire,
Commit Lord Powes to safe custody,
To answer the disturbance of the peace,
Lord Herberts peril, and his high contempt
Of us, and you the Kings Commissioners,
See it be done with care and diligence.
Sher. Please it your Lordship, my Lord Powes is gone
Past all recovery.
2. Jud. Yet let search be made,
To apprehend his followers that are left.
Sher. There are some of them: sirs, lay hold of them.
Owen. Of us? and why? what has her done I pray you?
Sher. Disarme them, Bailiffs.
May. Officers assist.
Davy. Hear you, Lord Shudge, what reason for this?
Owen. Cossoon, pe puse for fighting for our Lord?
1. Jud. Away with them.
Davy. Harg you my Lord.
Owen. Gough my Lord Herberts man's a shitten kanave.
Davy. Ice live and tye in good quarrel.
Owen. Pray you do shustice, let awl be prison.
Davy. Prison, no,
Lord Shudge, I wool give you pale, good surety.
2. Jud. What bail? what sureties?
Davy. Her Cozen ap Rice, ap Evan, ap Morice, ap Morgan, ap Lluellyn, ap Madoc, ap Meredith, ap Griffin, ap Davy, ap Owen, ap Shinken Shones.
2. Jud. Two of the most sufficient are enow.
Sher. And't please your Lordship these are all but one.
1. Jud. To Jayl with them, & the Lord Herberts men,
We'll talk with them, when the Assize is done. Exeunt.
Riotous, audacious, and unruly Grooms,
Must we be forced to come from the Bench,
To quiet brawls, which every Constable
In other civil places can suppresse?
2. Jud. What was the quarrel that caus'd all this stir?
Sher. About Religion as I heard, my Lord.
Lord Powes detracted from the power of Rome,
Affirming Wickliffs Doctrine to be true,
And Romes erroneus: hot reply was made
By the Lord Herbert, they were Traitors all
That would maintain it. Powes answered,
They were as true, as noble, and as wise
As he, that would defend it with their lives,
He nam'd for instance Sir John Oldcastle
The Lord Cobham: Herbert replyed again,
He, thou, and all are Traitors that so hold.
The fye was given, the several Factions drawn,
And so enrag'd, that we could not appease it.
1. Jud. This case concerns the Kings Prerogative,
And 'tis dangerous to the State and Common-wealth.
Gentlemen, Justices, M. Mayor, and M. Sheriff,
It doth behoove us all, and each of us
In general and particular, to have care
For the suppressing of all mutinies,
And all assemblies, except souldiers musters,
For the Kings preparation into France.
We hear of secret Conventicles made,
And there is doubt of some Conspiracies,
Which may break out into rebellious armes
When the King's gone, perchance before he go:
Note as an instance, this one perillous fray,
What factions might have grown on either part,
To the destruction of the King and Realme:
Yet, in my conscience, Sir John Oldcastle's
Innocent of it, onely his name was us'd.
We therefore from his Highnesse give this charge:
You Master Mayor, look to your Citizens,
You Master Sheriff, unto your Shire, and you
As Justices in every ones precinct
There be no meetings. When the vulgar sort
Sit on their Ale-bench, with their cups and cans,
Matters of State be not their common talk,
Nor pure Religion by their lips prophan'd.
Let us return unto the Bench again,
And there examine further of this fray.

Enter a Bailiff and a Serjeant.

Sher. Sirs, have ye taken the Lord Powes yet?
Bail. No, nor heard of him.
Ser. No, he's gone far enough.
2. Jud. They that are left behind, shall answer all.

Exeunt.

Enter Suffolk, Bishop of Rochester, M. Butler, Sir John the Parson of Wrotham.

Suf. Now, my Lord Bishop, take free liberty
To speak your mind; What is your suit to us?
Bish. My noble Lord, no more then what you know,
And have been oftentimes invested with:
Grievous complaints have past between the lips
Of envious persons to upbraid the Clergy,
Some carping at the livings which we have;
And others spurning at the Ceremonies
That are of ancient custome in the Church.
Amongst the which, Lord Cobham is a chief:
What inconvenience may proceed hereof,
Both to the King, and to the Common-wealth,
May easily be discern'd, when like a frensie
This innovation shall possesse their minds.
These upstarts will have followers to uphold
Their damn'd opinion, more than Harry shall,
To undergo his quarrel 'gainst the French.
Suf. What proof is there against them to be had,
That what you say the Law may justifie?
Bish. They give themselves the names of Protestants,
And meet in fields and solitary groves.
S. Joh. Was ever heard (my Lord) the like till now?
That thieves and rebels, sbloud hereticks,
Plain hereticks, I'le stand to't to their teeth,
Should have to colour their vile practises,
A Title of such worth, as Protestant?

Enter one with a Letter.

Suf. O but you must not swear, it ill becomes
One of your coat, to rap out bloudy oaths.
Bish. Pardon him, good my Lord, it is his zeal,
An honest country Prelate, who laments
To see such foul disorder in the Church.
S. Joh. There's one they call him Sir John Oldcastle,
He has not his name for nought: for like a Castle
Doth he encompasse them within his walls,
But till that castle be subverted quite,
We ne're shall be at quiet in the Realme.
Bish. This is our suit (my Lord) that he be tane
And brought in question for his heresie:
Beside, two Letters brought me out of Wales,
Wherein my Lord Hertford writes to me,
What tumult and sedition was begun,
About the Lord Cobham, at the Sizes there,
For they had much adoe to calme the rage,
And that the valiant Herbert is there slain.
Suf. A fire that must be quencht. Well, say no more,
The King anon goes to the Council Chamber,

There

There to debate of matters touching France,
As he doth paſſe by, I'le informe his Grace
Concerning your Petition. Matter Butler,
If I forget, do you remember me.
But. I will my Lord. Offer him a purſe.
Biſh. Not as a Recompence,
But as a Token of our love to you.
By me (my Lords) the Clergy doth preſent
This purſe, and in it full a thouſand Angels,
Praying your Lordſhip to accept their gift.
Suf. I thank them, my Lord Biſhop, for their love,
But will not take their money, if you pleaſe
To give it to this Gentleman, you may.
Biſh. Sir, then we crave your furtherance herein.
But. The beſt I can, my Lord of Rocheſter.
Biſh. Nay, pray take it, truſt me you ſhall.
S. John. Were ye all three upon New-Market heath,
You ſhould not need ſtrain curt'ſie who ſhould ha't,
Sir John would quickly rid ye of that care.
Suf. The King is coming: Fear yea not, my Lord,
The very firſt thing I will break with him
Shall be about your matter.

Enter King Harry and Huntington in talk.

Har. My Lord of Suffolk,
Was it not ſaid the Clergy did refuſe
To lend us Money toward our warrs in France?
Suf. It was my Lord, but very wrognfully.
Har. I know it was: for Huntington here tells me
They have been very bountifull of late.
Suf. And ſtill they vow, my gracious Lord, to be ſo,
Hoping your Majeſty will think on them
As of your loving Subjects, and ſuppreſſe
All ſuch malicious errors as begin
To ſpot their calling, and diſturb the Church.
Har. God elſe forbid: why, Suffolk,
Is there any new rupture to diſquiet them?
Suf. No new my Lord, the old is great enough,
And ſo increaſing, as if not cut down,
Will breed a ſcandal to your Royal State,
And ſet your Kingdome quickly in an uproar.
The Kentiſh Knight, Lord Cobham in deſpight
Of any Law, or ſpiritual diſcipline,
Maintains this upſtart new Religion ſtill,
And divers great aſſemblies by his means
And private quarrels, are commenc'd abroad,
As by this letter more at large my Liege, is made apparent.
Har. We do find it here,
There was in Wales a certain fray of late
Between two Noblemen. But what of this?
Follows it ſtraight Lord Cobham muſt be he Did cauſe the ſame? I dare be ſworn (good Knight)
He never dreamt of any ſuch contention.
Biſh. But in his name the quarrel did begin,
About the opinion which he held my Liege.
Har. What if it did? was either he in place
To take part with them? or abet them in it?
If brabling fellows, whoſe enkindled bloud
Seeth's in their fiery veins, will needs go fight,
Making their quarrels of ſome words that paſt
Either if you, or you, amongſt their cups,
Is the fault yours? or are they guilty of it?
Suf. With pardon of your Highneſſe, my dread Lord,
Such little ſparks neglected, may in time
Grow to a mighty flame. But that's not all,
He doth beſide maintain a ſtrange Religion,
And will not be compell'd to come to Maſs.
Biſh. We do beſeech you therefore, gracious Prince,
Without offence unto your Majeſty,
We may be bold to uſe authority.
Har. As how?
Biſh. To ſummon him unto the Arches,
Where ſuch offences have their puniſhment.
Har. To anſwer perſonally, is that your meaning?
Biſh. It is, my Lord.
Har. How if he appeal?
Biſh. My Lord, he cannot in ſuch a caſe as this.
Suf. Not where Religion is the plea, my Lord.
Har. I took it alwayes, that our ſelf ſtood on't
As a ſufficient refuge: unto whom
Not any but might lawfully appeal.
But we'll not argue now upon that point.
For Sir John Oldcaſtle whom you accuſe,
Let me intreat you to diſpence a while
With your high Title of preheminence. In ſcorn.
Report did never yet condemne him ſo,
But he hath alwayes been reputed loyal:
And in my knowledge I can ſay thus much,
That he is vertuous, wiſe, and honorable.
If any way his conſcience be ſeduc'd
To waver in his faith, I'le ſend for him
And ſchoole him privately: If that ſerve not,
Then afterward you may proceed againſt him.
Butler, be you the Meſſenger for us,
And will him preſently repair to Court. Exeunt.
S. John. How now my Lord? why ſtand you diſcontent?
Inſooth (methinks) the King hath well decreed.
Biſh. I, I, Sir John, if he would keep his word:
But I perceive he favours him ſo much
As this will be to ſmall effect, I fear.
S. John. Why then I'le tell you what y'are beſt to do:
If you ſuſpect the King will be but cold
In reprehending him, ſend you a Proceſs too
To ſerve upon him: ſo ye may be ſure
To make him anſwer't, howſoere it fall.
Biſh. And well remembred, I will have it ſo,
A Summons ſhall be ſent about it ſtraight. Exit.
S. John. Yea do ſo. In the mean ſpace this remains
For kind Sir John of Wrotham, honeſt Jack.
Me thinks the purſe of Gold the Biſhop gave
Made a good ſhew, it had a tempting look:
Beſhrew me, but my fingers ends do itch
To be upon thoſe golden ruddocks. Well, 'tis thus;
I am not as the world doth take me for:
If ever wolfe were cloathed in ſheeps coat,
Then I am he; old huddle and twang'ifaith:
A Prieſt in ſhew, but (in plain termes) a Thief:
Yet let me tell you too, an honeſt Thief;
One that will take it where it may be ſpar'd,
And ſpend it freely in good fellowſhip.
I have as many ſhapes as Proteus had,
That ſtill when any villany is done,
There may none ſuſpect it was Sir John.
Beſides, to comfort me (for what's this life,
Except the crabbed bitterneſſe thereof
Be ſweetned now and then with Letchery?)
I have my Doll, my Concubine as 'twere,
To frolick with, a luſty bouncing girle.
But whil'ſt I loyter here, the Gold may ſcape,
And that muſt not be ſo: It is mine own.
Therefore I'le meet him on his way to Court,
And ſhrive him of it, there will be the ſport. Exit.

Enter four poor people, some soldiers, some old men.

1. God help, God help, there's law for punishing,
But there's no law for our necessity:
There be more stocks to set poor soldiers in,
Than there be houses to relieve them at.

Old man. I, house-keeping decayes in every place,
Even as S. Peter writ, still worse and worse.

2. Master Mayor of Rochester has given command,
That none shall go abroad out of the parish, and has set down an Order forsooth, what every poor housholder must give for our relief: where there be some ceased (I may say to you) had almost as much need to beg as we.

1. It is a hard wo ld the while.

Old. If a poor man ask at door for God's sake, they ask him for a licence or a certificate from a Justice.

2. Faith we have none, but what we bear upon our bodies, our maim'd limbs, God help us.

4. And yet as lame as I am, I'le with the King into France, if I can but crawl a ship-board, I had rather be slain in France, than starve in England.

Old. Ha, were I but as lusty as I was at Shrewsbury battle, I would not do as I do: but we are now come to the good Lord Cobham's house, the best man to the poor in all Kent.

4. God bless him, there be but few such.

Enter Lord Cobham with Harpool.

Cob. Thou peevish froward man, what would'st thou have?

Har. This pride, this pride, brings all to beggery,
I serv'd your Father, and your Grandfather,
Shew me such two men now: No, no,
Your backs, your backs; the devil and pride
Has cut the throat of all good house-keeping,
They were the best Yeomens Masters that Ever were in England.

Cob. Yea, except thou have a crew of filthy knaves
And sturdy Rogues still feeding at my Gate,
There is no hospitality with thee.

Harp. They may sit at the gate well enough, but the devil of any thing you give them, except they'll eat stones.

Cob. 'Tis long then of such hungry knaves as you:
Yea sir, here's your retinue, your guests be come,
They know their hours, I warrant you.

Old. God bless your honour, God save the good Lord Cobham, and all his house.

Soul. Good your honour, bestow your blessed almes
Upon poor men.

Cob. Now sir, here be your almes Knights:
Now are you as safe as the Emperour.

Harp. My almes Knights? Nay th'are yours:
It is a shame for you, and I'le stand to't,
Your foolish almes maintains more vagabonds
Then all the Noblemen in Kent beside.
Out you rogues, you knaves, work for your livings.
Alas poor men, they may beg their hearts out,
There's no more charity among men
Then amongst so many Mastive dogs.
What make you here, you needy knaves?
Away, away, you villains.

2. Soul. I beseech you sir, be good.

Cob. Nay, nay, they know thee well enough, I think that all the beggers in this land are thy acquaintance: go bestow your almes, none will controll you, sir.

Harp. What should I give them? you are grown so beggarly, that you can scarce give a bit of bread at your door: you talk of your Religion so long, that you have banished charity from you: a man may make a Flax-shop in your Kitching chimnies, for any fire there is stirring.

Cob. If thou wilt give them nothing, send them hence:
Let them not stand here starving in the cold.

Har. Who, I drive them hence? If I drive poor men from the door, I'le be hang'd: I know not what I may come to my self: God help ye poor knaves, ye see the world. Well, you had a mother: O God be with thee good Lady, thy soul's at rest; she gave more in shirts and smocks to poor children, then you spend in your house, and yet you live a beggar too.

Cob. Even the worst deed that ever my mother did, was in relieving such a fool as thou.

Har. I, I am a fool still: with all your wit you'll die a beggar, go too.

Cob. Go, you old fool, give thee poor people something: Go in poor men into the inner Court, and take such almes as there is to be had,

Soul. God blesse your Honour.

Har. Hang you rogues, hang you, there's nothing but misery amongst you, you fear no Law, you. Exit.

Oldm. God blesse you good Master Rafe, God save your life, you are good to thee poor still.

Enter the Lord Powis disguised.

Cob. What fellow's yonder comes along the Grove?
Few passengers there be that know this way:
Me thinks he stops as though he staid for me,
And meant to shrow'd himself amongst the bushes.
I know the Clergy hates me to the death,
And my Religion gets me many foes:
And this may be some desperate rogue
Suborn'd to work me mischief: as it pleaseth God.
If he come toward me, sure I'le stay his coming,
Be he but one man, what soere he be. L. Powis comes on.
I have been well acquainted with that face.

Pow. Well met, my honorable Lord and friend.

Cob. You are welcome, sir, what ere you be;
But of this sudden, sir, I do not know you.

Pow. I am one that wisheth well unto your Honour,
My name is Powis, an old friend of yours.

Cob. My honorable Lord, and worthy friend,
What makes your Lordship thus alone in Kent,
And thus disguised in this strange attire?

Pow. My Lord, an unexpected accident
Hath at this time enforc'd me to these parts,
And thus it hapt. Not yet full five dayes since,
Now at the last assize at Hereford,
It chanc'd that the Lord Herbert and my self,
'Mongst other things discoursing at the Table,
To fall in speech about some certain points
Of Wickliff's doctrine 'gainst the Papacie,
And the Religion Catholick maintain'd
Through the most part of Europe at this day.
This wilfull testy Lord stuck not to say,
That Wickliff was a knave, a schismatick,
His Doctrine devilish and Heretical:
And whatsoere he was maintain'd the same,
Was Traitor both to God, and to his Countrey.
Being moved at his peremptory speech,
I told him, some maintain'd those opinions,
Men, and truer subjects then Lord Herbert was:
And he replying in comparisons,
Your name was urg'd, my Lord, against this challenge,
To be a perfect favorour of the truth.
And to be short, from words we fell to blows,
Our servants, and our Tenants taking parts.

Many

Many on both sides hurt: and for an hour
The broil by no means could be pacified,
Untill the Judges rising from the bench,
Were in their persons forc'd to part the fray.

Cob. I hope no man was violently slain.

Pow. Faith none I trust, but the Lord Herberts self,
Who is in truth so dangerously hurt,
As it is doubted he can hardly scape.

Cob. I am sorry, my good Lord, of these ill news.

Pow. This is the cause that drives me into Kent,
To shrowd my self with you so good a friend,
Untill I hear how things do speed at home.

Cob. Your Lordship is most welcome unto Cobham:
But I am very sorry, my good Lord,
My name was brought in question in this matter,
Considering I have many enemies,
That threaten malice, and do lye in wait
To take the vantage of the smallest thing.
But you are welcome, and repose your Lordship,
And keep your self here secret in my house,
Untill we hear how the Lord Herbert speeds:

Enter Harpool.

Here comes my man: sirrah, what news?

Har. Yonder's one M. Butler of the privie Chamber, is sent unto you from the King.

Pow. Pray God the Lord Herbert be not dead, and the King hearing whether I am gone, hath sent for me.

Cob. Comfort your self, my Lord, I warrant you,

Har. Fellow, what ayls thee? do'st thou quake? do'st thou shake? do'st thou tremble? ha?

Cob. Peace, you old fool: sirrah, convey this Gentleman in the back way, and bring the other into the walk.

Har. Come, sir, y'are welcome, if you love my Lord.

Pow. Gramercy, gentle friend. Exeunt.

Cob. I thought as much, that it would not be long before I heard of something from the King, about this matter.

Enter Harpool with M. Butler.

Har. Sir, yonder my Lord walks, you see him;
I'le have your men into the seller the while.

Cob. Welcome, good M. Butler.

But. Thanks, my good Lord: his Majesty doth commend his love unto your Lordship, and wills you to repair unto the Court.

Cob. God bless his Highness, and counfound his enemies, I hope his Majestie is well?

But. In good health, my Lord.

Cob. God long continue it: me thinks you look as though you were not well, what ayle ye, sir?

But. Faith I have had a foolish odde mischance, that angers me: coming over Shooters hill, there came one to me like a Sailor, and askt me money; and whilst I staid my horse to draw my purse, he takes th'advantage of a little bank, and leaps behind me, whips my purse away, and with a sudden jerk, I know not how, threw me at least three yards out of my saddle; I never was so rob'd in all my life.

Cob. I am very sorry, sir, for your mischance; we will send our warrant forth, to stay such suspitious persons as shall be found, they M. Butler we'll attend you.

But. I humbly thank your Lordship, I will attend you.

Enter the Sumner.

Sum. I have the Law to warrant what I do, and though the Lord Cobham be a Nobleman, that dispenses not with Law, I dare serve a Process were he five Noble men, though we Sumners make sometimes a mad slip in a corner with a pretty wench, a Sumner must not go alwaies by seeing: a man may be content to hide his eyes where he may feel his profit. Well, this is Lord Cobham's house, if I cannot speak with him, I'le clap my citation upon's door, so my Lord of Rochester bad me; but me thinks here comes one of his men.

Har. Welcome good fellow, welcome, who would'st thou speak with?

Sum. With my Lord Cobham I would speak, if thou be one of his men.

Har. Yes, I am one of his men, but thou can'st not speak with my Lord.

Sum. May I send to him then?

Har. I'le tell thee that, when I know thy errand,

Sum. I will not tell my errand to thee.

Har. Then keep it to thy self, and walk like a knave as thou camest.

Sum. I tell thee, my Lord keeps no knaves, sirrah.

Har. Then thou serv'st him not, I believe. What Lord is thy Master?

Sum. My Lord of Rochester.

Har. In good time: and what would'st thou have with my Lord Cobham?

Sum. I come by vertue of a Process, to scite him to appear before my Lord in the Court at Rochester.

Har. aside. Well, God grant me patience, I could eat this Counger. My Lord is not at home, therefore it were good Sumner, you carried your Process back.

Sum. Why, if he will not be spoken withall, then will I leave it here, and see that he take knowledge of it.

Hnr. Zounds you slave, do you set up your bills here; go too, take it down again. Do'st thou know what thou do'st? Do'st thou know on whom thou serv'st a Process?

Sum. Yes marry do I, on Sir John Oldcastle, Lord Cobham.

Har. I am glad thou knowest him yet; and sirrah, do'st not know that the Lord Cobham is a brave Lord, that keeps good Beef and Beer in his house, and every day feeds a hundred poor people at's Gate, and keeps a hundred tall fellows?

Sum. What's that to my Process?

Har. Marry this, sir, is this process parchment?

Sum. Yes marry is it.

Har. And this Seal wax?

Sum. It is so.

Har. If this be parchment, and this wax, eat you this parchment and this wax, or I will make parchment of your skin, and beat your brains into wax. Sirrah, Sumner, dispatch, devour sirrah, devour.

Sum. I am my Lord of Rochester's Sumner, I came to to do my office, and thou shalt answer it.

Har. Sirrah, no railing; but betake your self to your teeth, thou shalt eat no worse then thou bring'st with thee, thou bring'st it for my Lord, and wilt thou bring my Lord worse then thou wilt eat thy self?

Sum. Sir, I brought it not my Lord to eat.

Har. O do you sir me now; all's one for that, I'le make you eat it, for bringing it.

Rum. I cannot eat it.

Har. Can you not? sbloud I'le beat you till you have a stomack. Beats him.

Sum. O hold, hold, good M. Servingman, I will eat it.

Har. Be champing, be chawing, sir, or I'le chaw you, you rogue, the purest of the honey.

Sum. Tough wax is the purest hony.

Har. O Lord, sir, oh, oh,
Feed, feed, 'tis wholsome, Rogue, wholsome.
Cannot you like an honest Sumner, walk with the Devil your brother, to fetch in your Bailiff's rents; but you must come to a Noble mans house with processe? If thy Seal were as broad as the Lead that covers Rochester Church, thou should'st eat it.

Sum. O, I am almost choaked, I am almost choaked.

Har. Who's within there? will you shame my Lord, is there no beer in the house? Butler I say.

But. Here, here. Ent. Butler.

Har. Give him beer. He drinks.
There: tough old sheepskins, bare dry meat.

Sum. O sir, let me go no further, I'le eat my word.

Har. Yea marry sir, I mean ye shall eat more then your own word, for I'le make you eat all the words in the Process. Why you drab-monger, cannot the secrets of all the wenches in a Shire serve your turn, but you must come hither with a citation with a pox? I'le cite you.
A cup of Sack for the Sumner.

But. Here, sir, here.

Har. Here, slave, I drink to thee.

Sum. I thank you, sir.

Har. Now if thou find'st thy stomack well, because thou shalt see my Lord keeps meat in's house, if thou wilt go in, thou shalt have a piece of beef to thy break-fast.

Sum. No I am very well, good M. Servingman, I thank you, very well, sir.

Har. I am glad on't, then be walking towards Rochester to keep your stomack warme. And Sumner, If I do know you disturb a good wench within this Diocesse, if I do not make thee eat her petticoat, if there were four yards of Kentish cloth in't, I am a villain.

Sum. God be w'ye, M. Servingman. Exit.

Har. Farewell, Sumner Enter Constable.

Con. Save you, M. Harpool.

Har. Welcome Constable, welcome Constable, what news with thee?

Con. And't please you, M. Harpool, I am to make hue and cry for a fellow with one eye, that has rob'd two Clothiers, and am to crave your hindrance to search all suspected places; and they say there was a woman in the company.

Har. Hast thou been at the Ale-house? hast thou sought there?

Con. I durst not search in my Lord Cobham's liberty, except I had some of his servants for my warrant.

Har. An honest Constable, call forth him that keeps the Ale-house there.

Con. Ho, who's within there?

Ale-m. Who calls there? Oh is't you, M. Constable, and M. Harpool? y'are welcome with all my heart, what make you here so early this morning?

Har. Sirra, what strangers do you lodge? there is a robbery done this morning, and we are to search for all suspected persons.

Ale-man. Gods bores, I am sorry for't. Ifaith, sir, I lodge no body but a good honest Priest, call'd Sir John a Wrotham, and a handsome woman that is his Neece, that he saies has some suit in law for, and as they go up and down to London, sometimes they lye at my house.

Har. What, is she here in thy house now?

Ale-m. She is, sir: I promise you, sir, he is a quiet man, and because he will not trouble too many rooms, he makes the woman lye every night at his beds feet.

Har. Bring her forth, Constable, bring her forth, let's see her, let's see her.

Ale-m. Dorothy, you must come down to M. Constable.

Dol. Anon forsooth. She enters.

Har. Welcome, sweet Lasse, welcome.

Dol. I thank you, good sir, and M. Constable also.

Har. A plump girle by the Masse, a plump girle: ha, Dol, ha. Wilt thou forsake the Priest, and go with me Doll?

Con. A well said M. Harpool, you are a merry old man ifaith; you will never be old now by the mack, a pretty wench indeed.

Har. Ye old mad merry Constable, art thou advis'd of that? Ha, well said Doll, fill some Ale here.

Doll aside. Oh if I wist this old Priest would not stick to me, by Jove I would ingle this old serving-man.

Har. Oh you old mad colt, ifaith I'le serk you: fill all the pots in the house there.

Con. Oh well said M. Harpool, you are heart of oak when all's done.

Harp. Ha Dol, thou hast a sweet pair of lips by the Masse.

Dol. Truly you are a most sweet old man, as ever I saw; by my troth, you have a face able to make any woman in love with you.

Har. Fill, sweet Doll, I'le drink to thee.

Doll. I pledge you, sir, and thank you therefore, and I pray you let it come.

Harp. Imbracing her. Doll, canst thou love me? a mad merry Lasse, would to God I had never seen thee.

Dol. I warrant you, you will not out of my thoughts this twelvemonth, truly you are as full of favour, as any man may be. Ah these sweet gray locks, by my troth, they are most lovely.

Con. Cuds bores, M. Harpool, I'le have one buss too.

Har. No licking for you, Constable, hand off, hand off.

Con. Berlady I love kissing as well as you.

Dol. Oh you are an odde boy, you have a wanton eye of your own: ah you sweet sugar-lipt wanton, you will win as many womens hearts as come in your company.

Enter Priest.

Priest. Doll, come hither.

Har. Priest, she shall not.

Dol. I'le come anon, sweet love.

Priest. Hand off, old fornicator.

Har. Vicar, I'le sit here in spight of thee, is this stuff for a Priest to carry up and down with him?

Priest. Sirra, do'st thou not know that a good fellow parson may have a chappel of ease, where his parish Church is far off?

Har. You whorson ston'd Vicar.

Priest. You old stale Ruffin, you Lion of Cotsoll.

Har. Zounds, Vicar, I'le geld you. Flies upon him.

Con. Keep the Kings peace.

Dol. Murder, murder, murder.

Ale-m. Hold, as you are men, hold; for Gods sake be quiet: put up your weapons, you draw not in my house.

Har. You whorson bawdy Priest.

Priest. You old mutton-monger.

Con. Hold, Sir John, hold.

Dol. I pray thee, sweet heart, be quiet, I was but sitting to drink a pot of Ale with him, even as kind a man as ever I met with.

Har. Thou art a Thief, I warrant thee.

Priest. Then I am but as thou hast been in thy dayes, let's not be ashamed of our Trade, the King has been a Thief himself.

Doll.

Dol. Come, be quiet, haſt thou ſped?
Pri. I have wench, here be crowns ifaith.
Dol. Come, let's be all friends then.
Con. Well ſaid Miſtris Dorothy.
Har. Thou art the maddeſt Prieſt that ever I met with.
Pri. Give me thy hand, thou art as good a fellow: I am a ſinger, a drinker, a bencher, a wencher; I can ſay a Maſſe, and kiſſe a Laſſe: Faith, I have a Parſonage, and becauſe I would not be at too much charges, this wench ſerveth me for a Sexton.
Harp. Well ſaid mad Prieſt, we'll in and be friends.
Exeunt.

Enter Sir Roger Acton, M. Bourn, M. Beverley, and William Murley the Brewer of Dunſtable.

Acton. Now M. Murley, I am well aſſur'd
You know our errant, and do like the cauſe?
Being a man affected as we are?
Mur. Marry God dild ye dainty my dear: No Maſter, good Sir Roger Acton, M. Bourn, and M. Beverley, Gentlemen and Juſtices of the Peace, no Maſter, I, but plain William Murley the Brewer of Dunſtable, your honeſt neighbour and your friend, if ye be men of my profeſſion.
Bev. Profeſſed friends to Wickliff; foes to Rome.
Mur. Hold by me, Lad, lean upon that ſtaff, good Maſter Beverley, all of a houſe, ſay your mind, ſay your mind.
Acton. You know our faction now is grown ſo great
Throughout the Realm, that it begins to ſmoak
Into the Clergies eyes, and the King's ears,
High time it is that we were drawn to head,
Our General and Officers appointed.
And warrs ye wot, will ask great ſtore of coyn,
Able to ſtrength our action with your purſe,
You are elected for a Colonel
Over a Regiment of fifteen Bands.
Mur. Fue, paltry, paltry, in and out, to and fro, be it more or leſſe upon occaſion, Lord have mercy upon us, what a world is this? Sir Roger Acton, I am but a Dunſtable man, a plain Brewer, ye know: will luſty caveliering Captains (Gentlemen) come at my calling, go at my bidding? Dainty my deer, they'll do a dog of wax, a horſe of cheeſe, a prick and a pudding; no, no, ye muſt appoint ſome Lord or Knight at leaſt, to that place.
Bour. Why, Maſter Murley, you ſhall be a Knight:
Were you not in election to be Sheriff?
Have ye not paſt all Offices but that?
Have ye not wealth to make your wife a Lady?
I warrant you, my Lord, our General
Beſtows that honour on you, at firſt ſight.
Mur. Marry God dild ye dainty my dear:
But tell me, who ſhall be our General?
Where's the Lord Cobham, Sir John Old-caſtle
That noble almſe-giver, houſe-keeper, vertuous,
Religious Gentleman? Come to me there boyes,
Come to me there.
Acton. Why who but he ſhall be our General?
Mur. And ſhall he Knight me, and make me Colonel?
Act. My word for that, Sir William Murley Knight.
Mur. Fellow Sir Roger Acton Knight, all fellows I mean in armes, how ſtrong are we? how many partners? Our enemies beſide the King are mighty, be it more or leſſe upon occaſion, reckon our force.
Act. There are of us our friends and followers,
Three thouſand and three hundred at the leaſt:
Of Northern lads four thouſand, beſide horſe,
From Kent there comes with Sir John Old-caſtle
Seven thouſand: then from London iſſue out,
Of Maſters, ſervants, ſtrangers, prentiſes,
Forty odde thouſands into Ficket field,
Where we appoint our ſpecial Randevouze.
Mur. Fue, paltry, paltry, in and out, to and fro, Lord have mercy upon us, what a world is this? Where's that Ficket field, Sir Roger.
Act. Behind S. Giles in the field, near Holborn.
Mur. Newgate, up Holborn, S. Giles in the field, and to Tyburn, an old ſaw. For the day, for the day?
Act. On Friday next, the fourteenth day of January.
Mur. Tilly vally, truſt me never If I have any liking of that day. Fue, paltry, paltry, Friday quoth a, diſmal day, Childermas day this year was Friday.
Bev. Nay M. Murley, if you obſerve ſuch dayes,
We make ſome queſtion of your conſtancie,
All dayes are alike to men reſolv'd in right.
Mur. Say Amen, and ſay no more, but ſay and hold Maſter Beverley: Friday next, and Ficket field, and William Murley and his merry men ſhall be all one: I have halfe a ſcore jades that draw my Beer Carts, and every jade ſhall bear a knave, and every knave ſhall wear a jack, and every jack ſhall have a ſcull, and every ſcull ſhall ſhew a ſpear, and every ſpear ſhall kill a foe at Ficket field, at Ficket field: John and Tom, Dick and Hodge, Rafe and Robbin, William and George, and all my knaves ſhall fight like men, at Ficket field, on Friday next.
Bour. What ſum of money mean you to diſburſe?
Mur. It may be modeſtly, decently, and ſoberly, and handſomely I may bring five hundred pound.
Act. Five hundred, man? five thouſand's not enough,
A hundred thouſand will not pay our men
Two month's together, either come prepar'd
Like a brave knight, and martial Colonel,
In glittering gold, and gallant Furniture,
Bringing in Coin, a Cart-load at leaſt,
And all your followers mounted on good horſe,
Or never come diſgracefull to us all.
Bev. Perchance you may be choſen Treaſurer,
Ten thouſand pound's the leaſt that you can bring.
Mur. Paltry, paltry, in and out, to and fro: upon occaſion I have ten thouſand pound to ſpend, and ten too. And rather then the Biſhop ſhall have his will of me for my Conſcience, it ſhall all. Flame and flax, flax and flame. It was got with water and Malt, and it ſhall flye with fire and Gun-powder. Sir Roger, a Cart-load of money till the Axletree crack; my ſelf and my men in Ficket field on Friday next: remember my Knight-hood and my place: there's my hand I'le be there. Exit.
Act. See what ambition may perſwade men to,
In hope of honour he will ſpend himſelf.
Bour. I never thought a Brewer halfe ſo rich.
Bev. Was never bankerout Brewer yet but one,
With uſing too much Malt, too little water.
Act. That's no fault in Brewers now adayes:
Come, away about our buſineſs. Exeunt.

Enter King Harry, Suffolk, M. Butler, Old-caſtle kneeling to the King.

King. 'Tis not enough, Lord Cobham, to ſubmit,
You muſt forſake your groſſe opinion;
The Biſhops find themſelves much injured,
And though for ſome good ſervice you have don',
We for our part are pleas'd to pardon you,
Yet they will not ſo ſoon be ſatisfied.
Cob. My gracious Lord, unto your Majeſty,

Next unto my God, I owe my life;
And what is mine, either by Natures gift,
Or fortunes bounty, all is at your service,
But for obedience to the Pope of Rome,
I ow him none; nor shall his shaveling Priests
That are in England, alter my belief,
If out of holy Scripture they can prove
That I am in an error, I will yield,
And gladly take instruction at their hands:
But otherwise, I do beseech your Grace,
My conscience may not be incroach'd upon.
King. We would be loath to press our subjects bodies.
Much lesse their souls, the deer redeemed part
Of him that is the Ruler of us all:
Yet let me counsel you, that might command;
Do not presume to tempt them with ill words,
Nor suffer any meetings to be had
Within your house, but to the uttermost
Disperse the flocks of this new gathering sect.
Cob. My Liege, if any breath that dares come forth,
And say, my life in any of these points
Deserves th'attainder of ignoble thoughts:
Here stand I, craving no remorse at all,
But even the utmost rigour may be shown.
King. Let it suffice we know your loyalty,
What have you there?
Cob. A Deed of clemency,
Your highnesse pardon for Lord Powes life,
Which I did beg, and you my Noble Lord,
Of gracious favour did vouchsafe to grant.
King. But yet it is not signed with our hand.
Cob. Not yet, my Liege.
King. The fact you say was done
Not of pretensed malice, but by chance.
Cob. Upon mine Honour so, no otherwise. Writes.
King. There is his pardon, bid him make amends,
And cleanse his soul to God for his offence,
What we remit, is but the bodies scourge.
How now, Lord Bishop? Enter Bishop.
Bish. Justice dread Soveraigne,
As thou art King, so grant I may have Justice.
King. What means this exclamation? Let us know.
Bish. Ah, my good Lord, the State's abus'd,
And our Decrees most shamefully prophan'd.
King. How? Or by whom?
Bish. Even by this Heretick,
This Jew, this Traitor to your Majesty.
Cob. Prelate, thou lyest, even in thy greasie maw,
Or whosoever twit's me with the name
Of either Traitor, or of Heretick.
King. Forbear I say: and Bishop, shew the cause
From whence this late abuse hath been deriv'd.
Bish. Thus mighty King: by general consent
A messenger was sent to scite this Lord
To make appearance in the Consistory:
And coming to his house, a Ruffian slave,
One of his daily followers, met the man,
Who knowing him to be a Parator
Assaults him first, and after in contempt
Of us, and our proceedings, makes him eat
The written Process, parchment, Seal and all:
Whereby this matter neither was brought forth,
Nor we but scorn'd for our authority.
King. When was this done?
Bish. At six a clock this morning.
King. And when came you to Court?
Cob. Last night, my Liege.
King. By this it seems he is not guilty of it,
And you have done him wrong t'accuse him so.
Bish. But it was done, my Lord, by his appointment;
Or else his man durst not have been so bold.
King. Or else you durst be bold or interrupt
And fill our ears with frivolous complaints.
Is this the duty you do bear to us?
Was't not sufficient we did Passe our word
To send for him, but you misdoubting it,
Or which is worse, intending to forestall
Our Regal power, must likewise summon him?
This savours of Ambition, not of zeal,
And rather proves you malice his estate,
Then any way that he offends the Law.
Go too, we like it not: and he your Officer
Had his desert for being insolent,
Enter Huntington.
That was imployed so much amisse herein.
So Cobham when you please, you may depart.
Cob. I humbly bid farewell unto my Liege. Exit.
King. Farewell: what's the news by Huntington?
Hun. Sir Roger Acton, and a crew (my Lord)
Of bold sedetious Rebells, are in Armes,
Intending reformation of Religion.
And with their Army they intend to pitch
In Ficket field, unlesse they be repuls'd.
King. So near our presence? Dare they be so bold?
And will proud War and eager thirst of bloud,
Whom we had thought to entertain far off,
Press forth upon us in our Native bounds?
Must we be forc'd to hansel our sharp blades
In England here, which we prepar'd for France?
Well, a Gods name be it. What's their Number? say,
Or who's the chief Commander of this Rowt?
Hun. Their number is not known, as yet my Lord,
But 'tis reported, Sir John Oldcastle
Is the chief man, on whom they do depend.
King. How? the Lord Cobham?
Hun. Yes, my gracious Lord.
Bish. I could have told your Majesty as much
Before he went, but that I saw your Grace
Was too much blinded by his flattery.
Suf. Send post, my Lord, to fetch him back again.
Bur. Traitor unto his Country, how he smooth'd
And seem'd as innocent as Truth it self?
King. I cannot think it yet he would be false:
But if he be, no matter, let him go,
We'll meet both him and them unto their woe.
Bish. This falls out well, and at the last I hope
To see this heretick die in a rope. Exeunt.
Enter Earle of Cambridge, Lord Scroop, Gray, and Chartres the French Factor.
Scr. Once more, my Lord of Cambridge, make rehersal
How you do stand intitled to the Crown,
The deeper shall we print it in our minds,
And every man the better be resolv'd,
When he perceiv's his quarrel to be just.
Cam. Then thus, Lord Scroop, Sir Thomas Grey & you
Mounsieur de Chartes, Agent for the French.
This Lionel Duke of Clarence (as I said)
Third son of Edward (England's King) the third,
Had issue Philip his sole daughter and heir;
Which Philip, afterward was given in marriage
To Edmund Mortimer the Earle of March,
And by him had a son call'd Roger Mortimer;

Which

Which Roger likewise had of his descent,
Edmund, Roger, Anne, and Elianor,
Two Daughters and two Sons, but of those, three
Di'd without issue: Anne, that did survive,
And now was left her Fathers onely Heir,
By fortune was to marry, Being too
By my Grandfather of King Edward's Line:
So of his Sir-name, I am cal'd you know.
Richard Plantaginet, my Father was,
Edward the Duke of York, and son and heir
To Edmund Langley, Edward the third's first son.
Scro. So that it seems your claim comes by your wife,
As lawfull heir to Roger Mortimer
The son of Edmund, which did marry Phillip
Daughter and heir to Lyonel Duke of Clarence.
Cam. True, for this Harry, and his father both
Harry the first, as plainly doth appear,
Are false intruders, and usurp the Crown.
For when young Richard was at Pomfret slain,
In him the Title of Prince Edward di'd,
That was the eldest of King Edward's sons:
William of Hatfield, and their second brother,
Death in his nonage had before bereft:
So that my wife deriv'd from Lionel
Third son unto King Edward, ought proceed
And take possession of the Diadem
Before this Harry, or his Father King,
Who fetch their Title but from Lancaster,
Forth of that royal line. And being thus,
What reason is't, but she should have her right?
Scro. I am resolv'd, our enterprize is just.
Gray. Harry shall die or else resigne his Crown.
Chart. Performe but that, and Charles the King of (France
Shall aid you Lords, not only with his men,
But send yor money to maintain your warrs:
Five hundred thousand Crowns he bad me proffer,
If you can stop but Harrie's voyage for France.
Scr. We never had a fitter time then now,
The Realme in such division as it is.
Cam. Besides you must perswade you, there is due
Vengeance for Richards murther, which although
It be deferr'd, yet will it fall at last,
And now as likely as another time.
Sin hath had many years to ripen in,
And now the harvest cannot be far off,
Wherein the weeds of usurpation
Are to be cropt, and cast into the fire.
Scr. No more, Earle Cambridge, here I plight my faith,
To set up thee, and thy renowned wife.
Gray. Gray will performe the same, as he is Knight.
Chart. And to assist ye, as I said before,
Chartres doth 'gage the honour of his King.
Scr. We lack but now Lord Cobham's fellowship,
And then our plot were absolute indeed.
Cam. Doubt not of him, my Lord, his life's pursu'd
By th'incensed Clergy, and of late
Brought in displeasure with the King, assures
He may be quickly won unto our faction.
Who hath the Articles were drawn at large
Of our whole purpose?
Gray. That have I, my Lord.
Cam. We should not now be far off from his house,
Our serious Conference hath beguild the way:
See where his Castle stands, give me the writing.
When we are come unto the speech of him,
Because we will not stand to make recount
Of that which hath been said, here he shall read
Our minds at large, and what we crave of him.

Enter Cobham.

Scr. A ready way: here comes the man himself
Booted and spurr'd, it seems he hath been riding.
Cam. Well met, Lord Cobham.
Cob. My Lord of Cambridge?
Your Honour is most welcome into Kent,
And all the rest of this fair company.
I am new come from London, gentle Lords:
But will ye not take Cowling for your Host,
And see what entertainment it affords?
Cam. We were intended to have been your guests:
But now this lucky meeting shall suffice
To end our business, and deferre that kindesse.
Cob. Business my Lord? what business should
Let you to be merry? we have no delicates;
Yet this I'le promise you, a piece of Venison,
A cup of wine, and so forth, hunters fare:
And if you please, we'll strike the stag our selves
Shall fill our dishes with his well-fed flesh.
Scro. That is indeed the thing we all desire.
Cob. My Lords, and you shall have your choice with me.
Cam. Nay but the Stag which we desire to strike,
Lives not in Cowling: if you will consent,
And go with us, we'll bring you to a Forrest,
Where runs a lusty heard: among the which
There is a Stag superiour to the rest;
A stately beast, that when his fellows run
He leads the race, and beats the sullen earth,
As though he scorn'd it with his trampling hoofs,
Aloft he bears his head, and with his brest
Like a huge bulwark counter-checks the wind:
And when he standeth still, he stretcheth forth
His proud ambitious neck, as if he meant
To wound the firmament with forked horns.
Cob. 'Tis pitty such a goodly beast should die.
Cam. Not so, Sir John, for he is tyranous,
And gores the other Deer, and will not keep
Within the limits are appointed him.
Of late he's broke into a several,
Which doth belong to me, and there he spoiles
Both corn and pasture, two of his wild race
Alike for stealth, and covetous incroaching,
Already are remov'd; if he were dead,
I should not only be secure from hurt,
But with his body make a royal feast.
Scro. How say you then, will you first hunt with us?
Cob. Faith Lords, I like the pastime, where's the place?
Cam. Peruse this writing, it will shew you all,
And what occasion we have for the sport. He reads.
Cob. Call ye this hunting, my Lords? Is this the Stag
You fain would chase, Harry our dread King?
So we may make a banquet for the devil?
And in the stead of wholsome meat, prepare
A dish of poison to confound our selves.
Cam. Why so, Lord Cobham? See you not our claim?
And how imperiously he holds the Crown?
Scro. Besides, you know your self is in disgrace,
Held as a recreant, and pursu'd to death.
This will defend you from your enemies,
And stablish your Religion through the Land.
Cob. Notorious treason! yet I will conceal Aside.
My secret thoughts, to sound the depth of it.
My Lord of Cambridge, I do see your claim,
And what good may redound unto the Land,

By prosecuting of this enterprize.
But where are men? where's power and furniture
To order such an action? we are weak,
Harry, you know's a mighty Potentate.
Cam. Tut, we are strong enough; you are belov'd,
And many will be glad to follow you,
We are the like, and some will follow us:
Nay, there is hope from France: here's an Ambassador
That promiseth both men and money too.
The Commons likewise (as we hear) pretend
A sudden tumult, we will joyn with them.
Cob. Some likelyhood, I must confesse, to speed:
But how shall I believe this in plain truth?
You are (my Lords) such men as live in Court,
And have been highly favoured of the King,
Especially Lord Scroop, whom oftentimes
He maketh choice for his bed-fellow.
And you, Lord Gray, are of his privy Counsel:
Is not this a train laid to intrap my life?
Cam. Then perish may my soul: what, think you so?
Scr. We'll swear to you.
Gray. Or take the Sacrament.
Cob. Nay you are Noble men, and I imagine,
As you are honourable by birth, and bloud,
So you will be in heart, in thought, in word.
I crave no other testimony but this.
That you would all subscribe, and set your hands
Unto this writing which you gave to me.
Cam. With all our hearts: who hath any pen and ink?
Scr. My pocket should have one; O, here it is.
Cam. Give it me, Lord Scroop. There is my name.
Scr. And there is my name.
Gray. And mine.
Cob. Sir, let me crave that would likewise write your name with theirs, for confirmation of your Masters words the King of France.
Char. That will I, Noble Lord.
Cob. So, now this action is well knit together;
And I am for you; where's our meeting, Lords?
Cam. Here if you please, the tenth of July next.
Cob. In Kent? agreed. Now let us in to supper,
I hope your honours will not away to night.
Cam. Yes presently, for I have far to ride,
About soliciting of other friends.
Scr. And we would not be absent from the Court,
Lest thereby grow suspition in the King.
Cob. Yet taste a cup of wine before ye go.
Cam. Not now, my Lord, we thank you: so farewel. Exit.
Cob. Farewell, my Noble Lords. My Noble Lords?
My noble villains, base Conspirators,
How can they look his Highnesse in the face,
Whom they so closely study to betray?
But I'le not sleep until I make it known,
This head shall not be burthen'd with such thoughts,
Nor in this heart will I conceal a deed
Of such impiety against my King.
Madam, how now?

Enter Harpool, and the rest.

La. Cob. Y'are welcome home, my Lord:
Why seem ye so unquiet in your looks?
What hath befaln you that disturbs your mind?
La. Powis. Bad news I am afraid touching my husband.
Cob. Madam, not so: there is your husband's pardon;
Long may ye live, each joy unto the other.
La. Po. So great a kindnesse, as I know not how to reply, my sense is quite confounded.
Cob. Let that alone: and Madam stay me not,
For I must back unto the Court again,
With all the speed I can: Harpool, my horse.
L. Cob. So soon my Lord? what will you ride all night?
Cob. All night or day, it must be so sweet wife;
Urge me not why, or what my businesse is,
But get you in: Lord Powes, bear with me.
And Madam, think your welcome ne're the worse,
My house is at your use. Harpool, away.
Har. Shall I attend your Lordship to the Court?
Cob. Yea sir, your Gelding, mount you presently. Exit.
La. Cob. I prythee Harpool look unto thy Lord,
I do not like this sudden posting back.
Po. Some earnest businesse is a-foot belike,
What ere it be, pray God be his good guide.
La. Po. Amen, that hath so highly us bested.
La. Cob. Come Madam & my Lord, we'll hope the best,
You shall not into Wales till he return.
Pow. Though great occasion be we should depart, yet, Madam, will we stay to be resolv'd of this unlookt for doubtfull accident. Exeunt.

Enter Murley and his men, prepared in some filthy order for war.

Mur. Come my hearts of flint, modestly, decently, soberly, and handsomly; no man afore his Leader: follow your Master, your Captain, your Knight that shall-be, for the honour of Meal-men, Millers, and Malt-men, dun is the mouse: Dick and Tom for the credit of Dunstable, ding down the Enemy to morrow. Ye shall not come into the field like beggars. Where be Leonard and Lawrence my two Loaders? Lord have mercy upon us, what a world is this? I would give a couple of shillings for a dozen of good Feathers for ye, and fourty pence for as many Scarffes to set ye out withall. Frost and snow, a man has no heart to fight till he be brave.
Dick. Master, we are no babes, our town foot-balls can bear witnesse: this little parrel we have shall off, and we'll fight naked before we run away.
Tom. Nay, I'me of Lawrence mind for that, for he means to leave his life behind him, he and Leonard, your two Loaders are making their Wills because they have wives, now we Batchellors bid our friends scramble for our goods if we dye: but Master, pray let me ride upon Cut.
Mur. Meal and salt, wheat and Malt, fire and tow, frost and snow, why Tom thou shalt. Let me see, here are you, William and George are with my Cart, and Robin and Hodge holding my own two Horses; proper men, handsome men, tall men, true men.
Dick. But Master, Master, me thinks you are mad to hazard your own person, and a cart-load of money too.
Tom. Yea, and Master there's a worse matter in't; if it be as I heard say, we go fight against all the learned Bishops, that should give us their blessing, and if they curse us, we shall speed nere the better.
Dick. Nay birlady, some say the King takes their part, and Master dare you fight against the King.
Mur. Fie paltry, paltry, in and out, to and fro upon occasion, if the King be so unwise to come there, we'll fight with him too.
Tom. What if ye should kill the King?
Mur. Then we'll make another.
Dick. Is that all? do ye not speak Treason?
Mur. If we do, who dare trip us? We come to fight for our conscience, and for honour: little know you what is in my bosome, look here mad knaves, a pair of gilt Spurres.

Tom. A

Tom. A pair of golden ſpurs? why do you not put them on your heels? your bolome's no place for ſpurs.

Mur. Be't more or leſſe upon occaſion, Lord have mercy upon us, Tom th'art a fool, and thou ſpeak'ſt treaſon to Knight-hood: dare any wear gold or ſilver ſpurrs till he be a Knight? No, I ſhall be knighted to morrow, and then they ſhall on: Sirs, was it ever read in the Church book of Dunſtable, that ever Malt-man was made Knight?

Tom. No but you are more: you are Meal-man, Malt-man, Miller, Corn-Maſter and all.

Dick. Yea, and half a Brewer too, and the devil and all for wealth: you bring more money with you, then all the reſt.

Mur. The more's my honour, I ſhall be a Knight to morrow. Let me ſpoſe my men, Tom upon Cut, Dick upon Hob, Hodge upon Ball, Raph upon Sorel, and Robin upon the fore-horſe.

Enter Acton, Bourn, and Beverley.

Tom. Stand, who comes there?

Act. All friends, good fellow.

Mur. Friends and fellows indeed, Sir Roger.

Act. Why thus you ſhew your ſelf a Gentleman,
To keep your day, and come ſo well prepar'd.
Your Cart ſtands yonder, guarded by your men,
Who tell me it is loaden well with Coin,
What ſumme is there?

Mur. Ten thouſand pound, Sir Roger, and modeſtly, decently, ſoberly, and handſomely, ſee what I have here againſt I be Knighted.

Act. Gilt ſpurrs? 'Tis well.

Mur. Where's our Army, ſir?

Act. Diſperſt in ſundry villages about;
Some here with us in Hygate, ſome at Finchley,
Totnam, Enfield, Edmunton, Newington,
Iſlington, Hogsdone, Pancredge, Kenzington,
Some nearer Thames, Ratcliff, Blackwall, and Bow:
But our chief ſtrength muſt be the Londoners,
Which ere the Sun to morrow ſhine,
Will be near fifty thouſand in the field.

Mur. Marry God dild ye dainty my dear, but upon occaſion Sir Roger Acton, doth not the King know of it, and gather his power againſt us?

Act. No, he's ſecure at Eltham.

Mur. What do the Clergy?

Act. Fear extreamly, yet prepare no force.

Mur. In and out, to and fro, bully my boykin, we ſhall carry the world afore us, I vow by my worſhip, when I am Knighted, we'll take the King napping, if he ſtand on their part.

Act. This night we few in Hygate will repoſe,
With the firſt Cock we'll riſe and arme our ſelves,
To be in Ficket field by break of day,
And there expect our General.

Mur. Sir John Oldcaſtle, what if he come not?

Bour. Yet our action ſtands,
Sir Roger Acton may ſupply his place.

Mur. True M. Bourn, but who ſhall make me Knight?

Bev. He that hath power to be our General.

Act. Talk not of trifles, come let's away,
Our friends of London long till it be day. Exeunt.

Enter Prieſt and Doll.

Doll. By my troth, thou art as jealous a man as lives.

Prieſt. Canſt thou blame me, Doll, thou art my Lands, my Goods, my Jewels, my Wealth, my purſe, none walks within forty miles of London, but a plies thee as truly, as the Pariſh does the poor mans box.

Doll. I am as true to thee, as the ſtone is in the wall, and thou know'ſt well enough, I was in as good doing, when I came to thee, as any wench need to be: and therefore thou haſt tryed me that thou haſt: and I will not be kept as I ha bin, that I will not.

Prieſt. Doll, if this blade hold, there's not a Pedler walks with a pack, but thou ſhalt as boldly chooſe of his wares, as with thy ready mony in a Merchants ſhop, we'll have as good ſilver as the King coins any.

Doll. What is all the Gold ſpent you took the laſt day from the Courtier?

Prieſt. 'Tis gone Doll, 'tis flown; merrily come, merrily gone; he comes a horſe back that muſt pay for all; we'll have as good meat as mony can get, and as good gowns as can be bought for gold, be merry wench, the Malt-man comes on Monday.

Doll. You might have left me at Cobham, untill you had been better provided for.

Prieſt. No ſweet Doll, no, I like not that, yon old Ruffian is not for the Prieſt: I do not like a new Cleark ſhould come in the old Bel-fry.

Doll. Thou art a mad Prieſt ifaith.

Prieſt. Come Doll, I'le ſee thee ſafe at ſome Ale-houſe here at Cray, and the next ſheep that comes ſhall leave behind his fleece. Exeunt.

Enter the King, Suffolk, and Butler.

K. in great haſt. My Lord of Suffolk, poſt away for life,
And let our forces of ſuch horſe and foot,
As can be gathered up by any means.
Make ſpeedy randevouze in Tuttle fields,
It muſt be done this evening my Lord,
This night the Rebels mean to draw to head
Near Iſlington, which if your ſpeed prevent not,
If once they ſhould unite their ſeveral forces,
Their power is almoſt thought invincible,
Away my Lord, I will be with you ſoon.

Suff. I go, my Soveraigne, with all happy ſpeed. Exit.

Kin. Make haſt, my Lord of Suffolk, as you love us.
Butler, poſt you to London with all ſpeed:
Command the Maior and Sheriffs on their allegeance,
The City gates be preſently ſhut up,
And guarded with a ſtrong ſufficient watch,
And not a man be ſuffered to paſſe,
Without a ſpecial Warrant from our ſelf.
Command the Poſtern by the Tower be kept,
And Proclamation on the pain of death,
That not a Citizen ſtir from his doors,
Except ſuch as the Mayor and Sheriffs ſhall chooſe
For their own guard, and ſafety of their perſons:
Butler away, have care unto my charge.

But. I go, my Soveraigne.

King. Butler.

But. My Lord.

Kin. Go down by Greenwitch, and command a boat,
At the Friars Bridge attend my coming down.

But. I will, my Lord. Exit Butler.

King. It's time I think to look unto Rebellion,
When Acton doth expect unto his aid,
No leſſe then fifty thouſand Londoners.
Well, I'le to Weſtminſter in this diſguiſe,
To hear what news is ſtirring in theſe brawls.

Enter Prieſt.

Prieſt. Stand true-man, ſayes a Thief.

King. Stand Thief ſayes a true-man: how if a Thief?

Pri. Stand

Pri. Stand Thief too.

Kin. Then thief or true-man, I must stand I see, howsoever the world wags, the trade of thieving yet will never down. What art thou?

Pri. A good fellow.

Kin. So I am too, I see thou dost know me.

Pri. If thou be a good fellow, play the good fellowes part, deliver thy purse without more adoe.

King. I have no money.

Pri. I must make you finde some before we part, if you have no money you shall have ware, as many sound blowes as your skin can carry.

Kin. Is that the plain truth?

Pri. Sirrha, no more adoe; come, come, give me the money you have. Dispatch, I cannot stand all day.

Kin. Well, if thou wilt needs have it, there it is: just the Proverbe, one thief robs another. Where the Devil are all my old thieves? Falstaffe that villain is so fat, he cannot get on's Horse, but me thinks Poynes and Peto should be stirring hereabouts.

Pri. How much is there on't of thy word?

Kin. A hundred pound in Angels, on my word.
The time has been I would have done as much
For thee, if thou hadst past this way, as I have now.

Pri. Sirrha, what art thou? thou seem'st a Gentleman?

Kin. I am no lesse, yet a poor one now, for thou hast all my money.

Pri. From whence cam'st thou?

Kin. From the Court at Eltham.

Pri. Art thou one of the King's Servants?

Kin. Yes that I am, and one of his Chamber.

Pri. I am glad th'art no worse: thou may'st the better spare thy money, and think thou might'st get a poor Thief his pardon if he should have need.

Kin. Yes that I can.

Pri. Wilt thou doe so much for me, when I shall have occasion?

Kin. Yes faith will I, so it be for no murther.

Pri. Nay, I am a pittifull thief, all the hurt I do a man, I take but his purse, I'le kill no man.

Kin. Then of my word I'le do't.

Pri. Give me thy hand of the same.

Kin. There 'tis.

Pri. Me thinks the King should be good to Thieves, because he has bin a thief himself, although I think now he be turned a true-man.

Kin. Faith I have heard indeed h'as had an ill name that way in's youth: but how canst thou tell that he has been a thief?

Pri. How? because he once robb'd me before I fell to the trade my self, when that foul villanous guts, that led him to all that Roguery, was in's company there, that Falstaffe.

King aside. Well, if he did rob thee then, thou art but even with him now I'le be sworn: Thou knowest not the King now I think, if thou sawest him?

Pri. Not I, ifaith.

King aside. So it should seem.

Pri. Well, if old King Harry had liv'd, this King that is now, had made thieving the best trade in England.

King. Why so?

Pri. Because he was the chief Warden of our Company, it's pitty that e're he should have been a King, he was so brave a thief. But sirrha, wilt remember my pardon if need be?

King. Yes faith will I.

Pri. Wilt thou? well then, because thou shalt go safe, for thou may'st hap (being so early) be met with again, before thou come to Southwarke, if any man when he should bid thee good morrow, bid the stand, say thou but sir John, and they will let thee passe.

King. Is that the word? then let me alone.

Pri. Nay sirrha, because I think indeed I shall have some occasion to use thee, and as thou comm'st oft this way, I may light on thee another time not knowing thee, here I'le break this Angel, take thou half of it, this is a token betwixt thee and me.

King. God a mercy: farewell. Exit.

Pri. O my fine golden slaves, here's for thee, wench, ifaith. Now, Doll, we will revell in our Bever, this is a Tythe Pig of my Vicarage. God a mercy, neighbour Shooters-hill, you ha paid your Tythe honestly. Well, I hear there is a company of Rebels up against the King, got together in Ficket-field near Holborn, and as it is thought, here in Kent, the King will be there to night in's own person: well, I'le to the Kings Camp, and it shall go hard, if there be any doings but I'le make some good boot among them. Exit.

Enter King Henry, Suffolk, Huntington, and two with Lights.

King. My Lords of Suffolk and of Huntington,
Who scouts it now? or who stands sentinels?
What men of worth? what Lords do walk the round?

Suf. May't please your Highnesse.

King. Peace, no more of that,
The King's asleep, wake not his Majesty,
With termes nor Titles; he's at rest in bed,
Kings do not use to watch themselves, they sleep,
And let rebellion and conspiracy
Revel and havock in the Commonwealth.
Is London look'd unto?

Hun. It is, my Lord:
Your noble Uncle Exeter is there,
Your Brother Gloucester, and my Lord of Warwick,
Who with the Mayor and the Aldermen
Do guard the Gates, and keep good rule within.
The Earl of Cambridge, and sir Thomas Gray
Do walk the round, Lord Scroop and Butler scout,
So though it please your Majesty to jest,
Were you in bed, well might you take your rest.

King. I thank ye Lords: but you do know of old,
That I have been a perfect night-walker:
London, you say, is safely lookt unto,
Alas, poor Rebels, there your aid must fail,
And the Lord Cobham Sir John Oldcastle,
Quiet in Kent, Acton, ye are deceiv'd:
Reckon again, you count without your Hoste.
To morrow you shall give account to us,
Till when, my friends, this long cold winters night
How can we spend? King Harry is asleep,
And all his Lords, these garments tell us so:
All friends at Foot-ball, fellowes all in field,
Harry, and Dick, and George, bring us a Drumme,
Give us square Dice, we'll keep this Court of Guard,
For all good fellowes companies that come.
Where's that mad Priest ye told me was in Armes
To fight, as well as pray, if need required.

Suf. He's in the Camp, and if he knew of this,
I undertake he would not be long hence.

King. Trip Dick, trip George.

Hun. I must have the Dice: what doe we play at?

Suf. Passage if ye please.

Hun.

Hunt. Set round then: so, at all.
Har. George, you are out.
Give me the Dice, I passe for twenty pound,
Here's to our lucky passage into France.
Hun. Harry, you passe indeed, for you sweep all.
Suf. A sign King Harry shall sweep all in France.

Enter Priest.

Pri. Edge ye good fellowes, take a fresh gamester in.
Har. Master Parson, we play nothing but gold?
Pri. And, fellow, I tell thee that the Priest hath gold, gold: what? ye are but beggarly soldiers to me, I think I have more gold then all you three.
Hun. It may be so, but we believe it not.
Har. Set, Priest, set, I passe for all that gold.
Pri. Ye passe indeed.
Har. Priest, hast any more?
Pri. More? what a question's that?
I tell thee I have more then all you three,
At these ten Angels.
Har. I wonder how thou com'st by all this gold.
How many Benefices hast thou, Priest?
Pri. Faith, but one, dost wonder how I come by gold? I wonder rather how poor soldiers should have gold: for I'le tell thee, good fellow, we have every day tythes, off'rings, christnings, weddings, burials: and you poor snakes come seldome to a booty. I'le speak a proud word, I have but one Parsonage, Wrotham, 'tis better then the Bishoprick of Rochester: there's ne're a hill, heath, nor down in all Kent, but 'tis in my Parish, Barrham-down, Chobham-down, Gads-hill, Wrotham-hill, Black-heath, Cocks-heath, Birchen-wood, all pay me tythe, gold quoth a? ye pas not for that.
Suf. Harry, ye are out; now, Parson, shake the Dice.
Pri. Set, set, I'le cover ye, at all: A plague on't I am out the Devil, and Dice, and a Wench, who will trust them?
Suf. Say'st thou so, Priest? set fair, at all for once.
Har. Out, sir, pay all.
Pri. Sir, pay me Angel gold,
I'le none of your crackt French Crownes nor Pistolets,
Pay me fair Angel gold, as I pay you.
King. No crackt French Crownes? I hope to see more crackt French Crownes ere long.
Pri. Thou mean'st of French-mens Crownes, when the King's in France.
Hun. Set round, at all.
Pri. Pay all: this is some luck.
King. Give me the Dice, 'tis I must shred the Priest: At all, Sir John.
Pri. The Devil and all is yours: at that. 'Sdeath, what casting's this?
Suf. Well thrown, Harry, ifaith.
King. I'le cast better yet.
Pri. Then I'le be hang'd. Sirrha, hast thou not given thy soul to the Devil for casting?
Har. I passe for all.
Pri. Thou passest all that e're I plaid withall:
Sirrha, dost thou not cog, nor foist, nor slurre?
Kin. Set, Parson, set, the Dice die in my hand.
When, Parson, when? what, can ye find no more?
Already dry? was't you brag'd of your store?
Pri. All's gone but that.
Hun. What? half a broken Angel.
Pri. Why, sir? 'tis gold.
Kin. Yea, and I'le cover it.
Pri. The Devil give ye good on't, I am blind, you have blown me up.
Kin. Nay, tarry, Priest, you shall not leave us yet,
Do not these pieces fit each other well?
Pri. What if they doe?
King. Thereby begins a tale:
There was a Thief, in face much like Sir John,
But 'twas not he. That thief was all in green,
Met me last day on Black-heath, near the Parke,
With him a Woman. I was all alone
And weaponlesse, my boy had all my tooles,
And was before providing me a Boat.
Short tale to make, Sir John, the Thief I mean,
Took a just hundreth pound in gold from me.
I storm'd at it, and swore to be reveng'd
If e're we met; he like a lusty Thief,
Brake with his Teeth this Angel just in two,
To be a token at our meeting next.
Provided, I should charge no Officer
To apprehend him, but at weapons point
Recover that, and what he had beside.
Well met, Sir John, betake ye to your tooles
By Torch-light, for, Master Parson, you are he
That had my Gold.
Pri. Zounds, I won't in play, in fair square play, of the Keeper of Eltham-Parke, and that I will maintain with this poor Whinyard: be you two honest men to stand and look upon's, and let's alone, and neither part.
Kin. Agreed, I charge ye doe not budge a foot,
Sir John, have at ye.
Pri. Souldier, ware your sconce.

As they proffer, enter Butler, and drawes his Sword to part them.

But. Hold, villain, hold: my Lords, what d'ye mean;
To see a Traitor draw against the King?
Pri. The King? Gods will, I am in a proper pickle.
King. Butler, what newes? why dost thou trouble us?
But. Please your Majesty, it's break of day,
And as I scouted near to Islington,
The gray-ey'd morning gave me glimmering,
Of armed men comming down Hygate-hill,
Who by their course are coasting hitherward.
King. Let us withdraw, my Lords, prepare our troops,
To charge the Rebels if there be such cause:
For this lewd Priest, this devillish Hypocrite,
That is a Thief, a gamester, and what not,
Let him be hang'd up for example sake.
Priest. Not so, my gracious Soveraign, I confesse I am a fraile man, flesh and blood as other are; but set my imperfections aside, ye have not a taller man, nor a truer Subject to the Crown and State, than Sir John of Wrotham is.
Kin. Will a true Subject rob his King?
Pri. Alas 'twas ignorance and want, my gracious Liege.
King. 'Twas want of grace. Why, you should be as salt
To season others with good document,
Your lives as lamps to give the people light,
As shepheards, not as Wolves to spoile the flock;
Go hang him, Butler.
But. Didst thou not rob me?
Prie. I must confesse I saw some of your gold, but, my dread Lord, I am in no humour for death: God will that sinners live, doe not you cause me to die, once in their lives the best may go astray, and if the world say true, your self (my Liege) have bin a Thief.

Kin. I confesse I have,
But I repent and have reclein'd my self.
Pri. So will I doe if you will give me time.
Kin. Wilt thou? My Lords, will you be his sureties?
Hun. That when he robs again he shall be hang'd.
Poi. I aske no more.
Kin. And we will grant thee that,
Live and repent, and prove an honest man,
Which when I hear, and safe return from France,
I'le give thee living. Till when, take thy Gold,
But spend it better then at Cards or Wine,
For better virtues fit that Coat of thine.
Pri. Vivat Rex, & currat Lex. My Liege, if ye have cause of Battel, ye shall see Sir John bestir himself in your quarrell.

An alarum. Enter King, Suffolk, Huntington, Sir John bringing forth Acton, Beverly, and Murly prisoners.

King. Bring in those Traitors, whose aspiring minds
Thought to have triumpht in our overthrow:
But now ye see, base villains, what successe
Attends ill actions wrongfully attempted.
Sir Roger Acton, thou retain'st the name
Of Knight, and should'st be more discreetly temper'd
Than joyn with pezants, Gentry is divine,
But thou hast made it more then popular.
Act. Pardon, my Lord, my conscience urg'd me to it
Kin. Thy conscience? then conscience is corrupt,
For in thy conscience thou art bound to us,
And in thy conscience thou should'st love thy Countrey,
Else what's the difference 'twixt a Christian,
And the uncivil manners of the Turk?
Bev. We meant no hurt unto your Majesty,
But reformation of Religion.
King. Reform Religion? was it that you sought?
I pray who gave you that authority?
Belike then we hold the Scepter up,
And sit within the Throne, but for a Cipher.
Time was, good Subjects would make known their grief,
And pray amendment, not enforce the same,
Unlesse their King were tyrant, which I hope
You cannot justly say that Harry is,
What is that other?
Suf. A Malt-man, my Lord,
And dwelling in Dunstable as he sayes.
King. Sirrha, what made you leave your Barley broth,
To come in armour thus against your King?
Mur. Fie, paltry, paltry, to and fro, in and out upon occasion, what a world is this? Knighthood (my Liege) 'twas Knighthood brought me hither, they told me I had wealth enough to make my Wife a Lady.
Kin. And so you brought those horses which we saw,
Trapt all in costly furniture, and meant
To wear these Spurres when you were Knighted once.
Mur. In and out upon occasion I did.
Kin. In and out upon occasion, therefore you shall be hang'd, and in the stead of wearing these Spurres upon your heeles, about your neck they shall bewray your folly to the world.
Pri. In and out upon occasion, that goes hard.
Mur. Fie, paltry, paltry, too and fro: good my Liege, a pardon, I am sorry for my fault.
King. That comes too late: but tell me, went there none beside Sir Roger Acton, upon whom
You did depend to be you Governour.
Mur. None, my Lord, but Sir John Oldcastle.

Enter Bishop.

Kin. Beares he a part in this conspiracy.
Act. We looke, my Lord, that he would meet us here.
King. But did he promise you that he would come.
Act. Such Letters we received forth of Kent,
Bish. Where is my Lord the King? health to your grace.
Examining, my Lord, some of these Rebels,
It is a generall voyce among them all,
That they had never come into this place,
But to have met their valiant Generall
The good Lord Cobham as they title him:
Whereby, my Lord, your Grace may now perceive,
His Treason is apparant, which before
He sought to colour by his flattery.
King. Now by my Royalty I would have sworn,
But for his conscience which I bear withall,
There had not liv'd a more true hearted Subject.
Bish. It is but counterfeit, my gracious Lord,
And therefore may it please your Majesty,
To set your hand unto this precept here,
By which we'll cause him forthwith to appear,
And answer this by order of the Law.
Kin. Not onely that, but take Commission
To search, attach, imprison, and condemn,
This most notorious traitor as you please.
Bish. It shall be done, my Lord, without delay:
So now I hold Lord Cobham in my hand,
That which shall finish thy disdained life.
King. I think the Iron age begins but now,
Which learned Poets have so often taught,
Wherein there is no credit to be given
To either words or looks, or solemn oaths:
For if he were, how often hath he sworn,
How gently tun'd the musick of his tongue,
And with what amiable face beheld he me,
When all, God knowes, was but hypocrisie.

Enter Cobham.

Cob. Long life and prosperous reign unto my Lord,
Kin. Ah, villain, canst thou wish prosperity,
Whose heart includeth nought but treachery?
I do arrest thee here my self, false Knight,
Of treason capitall against the state.
Cob. Of treason, mighty Prince? your Grace mistakes,
I hope it is but in the way of mirth.
Kin. Thy neck shall feel it is in earnest shortly.
Dar'st thou intrude into our presence, knowing
How hainously thou hast offended us?
But this is thy accustomed deceit.
Now thou perceiv'st thy purpose is in vain,
With some excuse or other thou wilt come
To clear thy self of this Rebellion.
Cob. Rebellion, good my Lord, I know of none.
Kin. If you deny it, here is evidence,
See you these men; you never counselled,
Nor offered them assistance in their Warres.
Cob. Speak, sirs, not one but all, I crave no favour,
Have ever I been conversant with you?
Or written Letters to encourage you?
Or kindled but the least or smallest part
Of this your late unnaturall Rebellion?
Speak, for I dare the uttermost you can.
Mur. In and out upon occasion, I know you not.
King. No, didst thou not say, that Sir John Oldcastle
Was one with whom you purposed to have met?
Mur. True, I did say so, but in what respect,
Because I heard it was reported so.

Kin. Was

King. Was there no other argument but that?
Att. I muſt confeſſe we have no other ground
But onely rumour to accuſe this Lord,
Which now I ſee was meerly fabulous.
Kin. The more pernitious you to taint him then,
Whom you know was not faulty, yea or no.
Cob. Let this, my Lord, which I preſent your Grace
Speak for my loyalty, read theſe Articles,
And then give ſentence of my life or death.
Kin. Earl Cambridge, Scroop, and Gray corrupted
With bribes from Charles of France, either to win
My Crown from me, or ſecretly contrive
My death by Treaſon? Is't poſſible.
Cob. There is the platforme, and their hands, my Lord,
Each ſeverally ſubſcribed to the ſame.
Kin. Oh never heard of baſe ingratitude!
Even thoſe I hug within my boſome moſt,
Are readieſt evermore to ſting my heart.
Pardon me, Cobham, I have done thee wrong,
Hereafter I will live to make amends.
Is then their time of meeting ſo near hand?
We'll meet with them, but little for their eaſe,
If God permit. Go take theſe Rebels hence,
Let them have martiall law: but as for thee,
Friend to thy King and Countrey, ſtill be free. Exeunt.
Mur. Be it more or leſſe, what a world is this?
Would I had continued ſtill of the order of knaves,
And ne're fought Knight-hood, ſince it coſts
So dear: Sir Roger, I may thank you for all.
Acton. Now 'tis too late to have it remedied,
I prethee, Murley, doe not urge me with it.
Hun. Will you away, and make no more to doe?
Mur. Fie paltry, paltry, too and fro, as occaſion ſerves,
If you be ſo haſty, take my place.
Hun. No, good ſir Knight, e'ne tak't your ſelf.
Mur. I could be glad to give my betters place. Exeunt.
Enter Biſhop, Lord Warden, Cromer the Shreeve, Lady Cobham and attendants.
Biſh. I tell ye, Lady, it's impoſſible
But you ſhould know where he conveyes himſelf,
And you have hid him in ſome ſecret place.
La. My Lord, believe me, as I have a ſoule,
I know not where my Lord my Husband is.
Biſh. Go to, go, ye are an Heretick,
And will be forc't by torture to confeſſe,
If fair meanes will not ſerve to make you tell.
La. My Husband is a noble Gentleman,
And need not hide himſelf for any fact
That e're I heard of, therefore wrong him not,
Biſh. Your husband is a dangerous Schiſmatick,
Traitor to God, the King, and Commonwealth,
And therefore, M. Cromer, Shreeve of Kent,
I charge you take her to your cuſtody,
And ſeize the goods of Sir John Oldcaſtle
To the Kings uſe; let her go in no more,
To fetch ſo much as her apparell out,
There is your warrant from his Majeſty.
L. War. Good my Lord Biſhop, pacifie your wrath
Againſt the Lady.
Biſh. Then let her confeſſe
Where Oldcaſtle her husband is conceal'd.
L. War. I dare engage mine honour and my life,
Poor Gentlewoman, ſhe is ignorant
And innocent of all his practices
If any evil by him be practiſed.
Biſh. If, my Lord Warden? Nay then I charge you,
That all Cinque-ports whereof you are chief,
Be laid forthwith, that he eſcapes us not.
Shew him his Highneſſe warrant, M. Sheriffe.
L. War. I am ſorry for the Noble Gentleman.
Biſh. Peace, he comes here, now do your office,
Enter Harpoole and Oldcaſtle.
Cob. Harpoole, what buſineſſe have we here in hand?
What makes the Biſhop and the Sheriffe here?
I fear my comming home is dangerous,
I would I had not made ſuch haſte to Cobham.
Har. Be of good cheer, my Lord, if they be foes, we'll ſcramble ſhrewdly with them: if they be friends
they are welcome.
Cro. Sir John Oldcaſtle Lord Cobham, in the Kings
name, I arreſt ye of high treaſon.
Cob. Treaſon, M. Cromer?
Har. Treaſon, M. Sheriffe, what Treaſon?
Cob. Harpoole, I charge thee ſtirre not, but be quiet.
Do ye arreſt me of Treaſon, M. Sheriffe?
Biſh. Yea, of high Treaſon, Traitor, Heretick.
Cob. Defiance in his face that calls me ſo,
I am as true a loyall Gentleman
Unto his Highneſſe, as my proudeſt enemy,
The King ſhall witneſſe my late faithfull ſervice,
For ſafety of his ſacred Majeſty.
Biſh. What thou art, the Kings hand ſhall teſtifie,
Shew him, Lord Warden.
Cob. Jeſu defend me,
Is't poſſible your cunning could ſo temper
The Princely diſpoſition of his minde,
To ſign the damage of a royall Subject?
Well, the beſt is, it beares an antedate,
Procured by my abſence and your malice.
But I, ſince that, have ſhew'd my ſelf as true,
As any Churchman that dare challenge me.
Let me be brought before his Majeſty,
If he acquit me not, then doe your worſt.
Biſh. We are not bound to doe kinde offices,
For any traitor, ſchiſmatick, nor heretick:
The Kings hand is our warrant for our work,
Who is departed on his way for France,
And at Southampton doth repoſe this night.
Har. O that thou and I were within twenty miles of it, on Salisbury plain! I would loſe my head if thou brought'ſt thy head hither again. Aſide.
Cob. My Lord Warden o'th Cinque-ports, and Lord of Rocheſter, ye are joynt Commiſſioners, favour me ſo much on my expence, to bring me to the King.
Biſh. VVhat, to Southampton?
Cob. Thither, my good Lord,
And if he doe not clear me of all guilt,
And all ſuſpicion of conſpiracy,
Pawning his Princely warrant for my truth:
I aske no favour, but extreameſt torture.
Bring me, or ſend me to him, good my Lord,
Good my Lord VVarden, M. Shrieve entreat.
They both entreat for me.
Come hither, Lady, nay ſweet wife, forbear
To heap one ſorrow on anothers neck:
'Tis griefe enough falſely to be accus'd,
And not permitted to acquit my ſelf,
Doe not thou with thy kinde reſpective teares,
Torment thy husbands heart that bleeds for thee:
But be of comfort, God hath help in ſtore
For thoſe that put aſſured truſt in him.
Dear VVife, if they commit me to the Tower,
Come up to London to your ſiſters houſe:

That being near me, you may comfort me.
One solace find I setled in my soul,
That I am free from Treasons very thought,
Onely my conscience for the Gospels sake,
Is cause of all the troubles I sustain.
La. O, my dear Lord, what shall betide of us?
You to the Tower, and I turn'd out of doors,
Our substance seiz'd unto his Highnesse use,
Even to the garments longing to our backs.
Har. Patience, good Madam, things at worst will mend,
And if they do not, yet our lives may end.
Bish. Urge it no more, for if an Angel spake,
I swear by sweet S. Peter s blessed keyes,
First goes he to the Tower, then to the stake.
Crom. But by your leave, this warrant doth not stretch
To imprison her.
Bish. No, turn her out of doors,
Even as she is, and lead him to the Tower,
With guard enough, for fear of reskuing.
La. O God requite thee thou bloud-thirsty man.
Cob. May it not be, my Lord of Rochester?
Wherein have I incurr'd your hate so far,
That my appeal unto the King's deny'd.
Bish. No hate of mine, but power of holy Church,
Forbids all favour to false Hereticks.
Cob. Your private malice more then publick power,
Strikes most at me, but with my life it ends.
Har. aside. O that I had the Bishop in that fear
That once I had his Sumner by our selves.
Cro. My Lord, yet grant one suit unto us all,
That this same ancient servingman may wait
Upon my Lord his master in the Tower.
Bish. This old iniquity, this heretick?
That in contempt of our Church discipline,
Compel'd my Sumner to devour his Processe?
Old ruffian past-grace, upstart schismatick,
Had not the King pray'd us to pardon ye,
Ye had fryed for't, ye grizeled heretick.
Har. S'blood, my Lord Bishop, ye wrong me, I am neither Heretick nor Puritan, but of the old Church, I'le swear, drink ale, kiss a wench, go to mass, eat fish all Lent, and fast Frydayes with cakes and wine, fruit and spicery, shrive me of my old sinnes afore Easter, and begin new before Whitsontide.
Cro. A merry mad conceited knave, my Lord.
Har. That knave was simply put upon the Bishop.
Bish. Well, God forgive him, and I pardon him:
Let him attend his master in the Tower,
For I in charity wish his soul no hurt.
Cob. God blesse my soul from such cold charity.
Bish. To th'Tower with him, & when my leisure serves
I will examine him of Articles;
Look, my Lord Warden, as you have in charge
The Shrieve perform his office.
War. I, my Lord. Enter Sumner with Books.
Bish. What bring'st thou there? what, books of heresie?
Sum. Yea, my Lord, here's not a Latine Book,
No not so much as our Ladies Psalter:
Here's the Bible, the Testament, the Psalmes in meeter,
The sick-man's salve, the Treasure of Gladnesse,
All English, no not so much but the Almanack's English.
Bish. Away with them, to th'fire with them, Clun,
Now fie upon these upstart Hereticks.
All English, burn them, burn them quickly, Clun.
Harp. But do not, Sumner, as you'll answer it, for I have there English books, my Lord, that I'le not part withall for your Bishoprick, Bevis of Hampton, Owleglasse, The Fryer and the Boy, Ellen of Rumming, Robin-hood, and other such godly stories, which if you burn, by this flesh I'le make ye drink their ashes in S. Marget's Ale. Exit.

Enter the Bishop of Rochester, with his men in Livery Coats.

1. Ser. Is it your honours we shall stay,
Or come back in the afternoon to fetch you.
Bish. Now have ye brought me here unto the Tower,
You may go back unto the Porter's lodge,
Where if I have occasion to employ you,
I'le send some officer to call you to me.
Into the City go not, I command you,
Perhaps I may have present need to use you.
2. We will attend your honour here without.
3. Come, we may have a quart of wine at the Rose at Barking, and come back an hour before he'll go.
1. We must hie us then.
3. Let's away. Exeunt.
Bish. Ho, Mr. Lievtenant.
Liev. Who calls there?
Bish. A friend of yours.
Liev. My Lord of Rochester? your honour's welcome.
Bish. Sir, here's my warrant from the counsel,
For conference with Sir John Oldcastle,
Upon some matter of great consequence.
Liev. Ho, Sir John.
Har. Who calls there?
Liev. Harpool, tell sir John, that my Lord of Rochester
Comes from the counsel to confer with him,
I think you may as safe without suspition,
As any man in England as I hear,
For it was you most labour'd his commitment.
Bish. I did, sir, and nothing repent it I assure you.

Enter Sir John Oldcastle.

Mr. Lievtenant, I pray you give us leave,
I must confer here with sir John a little.
Liev. With all my heart, my Lord.
Har. aside. My Lord, be rul'd by me, take this occasion while it is offered, & on my life your Lordship will escape.
Cob. No more I say, peace lest he should suspect it.
Bish. Sir John, I am come to you from the Lords of the Counsel, to know if you do recant your errours.
Cob. My Lord of Rochester, on good advice.
I see my errour; but yet understand me,
I mean not errour in the Faith I hold,
But errour in submitting to your pleasure,
Therefore your Lordship without more to do,
Must be a means to help me to escape.
Bish. What means, thou heretick?
Dar'st thou but lift thy hand against my calling?
Cob. No, not to hurt you for a thousand pound.
Har. Nothing but to borrow your upper garment a little, not a word more, peace for waking the children; there, put on, dispatch, my Lord, the window that goes out into the Leads is sure enough: as for you, I'le bind you surely in the inner room.
Cob. This is well begun, God send us happy speed,
Hard shift you see men make in time of need.

Enter servingmen again.

1. I marvel that my Lord should stay so long.
2. He hath sent to seek us I dare lay my life.
3. We come in good time, see where he is coming.
Har. I beseech you, good my Lord of Rochester, be favourable to my Lord and master.

Cob. The

Cob. The inner roomes be very hot and close,
I do not like this air here in the Tower.

Harp. His case is hard, my Lord: you shall safely get out of the Tower, but I will down upon them; in which time get you away. Hard under Islington wait you my coming, I will bring my Lady ready with horses to get hence.

Cob. Fellow, go back again unto my Lord, and counsel him.

Har. Nay, my good Lord of Rochester, I'le bring you to S. Albons through the woods I warrant you.

Cob. Villain away.

Har. Nay since I am past the Towers liberty,
You part not so. He drawes.

Bish. Clubs, clubs, clubs.

1. Murther, murther, murther.

2. Down with him.

Har. Out you cowardly rogues. Cobh. escapes.

Enter Lieutenant, and his men.

Liev. Who is so bold as to dare to draw a sword
So near unto the entrance of the Tower.

1. This Ruffian, servant to sir John Oldcastle, was like to have slain my Lord.

Liev. Lay hold on him.

Har. Stand off if you love your puddings.

Rochester calls within.

Help, help, help, Mr. Lievtenant, help.

Liev. Who's that within? some Treason in the Tower on my life, look in, who's that which calls?

Enter Rochester bound.

Liev. Without your cloak, my Lord of Rochester?

Har. There, now it works; then let me speed,
For now's the fittest time to scape away. Exit.

Liev. Why do you look so gastly and affrighted?

Bish. Oldcastle that Traitor and his man,
When you had left me to conferre with him,
Took, bound, and stript me as you see,
And left me lying in this inner chamber,
And so departed, and I----

Liev. And you! Nere say that the Lord Cobham's man Did here set on you like to murther you.

1. And so he did.

Bish. It was upon his Master then he did,
That in the brawl the Traitor might escape.

Liev. Where is this Harpool?

2. Here he was even now.

Liev. Where, can you tell? They are both escap'd.
Since it so happens that he is escap'd,
I am glad you are a witnesse of the same:
It might have else been laid unto my charge,
That I had been consenting to the fact.

Bish. Come, search shall be made for him with expedition, the Haven's laid that he shall not escape, and hue and cry continue through England, to find this damned, dangerous heretick. Exeunt.

Enter Cambridge, Scroop, and Gray, as in a chamber, and set down at a Table, consulting about their Treason, King Harry and Suffolk listning at the door.

Cam. In mine opinion, Scroop hath well advis'd,
Poison will be the onely aptest mean,
And fittest for our purpose to dispatch him.

Gray. But yet there may be doubt in their delivery,
Harry is wise, therefore Earl of Cambridge,
I judge that way not so convenient.

Scr. What think ye then of this? I am his bedfellow,
And unsuspected nightly sleep with him.
What if I venture in those silent houres,
When sleep hath sealed up all mortal eyes
To murther him in bed? how like ye that?

Cam. Herein consists no safety for your self,
And you disclos'd, what shall become of us?
But this day (as ye know) he will aboard,
The wind's so fair, and set away for France,
If as he goes, or entring in the ship
It might be done, then were it excellent.

Gray. Why any of these, or if you will,
I'le cause a present sitting of the Councel,
Wherein I will pretend some matter of such weight,
As needs must have his royal company,
And so dispatch him in his Councel chamber.

Cam. Tush, yet I hear not any thing to purpose;
I wonder that Lord Cobham stayes so long,
His counsel in this case would much avail us.

The King steps in upon them with his Lords.

Scr. What shall we rise thus, and determine nothing?

King. That were a shame indeed: no, sit again,
And you shall have my counsel in this case:
If you can find no way to kill the King,
Then you shall see how I can furnish ye;
Scroop's way by poison was indifferent,
But yet being bed-fellow to the King,
And unsuspected, sleeping in his bosome,
In mine opinion that's the likelier way.
For such false friends are able to do much,
And silent night is Treason's fittest friend.
Now, Cambridge in his setting hence for France,
Or by the way, or as he goes aboard
To do the deed, that was indifferent too,
But somewhat doubtfull.
Marry Lord Gray came very near the point,
To have the King at Counsel, and there murder him,
As Cæsar was amongst his deerest friends.
Tell me, oh tell me, you bright honour's staines,
For which of all my kindnesses to you,
Are ye become thus Traitors to your King?
And France must have the spoil of Harrie's life.

All. Oh pardon us, dread Lord.

King. How, pardon ye? that were a sin indeed,
Drag them to death, which justly they deserve:
And France shall dearly buy this villany,
So soon as we set footing on her breast.
God have the praise for our deliverance,
And next our thanks, Lord Cobham, is to thee,
True perfect mirrour of Nobilitie. Exit.

Enter the Host, L. Cobham, and Harpool.

Host. Sir, y'are welcome to this house, to such as is here with all my heart: but I fear your lodging will be the worst. I have but two beds, and they are both in a chamber, and the Carrier and his daughter lies in the one, and you and your wife must lye in the other.

Cob. Faith sir, for my self I do not greatly pass,
My wife is weary, and would be at rest,
For we have travel'd very far to day,
We must be content with such as you have.

Host. But I cannot tell how to do with your man.

Har. What? hast thou never an empty room in thy house for me?

Host. Not a bed in troth. There came a poor Irish-man, and I lodg'd him in the barn, where he has fair straw, although he have nothing else.

Har. Well mine Host, I prythee help me to a pair of clean sheets, and I'le go lodge with him.

Hoſt. By the Maſs that thou ſhalt, a good pair of hempen ſheets were nere layn in: come. Exeunt.

Enter Conſtable, Mayor, and Watch.

May. What? have you ſearcht the Town?

Con. All the town, ſir, we have not left a houſe unſearcht that uſes to lodge.

May. Surely, my Lord of Rocheſter was then deceiv'd,
Or ill inform'd of ſir John Oldcaſtle,
Or if he came this way, he's paſt the Town,
He could not elſe have ſcap'd you in the ſearch.

Con. The privy watch hath been abroad all night,
And not a ſtranger lodgeth in the Town
But he is known; onely a luſty Prieſt
We found in bed with a pretty wench,
That ſayes ſhe is his wife, yonder at the Shears:
But we have charg'd the hoſt with his forth coming
To morrow morning.

May. What think you beſt to do?

Con. Faith, Mr. Maior, here's a few ſtragling houſes beyond the hrigde, and a little Inne where Carriers uſe to lodge, although I think ſurely he would nere lodge there: but we'll go ſearch, and the rather, becauſe there came notice to the town the laſt night of an Iriſh man, that had done a murther, whom we are to make ſearch for.

Mayor. Come I pray you, and be circumſpect. Exeunt.

Con. Firſt beſet the houſe, before you begin to ſearch.

Offi. Content, every man take a ſeveral place.

A noiſe within.

Keep, keep, ſtrike him down there, down with him.

Enter Conſtable with the Iriſhman in Harpool's apparel.

Con. Come you villanous heretick, tell us where your Maſter is.

Iriſh. Vat meſter?

May. Vat meſter, you counterfeit Rebel? This ſhall not ſerve your turn.

Iriſh. Be ſent Patrick, I ha no meſter.

Con. Where's the Lord Cobham, ſir John Oldcaſtle, that lately eſcaped out of the Tower?

Iriſh. Vat Lort Cobham?

May. You counterfeit this ſhall not ſerve you, we'll torture you, we'll make you confeſſe where that arch-heretick is. Come bind him faſt.

Iriſh. Ahone, ahone, ahone, a Cree.

Con. Ahone you crafty raſcal? Exeunt.

Lord Cobham comes out ſtealing in his gown.

Cob. Harpool, Harpool, I hear a marvellous noiſe about the houſe, God warrant us, I fear we are purſued: what Harpool?

Har. within. Who calls there?

Cob. 'Tis I, doſt thou not hear a noiſe about the houſe?

Har. Yes marry do I, zounds I cannot find my hoſe, this Iriſh raſcal that lodg'd with me all night, hath ſtollen my apparel, and has left me nothing but a lowſie mantle, and a pair of broags. Get up, get up, and if the Carrier and his wench be aſleep, change you with him as he hath done with me, and ſee if we can ſcape.

Noiſe heard about the houſe a pretty while, then enter the Conſtable meeting Harpool in the Iriſhman's aparell.

Con. Stand cloſe, here comes the Iriſhman that did the murther, by all tokens this is he.

May. And perceiving the houſe beſet, would get away: ſtand ſirra.

Har. What art thou that bid'ſt me ſtand?

Con. I am the Officer, and am come to ſearch for an Iriſh man, ſuch a villain as thy ſelf, thou haſt murther'd a man this laſt night by the high way.

Harp. Sbloud Conſtable art thou mad? am I an Iriſh-man?

May. Sirra, we'll find you an Iriſh-man befor we part: Lay hold upon him.

Con. Make him faſt, O thou bloudy rogue!

Enter Lord Cobham and his Lady, in the Carriar and wenches apparel.

Cob. What will theſe Oſtlers ſleep all day?
Good morrow, good morrow, come wench, come;
Saddle, ſaddle, now afore God two fair dayes, ha?

Con. Who goes there?

May. O 'tis Lancaſhire Carrier, let them paſs.

Cob. What, will no body ope the gates here?
Come, let's int'ſtable to look to our Capons.

The Carrier calling.

Hoſt, why Oſtler?
Zwooks here's ſuch a bomination company of Boyes:
A pox of this pigſtie at the houſe end,
It fills all the houſe full of fleas, Oſtler, Oſtler.

Oſt. Who calls there? what would you have?

Club. Zwooks, do you rob your gueſts?
Do you lodge rogues, and ſlaves, and ſcoundrels, ha?
They ha ſtoln our clothes here: why Oſtler?

Oſt. A murren choak you, what a bawling you keep.

Hoſt. How now? what would the Carrier have? Look up there.

Oſtler. They ſay the man and the woman that lay by them, have ſtoln their clothes.

Hoſt. What, are the ſtrange folks up yet that came in yeſter night?

Con. What mine Hoſt, up ſo early?

Hoſt. What Mr. Maior, and Mr. Conſtable?

May. We are come to ſeek for ſome ſuſpected perſons, and ſuch as here we found have apprehended.

Enter Carrier and Kate in Cobham and Ladies apparel.

Con. Who comes here?

Club. Who comes here? A plague found ome, you bawl quoth a, ods hat I'le forewear your houſe: you lodg'd a fellow and his wife by us, that ha run away with our parrel, and left us ſuch gew-gaws here, come Kate, come to me, thowſe dizeard, yfaith.

Mayor. Mine hoſt, know you this man?

Hoſt. Yes maſter Maior, I'le give my word for him, why neighbour Club, how comes this gear about?

Kate. Now a foule on't, I cannot make this gew-gaw ſtand on my head.

Con. How came this man and woman thus attired?

Hoſt. Here came a man and woman hither this laſt night, which I did take for ſubſtantial people, and lodg'd all in one chamber by theſe folks: me thinks have been ſo bold to change apparel, and gone away this morning ere they roſe.

May. That was that Traitor Oldcaſtle that thus eſcapt us: make hue and cry after him, keep faſt that traiterous Rebel his ſervant there: farewell, mine Hoſt.

Car. Come Kate Owdham, thou and I ſe trimly dizard.

Kate. Ifaith

Kate. Ifaith neam Club, Ife wot nere what to do, Ife be ſo flouted and ſo ſhouted at: but by th'Meſs Ife cry. Exit.

Enter Prieſt and Doll.

Prieſt. Come Doll, come, be merry wench.
Farewell Kent, we are not for thee.
Be luſty my Laſſe, come for Lancashire,
We muſt nip the Boung for theſe Crowns.

Doll. Why is all the gold ſpent alerady, that you had the other day.

Prieſt. Gone Doll, gone; flown, ſpent, vaniſhed, the Devil, drink, and dice, has devoured all.

Doll. You might have left me in Kent till you had been better provided.

Prieſt. No, Doll, no, Kent's too hot, Doll, Kent's too hot: the weathercock of Wrotham will crow no longer, we have pluckt him, he has loſt his feathers, I have prun'd him bare, left him thrice, is moulted, is moulted wench.

Doll. I might have gone to ſervice again, old M. Harpool told me he would provide me a Miſtris.

Prieſt. Peace, Doll, peace; come mad wench, I'le make thee an honeſt woman, we'll into Lancaſhire to our friends, the troth is, I'le marry thee, we want but a little money, and money we will have I warrant thee: ſtay, who comes here? ſome Iriſh villain me thinks that has ſlain a man, and now he is rifling on him, ſtand cloſe, Doll, we'll ſee the end.

Enter the Iriſhman with his dead Maſter, and rifles him.

Iriſh. Alas poe Maſter, Sir Richard Lee, be S. Patrick is rob and cut thy trote, for de ſhain, and dy mony, and dy gold ring, be me truly is love de well, but now dow be kill de, be ſhitten kanave.

Prieſt. Stand, ſirra, what art thou?

Irish. Be S. Patrick Meſter, is poor Iriſman, is a leufter.

Prieſt. Sirra, ſirra, y'are a damn'd rogue, you have kill'd a man here, and rifled him of all that he has: ſbloud you rogue deliver, or I'le not leave you ſo much as a hair above your ſhoulders, you whorſon Iris dog. Robs him.

Irish. We's me S. Patrick, Ife kill my Meſter for ſhain and his ring, and now's be rob of all, me's undo.

Prieſt. Avant you Raſcal, go ſirra, be walking: come Doll, the devil laughs when one thief robs another: come wench, we'll to S. Albans, and revel in our bower, my brave girle.

Doll. O thou art old Sir John when all's done ifaith.

Enter the hoſt of the houſe with the Irishman.

Irish. Be me tro Meſter is poor Iriſman, is want ludging, is have no mony, is ſtarve and cold, good Meſter give her ſome meat, is famiſe and tye.

Hoſt. Faith fellow I have no lodging, but what I keep for my Gueſſe: as for meat, thou ſhalt have as much as there is, and if thou wilt lie in the barn, there's fair ſtraw, and room enough.

Irish. Is tank my Meſter hertily.

Hoſt. Ho, Robin.

Rob. Who calls?

Hoſt. Shew this poor Irishman to the barn, go ſirra.

Enter Carrier and Kate.

Club. Who's within here? who looks to the horſes? Uds hat, here's fine work, the Hens in the manger, and the Hogs in the litter, a bots found you all, here's a houſe well lookt too ifaith.

Kate. Mas Goff Club, Ife very cawd.

Club. Get in Kate, get into fire and warme thee. John Oſtler?

Hoſt. What, Gaffer Club, welcome to S. Albans, How do's all our friends in Lancashire?

Club. Well, God a mercy John, how do's Tom? where is he?

Oſt. Tom's gone from hence, he's at the three Horſe-loves at ſtony-Stratford: how do's old Dick Dun.

Club. Uds hat, old Dun is moyr'd in a ſlough in Brick hill-lane: a plague found it, yonders ſuch abomination weather as was never ſeen.

Oſt. Uds hat Thief, have one halfe peck of peaſe and oats more for that, as I am John Oſtler, he has bin ever as good a jade as ever travelled.

Club. Faith well ſaid old Jack, thou art the old lad ſtill.

Oſt. Come Gaffer Club, unload, unload, and get to ſupper.

Enter Cobham and his Lady diſguiſed.

Cob. Come Madam, happily eſcapt, here let us ſit,
This place is far remote from any path,
And here a while our weary limbs may reſt,
To take refreſhing, free from the purſuit
Of envious Rocheſter.

La. But where, my Lord, ſhall we find reſt for our diſquiet minds?
There dwell untamed thoughts that hardly ſtoop
to ſuch abaſement of diſdained rags:
We were not wont to travel thus by night,
Eſpecially on foot.

Cob. No matter, love, extremities admit no better choice:
And were it not for thee, ſay froward time
Impos'd a greater task, I would eſteem it
As lightly as the wind that blows upon us,
But in thy ſufferance I am doubly taskt,
Thou waſt not wont to have the earth thy ſtool,
Nor the moiſt dewy graſſe thy pillow, nor
Thy chamber to be the wide Horizon.

La. How can it ſeem a trouble, having you
A partner with me, in the worſt I feel?
No gentle Lord, your preſence would give eaſe
To death it ſelf, ſhould he now ſeize upon me:
Here's bread and cheeſe and a bottle.
Behold what my fore-ſight hath undertane
For fear we faint, they are but homely Cates,
Yet ſawc'd with hunger, they may ſeem as ſweet
As greater dainties we were wont to taſte.

Cob. Praiſe be to him, whoſe plenty ſends both this
And all things elſe our mortal bodies need:
Nor ſcorn we this poor feeding, nor the ſtate
We now are in, for what is it on earth,
Nay under heaven, continues at a ſtay?
Ebbs not the Sea, when it hath overflown?
Follows not darkneſſe when the day is gone?
And ſee we not ſometime the eye of heaven
Dim'd with ore-flying clouds? There's not that work
Of carefull Nature, or of cunning Art,
(How ſtrong, how beauteous, or how rich it be)
But falls in time to ruine: here, gentle Madam,

In

In this one draught I wash my sorrow down. Drinks.
La. And I encourag'd with your chearfull speech,
Will do the like.
Cob. Pray God poor Harpool come,
If he should fall into the Bishops hands,
Or not remember where we bad him meet us,
It were the thing of all things else, that now
Could breed revolt in this new peace of mind.
La. Fear not, my Lord, he's witty to devise,
And streng to execute a present shift.
Cob. That power be still his guide hath guided us.
My drowsie eyes wax heavy; early rising,
Together with the travel we have had,
Makes me that I could take a nap,
Were I perswaded we might be secure.
La. Let that depend on me, whilst you do sleep,
I'le watch that no misfortune happen us.
Cob. I shall, dear wife, be too much trouble to thee.
La. Urge not that,
My duty binds me, and your love commands,
I would I had the skill with tuned voice
To draw on sleep with some sweet melody,
But imperfection and unaptnesse too
Are both repugnant: fear inferts the one,
The other nature hath denied me use.
But what talk I of means, to purchase that
Is freely happen'd? Sleep with gentle hand,
Hath shut his eye-lids: Oh victorious labour,
How soon thy power can charme the bodies sense?
And now thou likewise climb'st unto my brain,
Making my heavy temples stoop to thee,
Great God of heaven from danger keep us free. Fall a sleep.

Enter Sir Richard Lee and his men.

Lee. A Murther closely done, and in my ground?
Search carefully, if any where it were,
This obscure thicket is the likeliest place.
Ser. Sir, I have found the body stiff with cold
And mangled cruelly with many wounds.
Lee. Look if thou know'st him, turn his body up:
Alack, it is my son, my son and heir,
Whom two years since, I sent to Ireland,
To practise there the discipline of war,
And coming home, for so he wrote to me,
Some savage heart, some bloudy devilish hand,
Either in hate, or thirsting for his coin,
Hath here slain'd out his bloud. Unhappy hour,
A cursed place, but most inconstant fate,
That had'st reserv'd him from the bullets fire,
And suffered him to scape the wood-kerns fury.
Did'st here ordain the treasure of his life,
Even here within the armes of tender peace,
To be consum'd by treasons wastfull hand?
And which is most afflicting to my soul,
That this his death and murther should be wrought
Without the knowledge by whose means 'twas done.
2. Ser. Not so, sir, I have found the authors of it,
See where they sit, and in their bloudy fists
The fatal instruments of death and sin.
Lee. Just judgement of that power, whose gracious eye,
Loathing the sight of such a heinous fact,
Dazling their senses with benumming sleep,
Till their unhallowed treachery was known.
Awake ye monsters, murtherers awake,
Tremble for horror, blush you cannot choose,
Beholding this unhumane deed of yours.
Cob. What mean you, sir, to trouble weary souls,
And interrupt us of our quiet sleep?
Lee. Oh devilish! can you boast unto your selves
Of quiet sleep, having within your hearts
The guilt of murder waking, that with cries
Deafs the loud thunder, and solicits heaven
With more then mandrakes shreeks for your offence?
La. What murther? you upbraid us wrongfully.
Lee. Can you deny the fact? See you not here,
The body of my son by you misdone?
Look on his wounds, look on his purple hue:
Do we not find you where the deed was done?
Were not your knives fast closed in your hands?
Is not this cloth an argument beside,
Thus stain'd and spotted with his innocent bloud?
These speaking characters were there nothing else
To plead against ye, would convict you both.
To Hartford with them, where the Sizes now are kept,
Their lives shall answer for my sons lost life.
Cob. As we are innocent, so may we speed.
Lee. As I am wrong'd, so may the Law proceed.

Enter Rochester, Constable of S. Albans, with Priest, Doll, and the Irishman in Harpool's apparel.

Bish. What intricate confusion have we here?
Not two hours since, we apprehended one
In habit Irish, but in speech not so;
And now you bring another, that in speech is Irish,
But in habit English: yea, and more then so,
The servant of that heretick Lord Cobham.
Irish. Fait me be no servant of de Lort Cobham,
Me be Mack Chane of Ulster.
Bish. Otherwise call'd Harpool of Kent, go too, sir,
You cannot blind us with your broken Irish.
Pri. Trust me, Lord Bishop, whether Irish or English.
Harpool or not Harpool, that I leave to the trial:
But sure I am, this man by face and speech,
Is he that murdred young Sir Richard Lee:
I met him presently upon the fact,
And that he slew his Master for that gold,
Those Jewels, and that chain I took from him.
Bish. Well, our affairs do call us back to London,
So that we cannot prosecute the cause
As we desire to do, therefore we leave
The charge with you, to see they be convey'd
To Hartford Size: both this counterfeit,
And you Sir John of Wrotham, and your wench,
For you are culpable as well as they,
Though not for murther, yet for fellony.
But since you are the means to bring to light
This graceless murther, ye shall bear with you
Our Letters to the Judges of the Bench,
To be your friends in what they lawfull may.
Priest. I thank your Lordship.

Enter Goaler, bringing forth Oldcastle.

Goa. Bring forth the prisoners, see the Court prepar'd,
The Justices are coming to the Bench:
So, let him stand, away and fetch the rest. Exeunt.
Cob. Oh give me patience to endure this scourge.
Thou that art fountain of that vertuous stream,
And though contempt of witnes, and reproach
Hang on these iron gives, to presse my life

As

As low as earth, yet ſtrengthen me with faith,
That I may mount in ſpirit above the clouds.

Enter Goaler, bringing in La. Cobham and Harpool.

Here comes my Lady, ſorrow 'tis for her.
Thy wound is grievous, elſe I ſcoffe at thee.
What and poor Harpool! art thou i'th'bryars too?
Har. Ifaith my Lord, I am in, get out how I can.
La. Say (gentle Lord) for now we are alone,
And may conferre, ſhall we confeſſe in brief,
Of whence, and what we are, and ſo prevent
The accuſation is commenc'd againſt us?
Cob. What will that help us? Being known, ſweet love,
We ſhall for hereſie be put to death,
For ſo they term the Religion we profeſſe.
No, if we dye, let this our comfort be,
That of the guilt impos'd our ſoules are free.
Har. I, I my Lord, Harpool is ſo reſolv'd,
I wreak of death the leſſe in that I dye,
Not by the ſentence of that envious Prieſt.
La. Well, be it then according as heavens pleaſe.

Enter L. Judge, Juſtices, Mayor of S. Albans, Lord Powis and his Lady, old Sir Richard Lee: the Judge and Juſtices take their places.

Judg. Now Mr. Maior, what Gentleman is that
You bring with you before us to the bench?
May. The Lord Powis, if it like your honour,
And this his Lady travelling toward Wales;
Who, for they lodg'd laſt night within my houſe,
And my Lord Biſhop did lay wait for ſuch,
Were very willing to come on with me,
Leſt for their ſakes, ſuſpition we might wrong.
Jud. We cry your honour mercy, good my Lord,
Wilt pleaſe you take your place. Madam, your Ladyſhip
May here, or where you will repoſe your ſelf
Until this buſineſſe now in hand be paſt.
La. Po. I will withdraw into ſome other room,
So that your Lordſhip and the reſt be pleas'd.
Jud. With all our hearts: attend the Lady there.
Pow. Wife, I have ey'd yon priſ'ners all this while,
And my conceit doth tell me, 'tis our friend
The Noble Cobham, and his virtuous Lady.
La. Po. I think no leſs, are they ſuſpected for this murther?
Po. What it means
I cannot tell, but we ſhall know anon:
Mean time as you paſs by them, ask the queſtion,
But do it ſecretly you be not ſeen,
And make ſome ſign, that I may know your mind.

As ſhe paſſeth over the ſtage by them.

La. Po. My Lord Cobham? Madam?
Cob. No Cobham now, nor Madam, as you love us,
But John of Lancashire, and Joan his wife.
La. Po. Oh tell, what is it that our love can do,
To pleaſure you, for we are bound to you.
Cob. Nothing but this, that you conceal our names;
So, gentle Lady, paſſe for being ſpyed.
La. Po. My heart I leave, to bear part of your grief. Exit
Jud. Call the Priſoners to the Bar: ſir Richard Lee,
What evidence can you bring againſt theſe people,
To prove them guilty of the murther done?
Lee. This bloudy Towel, and theſe naked Knives,
Beſide, we found them ſitting by the place,
Where the dead body lay within a buſh.
Ind. What anſwer you why Law ſhould not proceed,
According to this evidence given in,
To tax ye with the penalty of death?
Cob. That we are free from murders very thought,
And know not how the Gentleman was ſlain.
1. Inſt. How came this linnen cloath ſo bloudy then?
L. Cob. My husband hot with travelling, my Lord,
His noſe guſht out a bleeding, that was it.
2. Inſt. But how came your ſharp edg'd knives unſheath'd?
L. Cob. To cut ſuch ſimple victual as we had.
Jud. Say we admit this anſwer to thoſe Articles,
What made you in ſo private a dark nook,
So far remote from any common path,
As was the thick where the dead corps was thrown?
Cob. Journying, my Lord, from London, from the Term,
Down into Lancaſhire, where we do dwell;
And what with age, and travel being faint,
We gladly ſought a place where we might reſt,
Free from reſort of other paſſengers,
And ſo we ſtray'd into that ſecret corner.
Ind. Theſe are but ambages to drive off time,
And linger juſtice from her purpos'd end.
But who are theſe?

Enter Conſtable with the Iriſh-man, Priſt, and Doll.

Con. Stay judgement, and releaſe thoſe innocents,
For here is he whoſe hand hath done the deed,
For which they ſtand endited at the Bar:
This ſavage villain, this rude Iriſh ſlave,
His tongue already hath confeſt the fact,
And here is witneſſe to confirm as much.
Pri. Yes, my good Lord, no ſooner had he ſlain
His loving Maſter for the wealth he had,
But I upon the inſtant met with him:
And what he purchas'd with the loſſe of bloud,
With ſtrokes I preſently bereav'd him of,
Some of the which is ſpent, the reſt remaining,
I willingly ſurrender to the hands
Of old Sir Richard Lee, as being his;
Beſide, my Lord Judge, I greet your honour
With Letters from my Lord of Rocheſter.
Delivers them.
Lee. Is this the Wolf, whoſe thirſty throat did drink
My dear Son's bloud? art thou the Snake
He cheriſht, yet with envious piercing ſting
Aſſaild'ſt him mortally? Were't not that the Law
Stands ready to revenge thy cruelty,
Traytor to God, thy Maſter, and to me,
Theſe hands ſhould be thy executioner.
Ind. Patience, ſir Richard Lee, you ſhall have juſtice.
The fact is odious, therefore take him hence,
And being hang'd until the wretch be dead,
His body after ſhall be hang'd in chains,
Near to the place where he did act the murther.
Irish. Prythee, Lord Shudge, let me have mine own cloathes, my ſtrouces there, and let me be hang'd in a wyth after my country the Irish faſhion. Exit.
Ind. Go to, away with him. And now, ſir John,
Although by you this murther came to light:
Yet upright Law will not hold you excus'd,
For you did rob the Iriſh-man, by which
You ſtand attainted here of Fellony:
Beſide, you have been lewd, and many yeares
Led a laſcivious, unbeſeeming life.

Pri. O

Pri. O but, my Lord, sir John repents, and he will mend.
Iud. In hope thereof, together with the favour
My Lord of Rochester intreats for you,
We are content you shall be proved.
Pri. I thank your good Lordship.
Iud. These falsly here accus'd, and brought
In peril wrongfully, we in like sort do set at liberty.
Lee. And for amends,
Touching the wrong unwittingly I have done,
I give these few Crowns.
Iud. Your kindnesse merits praise, sir Richard Lee,
So let us hence.
Exeunt all but L. Powes and Cobham.
Pow. But Powes still must stay,
There yet remains a part of that true love
He owes his noble Friend, unsatisfied
And unperform'd, which first of all doth bind me
To gratulate your Lordship's safe delivery:
And then intreat, that since unlookt for thus
We here are met, your honour would vouchsafe
To ride with me to Wales, where though my power,
(Though not to quittance those great benefits
I have receiv'd of you) yet both my house,
My purse, my servants, and what else I have
Are all at your command. Deny me not,
I know the Bishop's hate pursues ye so,
As there's no safety in abiding here.
Cob. 'Tis true my Lord, and God forgive him for it.
Pow. Then let us hence, you shall be straight provided
Of lusty geldings: and once entred Wales,
Well may the Bishop hunt, but spight his face,
He never more shall have the game in chace. Exeunt.

FINIS.

The PURITAN: or, The WIDOW of Watling-ſtreet.

Actus Primus.

Enter the Lady Widdow-Plus, her two Daughters, Frank and Moll, her husbands Brother an old Knight Sir Godfrey, with her Son and Heir Maſter Edmond, all in mourning apparell, Edmond in a Cypreſſe Hat. The Widow wringing her hands, and burſting out into paſſion, as newly come from the Buriall of her husband.

Widow.

OH, that ever I was born, that ever I was born!

Sir Godfrey. Nay good ſiſter, dear ſiſter, ſweet ſiſter, be of good comfort, ſhew your ſelf a woman, now or never.

Wid. Oh, I have loſt the deareſt man, I have buried the ſweeteſt husband that ever lay by woman.

Sir God. Nay give him his due, he was indeed an honeſt, virtuous, diſcreet wiſe man, ---he was my Brother, as right, as right.

Wid. O, I ſhall never forget him, never forget him, he was a man ſo well given to a woman---oh!

Sir God. Nay, but kind ſiſter, I could weep as much as any woman, but alaſs, our teares cannot call him again: me thinks you are well read, ſiſter, and know that death is as common as Homo, a common name to all men; ---a man ſhall be taken when he's making water, ---nay, did not the learned Parſon Maſter Pigman tell us e'ne now, that all Fleſh is frail, we are born to die, Man has but a time: with ſuch like deep and profound perſwaſions, as he is a rare fellow you know, and an excellent Reader: and for example, (as there are examples abundance) did not Sir Humphrey Bubble die tother day, there's a luſty Widow, why ſhe cri'd not above half an hour---for ſhame, for ſhame: then followed him old Maſter Fulſome the Uſurer, there's a wiſe Widow, why ſhe cry'd ne're a whit at all.

Wid. O ranck not me with thoſe wicked women, I had a husband out-ſhin'd 'em all.

Sir God. I that he did, ifaith, he out-ſhin'd 'em all.

Wid. Doſt thou ſtand there and ſee us all weep, and not once ſhed a tear for thy fathers death? oh thou ungracious ſon and heir thou?

Edm. Troth, Mother, I ſhould not weep I'me ſure; I am paſt a Child I hope, to make all my old School-fellowes laugh at me; I ſhould be mockt, ſo I ſhould; pray let one of my ſiſters weep for me, I'le laugh as much for her another time?

Wid. O thou paſt-Grace thou, out of my ſight, thou graceleſſe Imp, thou grieveſt me more then the death of thy Father: oh thou ſtubborn onely Son: hadſt thou ſuch an honeſt man to thy Father---that would deceive all the world to get riches for thee, and canſt thou not afford a little ſalt water? he that ſo wiſely did quite overthrow the right heir of thoſe Lands, which now you reſpect not: up every morning betwixt four and five, ſo duely at Weſtminſter-Hall every Tearm-time, with all his Cards and Writings, for thee, thou wicked Abſalon---oh dear husband!

Edm. Weep, quotha? I proteſt I am glad he's Churched? for now he's gone I ſhall ſpend in quiet.

Fran. Dear Mother, pray ceaſe, half your teares ſuffice,
'Tis time for you to take truce with your eyes,
Let me weep now?

Wid. O ſuch a dear Knight, ſuch a ſweet Husband have I loſt, have I loſt? ----if bleſſed be the Coarſe the rain rains upon, he had it, pouring down?

Sir. God. Siſter, be of good cheer, we are all mortall our ſelves, I come upon you freſhly, I ne're ſpeak without comfort, hear me what I ſhall ſay; ---my brother has left you wealthy, y'are rich.

Wid. Oh!

Sir God. I ſay y'are rich: you are alſo fair.

Wid. Oh!

Sir God. Go to, y'are fair, you cannot ſmother it, beauty will come to light; nor are your yeares ſo far enter'd with you, but that you will be ſought after, and may very well anſwer another husband; the world is full of fine Gallants, choyce enow, ſiſter, ---for what ſhould we doe with all our Knights I pray? but to marry rich Widowes, wealthy Citizens Widowes; luſty fair-brow'd Ladies; go to, be of good comfort I ſay, leave ſnobbing and weeping---yet my Brother was a kind-hearted man----I would not have the Elf ſee me now? ---come, pluck up a womans heart---here ſtands your Daughters, who be well eſtated, and at maturity will alſo be enquir'd after with good husbands, ſo all theſe teares ſhall be ſoon dried up, and a better world then ever---- what, Woman? you muſt not weep ſtill? he's dead, he's buried---yet I cannot chuſe but weep for him.

Wid. Marry again! no, let me be buried quick then!
And that ſame part of Quire whereon I tread
To ſuch intent, O may it be my grave:
And that the Prieſt may turn his wedding prayers,

Even

Even with a breath, to funerall dust and ashes;
Oh, out of a million of millions, I should ne're find such a husband; he was unmatchable---unmatchable: nothing was so hot, nor too dear for me, I could not speak of that one thing that I had not, beside, I had keyes of all, kept all, receiv'd all, had money in my purse, spent what I would, went abroad when I would, came home when I would, and did all what I would: Oh---my sweet husband; I shall never have the like.

Sir God. Sister? ne're say so, he was an honest Brother of mine, and so, and you may light upon one as honest again, or one, as honest again may light upon you, that's the properer phrase indeed.

Wid. Never: oh if you love me urge it not:
Oh may I be the by-word of the world,
The common talk at Table in the mouth
Of every Groom and Waiter, if e're more
I entertain the carnall suit of man.

Mol. I must kneel down for fashion too.

Franck. And I, whom never man as yet hath scal'd,
E'ne in this depth of generall sorrow, vow
Never to marry, to sustain such losse,
As a dear husband seems to be, once dead.

Mol. I lov'd my Father well too; but to say,
Nay vow, I would not marry for his death,
Sure I should speak false Latin, should I not?
I'de as soon vow never to come in Bed:
Tut, Women must live by th' quick, and not by th' dead.

Wid. Dear Copy of my husband, oh let me kiss thee:
Drawing out her Husbands Picture.
How like him is their Model; their brief Picture
Quickens my teares: my sorrowes are renew'd
At their fresh sight.

Sir God. Sister----

Wid. Away,
All honesty with him is turn'd to clay,
Oh my sweet husband, oh----

Frank. My deat Father? Exeunt mother & daughters.

Mol. Here's a puling indeed! I think my Mother weeps for all the women that ever buried husbands: for if from time to time all the Widowers teares in England had been bottled up, I doe not think all would have fill'd a three-half-penny Bottle: alass, a small matter bucks a Handkercher,----and sometimes the spittle stands too nigh Saint Thomas a Watrings: well, I can mourn in good sober sort as well as another? but where I spend one tear for a dead Father, I could give twenty kisses for a quick husband. Exit Mol.

Sir God. Well, go thy wayes, old Sir Godfrey, and thou may'st be proud on't, thou hast a kind loving sister-in-law: how constant? how passionate? how full of April the poor soules eyes are; well, I would my Brother knew on't, he should then know what a kind Wife he had left behind him; truth, and 'twere not for shame that the neighbours at th'next Garden should hear me betwixt joy and grief, I should e'ne cry out-right.

Exit Sir Godfrey.

Edmond. So, a fair riddance, my Father's laid in dust, his Coffin and he is like a whole Meat-Pye, and the wormes will cut him up shortly: farewell, old Dad, farewell; I'le be curb'd in no more: I perceive a son and heir may quickly be made a fool and he will be one, but I'le take another order; ---Now she would have me weep for him forsooth, and why; because he cozen'd the right heir being a fool, and bestow'd those Lands on me his eldest Son; and therefore I must weep for him, ha, ha: why all the world knowes, as long as 'twas his pleasure to get me, 'twas his duty to get for me: I know the Law in that point, no Atturney can gull me. Well, my Uncle is an old Asse, and an admirable Coxcombe, I'le rule the Roast my self, I'le be kept under no more, I know what I may doe well enough by my Fathers Copy: the Law's in mine own hands now: nay now I know my strength, I'le be strong enough for my Mother I warrant you?

Exit.

Enter George Py-bord a Schollar and a Citizen, and unto him an old Souldier, Peter Skirmish.

Pye. What's to be done now, old Lad of War, thou that wert wont to be as hot as a turn-spit, as nimble as a Fencer, and as lowsie as a Schoole-master; now thou art put to silence like a Sectary, ---War sits now like a Justice of peace, and does nothing: where be your Muskets, Calivers and Hotshots? in Long-lane, at pawn, at pawn; ---Now keyes are our onely Guns, Key-guns, Key-guns, and Bawdes the Gunners,---who are your sentinells in peace, and stand ready charg'd to give warning; with hems, hums, and pocky-coffs; onely your Chambers are licenst to play upon you, and Drabs enow to give fire to 'em.

Skir. Well, I cannot tell, but I am sure it goes wrong with me, for since the cessure of the wars, I have spent above a hundred Crownes out a purse: I have been a Soldier any time this forty yeares, and now I perceive an old Soldier, and an old Courtier have both one destiny, and in the end turn both into hob-nayles.

Pye. Pretty mystery for a Beggar, for indeed a hob-naile is the true embleme of a Beggar's Shoe-soale.

Skir. I will not say but that War is a bloud-sucker, and so; but in my conscience, (as there is no soldier but has a piece of one, though it be full of holes like a shot Ancient, no matter, 'twill serve to swear by) in my conscience, I think some kinde of Peace has more hidden oppressions, and violent heady sins, (though looking of a gentle nature) then a profest warre.

Pye. Troth, and for mine own part, I am a poor Gentleman, and a Schollar, I have been matriculated in the University, wore out six Gowns there, seen some fools, and some Schollars, some of the City, and some of the Countrey, kept order, went bare-headed over the Quadrangle, eat my Commons with a good stomack, and Battled with Discretion; at last, having done many slights and tricks to maintain my wit in use (as my brain would never endure me to be idle,) I was expell'd the University, onely for stealing a Cheese out of Jesus Colledge.

Skir. Is't possible?

Pye. Oh! there was one Welshman (God forgive him) pursued it hard? and never left, till I turn'd my staffe toward London, where when I came, all my friends were pit-hold, gone to Graves, (as indeed there was but a few left before) then was I turn'd to my wits, to shift in the world, to towre among Sons and Heires, and Fooles, and Gulls, and Ladies eldest Sons, to work upon nothing, to feed out of Flint, and ever since has my belly been much beholding to my brain: But now to return to you, old Skirmish. I say as you say, and for my part wish a Turbulency in the world, for I have nothing in the world, but my wits, and I think they are as mad as they will be: and to strengthen your Argument the more, I say an honest warre, is better than a bawdy peace: as touching my my profeſſion; the multiplicity of Schollars, hatcht, and nouriſht in the idle Calmes of peace, makes'em like Fiſhes one devour another; and the communitie of Learning has ſo plaid upon affections, and thereby almoſt Religion is come about to Phantaſie, and diſcredited by being too much ſpoken of--in ſo many and mean mouths. I my ſelf being a Schollar and a Graduate, have no other comfort by my learning, but the affection of my words, to know how Schollar-like to name what I want, and can call my ſelf a Beggar both in Greek and Latine, and therefore not to cog with Peace, I'le not be afraid to ſay, 'tis a great Breeder, but a bad Nouriſher: a great getter of Children, which muſt either be Thieves or Rich men, Knaves or Beggars.

Skirmiſh. Well, would I had been born a Knave then, when I was born a Beggar, for if the truth were known, I think I was begot when my Father had never a penny in his purſe.

Pye. Puh, faint not old Skirmiſh, let this warrant thee, Facilis Deſcenſus Averni, 'tis an eaſie journey to a Knave, thou maiſt be a Knave when thou wilt; and Peace is a good Madam to all other profeſſions, and an arrant Drab to us, let us handle her accordingly, and by our wits thrive in deſpight of her; for the law lives by quarrels, the Courtier by ſmooth good-morrows, and every profeſſion makes it ſelf greater by imperfections, why not we then by ſhifts, wiles, and forgeries? and ſeeing our brains are the onely Patrimonies, let's ſpend with judgement, not like a deſperate ſon and heir, but like a ſober and diſcreet Templer, ---one that will never march beyond the bounds of his allowance, and for our thriving means, thus, I my ſelf will put on the Deceit of a Fortune-teller, a Fortune-teller.

Skirm. Very proper.

Pye. And you a figure-caſter, or a Conjurer.

Skir. A Conjurer.

Pye. Let me alone, I'le inſtruct you, and teach you to deceive all eyes, but the Devils.

Skir. Oh I, for I would not deceive him and I could chooſe, of all others.

Pye. Fear not I warrant you; and ſo by theſe means we ſhall help one another to Patients, as the condition of the age affords creatures enow for cunning to work upon.

Skir. Oh wondrous, new fools and freſh aſſes.

Pye. Oh, fit, fit, excellent.

Skir. What in the name of Conjuring?

Pye-boord. My memory greets me happily with an admirable ſubject to graze upon. The Lady-Widow, who of late I ſaw weeping in her Garden, for the death of her Huſband, ſure ſhe's but a watriſh ſoul, and half on't by this time is dropt out of her eyes: device well manag'd may do good upon her: it ſtands firme, my firſt practiſe ſhall be there.

Skir. You have my voice, George.

Pye-board. Sh'as a gray Gull to her Brother, a fool to her onely ſon, and an ape to her youngeſt Daughter;---I over-heard'em ſeverally, and from their words I'le drive my device; and thou old Peter Skirmiſh ſhalt be my ſecond in all ſlights.

Skir. Ne're doubt me, George Pye-board,----only you muſt teach me to conjure.

Enter Captain Idle, pinion'd, and with a guard of Officers paſſeth over the Stage.

Pye. Puh, I'le perfect thee, Peter:
How now? what's he?

Skir. Oh George! this ſight kills me,
'Tis my ſworn Brother, Captain Idle.

Pye. Captain Idle.

Skir. Apprehended for ſome fellonious act or other, he has ſtarted out, h'as made a Night on't, lackt ſilver; I cannot but commend his reſolution, he would not pawn his Buff-Jerkin, I would either ſome of us were employed, or might pitch our Tents at Uſurers doors, to kill the ſlaves as they peep out at the Wicket.

Pye. Indeed thoſe are our ancient enemies; they keep our money in their hands, and make us to be hang'd for robbing of 'em, but come let's follow after to the Priſon, and know the nature of his offence, and what we can ſtead him in, he ſhall be ſure of; and I'le uphold it ſtill, that a charitable Knave, is better then a ſoothing Puritan. Exeunt.

Enter at one door Corporal Oath, a vain-glorious fellow, and at the other, three of the Widdow Puritans Servingmen, Nicholas Saint-Tantlings, Simon Saint Mary-Overies, and Frailty in black ſcurvy mourning coats, and Books at their Girdles, as coming from Church. They meet.

Nich. What Corporal Oath? I am ſorry we have met with you next our hearts; you are the man that we are forbidden to keep company withall, we muſt not ſwear I can tell you, and you have the name for ſwearing.

Sim. I, Corporal Oath, I would you would do ſo much as forſake us, we cannot abide you, we muſt not be ſeen in your company.

Frail. There is none of us I can tell you, but ſhall be ſoundly whipt for ſwearing.

Corp. Why how now? we three? Puritanical Scrape-ſhooes, Fleſh a good Fridayes; a hand.

All. Oh.

Corp. Why Nicholas Saint-Tantlings, Simon Saint Mary-Overies, has the De'il poſſeſt you, that you ſwear no better, you half-Chriſtened Katomites, you ungod-mother'd Varlets, do's the firſt leſſon teach you to be proud, and the ſecond to be Cox-combs; proud Cox-combs; not once to do duty to a man of Mark.

Frail. A man of Mark, quatha, I do not think he can ſhew a Beggars Noble.

Corp. A Corporal, a Commander, one of ſpirit, that is able to blow you up all drye with your Books at your Girdles.

Simon. We are not taught to believe that, ſir, for we know the breath of man is weak. Corp breaths on Frailty.

Frail. Foh, you lie Nicholas; for here's one ſtrong enough; blow us up, quatha, he may well blow me above twelve-ſcore off on him: I warrant if the wind ſtood right, a man might ſmell him from the top of Newgate, to the the Leads of Ludgate.

Corp. Sirrah, thou hollow book of Wax-candle.

Nich. I, you may ſay what you will, ſo you ſwear not.

Corp. I ſwear by the------

Nich. Hold, hold, good Corporal Oath; for if you ſwear once, we ſhall fall down in a ſown preſently.

Corp. I muſt and will ſwear: you quivering Cox-combs, my Captain is impriſoned, and by Vulcan's Leather Cod-piece point--------

Nich. O Simon, what an oath was there.

Frail. If he ſhould chance to break it, the poor man's Breeches would fall down about his heels, for Venus allows but one point to his hoſe.

Cor. With theſe, my Bully-Feet, I will thump ope the Priſon doors, and brain the Keeper with the begging-Box, but I'le ſet my honeſt ſweet Captain Idle at liberty.

Nic. How, Captain Idle? my old Aunts ſon, my dear Kinſman in Cappadochio.

Cor. I, thou Church-peeling, thou Holy-paring, Religious out-ſide thou; if thou had'ſt any grace in thee, thou would'ſt viſit him, relieve him, ſwear to get him out.

Nic. Aſſure you, Corporal, indeed-la, 'tis the firſt time I heard on't.

Cor. Why do't now then, Marmaſet; bring forth thy yearly-wages, let not a Commander periſh?

Simon. But if he be one of the wicked, he ſhall periſh.

Nic. Well Corporal, I'le e'en along with you, to viſit my Kinſman, if I can do him any good, I will, --- but I have nothing for him, Simon Saint Mary Overies and Frailty, pray make a Lye for me to the Knight my Maſter, old Sir Godfrey.

Cor. A Lye? may you lye then?

Frail. O I, we may lye, but we muſt not ſwear.

Sim. True, we may lie with our Neighbour's wife, but we muſt not ſwear we did ſo.

Cor. Oh, an excellent Tag of Religion!

Nic. Oh Simon, I have thought upon a ſound excuſe, it will go currant, ſay that I am gon to a Faſt.

Sim. To a Faſt? very good.

Nic. I, to a Faſt ſay, with maſter Full-belly the Miniſter.

Sim. Maſter Full-belly? an honeſt man: he feeds the flock well, for he's an excellent Feeder.

Exeunt Corporal & Nicholas.

Frail. O I, I have ſeen him eat up a whole Pig, and afterwards fall to the pettitoes. Exeunt Sim. & Frailty.

The Priſon, Marſhalſea.

Enter Captain Idle at one door, and old Souldier at the other.

George Pye-board ſpeaking within.

Pye. Pray turn the key.

Skir. Turn the key I pray?

Cap. Who ſhould thoſe be, I almoſt know their voices? O my friends! Entring.
Y'are welcome to a ſmelling Room here? you newly took leave of the air, is't not a ſtrange ſavour?

Pie. As all Priſons have ſmells of ſundry wretches;
Who though departed, leave their ſents behind 'em,
By Gold Captain, I am ſincerely ſorry for thee.

Cap. By my troth, George, I thank thee; but, piſh--what muſt be, muſt be.

Skir. Captain, what do you lie in for? is't great? what's your offence?

Cap. Faith, my offence is ordinary, -- common, a High-way, and I fear me my penalty will be ordinary and common too, a Halter.

Pye. Nay, propheſie not ſo ill, it ſhall go hard
But I'le ſhift for thy life.

Cap. Whether I live or dye, thou'rt an honeſt George. I'le tell you --- Silver flow'd not with me, as it had done, (for now the tide runs to Bawds and Flatterers) I had a ſtart out, and by chance ſet upon a fat Steward, thinking his Purſe had been as purſie as his body; and the ſlave had about him but the poor purchaſe of ten groats: notwithſtanding being deſcryed, purſued, and taken, I know the Law is ſo grim, in reſpect of many deſperate, unſetled Souldiers, that I fear me I ſhall dance after their pipe for't.

Skir. I am twice ſorry for you, Captain; firſt, that your purchaſe was ſo ſmall, and now that your danger is ſo great.

Cap. Puſh, the worſt is but death, --- ha you a pipe of Tobacco about you?

Skir. I think I have thereabouts about me!

Captain blows a Pipe.

Cap. Here's a clean Gentlman too, to receive.

Pye. Well, I muſt caſt about ſome happy ſlight:
Work brain, that ever did'ſt thy Maſter right.

Cor. Keeper, let the key be turn'd.

Corporal and Nicholas within.

Nic. I, I, pray maſter Keeper give's a caſt of your office.

Cap. How now? more viſitants? --what, Corporal Oath?

Pye, Skir. Corporal.

Cor. In priſon, honeſt Captain? this muſt not be.

Nic. How do you, Captain Kinſman?

Cap. Good Coxcomb, what makes that pure, --ſtarcht fool here?

Nic. You ſee, Kinſman, I am ſomewhat bold to call in, and ſee how you do; I heard you were ſafe enough, and I was very glad on't, that it was no worſe.

Cap. This is a double torture now, --- this fool by th' book doth vex me more then my impriſonment. What meant you, Corporal, to hook him hither?

Cor. Who, he? he ſhall relieve thee, and ſupply thee, I'le make him do't.

Cap. Fie, what vain breath you ſpend:
He ſupply? I'le ſooner expect mercy from a Uſurer when my Bond's forfeited, ſooner kindneſſe from a Lawyer when my money's ſpent: nay, ſooner charity from the Devil, then good from a Puritan. I'le look for relief from him, when Lucifer is reſtor'd to his bloud, and in Heaven again.

Nic. I warrant my Kinſman's talking of me, for my left ear burns moſt tyrannically.

Pye. Captain Idle? what's he there? he looks like a Monkey upward, and a Crane downward.

Cap. Pſhaw; a fooliſh couſin of mine: I muſt thank God for him.

Pye. Why the better ſubject to work a ſcape upon; thou ſhalt e'en change cloathes with him, and leave him here, and ſo ---

Cap. Puſh, I publiſht him e'en now to my Corporal, he will be damn'd ere he do me ſo much good; why I know a more proper, a more handſome device then that, if the ſlave would be ſociable, ---now goodman Fleer-face?

Nic. Oh, my Couſin begins to ſpeak to me now, I ſhall be acquainted with him again, I hope.

Skir. Look! what ridiculous Raptures take hold of his wrinckles.

Pye. Then what ſay you to this device, a happy one, Captain?

Cap. Speak low, George; Priſon Rats have wider eares then thoſe in Malt-lofts.

Nic. Couſin, if it lay in my power, as they ſay, --to--do-

Cap. 'Twould do me an exceeding pleaſure indeed, that; nere talk forder on't, the fool will be hang'd ere he do't.

Cor. Pax, I'le thump'im to't.

Pye. Why do but try the Fopſter, and break it to him bluntly.

Cap. And ſo my diſgrace will dwell in his Jawes, & the Slave

Slave ſlaver out our purpoſe to his Maſter, for would I were but as ſure on't, as I am ſure he will deny to do't.

Nic. I would be heartily glad, Couſin, if any of my friendſhips, as they ſay, might --ſtand, ah--

Pye. Why, you ſee he offers his friendſhip fooliſhly to you already.

Cap. I, that's the hell on't, I would he would offer it wiſely.

Nic. Verily, and indeed-la, Couſin --

Cap. I have took note of thy fleers a good while, if thou art minded to do me good? as thou gap ſt upon me comfortably, and giv'ſt me charitable faces; which indeed is but a faſhion in you all that are Puritans, wilt ſoon at night ſteal me thy Maſter's Chain?

Nic. Oh, I ſhall ſowne!

Pye. Corp oral, he ſtarts already!

Cap. I know it to be worth three hundred Crowns, and with the half of that, I can buy my life at a Brokers, at ſecond hand, which now lies in pawn to the Law, if this thou refuſe to do, being eaſie and nothing dangerous, in that thou art held in good opinion of thy Maſter; why 'tis a palpable Argument thou hold'ſt my life at no price, and theſe thy broken and unjoynted offers, are but only created in thy lip, now born, and now buried, fooliſh breath only: what, woult do't? ſhall I look for happineſſe in thy anſwer?

Nich. Steal my Maſter's Chain quoth he? no, it ſhall nere be ſaid, that Nicholas Saint Tantlings committed Bird-lime!

Cap. Nay, I told you as much, did I not? though he be a Puritan, yet he will be a true man.

Nic. Why Couſin, you know 'tis written, Thou ſhalt not ſteal.

Cap. Why, and fool, thou ſhalt love thy Neighbour, and help him in extremities.

Nic. Maſs I think it be indeed; in what Chapter's that, Couſin?

Capt. Why in the firſt of Charity, the ſecond verſe.

Nic. The firſt of Charity, quath a, that's a good jeſt, there no ſuch Chapter in my book!

Cap. No, I know twas torn out of thy Book, and that makes ſo little in thy heart.

Pye. Come, let me tell you, y'are too unkind a Kinſman ifaith; the Captain loving you ſo dearly, I, like the Pomwater of his eye, & you to be ſo uncomfortable, fie, fie.

Nic. Pray do not wiſh me to be hang'd, any thing elſe that I can do; had it been to rob, I would ha don't, but I muſt not Steal, that's the word, the literal, Thou ſhalt not ſteal; and would you wiſh me to ſteal then?

Pye. No faith, that were too much, to ſpeak truth; why wilt thou Nim it from him?

Nic. That I will.

Pye. Why enough, Bully; he will be content with that, or he ſhall ha none; let me alone with him now, Captain, I ha dealt with your Kinſman in a corner; a good, --kind-natur'd fellow, me thinks: go to, you ſhall not have all your own asking, you ſhall bate ſomewhat on't, he is not contented abſolutely, as you would ſay, to ſteal the Chain from him, but to do you a pleaſure, he will nim it from him.

Nic. I, that I will, Couſin.

Cap. Well, ſeeing he will do no more, as far as I ſee, I muſt be contented with that.

Cor. Here's no notable gullery?

Pye. Nay, I'le come nearer to you, Gentleman, becauſe we'll have only but a help and a mirth on't, the Knight ſhall not loſe his Chain neither, but be only laid out of the way ſome one or two dayes.

Nic. I, that would be good indeed, Kinſman.

Pye. For I have a farder reach, to profit us better, by the miſſing on't only, then if we had it out-right, as my diſcourſe ſhall make it known to you; -- when thou haſt the Chain, do but convey it out at a back-door into the Garden, and there hang it cloſe in the Roſemary banck, but for a ſmall ſeaſon; and by that harmleſſe device, I know how to wind Captain Idle out of priſon, the Knight thy Maſter ſhall get his pardon, and releaſe him, and he ſatisfie thy Maſter with his own Chain, and wondrous thanks on both hands.

Nic. That were rare indeed la, pray let me know how.

Pye. Nay, 'tis very neceſſary thou ſhould'ſt know, becauſe thou muſt be employ'd as an Actor?

Nic. An Actor? O no, that's a Player? and our Parſon rails againſt Players mightily I can tell you, becauſe they brought him drunk upo'th' Stage once, --as he will be horribly drunk.

Cor. Maſs I cannot blame him then, poor Church-ſpout.

Pye. Why as an Intermedler then?

Nic. I, that, that.

Pye. Give me audience then; when the old Knight thy Maſter has rag'd his fill for the loſs of the Chain, tell him thou haſt a Kinſman in priſon, of ſuch exquiſite Art, that the Devil himſelf is French Lackey to him; and runs bare-headed by his horſe -----belly (when he has one:) whom he will cauſe, with moſt Iriſh dexterity to fetch his Chain, though 'twere hid under a mine of Sea-coal, and ne're make Spade or Pick-axe his inſtruments; tell him but this, with farder inſtructions thou ſhalt receive from me, and thou ſhow'ſt thy ſelf a Kinſman indeed.

Cor. A dainty Bully.

Skir. An honeſt -- Book-keeper.

Cap. And my three times thrice honey-Couſin.

Nic. Nay, grace of God I'le rob him on't ſuddenly, and hang it in the Roſemary banck, but I bear that mind, Couſin, I would not Steal any thing, me thinks, for mine own Father.

Skir. He bears a good mind in that, Captain.

Py. Why well ſaid, he begins to be an honeſt fellow, faith.

Cor. In troth he does.

Nic. You ſee, Couſin, I am willing to do you any kindneſs, alwayes ſaving my ſelf harmleſs. Exit Nicholas.

Captain. Why I thank thee, fare thee well, I ſhall requite it..

Cor. 'Twill be good for thee, Captain, that thou haſt ſuch an egregious Aſſe to thy Couſin.

Cap. I, is not that a fine fool, Corporal?
But George, thou talk'ſt of Art and Conjuring,
How ſhall that be?

Pyb. Puh, be't not in your care,
Leave that to me and my directions;
Well, Captain, doubt not thy delivery now,
e'en with the vantage, man, to gain by Priſon,
As my thoughts prompt me: hold on brain and plot,
I aim at many cunning far events,
All which I doubt not to hit at length,
I'le to the Widow with a quaint aſſault,
Captain be merry.

Cap. Who I? Kerry merry Buffe-Jerkin.

Pye. Oh, I am happy in more ſlights, and one will knit ſtrong in another, --Corporal Oath.

Cor. Hoh Bully!

Pye. And thou, old Peter Skirmish, I have a neceſſary task for you both.

Skir. Lay't upon George Pye-bord.

Corp. What e're it be, we'll manage it.

Pye. I would have you two maintain a quarrell before the Lady Widdowes door, and draw your Swords ith' edge of the Evening: claſh a little, claſh, claſh.

Corp. Fuh.
Let us alone to make our Blades ring noon,
Though it be after ſupper.

Pye. I know you can;
And out of that falſe fire, I doubt not but to raiſe ſtrange belief---and, Captain, to countenance my device the better, and grace my words to the Widow, I have a good plain Sattin Sute, that I had of a young Reveller tother night, for words paſs not regarded now a dayes, unleſs they come from a good ſuit of cloathes, which the Fates and my wits have beſtowed upon me. Well, Captain Idle, if I did not highly love thee, I would ne're be ſeen within twelve ſcore of a priſon, for I proteſt at this inſtant, I walk in great danger of ſmall debts; I owe money to ſeverall Hoſteſſes, and you know ſuch Jills will quickly be upon a mans Jack.

Capt. True, George?

Pye. Fare thee well, Captain. Come Corporall and Ancient, thou ſhalt hear more newes next time we greet thee.

Corp. More newes? I, by yon Bear at Bridge-Foot in heaven ſhalt thou. Exeunt.

Capt. Enough: my friends farewell,
This priſon ſhewes as if Ghoſts did part in Hell.

Enter Moll youngeſt Daughter to the Widow, alone.

Moll. Not marry? forſwear marriage? why all women know 'tis as honourable a thing as to lie with a man; and I to ſpight my Siſters vow the more, have entertain'd a Suiter already, a fine Gallant Knight of the laſt Feather, he ſayes he will Coach me too, and well appoint me, allow me money to Dice withall, and many ſuch pleaſing proteſtations he ſticks upon my lips: indeed his ſhort-winded Father ith' Countrey is wondrous wealthy, a moſt abominable Farmer, and therefore he may dote in time: troth I'le venter upon him; women are not without wayes enough to help themſelves: if he prove wiſe and good as his word, why I ſhall love him, and uſe him kindly; and if he prove an Aſſe, why in a quarter of an houres warning I can transform him into an Oxe; ---- there comes in my relief again.

Enter Frailty.

Frail. O, Miſtreſſe Moll, Miſtreſſe Moll.

Moll. How now? what's the newes?

Frail. The Knight your Suiter, Sir John Penny-Dub.

Moll. Sir John Penny-Dub? where? where?

Frail. He's walking in the Gallery.

Moll. Has my Mother ſeen him yet?

Frail. O no, ſhe's---ſpitting in the Kitchin.

Moll. Direct him hither ſoftly, good Frailty,
I'le meet him half way.

Frail. That's juſt like running a Tilt; but I hope he'll break nothing this time.

Enter Sir John Penny-Dub.

Moll. 'Tis happineſſe my Mother ſaw him not:
O welcome, good Sir John.

Penny-Dub. I thank you faith,---Nay you muſt ſtand me till I kiſſe you: 'tis the faſhion every where ifaith, and I came from Court enow.

Moll. Nay the Fates forfend that I ſhould anger the faſhion?

Penny. Then not forgetting the ſweet of new ceremonies, I firſt fall back, then recovering my ſelf; make my honour to your lip thus: and then accoſt it.

Moll. Truſt me, very pretty, and moving, y'are worthy on't, ſir.
O my Mother, my Mother, now ſhe's here,

Kiſſing. Enter Widow and Sir Godfrey.

We'll ſteale into the Gallery. Exeunt.

Sir Godf. Nay, Siſter, let Reaſon rule you, doe not play the foole, ſtand not in your own light, you have wealthy offers, large tendrings, doe not withſtand your good fortune: who comes a wooing to you I pray? no ſmall fool, a rich Knight oth' City, Sir Oliver Muck-hill, no ſmall fool I can tell you: and furthermore as I heard late by your Maid-ſervants (as your Maid-ſervants will ſay to me any thing, I thank 'em) both your Daughters are not without Suiters, I, and worthy ones too; one a brisk Courtier, Sir Andrew Tip-ſtaffe, ſuiter afar off to your eldeſt Daughter, and the third a huge wealthy Farmers Son, a fine young Country Knight, they call him Sir John Penny-Dub, a good name marry, he may have it coyn'd when he lacks money: what bleſſings are theſe, Siſter?

Wid. Tempt me not, Satan.

Sir God. Satan? doe I look like Satan? I hope the Devil's not ſo old as I, I trow.

Wid. You wound my ſences, Brother, when you name
A ſuiter to me,--oh I cannot abide it,
I take in poyſon when I hear one nam'd.

Enter Simon.

How now, Simon? where's my ſon Edmond?

Sim. Verily, Madam, he is at vain Exerciſe, dripping in the Tennis-Court.

Wid. At Tennis-Court? oh, now his Father's gone, I ſhall have no rule with him; oh wicked Edmond, I might well compare this with the Prophecy in the Chronicle, though far inferiour, as Harry of Monmouth won all, and Harry of Windſor loſt all; ſo Edmond of Briſtow that was the Father, got all, and Edmond of London that's his ſon now, will ſpend all.

Sir Godf. Peace, ſiſter, we'll have him reform'd, there's hope on him yet, though it be but a little.

Enter Frailty.

Frail. Forſooth Madam; there are two or three Archers at door would very gladly ſpeak with your Ladiſhip.

Wid. Archers?

Sir God. Your Husbands Fletcher I warrant.

Wid. Oh,
Let them come near, they bring home things of his,
Troth I ſhould ha forgot 'em, how now?
Villain, which be thoſe Archers?

Enter the Suiters, Sir Andrew Tipſtaffe, Sir Oliver Muck-hill, and Penni-Dub.

Frail. Why, do you not ſee 'em before you? are not theſe theſe Archers, what do you call'em Shooters: Shooters and Archers are all one I hope.

Wid. Out ignorant ſlave.

Muck. Nay, pray be patient Lady;
We come in way of honorable love.

Tipſt. Penny. We do.

Muck. To you.

Tipſt. Penny. And to your Daughters.

Wid. O why will you offer me this, Gentlemen? indeed I will not look upon you; when the tears are ſcarce out of mine eyes, not yet waſht off from my cheeks, and my deer husbands body ſcarce ſo cold as the Coffin, what reaſon have you to offer it? I am not like ſome of your Widows that will bury one in the evening, and be ſure to another ere morning; pray away, pray take your anſwers good Knights, and you be ſweet Knights, I have vow'd never to marry;---and ſo have my daughters too!

Penny. I, two of you have, but the third's a good wench!

Muck. Lady, a ſhrewd anſwer marry; the beſt is, 'tis but the firſt; and he's a blunt wooer, that will leave for one ſharp anſwer.

Tip. Where be your Daughters Lady, I hope they'll give us better encouragements?

Wid. Indeed they'll anſwer you ſo, take't a my word they'll give you the very ſame anſwer Verbatim truly la.

Penny. Mum: Moll's a good wench ſtill, I know what ſhe'll do?

Muck. Well, Lady, for this time we'll take our leaves, hoping for better comfort.

Wid. O never, never: and I live theſe thouſand years; and you be good Knights, do not hope; 'twill be all Vain, Vain,----look you put off all your ſuits, and you come to me again.

Frail. Put of all their ſuits, quatha? I that's the beſt wooing of a Widdow indeed, when a man's Nonſuted, that is, when he's a bed with her.

Going out Muckhill and Sir Godfrey.

Muck. Sir Godfrey? here's twenty Angels more, work hard for me; there's life in't yet. Exit Muckhill.

Sir Godf. Fear not Sir Oliver Muckhill, I'le ſtick cloſe for you, leave all with me.

Enter George Pye-board the Schollar.

Pye. By your leave Lady Widow.

Wid. What another ſuiter now?

Pye. A ſuiter, no, I proteſt Lady? if you'd give me your ſelf, I'de not be troubled with you.

Wid. Say you ſo Sir, then you're the better welcome ſir.

Pye. Nay, Heaven bleſſe me from a Widow, unleſſe I were ſure to bury her ſpeedily!

Wid. Good bluntneſſe: well, your buſineſſe, ſir?

Pye. Very needfull; if you were in private once.

Wid. Needfull? Brother, pray leave us; and you ſir.

Frail. I ſhould laugh now, if this blunt fellow ſhould put'em all beſide the ſtirrop, and vault into the ſaddle himſelf, I have ſeen as mad a trick. Exit Frailty.

Enter Daughters.

Wid. Now Sir? ---here's none but wee----Daughters forbear.

Pye. O no, pray let'em ſtay, for what I have to ſpeak imporeth equally to them as you?

Wid. Then you may ſtay.

Pye. I pray beſtow on me a ſerious ear,
For what I ſpeak is full of weight and fear.

Wid. Fear?

Pye. I, if't paſſe unregarded, and uneffected,
Elſe peace and joy:---I pray Attention.
Widow, I have been a meer ſtranger for theſe parts that you live in, nor did I ever know the Husband of you, and Father of them, but I truly know by certain ſpiritual Intelligence, that he is in Purgatory.

Wid. Purgatory? tuh; that word deſerves to be ſpit upon; I wonder that a man of ſober tongue, as you ſeem to be, ſhould have the folly to believe there's ſuch a place.

Pye. Well Lady, in cold bloud I ſpeak it, I aſſure you that there is a Purgatory, in which place I know your husband to recide, and wherein he is like to remain, till the diſſolution of the world, till the laſt general Bon-fire: when all the earth ſhall melt into nothing, and the Seas ſcald their finny labourers: ſo long is his abidance, unleſſe you alter the property of your purpoſe, together with each of your Daughters theirs, that is, the purpoſe of ſingle life in your ſelf and your eldeſt Daughter, and the ſpeedy determination of marriage in your youngeſt.

Moll. How knows he that, what, has ſome Devil told him?

Wid. Strange he ſhould know our thoughts:------
Why but Daughter, have you purpos'd ſpeedy Marriage?

Pye. You ſee ſhe tells you I, ſhe ſayes nothing.
Nay, give me credit as you pleaſe, I am a ſtranger to you, and yet you ſee I know your determinations, which muſt come to me metaphiſically, and by a ſuper-natural intelligence.

Wid. This puts amazement on me.

Frank. Know our ſecrets?

Mol. I'de thought to ſteal a marriage, would his tongue
Had dropt out when he blab'd it.

Wid. But ſir, my husband was too honeſt a dealing man, to be now in any Purgatories-----

Pye. O do not load your conſcience with untruths,
'Tis but meer folly now to gild'em ore:
That has paſt but for Copper; Praiſes here,
Cannot unbind him there: confeſſe but truth,
I know he got his wealth with a hard gripe:
Oh hardly, hardly.

Wid. This is moſt ſtrange of all, how knows he that?

Pye. He would eat fools and ignorant heirs clean up;
And had his drink from many a poor mans brow,
Even as their labour brew'd it.
He would ſcrape riches to him moſt unjuſtly;
The very dirt between his nails was ill got
And not his own,---oh
I groan to ſpeak on't, the thought makes me ſhudder!--- ſhudder!

Wid. It quakes me too, now I think on't---ſir, I am much griev'd, that you a ſtranger, ſhould ſo deeply wrong my dead husband!

Pye-board. Oh?

Wid. A man that would keep Church ſo duly; riſe early before his ſervants, and e'en for Religious haſt, go ungarter'd, unbutton'd; nay ſir Reverence untruſt, to Morning Prayer?

Pye. Oh uff.

Wid. Dine quickly upon high-dayes, and when I had great gueſſe, would e'en thame me, and riſe from the Table, to get a good ſeat at an after-noon Sermon.

Pye. There's the devil, there's the devil, true, he thought it Sanctity enough, if he had kill'd a man, ſo t'ad bin done in a Pue, or undone his Neighbour, ſo t'ad bin near enough to th' Preacher, Oh! --a Sermon's a fine short Cloak of an hour long, and will hide the upper part of a dissembler, -- Church, I, he seem'd all Church, and his conscience was as hard as the Pulpit.

Wid. I can no more endure this.

Pye. Nor I, Widow,
Endure to flatter.

Wid. Is this all your business with me?

Pye. No, Lady, 'tis but the induction to't,
You may believe my strains, I strike all true.
And if your conscience would leap up to your tongue, your self would affirm it, and that you shall perceive I know of things to come, as well as I do of what is present; a Brother of your husband's shall shortly have a loss.

Wid. A loss? marry Heaven forfend, Sir Godfrey, my Brother!

Pye. Nay, keep in your wonders, 'till I have told you the fortunes of you all; which are more fearfull, if not happily prevented, --for your part and your Daughters, if there be not once this day some bloud-shed before your door, whereof the humane creature dyes, of you two the elder shall run mad.

Mother & Frank. Oh!

Mol. That's not I yet.

Pye. And with most impudent prostitution, show your naked Bodies to the view of all beholders.

Wid. Our naked Bodies? fie for shame.

Pye. Attend me, and your younger Daughter be strucken dumb.

Mol. Dumb? out alas; 'tis the worst pain of all for a Woman, I'de rather be mad, or run naked, or any thing: dumb?

Pye. Give ear: ere the evening fall upon Hill, Bog, and Meadow, this my speech shall have past probation, and then shall I be believed accordingly.

Widow. If this be true, we are all sham'd, all undone.

Mol. Dumb? I'le speak as much as ever I can possible before evening.

Pye. But if it so come to pass (as for your fair sakes I wish it may) that this presage of your strange fortunes be prevented by that accident of death and bloud-shedding, which I before told you of; take heed upon your lives, that two of you which have vow'd never to marry, seek out Husbands with all present speed, and you the third, that have such a desire to outstrip Chastity, look you meddle not with a Husband.

Moll. A double Torment.

Pye. The breach of this keeps your Father in Purgatory, and the punishments that shall follow you in this world, would with horrour kill the ear should hear 'em related.

Wid. Marry? why I vow'd never to marry.

Frank. And so did I.

Moll. And I vow'd never to be such an Ass, but to marry: what a cross Fortune's this?

Pye. Ladies, though I be a Fortune-teller, I cannot better Fortunes, you have 'em from me as they are revealed to me: I would they were to your tempers, and fellows with your bloods, that's all the bitterness I would you.

Widow. Oh! 'tis a just vengeance, for my Husband's hard purchases.

Pye. I wish you to bethink your selves, and leave 'em.

Wid. I'le to Sir Godfrey my Brother, and acquaint him with these fearfull presages.

Frank. For, Mother, they portend losses to him.

Wid. Oh I, they do, they do;
If any happy issue crown thy words,
I will reward thy cunning.

Pye. 'Tis enough, Lady,
I wish no higher. Exit.

Moll. Dumb? and not Marry? worse,
Neither to speak, nor kiss, a double curse. Exit.

Pye. So, all this comes well about yet, I play the Fortune-teller, as well as if I had had a Witch to my Grannam: for by good happinesse, being in my Hostesses Garden, which neighbours the Orchard of the Widow, I laid the hole of mine ear to a hole in the wall, and heard 'em make these Vowes, and speak those words, upon which I wrought these advantages; and to encourage my forgerie the more, I may now perceive in 'em a natural simplicitie which will easily swallow an abuse, if any covering be over it: and to confirm my former presage to the Widow, I have advis'd old Peter Skirmish the Souldier, to hurt Corporal Oath upon the Leg, and in that hurry I'le rush amongst 'em, and in stead of giving the Corporal some Cordial to comfort him, I'le pour into his mouth a potion of a sleepy nature, and make him seem as dead; for the which the old Souldier being apprehended, and ready to be borne to execution, I'le step in, and take upon me the cure of the dead man, upon pain of dying the condemned's death: the Corporal will wake at his minute, when the sleepy force hath wrought it self, and so shall I get my self into a most admired opinion, and under the pretext of that cunning, beguile as I see occasion: and if that foolish Nicholas Saint Tantlings keep true time with the Chain, my plot will be sound, the Captain delivered, and my wits applauded among Schollars and Souldiers for ever. Exit Pye-board.

Enter Nicholas Saint Tantlings, with the Chain.

Nic. Oh, I have found an excellent advantage to take away the Chain, my Master put it off e'en now, to say on a new Doublet, and I sneakt it away by little and little, most Puritanically! we shall have good sport anon when has mist it, about my Cousin the Conjurer; the world shall see I'me an honest man of my word, for now I'me going to hang it between Heaven and Earth among the Rosemary branches. Exit Nich.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Simon Saint Mary-Overies, and Frailty.

Frail. Sirrah Simon Saint Mary-Overies, my Mistris sends away all her suiters, and puts fleas in their eares.

Sim. Frailty, she does like an honest, chast, and virtuous woman; for Widows ought not to wallow in the puddle of Iniquity.

Frail. Yet, Simon, many Widows will do't, what so ere comes on't.

Sim. True, Frailty, their filthy flesh desires a Conjunction Copulative; what strangers are within, Frailty?

Frail. There's none, Simon; but master Pilfer the Taylor: he's above with Sir Godfrey, praising of a Doublet: and I must trudge anon to fetch Master Suds the Barber.

Sim. Ma-

Sim. Maſter Snuf's a good man, he waſhes the ſins of the Beard clean.

Skir. How now, creatures? what's a Clock?

Enter old Skirmiſh, the Soldiers.

Frail. Why, doe you take us to be Jack at th' Clock-houſe?

Skir. I ſay again to you what's a Clock?

Sim. Truly la, we go by the Clock of our Conſcience, all worldly Clocks we know go falſe, and are ſet by drunken Sextons.

Skir. Then what's a Clock in your Conſcience?---oh, I muſt break off, here comes the Corporall---hum, bum: ---what's a Clock?

Enter Corporall.

Corp. A Clock? why paſt ſeventeen.

Frail. Paſt ſeventeen? nay, h'as met with his match now, Corporall Oath will fit him.

Skir. Thou doſt not bawke or baffle me, doſt thou? I am a Souldier---paſt ſeventeen.

Corp. I, thou art not angry with the figures, art thou? I will prove it unto thee, 12. and 1. is thirteen I hope, 2. fourteen, 3. fifteen, 4. ſixteen, and 5. ſeventeen, then paſt ſeventeen, I will take the Dialls part in a juſt cauſe.

Skir. I ſay 'tis but paſt five then.

Corp. I'le ſwear 'tis paſt ſeventeen then: doſt thou not know numbers? canſt thou not caſt?

Skir. Caſt? doſt thou ſpeak of my caſting ith' ſtreet? Draw.

Corp. I, and in the Market place.

Sim. Clubs, Clubs, Clubs. Simon runs in.

Frail. I, I knew by their ſhuffling Clubs would be Trump; maſſe here's the Knave, and he can do any good upon 'em: Clubs, Clubs, Clubs.

Enter Pye-board.

Cap. O Villain, thou haſt open'd a vain in my Leg.

Pye. How now? for ſhame, for ſhame, put up, put up.

Cap. By yon blew Welkin, 'twas out of my part, George, to be hurt on the Leg.

Enter Officers.

Pye. Oh peace now---I have a Cordiall here to comfort thee.

Offi. Down with 'em, down with 'em, lay hands upon the Villain.

Skir. Lay hands on me?

Pye. I'le not be ſeen among 'em now.

Cap. I'me hurt, and had more need have Surgeons, Lay hands upon me then, rough Officers.

Offi. Go, carry him to be dreſt then:
This mutinous Soldier ſhall along with me to priſon.

Skir. To priſon? where's George?

Offi. Away with him. Exeunt with Skir.

Pye. So,
All lights as I would wiſh, the amaz'd Widow,
Will plant me ſtrongly now in her belief,
And wonder at the virtue of my words:
For the event turns theſe preſages from 'em,
Of being mad and dumb, and begets joy
Mingled with admiration: theſe empty creatures,
Souldier and Corporall, were but ordain'd
As inſtruments for me to work upon.
Now to my Patient, here's his Potion. Exit Pye-board.

Enter the Widow with her two Daughters.

Wid. O wondrous happineſſe, beyond our thoughts!
O luckky fair event! I think our fortunes
Were bleſt e'ne in our Cradles: we are quitted
Of all thoſe ſhamefull violent preſages
By this raſh bleeding chance: go, Frailty, run, and know
Whether he be yet living, or yet dead,
That here before my door receiv'd his hurt.

Frail. Madam, he was carried to the ſuperiour, but if he had no money when he came there, I warrant he's dead by this time. Exit Frailty.

Franck. Sure that man is a rare fortune-teller, never lookt upon our hands, nor upon any mark about us, a wondrous fellow ſurely.

Moll. I am glad I have the uſe of my tongue yet, though of nothing elſe, I ſhall find the way to marry too, I hope ſhortly.

Wid. O where's my Brother ſir Godfrey, I would he were here, that I might relate to him how prophetically the cunning Gentleman ſpoke in all things.

Enter Sir Godfrey in a rage.

Sir God. O my Chain, my Chain, I have loſt my Chain, where be theſe Villains, Varlets?

Wid. Oh, h'as loſt his Chain.

Sir God. My Chain, my Chain.

Wid. Brother, be patient, hear me ſpeak, you know I told you that a Cunning-man told me, that you ſhould have a loſſe, and he has prophecied ſo true.

Sir God. Out, he's a Villain to prophecy of the loſſe of my Chain, 'twas worth above three hundred Crowns, beſides 'twas my Fathers, my Fathers Fathers, my Grandfathers huge Grandfathers: I had as lieve ha loſt my Neck, as the Chain that hung about it; O my Chain, my Chain.

Wid. Oh, Brother, who can be againſt a misfortune, 'tis happy 'twas no more.

Sir God. No more! O goodly godly ſiſter, would you had me loſt more? my beſt Gown too, with the Cloth of Gold-Lace? my holyday Gaſcoins, and my Jerkin ſet with Pearl? no more!

Wid. Oh, Brother, you can read.---

Sir God. But I cannot read where my Chain is: what ſtrangers have been here? you let in ſtrangers, Thieves and Catch-poles: how comes it gone? there was none above with me but my Taylor, and my Taylor will not---ſteale I hope?

Moll. No, he's afraid of a Chain.

Enter Frailty.

Wid. How now, ſirrha? the newes?

Frail. O, Miſtreſſe, he may well be call'd a Corporall now, for his Corps are as dead as a cold Capons?

Wid. More happineſſe.

Sir God. Sirrha, what's this to my Chain? where's my Chain, knave?

Frail. Your Chain, ſir?

Sir God. My Chain is loſt, Villain.

Frail. I would he were hang'd in Chains that has it then for me: Alaſs, ſir, I ſaw none of your Chain ſince you were hung with it your ſelf.

Sir God.

Sir God. Out varlet? it had full three thousand Lincks, I have oft told it over at my prayers:
Over and over, full three thousand Lincks.

Frail. Had it so, sir, sure it cannot be lost then; I'le put you in that comfort.

Sir God. Why? why?

Frail. Why if your Chain had so many Lincks, it cannot chuse but come to light.

Enter Nicholas.

Sir God. Delusion. Now, long Nicholas, where is my Chain.

Nich. Why about your neck, is't not, sir?

Sir God. About my neck, Varlet? my Chain is lost, 'Tis stoln away, I'me robb'd.

Wid. Nay, Brother, show your self a man.

Nic. If it be lost or stole, if he would be patient, Mistresse, I could bring him to a Cunning Kinsman of mine that would fetch it again with a Sesarara.

Sir God. Canst thou? I will be patient, say, where dwells he?

Nic. Marry he dwells now, sir, where he would no dwell and he could choose, in the Marshalsea, sir; but he's an exlent fellow if he were out: h'as travell'd all the world o're, he, and been in the seven and twenty Provinces: why he would make it be fetcht, sir, if it were rid a thousand mile out of town.

Sir God. An admirable fellow, what lies he for;

Nic. Why he did but rob a Steward of ten groats tother night, as any man would ha done, and there he lies for't.

Sir God. I'le make his peace, a trifle, I'le get his pardon,
Besides a bountifull reward, I'le about it,
But fee the Clerks, the Justice will do much;
I will about it straight, good sister pardon me,
All will be well I hope, and turn to good,
The name of Conjurer has laid my blood. Exeunt.

Enter Puttock and Ravenshaw two Serjeants, with Yeoman Dogson, to arrest the Scholler George Pye-board.

Put. His Hostesse where he lies will trust him no longer, she hath feed me to arrest him; if you will accompany me, because I know not of what nature the Schollar is, whether desperate or swift, you shall share with me, Serjeant Raven-shaw, I have the good Angel to arrest him.

Raven. Troth I'le take part with thee then, Serjeant, not for the sake of the money so much, as for the hate I bear to a Schollar: why, Serjeant, 'tis naturall in us you know to hate Schollars: naturall besides, they will publish our imperfections, knaveries, and Conveyances upon Scaffolds and Stages.

Put. I, and spightfully too; troth I have wondred how the slaves could see into our breasts so much, when our Doublets are button'd with Pewter.

Raven. I, and so close without yielding: oh, their parlous fellowes, they will search more with their wits, than a Constable with all his Officers.

Put. Whist, whist, whist, Yeoman Dogson, Yeoman Dogson.

Dog. Ha? what sayes Serjeant?

Put. Is he in the Pothecaries shop still,

Dog. I, I.

Put. Have an eye, have an eye.

Raven. The best is, Serjeant, if he be a true Schollar he weares no weapon I think.

Put. No, no, he weares no weapon.

Raven. Masse, I am right glad of that: 'thas put me in better heart; nay if I clutch him once, let me alone to drag him if he be stiff-necked; I have been one of the six my self, that has dragg'd as tall men of their hands, when their weapons have bin gone, as ever bastinado'd a Serjeant---I have done I can tell you.

Dog. Serjeant Puttock, Serjeant Puttock.

Put. Hoh.

Dog. He's comming out single.

Put. Peace, peace, be not too greedy, let him play a little, let him play a little, we'll jerk him up of a sudden, I ha fisht in my time.

Raven. I, and caught many a fool, Serjeant.

Enter Pye-board.

Pye. I parted now from Nicholas: the Chain's couch't,
And the old Knight has spent his rage upon't,
The Widow holds me in great admiration
For cunning Art: 'mongst joyes I'me e'ne lost,
For my device can no way now be croft,
And now I must to prison to the Captain, and there----

Put. I arrest you, sir.

Pye. Oh---I spoke truer then I was aware, I must to prison indeed.

Put. They say you're a Schollar, nay sir---Yeoman Dogson, have care to his armes---you'll raile again Serjeants, and stage 'em: you tickle their vices.

Pye. Nay, use me like a Gentleman, I'me little lesse.

Put. You a Gentleman? that's a good jest ifaith; can a Schollar be a Gentleman,---when a Gentleman will not be a Schollar; ---look upon your wealthy Citizens Sons, whether they be Schollars or no, that are Gentlemen by their Fathers Trades: a Schollar a Gentleman!

Pye. Nay, let Fortune drive all her stings into me, she cannot hurt that in me, a Gentleman, Accidens inseparabile to my blood.

Raven. A rablement, nay you shall have a bloody rablement upon you I warrant you.

Put. Go, Yeoman Dogson, before, and enter the Action ith' Counter.

Pye. Pray doe not handle me cruelly, I'le go Whether you please to have me. Ex. Dogs.

Put. Oh, he's tame, let him loose Serjeant.

Pye. Pray at whose Suit is this?

Put. Why, at your Hostesses Suit where you lie, Mistresse Cunniburrow, for bed and board, the summe four pound five shillings and five pence.

Pye. I know the summe too true, yet I presum'd
Upon a farther day; well, 'tis my starres:
And I must bear it now, though never harder.
I swear now, my device is croft indeed.
Captain must lie by't: this is Deceits seed.

Put. Come, come away.

Pye. Pray give me so much time as to knit my garter, and I'le away with you.

Put. Well, we must be paid for this waiting upon you, this is no pains to attend thus. Making to tie his Garter.

Pye. I am now wretched and miserable, I shall ne're recover of this disease: hot Iron gnaw their fists: they have struck a Fever into my shoulder, which I shall ne're shake out again I fear me, till with a true Habeas Corpus the Sexton remove me, oh if I take prison once, I shall be prest

preſt to death with Actions, but not ſo happy as ſpeedily; perhaps I may be forty year a preſſing till I be a thin old man, that looking through the grates, men may look through me; all my means is confounded, what ſhall I do? has my wit ſerved me ſo long, and now give me the ſlip (like a train'd ſervant) when I have moſt need of 'em: no device to keep my poor carcaſe from theſe Puttocks?---yes, happineſſe, have I a paper about me now? yes too, I'le try it, it may hit, Extremity is Touch-ſtone unto wit, I, I.

Put. 'Sfoot how many yards are in thy Garters, that thou art ſo lo long a tying on them? come away ſir.

Pye. Troth Serjeant I proteſt; you could never ha took me at a worſe time, for now at this inſtant, I have no lawfull picture about me.

Put. 'Slid how ſhall we come by our fees then.

Rav. We muſt have fees, ſirra.

Pye. I could have wiſht ifaith, that you had took me halfe an hour hence for your own ſake, for I proteſt if you had not croſt me, I was going in great joy to receive five pound of a Gentleman, for the Device of a Mask here, drawn in this paper but now, come, I muſt be contented, 'tis but ſo much loſt, and anſwerable to the reſt of my fortunes.

Put. Why how far hence dwells that Gentleman?

Rav. I, well ſaid Serjeant, 'tis good to caſt about for mony.

Put. Speak, if it be not far---

Pye. We are but a little paſt it, the next ſtreeet behind us.

Put. 'Slid we have waited upon you grievouſly already, if you'll ſay you'll be liberal when you ha't, give us double fees, and ſpend upon's, why we'll ſhow you that kindneſs, and go along with you to the Gentleman.

Rav. I, well ſaid ſtill Serjeant, urge that.

Pye. Troth if it will ſuffice, it ſhall all be among you, for my part I'le not pocket a penny, my Hoſteſs ſhall have her four pound five ſhillings, and bate me the five pence, and the other fifteen ſhillings I'le ſpend upon you.

Raviniſh. Why now thou art a good Schollar.

Put. An excellent Schollar ifaith; has proceeded very well alate; come, we'll along with you.

Exeunt with him, paſſing in they knock at the door with a knocker withinſide.

Ser. Who knocks, whoſe at door? we had need of a Porter.

Pye. A few friends here. ---pray is the Gentleman your Maſter within?

Ser. Yes, is your buſineſs to him?

Pye. I, he knows it, when he ſees me:
I pray you, have you forgot me.

Ser. I by my troth, ſir, pray come near, I'le in and tell him of you, pleaſe you to walk here in the Gallery till he comes.

Pye. We will attend his worſhip,---worſhip I think, for ſo much the poſts at his door ſhould ſignifie, and the fair coming in, and the wicket, elſe I neither knew him nor his worſhip, but 'tis happineſs he is within doors, what ſo ere he be, if he be not too much a formal Citizen, he may do me good: Serjeant and Yeoman, how do you like this houſe, is't not moſt wholſomely plotted?

Rav. Troth priſoner, an exceeding fine houſe.

Pye. Yet I wonder how he ſhould forget me, for he ne're knew me: No matter, what is forgot in you, will be remembred in your Maſter.
A pritty comfortable room this methinks:
You have no ſuch roomes in priſon now?

Put. Oh dog-holes to't.

Pye. Dog-holes indeed---I can tell you I have great hope to have my Chamber here ſhortly, nay and dyet too, for he's the moſt free-hearted'ſt Gentleman where he takes: you would little think it? and what a fine Gallery were here for me to walk and ſtudy, and make verſes.

Put. O it ſtands pleaſantly for a Schollar.

Enter Gentleman.

Pye. Look what maps, and pictures, and devices, and things, neatly, delicately? Maſſe here he comes, he ſhould be a Gentleman, I like his Beard well;---All happineſſe to your worſhip.

Gent. You're kindly welcome, ſir.

Put. A ſimple ſalutation.

Rav. Maſſe it ſeems the Gentleman makes great account of him.

Gent. I have the thing here for you, ſir.

Pye. I beſeech you, conceal me ſir, I'm undone elſe,---I have the Mask here for you ſir, Look you ſir,---I beſeech your worſhip, firſt pardon my rudeneſſe, for my extreams makes me boulder then I would be; I am a poor Gentleman and a Schollar, and now moſt unfortunately falne into the hands of unmercifull Officers, arreſted for debt, which though ſmall, I am not able to compaſſe, by reaſon I'm deſtitute of lands, mony, and friends, ſo that if I fall into the hungry ſwallow of the priſon, I am like utterly to periſh, and with fees and extortions be pincht clean to the bone: Now, if ever pitty had intereſt in the bloud of a Gentleman, I beſeech you vouchſafe but to favour that means of my eſcape, which I have already thought upon.

Gent. Go forward.

Put. I warrant he likes it rarely.

Pye. In the plunge of my extremities, being giddy, and doubtfull what to do; at laſt it was put in my labouring thoughts, to make a happy uſe of this paper, and to blear their unlettered eyes, I told them there was a Device for a Mask drawn in't, and that (but for their interception,) I was going to a Gentleman to receive my reward for't: they greedy at this word, and hoping to make purchaſe of me, offered their attendance, to go along with me, my hap was to make bold with your door, ſir, which my thoughts ſhew'd me the moſt faireſt and comfortableſt entrance, and I hope I have happened right upon underſtanding, and pitty: may it pleaſe your good worſhip then, but to uphold my Device, which is to let one of your men put me out at a back door, and I ſhall be bound to your worſhip for ever.

Gent. By my troth, an excellent Device.

Put. An excellent Device he ſayes; he likes it wonderfully.

Gent. A my faith, I never heard a better.

Raven. Hark, he ſwears he never heard a better, Serjeant.

Put. O there's no talk on't, he's an excellent Schollar, and eſpecially for a Mask.

Gent. Give me your Paper, your Device; I was never better pleas'd in all my life: good wit, brave wit, finely wrought, come in ſir, and receive your mony, ſir.

Pye. I'le follow your good Worſhip,---
You heard how he like't it now?

Put. Puh, we know he could not chooſe but like it: go thy wayes, thou art a fine witty fellow ifaith, thou ſhalt diſcourſe it to us at the Tavern anon, wilt thou?

Pye. I, I, that I will, -- look Serjeants, here are Maps, and pretty toyes, be doing in the mean time, I shall quickly have told out the money, you know.

Put. Go, go, little villain, fetch thy chinck, I begin to love thee, I'le be drunk to night in thy company.

Pye. This Gentleman I may well call a part
Of my salvation, in these earthly evils,
For he has sav'd me from three hungry Devils.
Exit George.

Put. Sirrah Serjeant, these Maps are pretty painted things, but I could nere fancie them yet, me thinks they're too busie, and full of Circles and Conjurations; they say all the World's in one of them, but I could nere find the Counter in the Poultry.

Rav. I think so: how could you find it? for you know it stands behind the houses.

Dog. Mass that's true, then we must look oth'back-side for't: sfoot here's nothing, all's bare.

Rav. I warrant thee that stands for the Counter, for you know there's a company of bare fellows there.

Put. Faith like enough, Serjeant, I never markt so much before. Sirrah Serjeant, and Yeoman, I should love these Maps out a cry now, if we could see men peep out of door in 'em, oh we might have 'em in a morning to our Break-fast so finely, and nere knock our heels to the ground a whole day for 'em.

Rav. I marry sir, I'de buy one my self.
But this talk is by the way, where shall's sup to night:
Five pound receiv'd, let's talk of that.
I have a trick worth all, you two shall bear him toth'Tavern, whilst I go close with his Hostess, and work out of her, I know she would be glad of the summe, to finger money; because shee knows 'tis but a desperate debt, and full of hazard: what will you say if I bring it to pass, that the Hostess shall be contented with one half for all, and we to share tother fifty shillings, Bullies.

Put. Why I would call thee King of Serjeants, and thou should'st be Chronicled in the Counter-Book for ever.

Ra. Well, put it to me, we'll make a Night on't i'faith.

Dog. Sfoot, I think he receives more money, he stayes so long.

Put. He tarries long indeed, may be, I can tell you, upon the good liking on't the Gentleman may prove more bountifull.

Rav. That would be rare, we'll search him.

Put. Nay be sure of it, we'll search him, and make him light enough.

Enter the Gentleman.

Ra. Oh here comes the Gentleman, by your leave, Sir.

Gen. God you god den sirs, --would you speak with me?

Put. No, not with your worship, sir; only we are bold to stay for a friend of ours, that went in with your worship.

Gen. Who? not the Schollar?

Put. Yes, e'en he, an it please your worship.

Gen. Did he make you stay for him? he did you wrong then: why, I can assure you he's gon above an hour ago.

Rav. How, Sir?

Gen. I paid him his money, and my man told me he went out at back-door.

Put. Back-door?

Gen. Why, what's the matter?

Put. He was our prisoner, sir, we did arrest him.

Gen. What he was not? you the Sheriff's Officers --- you were too blame then,
Why did you not make known to me as much;
I could have kept him for you, I protest,
He receiv'd all of me in Britain Gold,
Of the last coyning.

Ra. Vengeance dog him with't.

Put. Sfoot has he gull'd us so?

Dog. Where shall we sup now, Serjeants?

Put. Sup Simon, now, eat Porridge for a month. Well, we cannot impute it to any lack of good will in your Worship, -- you did but as another would have done, 'twas our hard fortunes to miss the purchase, but if e'er we clutch him again, the Counter shall charm him.

Ra. The Hole shall rot him.

Dog. Amen. Exeunt.

Gent. So,
Vex out your Lungs without doors, I am proud,
It was my hap to help him, it fell fit,
He went not empty neither for his wit:
Alas poor wretch, I could not blame his brain,
To labour his delivery, to be free,
From their unpittying fangs, --I'me glad it stood,
Within my power to do a Scholar good. Exit.

Enter in the Prison, meeting George and Captain, George coming in muffled.

Cap. How now, who's that? what are you?

Pye. The same that I should be, Captain.

Cap. George Pye-board, honest George? why cam'st thou in half-fac'd, muffled so?

Pye. Oh Captain, I thought we should nere ha laught agen, never spent frolick hour agen.

Cap. Why? why?

Pye. I coming to prepare thee, and with news
As happy as thy quick delivery,
Was trac'd out by the sent, arrested, Captain.

Cap. Arrested, George?

Pye. Arrested; gues's, gues's, how many Dogs do you think I'de upon me?

Cap. Dogs? I say, I know not.

Pye. Almost as many as George Stone the Bear:
Three at once, three at once.

Cap. How did'st thou shake 'em off then?

Pye. The time is busie, and calls upon our wits, let it suffice,
Here I stand safe, and scap't by miracle:
Some other hour shall tell thee, when we'll steep
Our eyes in laughter: Captain, my device
Leans to thy happiness, for ere the day
Be spent toth'Girdle, thou shalt be free:
The Corporal's in's first sleep, the Chain is mist,
Thy Kinsman has expres't thee, and the old Knight
With Palsey-hams now labours thy release.
What rests, is all in thee, to Conjure, Captain?

Cap. Conjure? sfoot, George, you know, the Devil a conjuring I can conjure.

Pye. The Devil of conjuring? nay by my fay, I'de not have thee do so much, Captain, as the Devil a conjuring: look here, I ha brought thee a Circle ready charactered and all.

Ca. Sfoot, George, art in thy right wits, dost know what thou say'st? why dost talk to a Captain a conjuring? didst thou ever hear of a Captain conjure in thy life? dost call't a Circle? 'tis too wide a thing, me thinks; had it been a lesser Circle, then I knew what to have done.

Pye. Why!

Pye. Why every fool knowes that Captain: nay then I'le not cog with you, Captain, if you'll ſtay and hang the next Seſſions you may.

Cap. No, by my faith, George, come, come, let's to conjuring.

Pye. But if you look to be releaſed, as my wits have took pain to work it, and all means wrought to farther it, beſides to put Crowns in your purſe, to make you a man of better hopes, and whereas before you were a Captain or poor Souldier, to make you now a Commander of rich fooles, (which is truly the onely beſt purchaſe peace can allow you) faſer then High-wayes, Heath, or Cony-groves, and yet a far better booty; for your greateſt thieves are never hang'd, never hang'd; for why? they're wiſe, and cheat within doores; and we geld fooles of more money in one night, then your falſe-tail'd Gelding will purchaſe in a twelve-moneths running, which confirmes the old Bedlams ſaying, he's wiſeſt, that keeps himſelf warmeſt, that is, he that robs by a good fire.

Capt. Well opened ifaith, George, thou haſt pull'd that ſaying out of the huſk.

Pye. Captain Idle, 'Tis no time now to delude or delay, the old Knight will be here ſuddenly, I'le perfect you, direct you, tell you the trick on't; 'tis nothing.

Capt. 'Sfoot, George, I know not what to ſay to't, conjure? I ſhall be hang'd ere I conjure.

Pye. Nay, tell not me of that, Captain, you'll ne're conjure after you're hang'd, I warrant you, look you, ſir, a parlous matter, ſure, firſt to ſpread your circle upon the ground, then with a little conjuring ceremony, as I'le have an Hackney-mans wand ſilver'd o're a purpoſe for you, then arriving in the circle, with a huge word, and a great trample, as for inſtance: have you never ſeen a ſtalking, ſtamping Player, that will raiſe a tempeſt with his tongue, and thunder with his heeles?

Cap. O yes, yes, yes; often, often.

Pye. Why be like ſuch a one? for any thing will blear the old Knights eyes: for you muſt note, that he'll ne're dare to venture into the room, onely perhaps peep fearfully through the Key-hole, to ſee how the Play goes forward.

Capt. Well, I may go about it when I will, but mark the end on't, I ſhall but ſhame my ſelf ifaith, George, ſpeak big words, and ſtamp and ſtare, and he look in at Key-hole, why the very thought of that would make me laugh out-right, and ſpoile all: nay I'le tell thee, George, when I apprehend a thing once, I am of ſuch a laxative laughter, that if the Devil himſelf ſtood by, I ſhould laugh in his face.

Pye. Puh, that's but the babe of a man, and may eaſily be huſht, as to think upon ſome diſaſter, ſome ſad misfortune, as the death of thy Father ith' Countrey.

Cap. 'Sfoot, that would be the more to drive me into ſuch an extaſie, that I ſhould ne.re lin laughing.

Pye. Why then think upon going to hanging elſe.

Cap. Maſſe that's well remembred, now I'le doe well, I warrant thee, ne're fear me now: but how ſhall I doe, George, for boyſterous words, and horrible names?

Pye. Puh, any fuſtian invocations, Captain, will ſerve as well as the beſt, ſo you rant them out well, or you may go to a Pothecaries ſhop, and take all the words from the Boxes.

Cap. Troth, and you ſay true, George, there's ſtrange words enow to raiſe a hundred Quack-ſalvers, though they be ne're ſo poor when they begin? but here lies the fear on't, how in this falſe conjuration, a true Devil ſhould pop up indeed.

Pye. A true Devil, Captain? why there was ne're ſuch a one, nay faith he that has this place, is as falſe a Knave as our laſt Church-warden.

Cap. Then h'as falſe enough a conſcience ifaith, George.

The Cry at Marſhalſea.

Cry priſoners. Good Gentlemen over the way, ſend your relief:
Good Gentlemen over the way,---Good ſir Godfrey?

Pye. He's come, he's come.

Nich. Maſter, that's my Kinſman yonder in the Buff-Jerkin---Kinſman, that's my Maſter yonder ith' Taffaty Hat---pray ſalute him intirely?

They ſalute: and Pye-boord ſalutes Maſter Edmond.

Sir God. Now my friend.

Pye. May I partake your name, ſir?

Edm. My name is Maſter Edmond.

Pye. Maſter Edmond,---are you not a Welſh-man, ſir?

Edm. A Welſh-man? why?

Pye. Becauſe Maſter is your Chriſten name, and Edmond your ſir-name.

Edm. O no: I have more names at home, Maſter Edmond Plus is my full name at length.

Pye. O cry you mercy ſir? Whiſpering.

Cap. I underſtand that you are my Kinſmans good Maſter, and in regard of that, the beſt of my skill is at your ſervice: but had you fortun'd a meer ſtranger, and made no meanes to me by acquaintance, I ſhould have utterly denyed to have been the man; both by reaſon of the Act of Parliament againſt Conjurers and Witches, as alſo, becauſe I would not have my Art vulgar, trite, and common.

Sir God. I much commend your care there, good Captain Conjurer, and that I will be ſure to have it private enough, you ſhall do't in my Siſters houſe,---mine own houſe I may call it, for both our charges therein are proportion'd.

Capt. Very good, ſir, ---what may I call your loſſe, ſir?

Sir God. O you may call't a great loſſe, a grievous loſſe, ſir, as goodly a Chain of Gold, though I ſay it, that wore it: how ſayeſt thou, Nicholas?

Nich. O 'twas as delicious a Chain a Gold, Kinſman you know,---

Sir God. You know? did you know't, Captain?

Cap. Truſt a fool with ſecrets?---Sir he may ſay I know: his meaning is, becauſe my Art is ſuch, that by it I may gather a knowledge of all things.---

Sir God. I very true.

Capt. A pax of all fooles---the excuſe ſtuck upon my tongue like Ship-pitch upon a Mariners Gown, not to come off in haſte---ber-lady, Knight, to loſe ſuch a fair Chain a Gold, were a foule loſſe: Well, I can put you in this good comfort on't, if it be between heaven and earth, Knight, I'le ha't for you?

Sir God. A wonderfull Conjurer,---O I, 'tis between heaven and earth I warrant you, it cannot go out of the Realm,---I know 'tis ſomewhere about the earth.

Cap. I, nigher the earth then thou wot'ſt on.

Sir God. For firſt my Chain was rich, and no rich thing ſhall enter into heaven, you know.

Nich. And as for the Devil, Maſter, he has no need on't, for you know he has a great Chain of his own.

Sir Godf. Thou say'ſt true, Nicholas, but he has put off that now, that lyes by him.

Cap. Faith Knight, in few words, I preſume ſo much upon the power of my Art, that I could warrant your Chain agen.

Sir Godf. O dainty Captain!

Cap. Marry it will coſt me much ſweat, I were better go to ſixteen Hot-houſes.

Sir Godf. I, good man, I warrant thee.

Cap. Beſide great vexation of Kidney and Liver.

Nic. O, 'twill tickle you hereabouts, Couſin, becauſe you have not been us'd to't.

Sir Godf. No? have you not been us'd to't, Captain?

Cap. Plague of all fools ſtill; -- indeed Knight I have not us'd it a good while, and therefore 'twill ſtrain me ſo much the more, you know.

Sir Godf. Oh it will, it will.

Cap. What plunges he puts me to? were not this Knight a fool, I had been twice ſpoil'd now; that Captain's worſe then accurſt that has an Aſſe to a Kinſman, ſfoot I fear he will drivel't out before I come to't.--Now ſir, -- to come to the point indeed, -- you ſee I ſtick here in the jaw of the Marſhalſea, and cannot do't.

Sir Godf. Tut tut, I know thy meaning, thou wouldſt ſay thou'rt a priſoner, I tell thee th'art none.

Cap. How, none? why is not this the Marſhalſea?

Sir Godf. Woult hear me ſpeak? I heard of thy rare Conjuring:
My Chain was loſt, I ſweat for thy releaſe,
As thou ſhalt do the like at home for me:
Keeper.

Enter Keeper.

Keep. Sir.

Sir Godf. Speak, is not this man free?

Keep. Yes, at his pleaſure, Sir, the Fees diſcharg'd.

Sir Godf. Go, go, I'le diſcharge them, I.

Keep. I thank your Worſhip. Exit Keeper.

Cap. Now, truſt me, y'are a dear Knight; kindneſſe unexpected! oh there's nothing to a free Gentleman. --I will Conjure for you, ſir, 'till Froth come through my Buffe-Jerkin.

Sir Godf. Nay, then thou ſhalt not paſſe with ſo little a bounty, for at the firſt ſight of my Chain agen, --- Fourty five Angels ſhall appear unto thee.

Cap. 'Twill be a glorious ſhow, ifaith Knight, a very fine ſhow; but are all theſe of your own houſe? are you ſure of that, Sir?

Sir Godf. I, I, no, no; what's he yonder talking with my wild Nephew, pray heaven he give him good counſel.

Cap. Who, he? he's a rare friend of mine, an admirable fellow, Knight, the fineſt Fortune-teller.

Sir Godf. Oh! 'tis he indeed, that came to my Lady ſiſter, and foretold the loſſe of my Chain; I am not angry with him now, for I ſee 'twas my Fortune to loſe it: By your leave, Mr. Fortune-teller, I had a glimps of you at home, at my Siſters the Widows, there you propheſied of the loſs of a Chain: -ſimply though I ſtand here, I was he that loſt it.

Pye. Was it you, ſir?

Edm. A my troth, Nuncle, he's the rareſt fellow, has told me my fortune ſo right; I find it ſo right to my nature.

Sir Godf. What is't? God ſend it a good one.

Edm. O, 'tis a paſſing good one, Nuncle: for he ſayes I ſhall prove ſuch an excellent Gameſter in my time, that I ſhall ſpend all faſter then my Father got it.

Sir Godf. There's a Fortune indeed.

Edm. Nay, it hits my humour ſo pat.

Sir Godf. I, that will be the end on't: will the Curſe of the Beggar prevail ſo much, that the ſon ſhall conſume that fooliſhly, which the father got craftily; I, I, I; 'twill, 'twill, 'twill.

Pye. Stay, ſtay, ſtay. Pye-board with an Almanack, and the Captain.

Cap. Turn over, George.

Pye. June, July; here, July, thats the month, Sunday thirteen, yeſterday fourteen, to day fifteen.

Cap. Look quickly for the fifteen day, --if within the compaſſe of theſe two dayes there would be ſome Boyſtrous ſtorm or other, it would be the beſt, I'de defer him off till then; ſome Tempeſt, and it be thy will.

Pye. Here's the fifteen day, --Hot and fair.

Cap. Puh, would t'ad been, Hot and foul.

Pye. The ſixteen day, that's to morrow; The morning for the moſt part, fair and pleaſant.

Cap. No luck.

Pye. But about high-noon, Lightning and thunder.

Cap. Lightning and thunder? admirable! beſt of all! I'le Conjure to morrow juſt at high-noon, George.

Pye. Happen but true to morrow, Almanack, and I'le give the leave to lye all the year after.

Cap. Sir, I muſt crave your patience, to beſtow this day upon me, that I may furniſh my ſelf ſtrongly, --I ſent a Spirit into Lancaſhire tother day, to fetch back a knave Drover, and I look for his return this evening -- to morrow morning, my friend here, and I will come and breakfaſt with you.

Sir Godf. Oh, you ſhall be moſt welcome.

Cap. And about noon, without fail, I purpoſe to Conjure.

Sir Godf. Mid-noon will be a fit time for you.

Edm. Conjuring? do you mean to Conjure at our houſe, to morrow, Sir?

Cap. Marry do I, ſir? 'tis my intent, young Gentleman.

Edm. By my troth, I'le love you while I live for't: O rare! Nicholas, we ſhall have Conjuring to morrow.

Nic. Puh I, I could ha told you of that.

Cap. Law, he could ha told him of that, fool, coxcomb, could ye?

Edm. Do you hear me, ſir, I deſire more acquaintance on you, you ſhall earn ſome money of me, now I know you can Conjure; but can you fetch any that is loſt?

Cap. Oh, any thing that's loſt.

Edm. Why look you, ſir, I tell't you as a friend and a Conjurer; I ſhould marry a Pothecaries Daughter, and 'twas told me, ſhe loſt her Maiden-head at Stonie-Stratford: now if you'll do but ſo much as Conjure for't, and make all whole agen --

Cap. That I will, Sir.

Edm. By my troth I thank you, la.

Cap. A little merry with your ſiſters ſon, ſir.

Sir Godf. Oh, a ſimple young man, very ſimple, come Captain, and you, ſir; we'll e'en part with a gallon of wine 'till to morrow break-faſt.

Tip. Cap. Troth, agreed, ſir.

Nic. Kinſman -- Scholar.

Pye. Why now thou art a good Knave, worth a hundred Brownists.

Nic. Am I indeed, la: I thank you heartily, la.

Exeunt.

Actus

Actus Quartus.

Enter Moll, and Sir John Penny-Dub.

Pen. But I hope you will not ſerve a Knight ſo, Gentlewoman, will you? to caſheer him, and caſt him off at your pleaſure; what doe you think I was dubb'd for nothing, no by my faith Ladies daughter.

Moll. Pray Sir John Penny-Dub, let it be defer'd awhile, I have a heart to marry as you can have; but as the Fortune-teller told me.

Penny. Pax oth' Fortune-teller, would Derrick had been his fortune ſeven yeare ago, to croſſe my love thus: did he know what caſe I was in? why this is able to make a man drown himſelf in's Father's Fiſh-pond.

Moll. And then he told me moreover, Sir John, that the breach of it, kept my Father in Purgatory.

Penny. In Purgatory? why let him purge out his heart there, what have we to doe with that? there's Phyſicians enow there to caſt his water, is that any matter to us? how can he hinder our love? why let him be hang'd now he's dead? --Well, have I rid poſt day and night, to bring you merry newes of my Fathers death, and now---

Moll. Thy Fathers death? is the old Farmer dead?

Penny. As dead as his Barn door, Moll.

Moll. And you'll keep your word with me now, ſir John, that I ſhall have my Coach and my Coach-man?

Penny. I faith.

Moll. And two white Horſes with black Feathers to draw it?

Penny. Too.

Moll. A guarded Lackey to run befor't, and py'd Liveries to come traſhing after't.

Pen. Thou ſhalt Moll.

Mol. And to let me have money in my purſe to go whether I will.

Pen. All this.

Moll. Then come, whatſoe're come's on't, we'll be made ſure together before the Maids oth' Kitchin. Exe.

Enter Widow with her eldeſt Daughter, Franck, and Frailty.

Wid. How now? where's my Brother Sir Godfrey? went he forth this morning?

Frail. O no Madam, he's above at break-faſt, with ſir reverence a Conjurer.

Wid. A Conjurer? what manner of fellow is he?

Frail. Oh, a wondrous rare fellow, Miſtreſſe, very ſtrongly made upward, for he goes in a Buff-Jerkin: he ſayes he will fetch Sir Godfrey's Chain agen, if it hang between heaven and earth.

Wid. What he will not? then he's an exlent fellow I warrant: how happy were that woman to be bleſt with ſuch a Husband, a man cunning? how do's he look, Frailty? very ſwartly I warrant, with black beard, ſcorcht cheeks, and ſmoaky eye-browes.

Frail. Fooh--he's neither ſmoak-dryed, nor ſcorcht, not black, nor nothing, I tell you, Madam, he looks as fair to ſee to, as one of us; I do think but if you ſaw him once, you'de take him to be a Chriſtian.

Franck. So fair, and yet ſo cunning, that's to be wondred at, Mother.

Enter Sir Andrew Muck-hill, and Sir Andrew Tipſtaffe.

Muck. Bleſſe you, ſweet Lady.

Tip. And you, fair Miſtreſſe. Exit Frailty.

Wid. Coades, what do you mean, Gentlemen? fie; did I not give you your anſwers?

Muck. Sweet Lady?

Wid. Well, I will not ſtick with you for a kiſſe: Daughter, kiſſe the Gentleman for once.

Franck. Yes forſooth.

Tip. I'me proud of ſuch a favour.

Wid. Truly la, ſir Oliver, y'are much to blame to come agen when you know my mind, ſo well deliver'd--- as a Widow could deliver a thing.

Muck. But I exſpect a farther comfort, Lady.

Wid. Why la you now, did I not deſire you to put off your ſuit quite and clean when you came to me again? how ſay you? did I not?

Muck. But the ſincere love which my heart beares to you---

Wid. Go to, I'le cut you off; and Sir Oliver to put you in comfort, afar off, my fortune is read me, I muſt marry again.

Muck. O bleſt fortune!

Wid. But not as long as I can chooſe; nay, I'le hold out well.

Enter Frailty.

Frail. O Madam, Madam.

Wid. How now? what's the haſte? In her ear.

Tipſt. Faith, Miſtreſſe Frances, I'le maintain you gallantly, I'le bring you to Court, wean you among the fair ſociety of Ladies poor Kinſwomen of mine in cloth of Silver, beſide you ſhall have your Moncky, your Parrat, your Muskat, and your Piſſe, Piſſe, Piſſe.

Franck. It will doe very well.

Wid. What, do's he mean to Conjure here then? how ſhall I do to be rid of theſe Knights, --pleaſe you Gentlemen to walk a while ith' Garden, to gather a pinck, or a Jilly-flower.

Both. With all our hearts, Lady, and count us favour'd. Exit.

Sir God. within. Step in Nicholas, look, is the coaſt clear?

Nich. Oh, as clear as a Carter's eye, ſir.

Sir God. Then enter Captain Conjurer: ---now--- how like you our Room, ſir?

Enter Sir Godfrey, Captain, Pye-board, Edmond, Nicholas.

Cap. O wonderfull convenient.

Edm. I can tell you, Captain, ſimply though it lies here, tis the faireſt Room in my Mothers houſe, as dainty a Room to Conjure in, me thinks,---why you may bid, I cannot tell how many Devils welcome in't; my Father has had twenty in't at once!

Pye. What Devils?

Edm. Devils, no Deputies, and the wealthieſt men he could get.

Sir God. Nay put by your chats now, fall to your buſineſſe roundly, the Feſcue of the Diall is upon the Chriſcroſſe of Noon: but oh, hear me, Captain, a qualme comes o're my ſtomack.

Cap. Why, what's the matter, ſir?

Sir God. Oh, how if the Devil ſhould prove a knave, and tear the hangings.

Cap. Fuh,

Cap. Fuh, I warrant you, Sir Godfrey.

Edm. I, Nuncle, or ſpit fire upo'th'ſealing.

Sir Godf. Very true too, for 'tis but thin plaiſtered, and 'twill quickly take hold a the laths: and if he chance to ſpit downward too, he will burn all the boards.

Cap. My life for yours, Sir Godfrey.

Sir Godf. My ſiſter is very curious and dainty ore this room I can tell you, and therefore if he muſt needs ſpit, I pray deſire him to ſpit i'th'Chimney.

Pye. Why, aſſure you, ſir Godfrey, he ſhall not be brought up wit h ſo little manners, to ſpit and ſpawl a'th'floor.

Sir Godf. Why I thank you, good Captain, pray have a care I,-- fall to your Circle, we'll not trouble you I warrant you, come, we'll into the next room, and becauſe we'll be ſure to keep him out there, we'll bar up the door with ſome of the Godlies Zealous works.

Edm. That will be a fine device, Nuncle; and becauſe the ground ſhall be as holy as the door, I'le tear two or three Roſaries in pieces, and ſtrew the pieces about the Chamber: Oh! the Divil already. runs in. Thunders.

Pye. Sfoot, Captain, ſpeak ſomewhat for ſhame: it lightens and thunders before thou wilt begin, why when?

Cap. Pray peace, George, -- thou'lt make me laugh anon, and ſpoil all.

Pye. Oh, now it begins agen; now, now, now! Captain.

Cap. Rhumbos-ragdayon, pur, pur, colucundrion, Hois-Plois.

Sir Godfrey through the key-hole, within.

Sir Godf. Oh admirable Conjurer! has fetcht Thunder already.

Pye. Hark hark, agen Captain.

Cap. Benjamino, -gaſpois-kay-goſgothoteron-umbrois.

Sir Godf. Oh, I would the Devil would come away quickly, he has no conſcience to put a man to ſuch pain.

Pye. Agen.

Cap. Flowſte-kakopumpos-dragone-leloomenos-hodge-podge.

Pye. Well ſaid, Captain.

Sir Godf. So long a coming? Oh would I had nere begun't now, for I fear me theſe roaring Tempeſts will deſtroy all the fruits of the earth, and tread upon my corn-- oh, i'th' Countrey.

Cap. Gog de gog, hobgoblin, huncks, hounſlow, hockley te coome park.

Wid. O brother, brother, what a Tempeſt's ith'Garden, ſure there's ſome Conjuration abroad.

Sir Godf. 'Tis at home, ſiſter.

Pye. By and by I'le ſtep in, Captain.

Cap. Nunck-Nunck-Rip-Gaſcoines, Ips, Drip-Dropite.

Sir God. He drips and drops, poor man: alas, alas.

Pye. Now, I come.

Cap. O Sulphure Sootface.

Pye. Arch-Conjurer, what would'ſt thou with me?

Sir Godf. O, the Devil, ſiſter, i'th' dining-Chamber: ſing ſiſter, I warrant you that will keep him out; quickly, quickly, quickly. goes in.

Pye. So, ſo, ſo; I'le releaſe thee: enough Captain, enough: allow us ſome time to laugh a little, they're ſhuddering and ſhaking by this time, as if an Earthquake were in their kidneyes.

Cap. Sirrah George, how was't, how was't? did I do't well enough?

Pye. Woult believe me, Captain, better then any Conjurer, for here was no harm in this; and yet their horrible expectation ſatisfied well, you were much beholding to Thunder and Lightning at this time, it grac'ſt you well, I can tell you.

Cap. I muſt needs ſay ſo, George: ſirrah if we could ha convey'd hither cleanly a cracker, or a fire-wheel, t'ad been admirable.

Pye. Blurt, blurt, there's nothing remains to put thee to pain now, Captain.

Cap. Pain? I proteſt, George, my heels are ſorer then a Whiſon Morris-dancer's.

Pye. All's paſt now, -- onely to reveal that the Chain's i'th'Garden, where, thou know'ſt, it has lain theſe two dayes.

Ca. But I fear, that fox Nicholas has reveal'd it already.

Pye. Fear not, Captain, you muſt put it toth'venture now: Nay 'tis time, call upon'em, take pitty on'em, for I believe ſome of 'em are in a pittifull caſe by this time.

Cap. Sir Godfrey, Nicholas, Kinſman, -- ſfoot they're faſt at it ſtill: George, Sir Godfrey?

Sir Godf. Oh, is that the Devil's voice? how comes he to know my name?

Cap. Fear not, Sir Godfrey, all's quieted.

Sir Godf. What, is he laid?

Cap. Laid: and has newly dropt
Your chain i'th'Garden.

Sir Godf. I'th'Garden! in our Garden?

Cap. Your Garden.

Sir Godf. O ſweet Conjurer! whereabouts there?

Cap. Look well about a banck of Roſemary.

Sir Godf. Siſter, the Roſemary-banck, come, come; there's my chain he ſayes.

Wid. Oh happineſs! run, run. ſuppoſed to goe.

Edm. Captain Conjurer? Edm. at key-hole.

Cap. Who? Maſter Edmond?

Edm. I, Maſter Edmond; may I come in ſafely without danger, think you?

Cap. Puh, long agoe, 'tis all as 'twas at firſt:
Fear nothing, pray come near, - how now, man?

Edm. Oh! this room's mightily hot ifaith: ſlid, my ſhirt ſticks to my Belly already: what a ſteam the Rogue has left behind him? foh, this room muſt be air'd, Gentlemen, it ſmells horribly of Brimſtone, - let's open the windows.

Pye. Faith, Maſter Edmond, 'tis but your conceit.

Edm. I would you could make me believe that, ifaith, why do you think I cannot ſmell his ſavour, from another: yet I take it kindly from you, becauſe you would not put me in a fear, ifaith: a my troth I ſhall love you for this the longeſt day of my life.

Cap. Puh, 'tis nothing, Sir, love me when you ſee more.

Edm. Maſs, now I remember, I'le look whether he has ſinged the hangings, or no.

Pye. Captain, to entertain a little ſport till they come: make him believe, you'll charm him inviſible, he's apt to admire any thing, you ſee, let me alone to give force to't.

Cap. Go, retire to yonder end then.

Edm. I proteſt you are a rare fellow, are you not?

Cap. O Maſter Edmond, you know but the leaſt part of me yet; why now at this inſtant I could but flouriſh my wand thrice ore your head, and charm you inviſible.

Edm. What you could not? make me walk inviſible man? I ſhould laugh at that ifaith; troth I'le requite your kindneſs, an you'll do't, good Captain Conjurer.

Cap. Nay, I ſhould hardly deny you ſuch a ſmall kindneſs, Maſter Edmond Plus, why, look you, ſir, 'tis no more but this, and thus agen, and now y'are inviſible.

Edm. Am I faith? who would think it?

Capt. You ſee the Fortune-teller yonder at farder end

ath'

a'th'chamber, go toward him, do what you will with him, he ſhall nere find you.

Edm. Say you ſo, I'le try that ifaith,--- Juſtles him.

Pye. Hoe now, Captain? whoſe that juſtled me?

Cap. Juſtled you? I ſaw no body.

Edm. Ha, ha, ha,——ſay 'twas a ſpirit.

Cap. Shall I?---may be ſome ſpirit that haunt the circle.

Pye. O my noſe, agen, pray conjure then Captain.

Pulls him by the Noſe.

Edm. Troth this is exlent, I may do any knavery now and never be ſeen,---and now I remember me, Sir Godfrey my Uncle abus'd me tother day, and told tales of me to my Mother --- Troth now I'me inviſible, I'le hit him a ſound wherrit a'th'ear, when he comes out a'th'garden,---I may be reveng'd on him now finely.

Enter Sir Godfrey, Widow, Frank, Nicholas with the Chain.

Sir Godf. I have my Chain again, my Chain's found again, Edmond ſtrikes him.
O ſweet Captain, O admirable Conjurer.
Oh, what mean you by that, Nephew?

Edm. Nephew? I hope you do not know me, Uncle?

Wid. Why did you ſtrike your Uncle, Son?

Edm. Why Captain, am I not inviſible?

Cap. A good jeſt, George,---not now you are not ſir,
Why did you not ſee me, when I did uncharme you?

Edm. Not I, by my troth, Captain:
Then pray you pardon me, Uncle,
I thought I'de been inviſible when I ſtruck you.

Sir Godf. So, you would do't? go,--y'are a fooliſh boy,
And were I not ore-come with greater joy,
I'de make you taſte correction.

Edm. Correction, puſh---no, neither you nor my Mother, ſhall think to whip me as you have done.

Sir Godf. Captain, my joy is ſuch, I know not how to thank you, let me embrace you, O my ſweet Chain, gladneſſe e'en makes me giddy, rare man: 'twas juſt i'th' Roſemary bank, as if one ſhould ha laid it there,----oh cunning, cunning!

Wid. Well, ſeeing my fortune tells me I muſt marry; let me marry a man of wit, a man of parts, here's a worthy Captain, and 'tis a fine Title truly la to be a Captain's Wife, a Captain's Wife, it goes very finely, beſide all the world knows that a worthy Captain, is a fit Companion to any Lord, then why not a ſweet bed-fellow for any Lady,---I'le have it ſo——

Enter Frailty.

Frail. O Miſtris, Gentlemen, there's the braveſt ſight coming along this way.

Wid. What brave ſight?

Frail. Oh, one going to burying, and another going to hanging.

Wid. A ruefull ſight.

Pye. 'Sfoot Captain, I'le pawn my life the Corporal's coffin'd, and old Skirmiſh the ſouldier going to execution, and 'tis now about the time of his waking; hold out a little longer ſleepy potion, and we ſhall have exlent admiration; for I'le take upon me the cure of him.

Enter the Coffin of the Corporal, the ſouldier bound, and led by Officers, the Sheriff there.

Frail. Oh here they come, here they come!

Pye. Now muſt I cloſe ſecretly with the Souldier, prevent his impatience, or elſe all's diſcovered.

Wid. O lamentable ſeeing, theſe were thoſe Brothers, that fought and bled before our door.

Sir Godf. What they were not, Siſter?

Skirm. George, look to't, I'le peach at Tiburn elſe.

Pye. Mum,---Gentles all, vouchſafe me audience, and you eſpecially Maſter Sheriff:
Yon man is bound to execution,
Becauſe he wounded this that now lies coffin'd?

Sher. True, true, he ſhall have the law,---and I know the law.

Pye. But under favour, Maſter Sheriff, if this man had been cured and ſafe agen, he ſhould have been releas'd then?

Sher. Why, make you queſtion of that, Sir?

Pye. Then I releaſe him freely, and will take upon me the death that he ſhould die, if within a little ſeaſon, I do not cure him to his proper health again.

Sher. How ſir? recover a dead man?
That were moſt ſtrange of all. Frank comes to him.

Frank. Sweet ſir, I love you dearly, and could wiſh my beſt part yours,--oh do not undertake ſuch an impoſſible venture.

Pye. Love you me; then for your ſweet ſake I'le do't:
Let me entreat the corps to be ſet down.

Sher. Bearers ſet down the Coffin,-- this is wonderfull, and worthy Stoes Chronicle.

Pye. I pray beſtow the freedome of the aire upon our wholſome Art,---Maſſe his cheeks begin to receive natural warmth: nay good Corporal wake betime, or I ſhall have a longer ſleep then you,--'Sfoot if he ſhould prove dead indeed now, he were fully reveng'd upon me for making a property on him, yet I had rather run upon the Ropes, then have the Rope like a Tetter run upon me, oh---he ſtirs--he ſtirs agen---look Gentlemen, he recovers, he ſtarts, he riſes.

Sher. Oh, oh, defend us---out alas.

Pye. Nay pray be ſtill; you'll make him more giddy elſe,--he knows no body yet.

Cor. Zowns: where am I? cover'd with ſnow? I marvail?

Pye. Nay, I knew he would ſwear the firſt thing he did, as ſoon as he came to life again.

Corp. 'Sfoot Hoſteſſe---ſome hot porridge,---oh, oh, lay on a dozen of Fagots in the Moon Parler, there.

Pye. Lady, you muſt needs take a little pitty of him ifaith, and ſend him into your Kitchin fire.

Wid. Oh, with all my heart ſir, Nicholas and Frailty, help to bear him in.

Nic. Bear him in, quatha, pray call out the Maids, I ſhall nere have the heart to do't indeed la.

Frail. Nor I neither, I cannot abide to handle a Ghoſt of all men.

Cor. 'Sloud, let me ſee, where was I drunk laſt night, hah-

Wid. Oh, ſhall I bid you once agen take him away.

Frai. Why, we're as fearfull as you I warrant you--oh--

Wid. Away villains, bid the maids make him a Cawdle preſently to ſettle his brain--or a poſſet of Sack, quickly, quickly. Exeunt, puſhing in the corps.

Sher. Sir, what ſo ere you are, I do more then admire you.

Wid. O I, if you knew all, Maſter Sheriff, as you ſhall do, you would ſay then, that here were two of the rareſt men within the walls of Chriſtendome.

Sher. Two of 'em, O wonderfull: Officers I diſcharge you, ſet him free, all's in tune.

Sir Godf.

Sir God. I, and a banquet ready by this time, Maſter Sheriffe, to which I moſt cheerfully invite you, and your late priſoner there: ſee you this goodly Chain, ſir, mum, no more words, 'twas loſt and is found again; come, my ineſtimable Bullies, we'll talk of your noble Acts in ſparkling Charnico, and inſtead of a Jeſter, we'll ha the Ghoſt ith' white ſheet ſit at upper end oth' Table.

Sheriffe. Exlent merry man ifaith. Exit.

Franck. Well, ſeeing I am enjoyn'd to love and marry,
My fooliſh vow thus I caſheere to aire
Which firſt begot it,--now love play thy part;
The Schollar reads his lecture in my heart.

Actus Quintus.

Enter in haſte Maſter Edmond and Frailty.

Edm. This is the Marriage morning for my Mother and my Siſter.

Frail. O me, Maſter Edmond, we ſhall have rare doings.

Edm. Nay go, Frailty, run to the Sexton, you know my mother will be married at Saint Antlings, hie thee, 'tis paſt five, bid them open the Church door, my Siſter is almoſt ready.

Fra. What already, Maſter Edmond?

Edm. Nay go hie thee, firſt run to the Sexton, and run to the Clerk, and then run to Maſter Pigman the Parſon, and then run to the Milliner, and then run home agen.

Frail. Here's run, run, run!---

Ed. But hark, Frailty.

Fra. What, more yet?

Edm. Has the Maids remembred to ſtrew the way to the Church.

Fra. Foh, an hour ago I helpt 'em my ſelf.

Ed. Away, away, away, away then.

Frail. Away, away, away, away, then. Exit Frailty.

Edm. I ſhall have a ſimple Father-in-law, a brave Captain, able to beat all our ſtreet: Captain Idle, now my Lady Mother will be fitted for a delicate name, my Lady Idle, my Lady Idle, the fineſt name that can be for a woman, and then the Schollar, Maſter Pye-board for my Siſter Frances, that will be Miſtreſſe Frances Pye-board, Miſtreſſe Frances Pye-board, they'll keep a good Table I warrant you: Now all the Knights noſes are put out of joynt, they may go to a Bone-ſetters now.

Enter Captain and Pye-boord.

Hark, hark; oh who comes here with two Torches before 'em, my ſweet Captain, and my fine Schollar? oh how bravely they are ſhot up in one night, they look like fine Britains now me thinks, here's a gallant change ifaith; 'ſlid, they have hir'd men and all by the Clock.

Cap. Maſter Edmond, kind, honeſt, dainty Maſter Edmond.

Edm. Foh, ſweet Ceptain Father-in-law, a rare perfume ifaith.

Pye. What, are the Brides ſtirring? may we ſteall upon 'em think'ſt thou, Maſter Edmond?

Edm. Faw, their e'ne upon readineſſe I can aſſure you: for they were at their Torch e'ne now, by the ſame token I tumbled down the ſtaires.

Pye. Alaſs, poor Maſter Edmond.

Enter Muſicians.

Cap. O, the Muſicians! I prethee, Maſter Edmond, call 'em in and liquor 'em a little.

Edm. That I will, ſweet Captain Father-in-law, and make each of them as drunk as a common Fidler.

Exeunt omnes.

Enter Sir John Penny-Dub, and Moll above lacing of her cloathes.

Pen. Whewh, Miſtreſſe Moll, Miſtreſſe Moll.

Moll. Who's there?

Pen. 'Tis I.

Moll. Who, Sir John Penny-Dub? O you're an early Cock ifaith, who would have thought you to be ſo rare a ſtirrer?

Pen. Prethee, Moll, let me come up.

Moll. No by my faith Sir John, I'le keep you down, for you Knights are very dangerous if once you get above.

Pen. I'le not ſtay ifaith.

Mol. Ifaith you ſhall ſtay: for, Sir John, you muſt note the nature of the Climates: your Northern Wench in her own Countrey may well hold out till ſhe be fifteen, but if ſhe touch the South once, and come up to London, here the Chimes go preſently after twelve.

Pen. O th'art a mad Wench, Moll, but I prethee make haſte, for the Prieſt is gone before.

Moll. Do you follow him, I'le not be long after.

Exeunt.

Enter Sir Oliver Muck-hill, Sir Andrew Tipſtaffe, and old Skirmiſh talking.

Muck. O monſtrous unheard of forgery.

Tip. Knight, I never heard of ſuch villany in our own Countrey, in my life.

Muck. Why 'tis impoſſible. dare you maintain your words?

Skir. Dare we? e'ne to their wezen pipes: we know all their plots, they cannot ſquander with us, they have knaviſhly abus'd us, made onely properties on's to advance their ſelves upon our ſhoulders, but they ſhall rue their abuſes, this morning they are to be married.

Muck. 'Tis too true, yet if the Widow be not too much beſotted on ſlights and forgeries, the revelation of their villanies will make 'em loathſome, and to that end, be it in private to you, I ſent late laſt night to an honourable perſonage, to whom I am much indebted in kindneſſe, as he is to me, and therefore preſume upon the payment of his tongue, and that he will lay out good words for me, and to ſpeak truth, for ſuch needfull occaſions, I onely preſerve him in bond, and ſometimes he may doe me more good here in the City by a free word of his mouth, then if he had paid one half in hand, and took Doomesday for tother.

Tip. Introth, ſir, without ſoothing be it ſpoken, you have publiſht much judgement in theſe few words.

Muck. For you know, what ſuch a man utters will be thought effectuall, and to weighty purpoſe, and therefore into his mouth we'll put the approved theame of their forgeries.

Skir. And I'le maintain it, Knight, if ſhe'll be true.

Enter

Enter a Servant.

Muck. How now, fellow.

Serv. May it pleaſe you, ſir, my Lord is newly lighted from his Coach.

Muck. Is my Lord come already? his honour's early: You ſee he loves me well; up before heaven, Truſt me, I have found him night-capt at eleven: There's good hope yet: come, I'le relate all to him.

Exeunt.

Enter the two Bridegrooms, Captain and Scholar after them, Sir Godfrey and Edmond, Widow changed in apparel, Miſtreſs Frances led between two Knights, Sir John Penny-dub and Moll: there meets them a Noble man, Sir Oliver Muck-hill, and Sir Andrew Tip-ſtaff.

Nob. By your leave, Lady.

Wid. My Lord, your honour is moſt chaſtly welcome.

Nob. Madam, though I came now from Court, I come not to flatter you: upon whom can I juſtly caſt this blot, but upon your own forehead, that know not Ink from Milk, ſuch is the blind beſotting in the ſtate of an unheaded woman that's a Widow. For it is the property of all you that are Widows (a handfull excepted) to hate thoſe that honeſtly and carefully love you, to the maintenance of credit, ſtate, and poſterity, and ſtrongly to doat on thoſe, that onely love you to undoe you: who regard you leaſt, are beſt regarded; who hate you moſt, are beſt beloved. And if there be but one man amongſt ten thouſand millions of men, that is accurſt, diſaſtrous, and evilly Planeted; whom Fortune beats moſt, whom God hates moſt, and all Societies eſteem leaſt, that man is ſure to be a Husband-- Such is the peeviſh Moon that rules your blouds. An impudent fellow beſt woos you, a flattering lip beſt wins you, or in mirth, who talks roughlieſt, is moſt ſweeteſt; nor can you diſtinguiſh truth from forgeries, miſts from ſimplicity: witneſs thoſe two deceitfull Monſters, that you have entertain'd for Bridegrooms.

Wid. Deceitfull--

Pye. All will out.

Cap. Sfoot, who has blab'd, George? that fooliſh Nicholas.

Nob. For, what they have beſotted your eaſie bloud withall, were nought but forgeries, the Fortune-telling for Husbands, and the Conjuring for the Chain; Sir Godfrey heard the falſhood of all: nothing but meer knavery, deceit, and cozenage.

Wid. O wonderfull! indeed I wondred that my Husband with all his craft, could not keep himſelf out of Purgatory.

Sir Godf. And I more wonder, that my Chain ſhould be gon, and my Taylor had none of it.

Moll. And I wondred moſt of all, that I ſhould be tyed from Marriage, having ſuch a mind to't: come Sir John Penny-dub, fair weather on our ſide, the Moon has chang'd ſince yeſternight.

Pye. The Sting of every evil is within me.

Nob. And that you may perceive I feign not with you, behold their fellow-actor in thoſe forgeries, who full of Spleen and envy at their ſo ſudden advancements, ravel'd all their Plot in anger.

Pye. Baſe Souldier, to reveal us.

Wid. Is't poſſible we ſhould be blinded ſo, and our eyes open?

Nob. Widow, will you now believe that falſe, which too ſoon you believed true?

Wid. O, to my ſhame, I do.

Sir Godf. But under favour, my Lord, my Chain was truly loſt, and ſtrangely found again.

Nob. Reſolve him of that, Souldier.

Skir. In few words, Knight, then thou wert the arch-Gull of all.

Sir Godf. How, Sir?

Skir. Nay I'le prove it: for the Chain was but hid in the Roſemary-banck all this while, and thou gotſt him out of priſon to Conjure for it, who did it admirably fuſtianly, for indeed what needed any others, when he knew where it was?

Sir Godf. O villany of villains! but how came my Chain there?

Skir. Where's, Truly la, Indeed la? he that will not Swear, but Lye; he that will not Steal, but Rob: pure Nicholas Saint Antlings.

Sir Godf. O villain! one of our Society,
Deem'd alwayes holy, pure, religious:
A Puritan, a thief? when was't ever heard?
Soon we'll kill a man, then Steal, thou know'ſt.
Out Slave, I'le rend my Lyon from thy back--with mine own hands.

Nich. Dear Maſter, oh.

Nob. Nay Knight, dwell in patience.
And now, Widow, being ſo near the Church, 'twere great pitty, nay uncharity, to ſend you home again without a Husband: draw near, you of true Worſhip, ſtate and credit, that ſhould not ſtand ſo far off from a Widow, and ſuffer forged ſhapes to come between you: Not that in theſe I bleminſh the true Title of a Captain, or blot the fair margent of a Scholar: for I honour worthy and deſerving parts in the one, and cheriſh fruitfull Virtues in the other. Come Lady, and you Virgin, beſtow your eyes and your pureſt affections, upon men of eſtimation, both in Court and City, that have long wooed you, and both with their hearts and wealth, ſincerely love you.

Sir Godf. Good ſiſter, do: ſweet little Frank, theſe are men of reputation, you ſhall be welcome at Court: a great credit for a Citizen, ſweet ſiſter.

Nob. Come, her ſilence do's conſent to't.

Wid. I know not with what face.

Nob. Pah, pah, with your own face, they deſire no other.

Wid. Pardon me, worthy Sirs, I and my daughter have wrong'd your loves.

Muck. 'Tis eaſily pardon'd, Lady,
If you vouchſafe it now.

Wid. With all my ſoul.

Fran. And I, with all my heart.

Moll. And I, Sir John with ſoul, heart, lights and all.

Sir Godf. They are all mine, Moll.

Nob. Now, Lady:
What honeſt Spirit, but will applaud your choice,
And gladly furniſh you with hand and voice;
A happy change, which makes e'en heaven rejoice.
Come, enter in your Joyes, you ſhall not want,
For, fathers, now I doubt it not, believe me,
But that you ſhall have hands enough to give me.

Exeunt omnes.

A York-

A YORK-SHIRE TRAGEDY,

Not so New, as Lamentable and True.

Enter Oliver and Raphe, two Serving-men.

Oliver.

SIrra Raphe, my young Mistris is in such a pittifull passionate humour for the long absence of her Love.

Raphe. Why can you blame her, why, Apples hanging longer on the tree then when they are ripe, makes so many fallings, viz. Mad wenches because they are not gathered in time, are fain to drop of themselves, and then 'tis common you know for every man to take them up.

Oliver. Masse thou saist true, 'tis common indeed, but sirrah, is neither our young Master returned, nor our fellow Sam come from London?

Raphe. Neither of either, as the Puritan Bawd sayes. 'Slid I hear Sam, Sam's come, here tarry, come ifaith, now my nose itches for news.

Oliv. And so doth mine elbow.

Sam calls within. Where are you there?

Sam. Boy, look you walk my horse with discretion, I have rid him simply, I warrant his skin sticks to his back with very heat, if he should catch cold and get the cough of the lungs, I were well served, were I not? What Raph and Oliver.

Am. Honest fellow Sam, welcome ifaith, what tricks hast thou brought from London?

Furnisht with things from London.

Sam. You see I am hang'd after the truest fashion, three Hats, and two Glasses bobbing upon them, two rebato wyers upon my brest, a Capcase by my side, a Brush at my back, an Almanack in my pocket, and three Ballats in my codpiece, nay I am the true picture of a common servingman.

Oliv. I'le swear thou art, thou maist set up when thou wilt, there's many a one begins with lesse I can tell thee, that proves a rich man ere he dies, but what's the news from London, Sam?

Raph. I that's well sed, what is the news from London, sirrah. My young Mistris keeps such a puling for her Love.

Sam. Why the more fool she, I, the more ninny-hammer she.

Oliv. Why Sam, why?

Sam. Why, he is married to another, long ago.

Amb. Faith ye jest.

Sam. Why, did you not know that till now? Why he's married, beats his wife, and has two or three children by her: for you must note, that any woman bears the more when she is beaten.

Raphe. I that's true, for she bears the blows.

Oliv. Sirrah Sam, I would not for two years wages my young Mistris knew so much, she'd run upon the left hand of her wit, and nere be her own woman again.

Sam. And I think she was blest in her Cradle, that he never came in her bed, why he has consumed all, pawn'd his Lands, and made his University Brother stand in wax for him; There's a fine phrase for a Scrivener, puh, he ows more then his skin is worth.

Oliver. Is't possible?

Sam. Nay, I'le tell you moreover, he calls his Wife whore, as familiarly as one would call Moll and Doll, and children bastards, as naturally as can be, but what have we here? I thought 'twas something pull'd down my Breeches: I quite forgot my two poting sticks, these came from London, now any thing is good here that comes from London.

Oliver. I, far fetcht you know.

Sam. But speak in your conscience ifaith, have not we as good poting sticks i'th'Country as need to be put i'th fire, the mind of a thing is all, and as thou said'st even now, far fercht are the best things far Ladies.

Oliv. I, and for waiting gentlewomen too.

Sam. But Raphe, is our beer sower this thunder?

Raph. No, no, it holds countenance yet.

Sam. Why then follow me, I'le teach you the finest humour to be drunk in, I learn'd it at London last week.

Amb. Faith let's hear it, let's hear it.

Sam. The bravest humour, 'twould do a man good to be drunk in it, they call it knighting in London, when they drink upon their knees.

Amb. Faith that's excellent.

Come follow me, I'le give you all the degrees of it in order. Exeunt.

Enter Wife.

Wife. What will become of us? all will away,
My husband never ceases in expence,
Both to consume his credit and his house.
And 'tis set down by heavens just decree,
That Riots child must needs be beggery.
Are these the vertues that his youth did promise?

Dice and voluptuous meetings, midnight Revels,
Taking his bed with surfets. Ill beseeming
The ancient honour of his House and Name:
And this not all, but that which kill's me most,
When he recounts his losses and false fortunes,
The weakness of his state so much dejected,
Not as a man repentant, but half mad,
His fortunes cannot answer his expence:
He sits and sullenly locks up his armes,
Forgetting heaven, looks downward, which makes
Him appear so dreadfull, that he frights my heart:
Walks heavily, as if his soule were earth;
Not penitent for those his sins are past,
But vext, his money cannot make them last:
A fearfull melancholy, ungodly sorrow.
Oh yonder he comes, now in despight of ills
I'le speak to him, and I will hear him speak,
And do my best to drive it from his heart.

Enter Husband.

Huf. Pox of the last throw, it made
Five hundred Angels vanish from my sight:
I'me damn'd, I me damn'd, the Angels have forsook me;
Nay 'tis certainly true: for he that has no coyn,
Is damn'd in this world; he's gone, he's gone.
Wife. Dear Husband.
Huf. Oh! most punishment of all, I have a Wife.
Wife. I doe entreat you as you love your soule,
Tell me the cause of this your discontent.
Huf. A vengeance strip thee naked, thou art cause,
Effect, quality, property, thou, thou, thou. Exit.
Wife. Bad turn'd to worse?
Both beggery of the soule as of the body,
And so much unlike himself at first,
As if some vexed spirit had got his form upon him.

Enter Husband again.

He comes again,
He sayes I am the cause, I never yet
Spoke lesse then words of duty and of love.
Huf. If marriage be honourable, then Cuckolds are honourable, for they cannot be made without marriage. Fool, what meant I to marry to get Beggars? Now must my eldest Son be a Knave or nothing, he cannot live but upoth' fool, for he will have no Land to maintain him: that morgage sits like a snaffle upon mine inheritance, and makes me chaw upon Iron.
My second Son must be a promoter, and my third a Thief, or an under-putter, a Slave Pander.
Oh beggery, beggery, to what base uses doth it put a man. I think the Devil scorns to be a Bawd:
He beares himself more proudly, has more care on his credite.
Base, slavish, abject, filthy poverty.
Wi. Good sir, by all our vowes I doe beseech you,
Shew me the true cause of your discontent.
Huf. Mony, mony, mony, and thou must supply me.
Wi. Alass, I am the least cause of your discontent.
Yet what is mine, either in Rings or Jewels,
Use to your own desire, but I beseech you,
As you are a Gentleman by many bloods,
Though I my self be out of your respect,
Think on the state of these three lovely boyes
You have been Father to.
Huf. Puh, Bastards, Bastards, Bastards, begot in tricks, begot in tricks.
Wi. Heaven knowes how those words wrong me,
But I'le endure these griefs among a thousand more:
Oh call to mind your Lands already morgag'd,
Your self wound into debts, your hopefull Brother
At the University into bonds for you,
Like to be seiz'd upon. And-----
Huf. Ha done, thou Harlot,
Whom though for fashion I married,
I never could abide. Think'st thou thy words
Shall kill my pleasure? fall off to thy friends,
Thou and thy Bastards beg, I will not bate
A whit in humour: Midnight still I love you,
And revel in your company: curb'd in?
Shall it be said in all societies,
That I broke custome? that I flagd in money?
No, those thy Jewels I will play as freely,
As when my state was fullest.
Wife. Be it so.
Huf. Nay I protest, and take that for an earnest;
He spurns her.
I will for ever hold thee in contempt,
And never touch the Sheets that cover thee,
But be divorc't in bed, till thou consent,
Thy dowry shall be sold to give new life
Unto those pleasures which I most affect.
Wife. Sir, do but turn a gentle eye on me,
And what the law shall give me leave to do,
You shall command.
Huf. Look it be done, shall I want dust,
And like a Slave wear nothing in my pockets,
Holds his Hands in his Pockets.
But my hands to fill them up with nayles?
Oh much against my blood, let it be done,
I was never made to be a looker on:
A Bawde to Dice; I'le shake the Drabs my self,
And make them yield, I say look it be done.
Wife. I take my leave, it shall. Exit.
Huf. Speedily, speedily, I hate the very hour I chose a Wife, a trouble, trouble, three Children like three evils hang upon me, fie, fie, fie, strumpet and bastards, strumpet and bastards.

Enter three Gentlemen, hearing him.

1. Gent. Still do these loathsome thoughts jar on your Tongue?
Your self to stain the honour of your Wife,
Nobly discended; those whom men call mad,
Endangers others, but he's more then mad
That wounds himself, whose own words
Do proclaime it is not fit, I pray forsake it.
2. Gen. Good sir, let modesty reprove you.
3. Gen. Let honest kindness sway so much with you.
Huf. God den, I thank you, sir, how do you? adieu, I am glad to see you, farewell Instructions, Admonitions.
Exeunt Gent.

Enter a Servant.

How now sirrha? what would you?
Ser. Onely to certifie you, sir, that my Mistresse was met by the way, by them who were sent for her up to London by her honourable Unckle, your Worships late Guardian.
Huf. So, sir, then she is gone, and so may you be,

But

But let her look that the thing be done she wots of,
Or hell will stand more pleasant then her house at home.
Exit Servant.

Enter a Gentleman.

Gent. Well or ill met, I care not.
Huf. No nor I.
Gent. I am come with confidence to chide you.
Huf. Who me? chide me? do't finely then, let it not move me, for if thou chid'st me angry, I shall strike.
Gent. Strike thine own follies, for it is they Deserve to be well beaten; we are now in private,
There's none but thou and I, thou art fond and peevish,
An unclean Rioter, thy lands and credit
Lie now both sick of a consumption,
I am sorry for thee; that man spends with shame,
That with his riches doth consume his name,
And such art thou.
Huf. Peace.
Gent. No, thou shalt hear me further.
Thy fathers and fore-fathers worthy honours,
Which were our Countrey monuments, our grace,
Follies in thee begin now to deface.
The spring time of thy youth did fairly promise
Such a most fruitfull summer to thy friends,
It scarce can enter into mens beliefs,
Such dearth should hang on thee, we that see it,
Are sorry to believe it: in thy change,
This voice into all places will be hurld:
Thou and the Devil has deceiv'd the world.
Huf. I'le not endure thee.
Gent. But of all the worst,
Thy virtuous wife, right honourably allied,
Thou hast proclaim'd a strumpet.
Huf. Nay then I know thee,
Thou art her Champion thou, her private friend,
The party you wot on.
Gent. Oh ignoble thought,
I am past my patient bloud, shall I stand idle
And see my reputation toucht to death?
Huf. This has gal'd you, has it?
Gent. No monster, I prove
My thoughts did onely tend to virtuous love.
Huf. Love of her virtues? there it goes.
Gent. Base spirit, to lay thy hate upon
The fruitfull honour of thine own bed.
They fight, and the Husband is hurt.
Huf. Oh.
Gent. Wilt thou yield it yet?
Huf. Sir, sir, I have not done with you.
Gent. I hope, nor ne're shall do. Fight agen.
Huf. Have you got tricks? are you in cunning with me?
Gent. No, plain and right.
He needs no cunning that for truth doth fight.
Husband falls down.
Huf. Hard fortune, am I level'd with the ground?
Gent. Now, sir, you lie at mercy.
Huf. I, you slave.
Gent. Alas, that hate should bring us to our grave,
You see, my Sword's not thirsty for your life,
I am sorrier for your wound, then your self;
Y'are of a virtuous house, shew virtuous deeds,
'Tis not your honour, 'tis your folly bleeds:
Much good has been expected in your life,
Cancel not all mens hopes, you have a Wife,
Kind and obedient: heap not wrongfull shame
On her and your posterity: let only sin be sore,
And by this fall, rise never to fall more.
And so I leave you. Exit.
Huf. Has the dog left me then,
After his tooth hath left me? Oh, my heart
Would fain leap after him, revenge I say,
I'me mad to be reveng'd, my strumpet Wife,
It is thy quarrel that rips thus my flesh,
And makes my breast spit bloud, but thou shalt bleed:
Vanquisht? got down? unable e'en to speak?
Surely 'tis want of money makes men weak,
I, 'twas that ore-threw me, I'de nere been down else. Exit.

Enter Wife in a riding-sute, with a Serving-man.

Ser. Faith Mistress, if it may not be presumption
In me to tell you so, for his excuse
You had small reason, knowing his abuse.
Wife. I grant I had, but alas,
Why should our faults at home be spread abroad?
'Tis grief enough within doors; at first sight
Mine Uncle could run o're his prodigal life
As perfectly, as if his serious eye
Had numbred all his follies:
Knew of his morgag'd lands, his friends in bonds,
Himself withered with debt; and in that minute
Had I added his usage and unkindness,
'Twould have confounded every thought of good:
Where now, fathering his riots on his youth,
Which time and tame experience will shake off,
Guessing his kindness to me (as I smooth'd him
With all the skill I had) though his deserts
Are in form uglier then an unshapt Bear.
He's ready to prefer him to some Office
And place at Court: a good and sure releif
To all his stooping fortunes, 'twill be a means, I hope,
To make new league between us, and redeem
His virtues with his lands.
Ser. I should think so: Mistress, if he should not now be kind to you, and love you, and cherish you up, I should think the Devil himself kept open house in him.
Wife. I doubt not but he will now, prythee leave me, I think I hear him coming.
Serv. I am gone. Exit.
Wife. By this good means I shall preserve my lands,
And free my husband out of Usurers hands:
Now there is no need of sale, my Uncle's kind,
I hope, if ought, this will content his mind.
Here comes my husband. Enter Husband.
Huf. Now, are you come? where's the money? let's see the money, is the rubbish sold? those wiseakers your Lands, why then, the money, where is it? poure it down, down with it, down with it; I say pour't on the ground, let's see it, let's see it.
Wife. Good sir, keep but in patience, and I hope
My words shall like you well, I bring you better
Comfort then the sale of my Dowry.
Huf. Ha, what's that?
Wife. Pray do not fright me, sir, but vouchsafe me hearing. My Uncle, glad of your kindness to me and mild usage (for so I made it to him) hath in pitty of your declining fortunes, provided a place for you at Court, of worth and credit; which so much overjoyed me ----
Huf. Out on thee, filth, over and over-joyed,
When I'me in torment. spurns her.
Thou politick whore, subtiller then nine Devils, was this

this thy journey to Nunck, to let down the history of me, my state and fortunes:
Shall I, that dedicated my self to pleasure, be now confin'd in service to crouch, and stand like an old man ith' hams, my Hat off? I that could never abide to uncover my head ith' Church: base slut, this fruit bears thy complaints.

Wife. Oh, heaven knowes,
That my complaints were praises, and best words
Of you, and your estate; onely my fears
Knew of your morgag'd Lands, and were possest
Of every accident before I came.
If you suspect it but a plot in me,
To keep my dowry, or for mine own good,
Or my poor Childrens (though it suits a mother
To shew a naturall care in their reliefs)
Yet I'le forget my self to calme your blood,
Consume it, as your pleasure counsels you,
And all I wish, e'ne Clemency affords,
Give me but pleasant looks, and modest words.

Husf. Mony, whore, mony, or I'le----- draws his dagger.

Enter a Servant hastily.

What the Devil? how now? thy hasty newes?

Ser. May it please you, sir.

Husf. What, may I not look upon my Dagger? Speak, Villain, or I will execute the point on thee: quick, short.

Ser. Why sir, a Gentleman from the University stayes below to speak with you.

Husf. From the University? so, University,
That long word runs through me. Exit.

Wife. Was ever Wife so wretchedly beset?
Had not this newes stept in between, the point
Had offered violence unto my breast.
That which some women call great misery,
Would shew but little here, would scarce be seen
Among my miseries: I may compare
For wretched fortunes, with all Wives that are,
Nothing will please him, untill all be nothing.
He calls it slavery to be preferr'd,
A place of credit, a base servitude.
What shall become of me, and my poor Children?
Two here, and one at Nurse, my pretty beggars,
I see how ruine with a palsie hand
Begins to shake the ancient seat to dust:
The heavy weight of sorrow drawes my lids
Over my dankish eyes: I can scarce see;
Thus grief will last, it wakes and sleeps with me.

Enter the Husband with the Master of the Colledge.

Husf. Please you draw near, sir, y'are exceeding welcome.

Ma. That's my doubt, I fear I come not to be welcome.

Husf. Yes, howsoever.

Ma. 'Tis not my fashion, sir, to dwell in long circumstance, but to be plain and effectuall; therefore to the purpose.
The cause of my setting forth was pittious and lamentable; that hopefull young Gentleman your Brother, whose virtues we all love dearly, through your default and unnaturall negligence, lies in bond executed for your debt, a prisoner, all his studies amazed, his hope struck dead, and the pride of his youth muffled in these dark clouds of oppression.

Husf. Hum, hum, hum.

Mast. Oh you have kill'd the towardest hope of all our University, wherefore without repentance and amends, expect ponderous and sudden judgements to fall grievously upon you; your Brother, a man who profited in his divine employments, and might have made ten thousand soules fit for heaven, now by your careless courses cast in prison, which you must answer for, and assure your spirit it will come home at length.

Husf. Oh God, oh.

Ma. Wise men think ill of you, others speak ill of you, no man loves you, nay, even those whom honesty condemns, condemns you: and take this from the virtuous affection I bear your Brother, never look for prosperous hour, good thought, quiet sleeps, contented walks, nor any thing that makes man perfect, till you redeem him: what is your answer? how will you bestow him? upon desperate misery, or better hopes? I suffer till I hear your answer.

Husf. Sir, you have much wrought with me, I feel you in my soule, you are your Arts master.
I never had sence till now; your syllables have cleft me, both for your words and pains I thank you: I cannot but acknowledge grievous wrongs done to my Brother, mighty, mighty, mighty, mighty wrongs.
Within there.

Enter a Servingman.

Husf. Fill me a Bowle of Wine. Alas poor Brother,
Bruised with an execution for my sake.

Ma. A bruise indeed makes many a mortall sore,
Till the Grave cure them. Enter with Wine.

Husf. Sir, I begin to you, y'ave chid your welcome.

Ma. I could have wisht it better for your sake,
I pledge you, sir, to the kind man in prison.

Husf. Let it be so.
Now, sir, if you so please, to spend but a few minutes in walking about my grounds below, my man shall here attend you: I doubt not but by that time to be furnisht of a sufficient answer, and therein my Brother fully satisfied.

Ma. Good sir, in that the Angels would be pleased, and the worlds murmures calm'd, and I should say, I set forth then upon a lucky day. Exit.

Husf. O thou confused man, thy pleasant sins have undone thee, thy damnation has begger'd thee, that heaven should say we must not sin, and yet made women: gives our sences way to find pleasure, which being found, confounds us, why should we know those things so much misuse us? Oh would virtue had been forbidden, we should then have proved all virtuous, for 'tis our blood to love what we are forbidden, what man would have been forbidden, what man would have been fool to a beast, and zany to a swine, to shew tricks in the mire, what is there in three Dice, to make a man draw thrice three thousand acres into the compasse of a little round table, and with the Gentlemans palsie in the hand shake out his posterity, thieves, or beggars; 'tis done, I have don't ifaith: terrible, horrible misery,----------how well was I left, very well, very well.
My Lands shewed like a Full-Moon about me, but now the Moon's in the last quarter, waining, waining, and I am mad to think that Moon was mine:

mine

mine and my fathers, and my fore-fathers generations, generations, down goes the houſe of us, down, down it ſinks: Now is the name a beggar, begs in me that name which hundreds of years has made this Shire famous; in me and my poſterity runs out.

In my ſeed five are made miſerable beſides my ſelf, my Riot is now my Brothers Jaylor, my Wifes ſighing, my three boyes penury, and mine own confuſion.

He tears his hair.

Why ſit my hairs upon my curſed head?
Will not this poiſon ſcatter them? oh my Brother's
In execution among devils that ſtretch him:
And make him give; and I in want,
Not able for to live, nor to redeem him.
Divines and dying men may talk of hell,
But in my heart her ſeveral torments dwell,
Slavery and miſery. Who in this caſe
Would not take up money upon his ſoul?
Pawn his ſalvation, live at intereſt:
I, that did ever in abundance dwell,
For me to want, exceeds the throws of hell.

Enter his little ſon, with a Top and Scourge.

Son. What aile you father, are you not well, I cannot ſcourge my Top as long as you ſtand ſo: you take up all the room with your wide legs, puh, you cannot make me afraid with this, I fear no vizards, nor bugbears.

He takes up the child by the skirts of his long coat in one hand, and draws his dagger with the other.

Huſ. Up ſir, for here thou haſt no inheritance left.

Son. Oh what will you do father, I am your white boy. Strikes him.

Huſ. Thou ſhalt be my red boy, take that.

Son. Oh you hurt me father.

Huſ. My eldeſt beggar, thou ſhalt not live to ask an uſurer bred, to cry at a great mans gate, or follow, good your Honour by a Coach, no, not your brother: 'tis charity to brain you.

Son. How ſhall I learn now my head's broke?

Huſ. Bleed, bleed, rather then beg, beg, ſtabs him.
Be not thy names diſgrace:
Spurn thou thy fortunes firſt, if they be baſe:
Come view thy ſecond Brother: Fates,
My childrens bloud ſhall ſpin into your faces,
You ſhall ſee,
How confidently we ſcorn beggery. Exit with his ſon.

Enter a maid with a child in her armes, the Mother by her aſleep.

Maid. Sleep ſweet babe, ſorrow makes thy mother ſleep,
It boads ſmall good when heavineſſe falls ſo deep,
Huſh, pretty boy, thy hopes might have bin better,
'Tis loſt at Dice, what ancient honour won,
Hard when the father plaies away the Son:
Nothing but miſery ſerves in this houſe,
Ruine and deſolation; oh.

Enter Husband with the Boy bleeding.

Huſ. Whore, give me that Boy.

He ſtrives with her for the child.

Maid. Oh help, help, out alas, murder, murder.

Huſ. Are you gollping, prating ſturdy Quean,
I'le break your clamour with your neck,
Down ſtayers; tumble, tumble, headlong,

He throws her down.

So, the ſureſt way to charme a womans tongue,
Is break her neck, a Polititain did it.

Son. Mother, mother, I am kill'd mother.

His wife awakes, and catcheth up the youngeſt.

Wife. Ha, who's that cry'd? O me my children,
Both, both; bloudy, bloudy.

Huſ. Strumpet, let go the boy, let go the beggar.

Wife. Oh my ſweet husband.

Huſ. Filth, Harlot.

Wife. Oh, what will you do, dear husband?

Huſ. Give me the baſtard.

Wife. Your own ſweet boy.

Huſ. There are too many beggars.

Wife. Good my husband.

Huſ. Do'ſt thou prevent me ſtill?

Wife. Oh God!

Stabs at the child in her armes, and gets it from her.

Huſ. Have at his heart.

Wife. Oh my dear boy.

Huſ. Brat, thou ſhalt not live to ſhame thy houſe.

Wife. Oh heaven. She is hurt and ſinks down.

Huſ. And periſh, now be gone,
There's whores enow, and want would make thee one.

Enter a luſty Servant.

Ser. Oh ſir, what deeds are theſe?

Huſ. Baſe ſlave, my vaſſail,
Com'ſt thou between my fury to queſtion me?

Ser. Were you the devil, I would hold you, ſir.

Huſ. Hold me? preſumption, I'le undo thee for it.

Ser. 'Sbloud, you have undone us all, ſir.

Huſ. Tug at thy Maſter?

Ser. Tug at a monſter.

Huſ. Have I no power? ſhall my ſlave fetter me?

Ser. Nay then the devil wraſtles, I am thrown.

Husband overcomes him.

Huſ. Oh villain, now I'le tug thee, now I'le tear thee, ſet quick ſpurs to my vaſſail, bruiſe him, trample him; ſo, I think thou wilt not follow me in haſte.
My horſe ſtands ready ſadled, away, away,
Now to my brat at nurſe, my ſucking beggar;
Fates, I'le not leave you one to trample on.

The Maſter meets him.

Mr. How is't with you ſir, me-thinks you look of a diſtracted colour.

Huſ. Who, I ſir? 'tis but your fancy,
Pleaſe you walk in, ſir, and I'le ſoon reſolve you,
I want one ſmall part to make up the ſum,
And then my brother ſhall reſt ſatisfied.

M. I ſhall be glad to ſee it, ſir, I'le attend you. Exeunt.

Ser. Oh, I am ſcarce able to heave up my ſelf,
He has ſo bruis'd me with his deviliſh weight,
And torn my fleſh with his bloud-haſty ſpur,
A man before of eaſie conſtitution,
Till now hells power ſupplied, to his ſouls wrong,
Oh how damnation can make weak men ſtrong.

Enter Maſter and two ſervants.

Ser. Oh the moſt pittious deed, ſir, ſince you came.

Mr. A deadly greeting; hath he ſum'd up theſe

To

To satisfie his brother? here's another,
And by the bleeding infants, the dead mother.
Wife. Oh, oh.
Ma. Surgeons, Surgeons, she recovers life,
One of his men all faint and cloudied.
1. Ser. Follow, our murderous Master has took
Horse to kill his child at nurse, oh follow quickly.
Ma. I am the readiest, it shall be my charge
To raise the Town upon him.
Exit Master and Servants.
1. Ser. Good sir follow him.
Wife. Oh my children.
1. Ser. How is it my most afflicted Mistress?
Wife. Why do I now recover? why not live?
To see my children bleed before mine eyes,
A sight, able to kill a Mothers breast without an Executioner; what, art thou mangled too?
1. Ser. I thinking to prevent what his quick mischiefs had so soon acted, came and rusht upon him,
We struggled, but a fouler strength than his
Ore-threw me with his armes, then he did bruise me,
And rent my flesh, and tore'd me of my hair,
Like a man mad in execution,
Made me unfit to rise and follow him.
Wife. What is it hath beguil'd him of all grace?
And stole away humanity from his breast,
To slay his children, purposed to kill his wife,
And spoil his servants.

Enter two Servants.

Both. Please you leave this accursed place,
A Surgeon waits within.
Wife. Willing to leave it;
'Tis guilty of sweet bloud, innocent bloud,
Murder hath took this chamber with full hands,
And will not out as long as the house stands. Exeunt.

Enter Husband, as being thrown off his horse, and falls.

Hus. Oh stumbling Jade, the spavin overtake thee,
The fifty diseases stop thee:
Oh, I am sorely bruis'd, plague founder thee,
Thou run'st at ease and pleasure, heart of chance,
To throw me now, within a flight o'th'Town,
In such plain even ground,
Sfoot, a man may dance upon it, and throw away the Meadows, ah filthy beast.
Cry within. Follow, follow, follow.
Hus. Ha? I hear sounds of men, like hue and cry;
Up, up, and struggle to my horse, make on,
Dispatch that little Beggar, and all's done.
Cry within. Here, this way, this way.
Hus. At my back? oh,
What fate have I, my limbs deny me to go,
My will is bated, Beggery claims a part,
Oh I could here reach to the infants heart.

Enter Master of the Colledge, three Gentlemen, and others with Halberds.

All. Here, here, yonder, yonder.
Ma. Unnatural, flinty, more then barbarous,
The Scythians in their marble-hearted fates,
Could not have acted more remorseless deeds
In their relentless natures, then these of thine:
Was this the answer I long waited on,
The satisfaction for thy prisoned brother?
Hus. He can have no more of us, then our skins,
And some of them want but fleaing.
1. Gent. Great sinnes have made him impudent.
Ma. Has shed so much bloud, that he cannot blush.
2. Gent. Away with him, bear him to the Justices,
A Gentleman of worship dwells at hand,
There shall his deeds be blazed.
Hus. Why all the better,
My glory 'tis to have my action known,
I grieve for nothing, but I mist of one.
Ma. There's little of a father in that grief:
Bear him away. Exeunt.

Enter a Knight, with two or three Gentlemen.

Knight. Endangered so his Wife, murdered his Children?
1. Gent. So the cry goes.
Knight. I am sorry I e're knew him.
That ever he took life and natural being
From such an honoured stock, and fair descent,
Till this black minute without stain or blemish.
1. Gent. Here come the men.

Enter the Master of the Colledge, and the rest with the Prisoner.

Knight. The Serpent of his house: I'me sorry for this time, that I am in place of justice.
Ma. Please you, sir.
Knight. Do not repeat it twice, I know too much,
Would it had nere been thought on.
Sir, I bleed for you.
1. Gent. Your father's sorrows are alive in me:
What made you shew such monstrous cruelty?
Hus. In a word, sir,
I have consum'd all, plaid away long acre,
And I thought it the charitablest deed I could do,
To cozen Beggery, and knock my house o'th'head.
Kni. I do not think, but in to morrow's judgement,
The terrour will sit closer to your soul,
When the dread thought of Death remembers you;
To further which, take this sad voice from me,
Never was act plaid more unnaturally.
Hus. I thank you, Sir.
Knight. Go lead him to the Jayle.
Where justice claims all, there must pitty fail.
Hus. Come, come, away with me.
Exit Prisoner.
Ma. Sir, you deserve the worship of you place,
Would all did so, in you the Law is grace.
Knight. It is my wish it should be so;
Ruinous man, the desolation of his house,
The blot upon his predecessor's honour'd name:
That man is nearest shame, that is past shame. Exit.

Enter Husband with the Officers, the Master and Gentlemen, as going by his house.

Hus. I am right against my house, seat of my Ancestors: I hear my Wife's alive, but much endangered; let me intreat to speak with her before the prison gripe me.

Enter

Enter his Wife brought in a Chair,

Gent. See here ſhe comes of her ſelf.

Wife. Oh my ſweet husband, my deer diſtreſſed husband, now in the hands of unrelenting laws, my greateſt ſorrow, my extreameſt bleeding; now my ſoul bleeds.

Huſ. How now? kind to me? did not I wound thee, leave thee for dead?

Wife. Tut, far greater wounds did my breaſt feel,
Unkindneſſe ſtrikes a deeper wound then ſteel,
You have been ſtill unkind to me.

Huſ. Faith, and ſo I think I have;
I did my murders roughly out of hand,
Deſperate and ſudden, but thou haſt deviſ'd
A fine way now to kill me, thou haſt given mine eyes
Seaven wounds apiece; now glides the devil from Me, departs at every joint, heaves up my nails.
Oh catch him new-torments, that were nere invented:
Bind him one thouſand more you bleſſed Angels,
In that bottomleſſe pit, let him not riſe
To make men act unnatural Tragedies,
To ſpread into a Father, and in fury,
Make him his childrens executioners,
Murder his wife, his ſervants, and who not?
For that man's dark, where heaven is quite forgot.

Wife. Oh my repentant husband.

Huſ. My dear ſoul, whom I too much have wrong'd
For death I die, and for this have I long'd.

Wife. Thou ſhould'ſt not (be aſſured) for theſe faults
Die, if the law could forgive as ſoon as I.

Children laid out.

Huſ. What ſight is yonder?

Wife. Oh our two bleeding boyes
Laid forth upon the threſhold.

Huſ. Here's weight enough to make a heart-ſtring crack,
Oh were it lawfull that your pretty ſouls
Might look from heaven into your fathers eyes,
Then ſhould you ſee the penitent glaſſes melt,
And both your murders ſhoot upon my cheeks,
But you are playing in the Angels laps,
And will not look on me,
Who void of grace, kill'd you in beggery.
Oh that I might my wiſhes now attain,
I ſhould then wiſh you living were again;
Though I did beg with you, which thing I fear'd,
Oh 'twas the enemy my eyes ſo blear'd.
Oh would you could pray heaven me to forgive,
That will unto my end repentant live.

Wife. It makes me e'en forget all other ſorrows,
And leave part with this,

Officer. Come, will you go?

Huſ. I'le kiſſe the bloud I ſpilt, and then I'le go,
My ſoul is bloudied, well may my lips be ſo.
Farewell dear Wife, now thou and I muſt part,
I of thy wrongs, repent me with my heart.

Wife. Oh ſtay, thou ſhalt not go.

Huſ. That's but in vain, you ſee it muſt be ſo.
Farewell ye bloudy aſhes of my boyes,
My puniſhments are their eternal joyes.
Let every father look well into his deeds,
And then their heirs may proſper, while mine bleeds.

Exeunt Husband with Officers.

Wife. More wretched am I now in this diſtreſſe.
Then former ſorrows made me.

Mr. Oh kind Wife, be comforted,
One joy is yet unmurdered,
you have a boy at nurſe, your joy's in him.

Wife. Dearer then all is my poor husband's life:
Heaven give my body ſtrength, which is yet faint
With much expence of bloud, and I will kneel,
Sue for his life, number up all my friends,
To plead for pardon for my dear husbands life.

Mr. Was it in man to wound ſo kind a creature?
I'le ever praiſe a woman for thy ſake.
I muſt return with grief, my anſwer's ſet,
I ſhall bring news weighes heavier then the debt.
Two Brothers; the one in bond lies overthrown,
This, on a deadlier execution.

FINIS.

The Tragedy of LOCRINE, the eldeſt Son of King BRUTUS.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Atey with Thunder and Lightning, all in black, with a burning Torch in one hand, and a bloudie Sword in the other hand; and preſently let there come forth a Lion running after a Bear or any other beaſt, then come forth an Archer, who muſt kill the Lion in a dumb ſhow, and then depart. Remain Atey.

Atey.

In pœnam ſectatur & Vmbra.

A Mighty Lion, ruler of the woods,
Of wondrous ſtrength and great proportion,
With hideous noiſe ſcaring the trembling trees,
With yelling clamours ſhaking all the earth,
Traverſt the groves, and chac't the wandring beaſts:
Long did he range among the ſhadie trees,
And drave the ſilly beaſts before his face;
When ſuddenly from out a thorny buſh
A dreadfull Archer with his bow ybent,
Wounded the Lion with a diſmal ſhaft,
So he him ſtrook, that it drew forth the bloud,
And fill'd his furious heart with fretting ire;
But all in vain he threatneth teeth and pawes,
And ſparkleth fire from forth his flaming eyes,
For the ſharp ſhaft gave him a mortal wound:
So valiant Brute, the terrour of the world,
Whoſe only looks did ſcare his enemies,
The Archer Death brought to his lateſt end.
Oh what may long abide above this ground,
In ſtate of bliſs and healthfull happineſs! Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Brutus carried in a chair, Locrine, Camber, Albanact, Corineius, Guendelin, Aſſaracus, Debon, Thraſimachus.

Brutus. Moſt loyal Lords, and faithfull followers,
That have with me, unworthy General,
Paſſed the greedy gulf of th'Ocean,
Leaving the confines of fair Italie,
Behold, your Brutus draweth nigh his end,
And I muſt leave you, though againſt my will;
My ſinews ſhrunk, my numbred ſenſes fail,
A chilling cold poſſeſſeth all my bones,
Black ugly death with viſage pale and wan,
Preſents himſelf before my dazeled eyes,
And with his dart prepared is to ſtrike:
Theſe armes, my Lords, theſe never daunted armes,
That oft have quell'd the courage of my foes,
And eke diſmay'd my neighbour's arrogance,
Now yield to death, o'relaid with crooked age,
Devoid of ſtrength and of their proper force;
Even as the luſty Cedar worn with yeares,
That far abroad her dainty odour throws,
'Mongſt all the daughters of proud Lebanon,
This heart, my Lords, this ne're appalled heart,
That was a terror to the bordring lands,
A dolefull ſcourge unto my neighbour Kings,
Now by the weapons of unpartial death,
Is clove aſunder and bereft of life;
As when the ſacred oak with thunderbolts,
Sent from the fierie circuit of the heavens,
Sliding along the aires celeſtial vaults,
Is rent and cloven to the very roots.
In vain therefore I ſtruggle with this foe,
Then welcome death, ſince God will have it ſo.

Aſſar. Alas my Lord, we ſorrow at your caſe,
And grieve to ſee your perſon vexed thus;
But whatſoe're the fates determin'd have,
It lieth not in us to diſanull,
And he that would annihilate his mind,
Soaring with Icarus too near the Sun,
May catch a fall with young Bellerophon:
For when the fatal ſiſters have decreed
To ſeparate us from this earthly mould,
No mortal force can countermand their minds:
Then, worthy Lord, ſince there's no way but one,
Ceaſe your laments, and leave your grievous moan.

Corin. Your Highneſs knows how many victories,
How many Trophees I erected have
Triumphantly in every place we came;
The Grecian Monarch, warlike Pandraſſus,
And all the crew of the Moloſſians:
Goffarius the arme-ſtrong King of Gaules,
Have felt the force of our victorious armes,
And to their coſt beheld our Chivalrie,
Where ere Ancora handmaid of the Sun,
Where ere the Sun-bright gardiant of the day,

Where

Where e're the joyfull day with cheerfull light,
Where e're the light illuminates the world,
The Trojans glory flies with golden wings,
Wings that do soar beyond fell envious flight,
The fame of Brutus and his followers
Pierceth the skies, and with the skies the throne
Of mighty Jove, Commander of the world,
Then, worthy Brutus, leave these sad laments,
Comfort your self with this your great renown,
And fear not Death, though he seem terrible.

Brutus. Nay, Corinus, you mistake my mind,
In construing wrong the cause of my complaints,
I fear'd not t' yield my self to fatall death,
God knowes it was the least of all my thoughts,
A greater care torments my very bones,
And makes me tremble at the thought of it,
And in your Lordings doth the substance lie.

Thrasi. Most noble Lord, if ought your loyal Peers
Accomplish may, to ease your lingring grief,
I in the name of all protest to you,
That we will boldly enterprise the same,
Were it to enter to black Tartarus,
Where triple Cerberus with his venomous throat,
Scareth the Ghosts with high resounding noyse,
We'll either rent the bowels of the earth,
Searching the entrails of the bruitish earth,
Or with his Ixions overdaring soon,
Be bound in Chains of everduring Steele.

Bru. Then hearken to your Soveraign's latest words,
In which I will unto you all unfold,
Our royall mind and resolute intent.
When golden Hebe, Daughter to great Jove,
Cover'd my manly Cheeks with youthfull Down,
Th'unhappy slaughter of my luckless Sire,
Drove me and old Assarachus mine Eame,
As exiles from the bounds of Italy,
So that perforce we were constrain'd to flye
To Grecians Monarch, noble Pandrassus,
There I alone did undertake your cause,
There I restor'd your antique liberty,
Though Grecia frown'd, and all Molossia storm'd,
Though brave Antigonus, with martiall band,
In pitched field encountred me and mine,
Though Pandrassus and his contributaries,
With all the rout of their confederates,
Sought to deface our glorious memory,
And wipe the name of Trojans from the earth:
Him did I captivate with this mine Arme,
And by compulsion forc't him to agree
To certain Articles, which there we did propound.
From Grecia through the boisterous Hellespont,
We came into the Fields of Lestrigon,
Whereat our Brother Corineius was;
Which when we passed the Cicilian gulf,
And so transfretting the Illician sea,
Arrived on the coasts of Aquitain;
Where with an Army of his barbarous Gaules
Goffarius and his Brother Gathelus
Encountring with our hoast, sustain'd the foile,
And for your sakes my Turnus there I lost:
Turnus that slew six hundred men at Armes
All in an hour, with his sharp Battle-Axe.
From thence upon the stronds of Albion
To Corus Haven happily we came,
And quell'd the Giants, come of Albions race,
With Gogmagog, Son to Samotheus,
The curs'd Captain of that damned crew,
And in that Isle at length I placed you.
Now let me see if my laborious toyles,
If all my care, if all my grievous wounds,
If all my diligence were well employ'd.

Corin. When first I followed thee and thine (brave King)
I hazarded my life and dearest blood,
To purchase favour at your Princely hands,
And for the same in dangerous attempts
In sundry conflicts, and in divers broyles,
I shew'd the courage of my manly minde:
For this I combated with Gathelus,
The Brother to Goffarius of Gaule:
For this I fought with furious Gogmagog,
A savage Captain of a savage crew:
And for these deeds brave Cornwall I receiv'd,
A gratefull gift given by a gracious King;
And for this gift, this life and dearest blood,
Will Corineius spend for Brutus good.

Deb. And what my friend, brave Prince, hath vow'd (to you,
The same will Debon doe unto his end.

Bru. Then, loyal Peers, since you are all agreed,
And resolute to follow Brutus hoasts,
Favour my Sons, favour those Orphans, Lords,
And shield them from the dangers of their foes.
Locrine, the Columne of my Family,
And onely Pillar of my weakned age:
Locrine, draw near, draw near unto thy Sire,
And take thy latest blessings at his hands;
And for thou art the eldest of my Sons,
Be thou a Captain to thy Brethren,
And imitate thy aged Fathers steps,
Which will conduct thee to true honours gate:
For if thou follow sacred virtues lore,
Thou shalt be crowned with a Lawrel branch,
And wear a wreathe of sempiternall fame,
Sorted amongst the glorious happy ones.

Locrin. If Locrine do not follow your advice,
And beare himself in all things like a Prince
That seeks to amplifie the great renown,
Left unto him for an inheritance
By those that were his Ancestours,
Let me be flung into the Ocean,
And swallowed in the bowels of the earth.
Or let the ruddy lightning of great Jove,
Descend upon this my devolted head.

Brutus taking Guendoline by the hand.

Bru. But for I see you all to be in doubt,
Who shall be matched with our Royal Son,
Locrine, receive this present at my hand:
A gift more rich then are the wealthy Mines
Found in the Bowels of America.
Thou shalt be spoused to fair Guendoline:
Love her, and take her, for she is thine own,
If so thy Unckle and her self do please.

Corin. And herein how your Highnesse honours me,
It cannot now be in my speech expresst:
For carefull Parents glory not so much
At their honour and promotion,
As for to see the issue of their blood
Seated in honour and prosperity.

Guend. And far be it from my pure Maiden thoughts,
To contradict her aged Fathers will.
Therefore since he to whom I must obey,
Hath given me now unto your Royal Self,
I will not stand aloof from off the lure,

Like crafty Dames that moſt of all deny
That, which they moſt deſire to poſſeſſe.
Brutus turning to Locrine.
Locrine kneeling.
Then now my ſon thy part is on the ſtage,
For thou muſt bear the perſon of a King.
Puts the Crown on his head.
Locrine ſtand up, and wear the regal Crown,
And think upon the ſtate of Majeſty,
That thou with honour well maiſt wear the Crown,
And if thou tendreſt theſe my lateſt words,
As thou requir'ſt my ſoul to be at reſt,
As thou deſireſt thine own ſecurity,
Cheriſh and love thy new betrothed wife.
Locrine. No longer let me well enjoy the Crown,
Then I do peerleſſe Guendoline.
Brut. Camber.
Cam. My Lord.
Brut. The glory of mine age,
And darling of thy mother Junoger,
Take thou the South for thy dominion,
From thee there ſhall proceed a royal race,
That ſhall maintain the honor of this land,
That ſway the regal ſcepter with their hands.
Turning to Alabanact.
And Albanact thy fathers onely joy,
Youngeſt in years, but not the young'ſt in mind,
A perfect pattern of all chivalrie,
Take thou the North for thy dominion,
A country full of hills and ragged rocks,
Repleniſhed with fierce untamed beaſts,
As correſpondent to thy martial thoughts.
Live long my ſons with endleſſe happineſſe,
And bear firm concordance among your ſelves,
Obey the counſels of theſe fathers grave,
That you may better bear out violence,
But ſuddenly through weakneſſe of my age,
And the defect of youthfull puiſſance,
My Maladie increaſeth more and more,
And cruel death haſteneth his quickned pace,
To diſpoſſeſſe me of my earthly ſhape,
Mine eyes wax dim, o're-caſt with clouds of age.
The pangs of death compaſſe my crazed bones,
Thus to you all my bleſſings I bequeath,
And with my bleſſings, this my fleeting ſoul.
My glaſſe is run, and all my miſeries
Do end with life: death cloſeth up mine eyes,
My ſoul in haſt flies to the Eliſian fields. He dieth.
Loc. Accurſed ſtarrs, damn'd and accurſed ſtarrs,
To abreviate my noble father's life,
Hard-hearted gods, and too envious fates,
Thus to cut off my father's fatal thred,
Brutus that was a glory to us all,
Brutus that was a terror to his foes,
Alaſſe too ſoon by Demagorgon's knife,
The martial Brutus is bereft of life.
No ſad complaints may move juſt Lacus.
Corin. No dreadfull threats can fear judge Rhodomanth,
Wert thou as ſtrong as mighty Hercules,
That tam'd the hugie monſters of the world,
Plaid'ſt thou as ſweet, on the ſweet ſounding Lute,
As did the ſpouſe of fair Euridice,
That did enchant the waters with his noiſe,
And made the ſtones, birds, beaſts, to lead a dance,
Conſtrained the hilly trees to follow him,
Thou could'ſt not move the judge of Crebus,
Nor move compaſſion in grim Pluto's heart,
For fatal Mors expecteth all the world,
And every man muſt tread the way of death,
Brave Tantalus, the valiant Pelops ſire,
Gueſt to the gods, ſuffred untimely death,
And old Fleithonus husband to the morn,
And eke grim Minos whom juſt Jupiter
Deign'd to admit unto his ſacrifice,
The thundring trumpets of bloud-thirſty Mars.
The fearfull rage of fell Tiſiphoen.
The boiſtrous waves of humid Ocean,
Are inſtruments and tools of diſmal death.
Then noble couſin ceaſe to mourn his chance,
Whoſe age and years were ſignes that he ſhould die.
It reſteth now that we interre his bones,
That was a terror to his enemies.
Take up his coarſe, and Princes hold him dead,
Who while he liv'd, upheld the Troyan ſtate.
Sound drums and trumpets, march to Trinovant,
There to provide our chieftains funeral. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Strumbo above in a gown, with ink and paper in his hand ſaying.

Strum. Either the four Elements, the ſeven Planets and all the particular Starrs of the Pole Antaſtick, are adverſitive againſt me, or elſe I was begotten and born in the wain of the Moon, when every thing, as Lactantius in his fourth book of Conſtultations doth ſay, goeth arſward. I Maſters, I, you may laugh, but I muſt weep; you may joy, but I muſt ſorrow; ſhedding ſalt tears from the watry fountains of my moiſt dainty fair eyes, along my comely and ſmooth cheeks, in as great plenty as the water runneth from the bucking-tubs, or red wine out of the Hogs-heads: for truſt me gentlemen and my very good friends, and ſo forth: the little god, nay the deſperate god Cuprit, with one of his vengible bird-bolts, hath ſhot me unto the heel: ſo not only, but alſo, oh fine phraſe, I burn, I burn, and I burn a, in love, in love, and in love a, ah Strumbo, what haſt thou ſeen, not Dina with the Aſſe Tom? Yea with theſe eyes thou haſt ſeen her, and therefore pull them out: for they will work thy bail. Ah Strumbo, haſt thou heard the voice of the Nightingale, but a voice ſweeter then hers, yea with theſe ears haſt thou heard them, and therefore cut them off, for they have caus'd thy ſorrow. Nay Strumbo, kill thy ſelf, drown thy ſelf, hang thy ſelf, ſtarve thy ſelf. Oh but then I ſhall leave my ſweet heart. Oh my heart! Now pate for thy Maſter, I will dite an aliquant love-piſtle to her, and then ſhe hearing the grand verboſity of my ſcripture, will love me preſently,
Let him write a little, and then read.
My pen is naught, Gentlemen lend me a knife, I think the more haſte the worſt ſpeed.
Then write again, and after read.
So it is, Miſtris Dorothie, and the ſole eſſence of my ſoul, that the little ſparkles of affection kindled in me towards your ſweet ſelf, hath now increaſed to a great flame, and will ere it be long conſume my poor heart, except you with the pleaſant water of your ſecret fountain,

tain, quench the furious heat of the ſame. Alaſs, I am a Gentleman of good fame, and name, majeſticall, in apparell comely, in gate portly. Let not therefore your gentle heart be ſo hard, as to deſpiſe a proper tall young man of a handſome life, and by deſpiſing him, not only but alſo to kill him. Thus expecting time and tide, I bid you farewell. Your Servant, Signior Strumbo.

Oh wit, O pate, O memory, O hand, O Ink, O paper. Well, now I will ſend it away. Trompart, Trompart, what a Villain is this? Why ſirrha, come when your Maſter calls you. Trompart.

Trompart entring ſaith

Anon, ſir.

Strumbo. Thou knoweſt, my pretty Boy, what a good Maſter I have been to thee ever ſince I took thee into my ſervice.

Trom. I, ſir.

Srum. And how I have cheriſhed thee alwayes, as if thou hadſt been the fruit of my loynes, fleſh of my fleſh, and bone of my bone.

Trom. I, ſir.

Strum. Then ſhew thy ſelf herein a truſty ſervant, and carry this Letter to Miſtreſs Dorothy, and tell her.

Speaking in his eare.

Exit Trompart.

Strum. Nay, Maſters, you ſhall ſee a Marriage by and by. But here ſhe comes. Now muſt I frame my amorous paſſions.

Enter Dorothy and Trompart.

Doro. Signior Strumbo, well met, I received your Letters by your man here, who told me a pittifull ſtory of your anguiſh, and ſo underſtanding your paſſions were ſo great, I came hither ſpeedily.

Strum. Oh, my ſweet and pigſney, the fecundity of my ingenie is not ſo great, that may declare unto you the ſorrowfull ſobs, and broken ſleeps that I ſuffered for your ſake; and therefore I deſire you to receive me into your familiarity.

For your Love doth lie,
As near and as nigh:
Unto my heart within,
As mine Eye to my Noſe,
My Leg unto my Hoſe,
And my Fleſh unto my Skin.

Dor. Truly, M. Strumbo, you ſpeak too learnedly for me to underſtand the drift of your mind, and therefore tell your tale in plain termes, and leave off your dark riddles.

Strum. Alaſs, Miſtreſſe Dorothy, this is my luck, that when I moſt would, I cannot be underſtood: ſo that my great learning is an inconvenience unto me. But to ſpeak in plain termes, I love you, Miſtreſſe Dorothy, if you like to accept me into your familiarity.

Dor. If this be all I am content.

Turning to the people.

Strum. Say'ſt thou ſo, ſweet wench, let me lick thy Toes. Farewell, Miſtreſſe. If any of you be in love, provide ye a Cap-caſe full of new coyn'd words, and then ſhall you ſoon have the ſuccado de labres, and ſomething elſe.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Locrine, Guendoline, Camber, Albanact, Corineus, Aſſaracbus, Debon, Thraſimachus.

Locrine. Uncle and Princes of brave Britany,
Since that our noble Father is entomb'd,
As beſt beſeem'd ſo brave a Prince as he,
If ſo you pleaſe, this day my Love and I,
Within the Temple of Concordia,
Will ſolemnize our royall marriage.

Thra. Right noble Lord, your ſubjects every one,
Muſt needs obey your Highneſſe at command,
Eſpecially in ſuch a cauſe as this,
That much concerns your Highneſſe great content.

Locr. Then frolick, Lordings, to fair Concords walls,
Where we will paſſe the day in Knightly ſports,
The night in Dancing and in figured Maskes,
And offer to God Riſus all our ſports.

Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Atey as before, after a little Lightning and Thundring, let there come forth this ſhow: Perſeus and Andromeda, hand in hand, and Cepheus alſo with Swords and Targets. Then let there come out of another door Phineus, all black in Armour, with Æthiopians after him, driving in Perſeus, and having taken away Andromeda, let them depart. Atey remaining, ſaying.

Regit omnia numen.
When Perſeus married fair Andromeda,
The onely Daughter of King Cepheus,
He thought he had eſtabliſht well his Crown,
And that his Kingdome ſhould for aye endure.
But loe proud Phineus with a band of men,
Contriv'd of ſun-burnt Æthiopians,
By force of Armes the Bride he took from him,
And turn'd their joy into a flood of teares.
So fares it with young Locrine and his Love,
He thinks this marriage tendeth to his weale,
But this foule day, this foule accurſed day,
Is the beginning of his miſeries.
Behold where Humber and his Scythians
Approcheth nigh with all his warlike train,
I need not I, the ſequel ſhall declare,
What tragick chances fell out in this Warre. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter, Humber, Hubba, Eſtrilo, Segar, and their Souldiers.

Hum. At length the Snaile doth climbe the higheſt tops,
Aſcending up the ſtately Caſtle Walls,

At length the water with continual drops,
Doth penetrate the hardeſt marble ſtone,
At length we are arrived in Albion,
Nor could the barbarous Dacian ſoveraign,
Nor yet the ruler of brave Belgia
Stay us from cutting over to this Ile;
Whereas I hear a troop of Phrygians
Under the conduct of Poſthumius ſon,
Have pitch'd up lordly pavillions,
And hope to proſper in this lovely Ile:
But I will fruſtrate all their fooliſh hope,
And teach them that the Scythian Emperour
Leads fortune tied in a chain of gold,
Conſtraining her to yield unto his will,
And grace him with their Regal diadem:
Which I will have, maugre their treble hoſts,
And all the power their pettie Kings can make.

Hubba. If ſhe that rules fair Rhamnis golden gate,
Grant us the honour of the victory,
As hitherto ſhe alwayes favour'd us,
Right noble father, we will rule the land,
Enthroniz'd in ſeats of Topace ſtones,
That Locrine and his brethren all may know,
None muſt be King but Humber and his ſon.

Hum. Courage my ſon, fortune ſhall favour us,
And yield to us the coronet of bays,
That decketh none but noble conquerours:
But what ſaith Elſtrid to theſe regions?
How liketh ſhe the temperature thereof?
Are they not pleaſant in her gracious eyes?

Eſtr. The plains, my Lord, garniſht with Flora's wealth,
And overſpread with party-coloured flowers,
Do yield ſweet contentation to my mind,
The aerie hills enclos'd with ſhadie groves,
The groves repleniſht with ſweet chirping birds,
The birds reſounding heavenly melodie,
Are equall to the groves of Theßaly,
Where Phœbus with the learned Ladies nine,
Delight themſelves with muſick harmony,
And from the moiſture of the mountain tops,
The ſilent ſprings dance down with murmuring ſtreams,
And water all the ground with chryſtal waves,
The gentle blaſts of Eurus modeſt wind,
Moving the pittering leaves of Silvane's woods,
Do equall it with Tempe's paradice,
And thus comforted all to one effect,
Do make me think theſe are the happy Iles,
Moſt fortunate, if Humber may them win.

Hubba. Madam, where reſolution leads the way,
And courage follows with emboldened pace,
Fortune can never uſe her tyranny;
For valiantneſſe is like unto a rock
That ſtandeth on the waves of Ocean,
Which though the billows beat one every ſide,
And Boreas fell with his tempeſtuous ſtorms,
Bloweth upon it with a hideous clamour,
Yet it remaineth ſtill unmoveable.

Hum. Kingly reſolv'd, thou glory of thy ſire:
But worthy Segar, what uncouth novelties
Bring'ſt thou unto our royal Majeſty?

Seg. My Lord, the youngeſt of all Brutus ſonnes,
Stout Albanact, with millions of men,
Approacheth nigh, and meaneth e're the morn,
To try your force by dint of fatal ſword.

Hum. Tut, let him come with millions of hoſts,
He ſhall find entertainment good enough,
Yea fit for thoſe that are our enemies:
For we'll receive them at the lances points,
And maſſacre their bodies with our blades:
Yea though they were in number infinite,
More then the mighty Babylonian Queen,
Semiramis the ruler of Weſt,
Brought 'gainſt the Emperour of the Scythians,
Yet would we not ſtart back one foot from them:
That they might know we are invincible.

Hub. Now by great Jove the ſupreme King of heaven,
And the immortal gods that live therein,
When as the morning ſhews his chearfull face,
And Lucifer mounted upon his ſteed,
Brings in the chariot of the golden ſun,
I'le meet young Albanact in the open field,
And crack my launce upon his burganet,
To try the valour of his boyiſh ſtrength:
There will I ſhew ſuch ruthfull ſpectacles
And cauſe ſo great effuſion of bloud,
That all his boyes ſhall wonder at my ſtrength:
As when the warlike Queen of Amazon,
Penthefilea armed with her launce,
Girt with a corſlet of bright ſhining ſteel,
Coopt up the faint-heart Grecians in the camp.

Hum. Spoke like a warlike Knight, my noble ſon,
Nay, like a Prince that ſeeks his father's joy.
Therefore to morrow ere fair Titan ſhine,
And baſhfull Eos meſſenger of light,
Expells the liquid ſleep from out mens eyes,
Thou ſhalt conduct the right wing of the hoſt,
The left wing ſhall be under Segar's charge,
The rearward ſhall be under me my ſelf;
And lovely Eſtrild fair and gracious,
If fortune favour me in mine attempts,
Thou ſhalt be Queen of lovely Albion.
Fortune ſhall favour me in mine attempts,
And make thee Queen of lovely Albion.
Come let us in and muſter up our train,
And furniſh up our luſty ſouldiers,
That they may be a bulwark to our ſtate,
And bring our wiſhed joyes to perfect end. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Strumbo, Dorothy, Trompart, cobling ſhooes, and ſinging.

Trom. We Coblers lead a merry life:
All. Dan, dan, dan, dan:
Strum. Void of all envy and of ſtrife:
All. Dan diddle dan.
Dor. Our eaſe is great, our labour ſmall:
All. Dan, dan, dan, dan.
Strum. And yet our gains be much withall:
All. Dan diddle dan.
Dor. With this art ſo fine and fair:
All. Dan, dan, dan, dan.
Trom. No occupation may compare:
All. Dan diddle dan.
Strum. For merry paſtime and joyfull glee:
Dan, dan, dan, dan.
Dor. Moſt happy men we Coblers be:
Dan diddle dan.

Trom. The

Trum. The can ſtands full of na ppy ale,
Dan : dan : dan : dan :
Strum. In our ſhop ſtill withouten fail:
Dan diddle dan.
Dor. This is our meat, this is our food:
Dan : dan : dan : dan :
Trum. This brings us to a merry mood:
Dan diddle dan.
Strum. This makes us work for company:
Dan, dan, dan, dan:
Dor. To pull the Tankards cheerfully:
Dan diddle dan.
Trum. Drink to thy husband Dorothie,
Dan, dan, dan, dan:
Dor. Why then my Strumbo there's to thee:
Dan diddle dan:
Srum. Drink thou the reſt Trumpart amain:
Dan, dan, dan, dan.
Dor. When that is gone, we'll fill't again:
Dan diddle dan.
Cap. The pooreſt ſtate is fartheſt from annoy,
How merrily he ſitteth on his ſtool:
But when he ſees that needs he muſt be preſt,
He'll turn his note and ſing another tune,
Ho, by your leave Maſter Cobler.

Strum. You are welcome gentleman, what will you any old ſhooes or buskins, or will you have your ſhooes clouted, I will do them as well as any Cobler in Cathnes whatſoever?

Captain ſhewing him preſs-money.

O Maſter Cobler, you are far deceived in me, for don you ſee this? I come not to buy any ſhooes, but to buy your ſelf; come ſir, you muſt be a ſouldier in the King's cauſe.

Strum. Why, but hear you ſir, has your King any Commiſſion to take any man againſt his will. I promiſe you, I can ſcant believe it, or did he give you Commiſſion?

Cap. O ſir, ye need not care for that, I need no Commiſſion: hold here, I command you in the name of our King Albanact, to appear to morrow in the townhouſe of Cathnes.

Strum. King Nactabell, I cry God mercy, what have we to do with him, or he with us? but you ſir maſter capontail, draw your paſteboard, or elſe I promiſe you, I'le give you a canvaſado with a baſtinado over your ſhoulders, and teach you to come hither with your implements.

Cap. I pray thee good fellow be content, I do the Kings command.

Strum. Put me out of your book then.

Cap. I may not.

Srumbo Snatching up a ſtaff.

No will, come ſir, will your ſtomack ſerve you, by gogs blew hood and halidom, I will have about with you.

Fight both.

Enter Thraſimachus.

Thra. How now, what noiſe, what ſudden clamor's this? How now, my Captain and the Cobler ſo hard at it? Sirs what is your quarrel?

Cap. Nothing, ſir, but that he will not take preſs-mony.

Thra. Here good fellow, take it at my command, Unleſſe you mean to be ſtretch'd.

Strum. Truly, Maſter gentleman, I lack no mony, if you pleaſe I will reſigne it to one of theſe poor fellows.

Thraſ. No ſuch matter,
Look you be at the common houſe to morrow.

Exit Thraſimachus and the Captain.

Strum. O wife I have ſpun a fair thred, if I had been quiet, I had not been preſt, and therefore well may I wayment; But come ſirra, ſhut up, for we muſt to the warrs. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Albanact, Debon. Thraſimachus, and the Lords.

Alb. Brave Cavaliers, Princes of Albany,
Whoſe trenchant blades with our deceaſed ſire,
Paſſing the frontiers of brave Grecia,
Were bathed in our enemies lukewarme bloud,
Now is the time to manifeſt your wills,
Your haughty minds and reſolutions,
Now opportunity is offred
To try your courage and your earneſt zeal,
Which you alwayes proteſt to Albanact,
For at this time, yea at this preſent time,
Stout fugitives come from the Scithians bounds
Have peſtred every place with mutinies:
But truſt me, Lordings, I will never ceaſe
To perſecute the raſcal runnagates,
Till all the rivers ſtained with their bloud,
Shall fully ſhew their fatal overthrow.

Deb. So ſhall your Highneſſe merit great renown,
And imitate your aged father's ſteps.

Alb. But tell me couſin, cam'ſt thou through the plains?
And ſaw'ſt thou there the faint-heart fugitives
Muſtring their weather-beaten ſouldiers,
What order keep they in their marſhalling?

Thra. After we paſt the groves of Caledone,
We did behold the ſtragling Scithians Camp,
Repleat with men, ſtor'd with munition;
There might we ſee the valiant minded Knights
Fetching carriers along the ſpacious plains,
Humber and Hubba arm'd in azure blew,
Mounted upon their courſers white as ſnow,
Went to behold the pleaſant flowring fields;
Hector and Troilus, Priamus lovely ſons,
Chaſing the Grecians over Simoeis,
Were not to be compared to theſe two Knights.

Alba. Well haſt thou painted out in eloquence
The portraiture of Humber and his ſon;
As fortunate as was Policrates,
Yet ſhould they not eſcape our conquering ſwords,
Or boaſt of ought but of our clemencie.

Enter Strumbo and Trompart crying often;

Wild fire and pitch, wild fire and pitch, &c.

Thra. What ſirs, what mean you by theſe clamors made, Thoſe outcries raiſed in our ſtately Court?

Strum. Wild-fire and pitch, wild-fire and pitch.

Thra. Villains I ſay, tell us the cauſe hereof?

Strum. Wid-fire and pitch, wild-fire and pitch.

Thra. Tell me you villains, why you make this noiſe, Or with my Lance, I will prick your bowels out.

Al. Where are your houſes, where's your dwelling place?

Strum.

Strum. Place, Ha, ha, ha, laugh a month and a day at him; place! I cry God mercy, why doe you think that such poor honest men as we be, hold our habitacles in Kings Palaces: Ha, ha, ha. But becauſe you ſeem to be an abominable Chieftain, I will tell you your ſtate.

From the top to the toe,
From the head to the ſhoe;
From the beginning to the ending.
From the building to the burning.

This honeſt fellow and I had our manſion Cottage in the ſuburbs of this City, hard by the Temple of Mercury. And by the common Souldiers of the Shittens, the Scythians what doe you call them? with all the ſuburbs were burnt to the ground, and the aſhes are left there for the Countrey Wives to waſh bucks withall. And that which grieves me moſt, my loving Wife, O cruell ſtrife; the wicked flames did roaſt.

And therefore Captain Cruſt,
We will continually cry,
Except you ſeek a remedy,
Our Houſes to reedifie,
Which now are burnt to duſt.

Both cry. Wild-fire and Pitch, Wild-fire and Pitch.

Alba. Well, we muſt remedy theſe outrages,
And throw revenge upon their hatefull heads,
And you good fellows for your houſes burnt,
We will remunerate your ſtore of Gold,
And build your houſes by our Pallace gate.

Strumbo. Gate! O petty treaſon to my perſon, no where elſe but by your backſide; Gate! oh how I am vexed in my Coller: Gate! I cry God mercy, do you hear, Maſter King? If you mean to gratifie ſuch poor men as we be, you muſt build our houſes by the Tavern.

Alba. It ſhall be done, ſir.

Strum. Near the Tavern, I, by Lady, ſir, it was ſpoken like a good fellow. Do you hear, ſir? when our houſe is builded, if you do chance to paſſe or re-paſſe that way, we will beſtow a quart of the beſt Wine upon you? Exit.

Alb. It grieves me, Lordings, that my Subjects goods
Should thus be ſpoyled by the Scythians,
Who as you ſee with lightfoot forragers,
Depopulate the places where they come,
But curſed Humber thou ſhalt rue the day
That ere thou cam'ſt unto Cathneſia. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Humber, Hubba, Segar, Truſſier, and their Soldiers.

Hum. Hubba, go take a Coronet of our Horſe,
As many Launciers, and light-armed Knights,
As may ſuffice for ſuch an enterpriſe,
And place them in the Grove of Calcedon,
With theſe, when as the skirmiſh doth encreaſe,
Retire thou from the ſhelters of the wood,
And ſet upon the weakned Trojans backs,
For policy joyned with Chivalry,
Can never be put back from victory. Exeunt.

Enter Albanact, Clownes with him.

Alb. Thou baſe born Hunne, how durſt thou be ſo bold,
As once to menace warlike Albanact?
The great Commander of theſe Regions,
But thou ſhalt buy thy raſhneſſe with thy death,
And rue too late thy over-bold attempts,
For with this Sword, this Inſtrument of death,
That hath been drenched in my Foe-mens blood,
I'le ſeparate thy body from thy head,
And ſet that Coward blood of thine abroach.

Strum. Nay with this ſtaffe great Strumbo's Inſtrument, I'le crack thy Cockscombe, paltry Scythian.

Hum. Nor wreak I of thy threats, thou princox boy,
Nor doe I fear thy fooliſh inſolency,
And but thou better uſe thy bragging blade,
Then thou doſt rule thy overflowing tongue,
Superbious Britain, thou ſhalt know too ſoon
The force of Humber and his Scythians.

Let them fight.

Humber and his Soldiers run in.

Strum. O horrible, terrible.

Scena Sexta.

Sound the Alarm. Enter Humber and his Soldiers.

Hum. How bravely this young Britain, Albanact,
Darteth abroad the thunderbolts of warre,
Beating down millions with his furious mood;
And in his glory triumphs over all,
Moving the maſſie ſquadrants of the ground;
Heap hills on hills, to ſcale the ſtarry skie:
As when Briareus armed with an hundred hands,
Flung forth an hundred mountains at great Jove,
And when the monſtrous gyant Monichus
Hurl'd mount Olimpus at great Mars his targe,
And ſhot huge Cedars at Minerva's ſhield.
How doth he overlook with haughty front
My fleeting hoaſts, and lifts his lofty face
Againſt us all that now do fear his force,
Like as we ſee the wrathfull Sea from farre,
In a great mountain heapt with hideous noyſe,
With thouſand billowes beat againſt the Ships,
And toſſe them in the Waves like Tennis Balls.

Sound the Alarm.

Humb. Ay me, I fear my Hubba is ſurpris'd.

Sound again. Enter Albanact.

Alba. Follow me, Souldiers, follow Albanact;
Purſue the Scythians flying through the field:
Let none of them eſcape with victory:
That they may know the Britains force is more
Than all the power of the trembling Hunnes.

Thra. Forward, brave ſoldiers, forward, keep the chaſe,
He that takes captive Humber or his Son,
Shall be rewarded with a Crown of gold.

Sound alarm, then let them fight, Humber give back, Hubba enters at their backs, and kills Debon, let Strumbo fall down, Albanact run in, and afterwards enter wounded.

Alba. Injurious fortune, haſt thou croſt me thus?
Thus in the morning of my victories,

Thus

Thus in the prime of my felicity
To cut me off by ſuch hard overthrow.
Hadſt thou no time thy rancour to declare,
But in the ſpring of all my dignities?
Hadſt thou no place to ſpit thy venome out
But on the perſon of young Albanact?
I that ere while did ſcare mine enemies,
And drove them almoſt to a ſhamefull flight:
I that ere while full Lyon-like did fare
Amongſt the dangers of the thick throng'd pikes,
Muſt now depart moſt lamentably ſlain
By Humber's treacheries and fortunes ſpights:
Curſt be their charmes, damn'd be her curſed charmes
That doth delude the wayward hearts of men,
Of men that truſt unto her fickle wheele,
Which never leaveth turning upſide down.
O gods, O heavens, allot me but the place
Where I may finde her hatefull manſion,
I'le paſſe the Alpes to watry Meroe,
Where fiery Phœbus in his charriot,
The wheeles whereof are deckt with Emeralds,
Caſt ſuch a heat, yea ſuch a ſcorching heat,
And ſpoileth Flora of her chequered graſſe,
I'le overturn the mountain Caucaſus,
Where fell Chimæra in her triple ſhape,
Rolleth hot flames from out her monſtrous panch,
Scaring the beaſts with iſſue of her gorge,
I'le paſſe the frozen Zone where Icy flakes
Stopping the paſſage of the fleeting ſhips
Do lie, like mountains in the congeal'd Sea,
Where if I find that hatefull houſe of Hers,
I'le pull the fickle wheele from out her hands,
And tie her ſelf in everlaſting bands:
But all in vain I breathe theſe threatnings,
The day is loſt, the Hunnes are conquerors,
Debon is ſlain, my men are done to death,
The currents ſwift ſwimme violently with blood,
And laſt, O that this laſt night ſo long laſt,
My ſelf with wounds paſt all recovery,
Muſt leave my Crown for Humber to poſſeſſe.

Strum. Lord have mercy upon us, Maſters, I think this is a holy-day, every man lies ſleeping in the fields, but God knowes full ſore againſt their wills.

Thra. Fly, noble Albanact, and ſave thy ſelf,
The Scythians follow with great celerity,
And there's no way but fight, or ſpeedy death,
Flie, noble Albanact, and ſave thy ſelf.

Sound the Alarm.

Alba. Nay let them flie that fear to die the death,
That tremble at the name of fatall Mors,
Ne're ſhall proud Humber boaſt or brag himſelf,
That he hath put young Albanact to flight:
And leaſt he ſhould triumph at my decay,
This ſword ſhall reave his Maſter of his life,
That oft hath ſav'd his Maſters doubtfull life:
But oh my brethren if you care for me,
Revenge my death upon his traiterous head.

Et vos queis domus eſt nigrantis regia ditis,
Qui regitis rigido ſtigios moderamine lucos:
Nox caci regina poli furialis Erinnis,
Diique deaque omnes Albanum tollite regem,
Tollite flumineis undis rigidaque palude
Nunc me fata vocant, hoc condam pectore ferrum.

Thruſt himſelf through

Enter Trumpart.

O what hath he done? his Noſe bleeds: but I ſmell a Fox,
Look where my Maſter lies, Maſter, Maſter.

Strum. Let me alone, I tell thee, for I am dead.

Trum. Yet one, good, good, Maſter.

Strum. I will not ſpeak, for I am dead I tell thee.

Trum. And is my Maſter dead?
O ſticks and ſtones, brickbats and bones,
and is my Maſter dead?
O you cockatrices, and you bablatrices,
that in the woods dwell:
You briers and brambles, you Cook ſhops and ſhambles,
come howle and yell.
With howling and ſcreeking, with wailing and weeping,
come you to lament.
O Colliers of Croyden, and Ruſticks of Royden,
and Fiſhers of Kent.
For Strumbo the Cobler, the fine merry Cobler
of Cathnes town:
At this ſame ſtoure, at this very hour
lies dead on the ground.
O Maſter, thieves, thieves, thieves.

Strum. Where be they? cox me tunny, bobekin, let me be riſing, be gone, we ſhall be robb'd by and by.

Scena Octava.

Enter Humber, Hubba, Segar, Thraſſier, Eſtrild, and the Souldiers.

Hum. Thus from the dreadful ſhocks of furious Mars's
Thundring alarmes, and Rhamnuſia's Drum
We are retired with joyfull victory,
The ſlaughter'd Trojans ſqueltring in their blood,
Infect the aire with their carcaſſes,
And are a prey for every ravenous bird.

Eſtrild. So periſh they that are our enemies.
So periſh they that love not Humber's weale.
And mighty Jove, Commander of the world,
Protect my love from all falſe treacheries.

Hum. Thanks lovely Eſtrild, ſolace to my ſoule.
But, valiant Hubba, for thy Chivalry
Declar'd againſt the men of Albany,
Loe here a flowring garland wreath'd of bay,
As a reward for this thy forward minde.

Set it on his head.

Hub. This unexpected honour, noble Sire,
Will prick my courage unto braver deeds,
And cauſe me to attempt ſuch hard exploits,
That all the world ſhall ſound of Hubba's name.

Hum. And now, brave Soldiers, for this good ſucceſs,
Carouſe whole cups of Amazonian Wine,
Sweeter then Nectar or Ambroſia,
And caſt away the Clods of curſed care,
With goblets crown'd with Semeleius gifts,
Now let us march to Abis ſilver ſtreames,
That clearly glide along the Champane fields,
And moiſt the graſſy meads with humid drops.
Sound Drums and Trumpets, ſound up cheerfully,
Sith we return with joy and victory.

Actus Tertius. Scena prima.

Enter Ate as before. The dumb show. A Crocadile ſitting on a rivers bank, and a little Snake ſtinging it. Then let both of them fall into the water.

Ate. Scelera in authorem cadunt.
High on a bank by Nilus boyſtrous ſtreams,
Fearfully ſat th'Egyptian Crocodile,
Dreadfully grinding in her ſharp long teeth,
The broken bowels of a ſilly fiſh,
His back was arm'd againſt the dint of ſpear,
With ſhields of braſſe that ſhin'd like burniſht gold,
And as he ſtretched forth his cruel paws,
A ſubtil Adder creeping cloſely near,
Thruſting his forked ſting into his claws,
Privily ſhead his poiſon through his bones,
Which made him ſwell that there his bowels burſt,
That did ſo much in his own greatneſſe truſt.
So Humber having conquered Albanact,
Doth yield his glory unto Locrine's ſword.
Mark what enſues, and you may eaſily ſee,
That all our life is but a Tragedy. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Locrine, Guendoline, Corineus, Aſſaracus, Thraſimachus, Camber.

Locrine. And is this true, is Albanactus ſlain?
Hath curſed Humber with his ſtragling hoſt,
With that his army made of mungrel currs,
Brought our redoubted brother to his end?
O that I had the Thracian Orpheus harp,
For to awake out of the infernal ſhade
Thoſe ugly Devils of black Erebus,
That might torment the damned traitor's ſoul:
O that I had Amphion's inſtrument,
To quicken with his vital notes and tunes
The flintie joynts of every ſtonie rock,
By which the Scythians might be puniſhed;
For, by the lightning of almighty Jove,
The Hunne ſhall die had he ten thouſand lives:
And would to God he had ten thouſand lives,
That I might with the arm-ſtrong Hercules
Crop off ſo vile an Hydra's hiſſing heads.
But ſay me, Couſin, for I long to hear
How Albanact came by untimely death?

Thraſ. After the traiterous hoſt of Scythians
Entred the field with martial equipage,
Young Albanact impatient of delay,
Led forth his army 'gainſt the ſtragling mates,
Whoſe multitude did daunt our ſouldiers minds,
Yet nothing could diſmay the forward Prince;
But with a courage moſt heroical,
Like to a lion 'mongſt a flock of lambs,
Made havock of the faint-heart fugitives,
Hewing a paſſage through them with his ſword;
Yea we had almoſt given them the repulſe,
When ſuddenly from out the ſilent wood
Hubba with twenty thouſand ſouldiers,
Cowardly came upon our weakned backs,
And murthered all with fatal maſſacre;
Amongſt the which old Debon, martial Knight,
With many wounds was brought unto the death:
And Albanact oppreſt with multitude,
Whilſt valiantly he feld his enemies,
Yielded his life and honour to the duſt,
He being dead, the ſouldiers fled amain,
And I alone eſcaped them by flight,
To bring you tidings of theſe accidents.

Locr. Not aged Priam King of ſtately Troy,
Grand Emperour of barbarous Aſia,
When he beheld his noble minded ſonnes
Slain troiterouſly by all the Mirmidons,
Lamented more then I for Albanact.

Guen. Not Hecuba the Queen of Ilium,
When ſhe beheld the town of Pergamus,
Her pallace burnt, with all-devouring flames,
Her fifty ſonnes and daughters freſh of hue,
Murthred by the wicked Pyrrhus bloudy ſword,
Shed ſuch ſad tears as I for Albanact.

Cam. The grief of Niobe fair Athens Queen,
For her ſeven ſonnes magnanimous in field,
For her ſeven daughters fairer then the faireſt,
Is not to be compar'd with my laments.

Cor. In vain you ſorrow for the ſlaughtred Prince,
In vain you ſorrow for his overthrow;
He loves not moſt that doth lament the moſt,
But he that ſeeks to venge the injury.
Think you to quell the enemies warlike train,
With childiſh ſobs and womaniſh laments?
Unſheath your ſwords, unſheath your conquering ſword?
And ſeek revenge, the comfort for this ſore:
In Cornwall where I hold my regiment,
Even juſt ten thouſand valiant men at armes
Hath Corineius ready at command:
All theſe and more, if need ſhall more require,
Hath Corineius ready at command.

Cam. And in the fields of martial Cambria,
Cloſe by the boyſtrous Iſcan's ſilver ſtreams,
Where lightfoot Fairies skip from bank to bank,
Full twenty thouſand brave couragious Knights
Well exercis'd in feats of Chivalrie,
In manly manner moſt invincible,
Young Camber hath with gold and victual;
All theſe and more, if need ſhall more require,
I offer up to venge my brothers death.

Loc. Thanks loving Uncle, and good Brother too,
For this revenge; for this ſweet word Revenge
Muſt eaſe and ceaſe my wrongfull injuries;
And by the ſword of bloudie Mars I ſwear,
Ne'er ſhall ſweet quiet enter this my front,
'Till I be venged on his traiterous head
That ſlew my noble brother Albanact.
Sound drums and trumpets, muſter up the camp,
For we will ſtraight march to Albania. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Humber, Eſtrild, Hubba, Truſſier, & the ſouldiers.

Hum. Thus are we come victorious Conquerors

Unto

Un to the flowing currents silver streams,
Which, in memorial of our victory,
Shall be agnominated by our name,
And talked of by our posterity:
For sure I hope before the golden Sun
Posteth his horses to fair Thetis plains,
To see the waters turned into bloud,
And change his blewish hue to ruefull red,
By reason of the fatal massacre,
Which shall be made upon the virent plains.

Enter the Ghost of Albanact.

See how the Traitor doth presage his harm,
See how he glories at his own decay,
See how he triumphs at his proper loss.
O fortune vild, unstable, fickle, frail!

Hum. Me thinks I see both armies in the field,
The broken lances climb the crystal skies,
Some headless lie, some breathless on the ground,
And every place is strew'd with carcasses,
Behold the gras hath lost his pleasant green,
The sweetest sight that ever might be seen.

Ghost. I, traiterous Humber, thou shalt find it so,
Yea to thy cost thou shalt the same behold,
With anguish, sorrow, and with sad laments;
The grassie plains, that now do please thine eyes,
Shall e're the night be coloured all with bloud;
The shadie groves that now inclose thy camp,
And yield sweet savour to thy damned corps,
Shall ere the night be figured all with bloud;
The profound stream that passeth by thy tents,
And with his moisture serveth all thy camp,
Shall ere the night converted be to bloud,
Yea with the bloud of those thy stragling boyes:
For now revenge shall ease my lingring grief,
And now revenge shall glut my longing soul.

Hub. Let come what will, I mean to bear it out,
And either live with glorious victorie,
Or die with fame renown'd for chivalrie:
He is not worthy of the honey-comb,
That shuns the hives because the bees have stings;
That likes me best that is not got with ease,
Which thousand dangers do accompany;
For nothing can dismay our Regal mind;
Which aims at nothing but a golden Crown,
The only upshot of mine enterprises.
Were they inchanted in grim Pluto's Court,
And kept for treasure 'mongst his hellish crew,
I would either quell the triple Cerberus
And all the armie of his hatefull hags,
Or roll the stone with wretched Syfiphus.

Hum. Right martial be thy thoughts, my noble son,
And all thy words savour of Chivalrie,
But, warlike Segar, what strange accidents
Makes you to leave the warding of the Camp?

Segar. To armes, my Lord, to honourable armes;
Take helm and targe in hand, the Britains come
With greater multitude then erst the Greeks
Brought to the ports of Phrygian Tenedos.

Hum. But what saith Segar to these accidents?
What counsel gives he in extremities?

Seg. Why this, my Lord, experience teacheth us,
That Resolution is a sole help at need.
And this, my Lord, our honour teacheth us,
That we be bold in every enterprise;
Then since there is no way but fight or die,
Be resolute, my Lord, for victory.

Hum. And resolute, Segar, I mean to be,
Perhaps some blisfull star will favour us,
And comfort bring to our perplexed state:
Come let us in and fortifie our camp,
So to withstand their strong invasion. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Strumbo, Trumpart, Oliver, and his son William following them.

Strum. Nay neighbour Oliver, if you be so whot, come prepare your self, you shall find two as stout fellows of us, as any in all the North.

Oliv. No by my dorth neighbour Strumbo, Ich zee dat you are a man of small zideration, dat will zeek to injure your old vreends, one of your vamiliar guests, and derefore zeeing your pinion is to deal withouten reazon, Ich and my zonne William will take dat course, dat shall be fardest vrom reason; how zay you, will you have my Daughter or no?

Strum. A very hard question neighbour, but I will solve it as I may: what reason have you to demand it of me?

Will. Marry sir, what reason had you when my sister was in the barn to tumble her upon the hay, and to fish her Belly.

Strum. Mas thou say'st true; well, but would you have me marry her therefore? No, I scorn her, and you, and you. I, I scorn you all.

Oliv. You will not have her then?

Strum. No, as I am a true Gentleman.

Will. Then will we school you, ere you and we part hence.

Enter Margerie, and snatch the staff out of her brothers hand as he is fighting.

Strum. I, you come in pudding time, or else I had drest them.

Mar. You master sawce-box, lobcock, cocks-comb, you slopsawce, lickfingers, will you not hear?

Strum. Who speak you to, me?

Mar. I sir, to you, John lackhonestie, littlewit, is it you that will have none of me?

Strum. No by my troth, mistress nicebice, how fine you can nick-name me; I think you were brought up in the University of Bridewell, you have your Rhetorick so ready at your tongues end, as if you were never well warned when you were young.

Mar. Why then goodman cods-head, if you will have none of me, farewell.

Strum. If you be so plain, mistress driggle-draggle, fare you well.

Mar. Nay, master Strumbo, ere you go from hence we must have more words, you will have none of me?

They both fight.

Strum. Oh my head, my head, leave, leave, leave, I will, I will, I will.

Mar. Upon that condition I let thee alone.

Oliv. How now master Strumbo, hath my daughter taught you a new lesson?

Strum. I but hear you, goodman Oliver? it will not be for my eaſe to have my head broken every day, therefore remedy this, and we ſhall agree.

Oli. Well, Zon, well, for you are my Zon now, all ſhall be remedied, Daughter be friends with him.

Shake hands.

Strum. You are a ſweet Nut, the Devil crack you. Maſters, I think it be my luck, my firſt wife was a loving quiet wench, but this I think would weary the Devil. I would ſhe might be burnt as my other Wife was; if not, I muſt run to the Halter for help. O Codpiece, thou haſt undone thy Maſter, this it is to be medling with warm plackets.

Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Locrine, Camber, Corineius, Thraſimachus, Aſſaracbus.

Loc. Now am I guarded with an hoaſt of men,
Whoſe haughty courage is invincible;
Now am I hemm'd with troups of Souldiers,
Such as might force Bellona to retire,
And make her tremble at their puiſſance;
Now ſit I like the mighty god of warre,
When armed with his Coat of Adamant,
Mounted his Chariot drawn with mighty Bulls,
He drove the Argives over Xanthus ſtreames.
Now, curſed Humber, doth thy end draw nigh,
Down goes the glory of his victories,
And all his fame, and all his high renown,
Shall in a moment yield to Locrine's ſword:
Thy bragging banners croſt with argent ſtreames,
The ornaments of thy pavillions,
Shall all be captivated with this hand,
And thou thy ſelf at Albanactus Tombe
Shalt offered be, in ſatisfaction
Of all the wrongs thou didſt him when he liv'd.
But canſt thou tell me, brave Thraſimachus,
How far we are diſtant from Humbers camp?

Thra. My Lord, within your foule accurſed Grove
That beares the tokens of our overthrow,
This Humber hath intrencht his damned camp.
March on, my Lord, becauſe I long to ſee
The treacherous Scythians ſqueltring in their gore.

Locri. Sweet fortune, favour Locrine with a ſmile,
That I may venge my noble Brothers death,
And in the midſt of ſtately Troimovant,
I'le build a Temple to thy deitie
Of perfect marble, and of Jacinth ſtones,
That it ſhall paſſe the high Pyramides,
Which with their top ſurmount the firmament.

Cam. The arm-ſtrong off-ſpring of the doubted Knight,
Stout Hercules Alcmenas, mighty Son,
That tam'd the monſters of the three-fold world,
And rid the oppreſſed from the tyrants yokes,
Did never ſhew ſuch valiantneſſe in fight,
As I will now for noble Albanact.

Cori. Full fourſcore yeares hath Corineius liv'd,
Sometime in warre, ſometime in quiet peace,
And yet I feel my ſelf to be as ſtrong
As erſt I was in ſummer of mine age,
Able to toſſe this great unweildy Club,
Which hath been painted with my foe-mens brains:
And with this Club I'le break the ſtrong array
Of Humber and his ſtragling Souldiers,
Or looſe my life amongſt the thickeſt preſſe,
And die with honour in my lateſt dayes:
Yet ere I die they all ſhall underſtand,
What force lies in ſtout Corineius hand.

Thra. And if Thraſimachus detract the fight,
Either for weakneſſe or for cowardiſe,
Let him not boaſt that Brutus was his Eame,
Or that brave Corineius was his Sire.

Loc. Then courage, Souldiers, firſt for your ſafety,
Next for your peace, laſt for your victory.

Exeunt.

Sound the Alarm. Enter Hubba and Segar at one door, and Corineius at the other.

Cori. Art thou that Humber, Prince of Fugitives,
That by thy treaſon ſlew'ſt young Albanact?

Hub. I am his Son that ſlew young Albanact,
And if thou take not heed proud Phrigian,
I'le ſend thy ſoule unto the Stigian lake,
There to complain of Humber's injuries.

Cori. You triumph, ſir, before the victory,
For Corineius is not ſo ſoon ſlain.
But, curſed Scythians, you ſhall rue the day,
That e're you came into Albania.
So periſh they that envy Britains wealth,
So let them die with endleſſe infamy,
And he that ſeeks his Soveraigns overthrow,
Would this my Club might aggravate his woe.

Strikes them both down with his Club.

Enter Humber.

Hum. Where may I find ſome deſart wilderneſſe,
Where I may breathe out curſes as I would,
And ſcare the earth with my condemning voyce,
Where every ecchoes repercuſſion
May help me to bewaile mine overthrow,
And aid me in my ſorrowfull laments?
Where may I find ſome hollow uncoth rock,
Where I may damn, condemn, and ban my fill?
The heavens, the hell, the earth, the aire, the fire,
And utter curſes to the concave skie,
Which may infect the aigry regions,
And light upon the Britain Locrine's head.
You ugly ſprites that in Cocitus mourn,
And gnaſh your teeth with dolorous laments,
You fearfull dogs that in black Lethe howle,
And ſcare the Ghoſts with your wide open throats,
You ugly Ghoſts that flying from theſe dogs,
Do plunge your ſelves in Puryflegiton,
Come all of you, and with your ſhrieking notes
Accompany the Britains conquering boaſt.
Come fierce Erinnis, horrible with Snakes,
Come ugly Furies, armed with your whips,
You threefold judges of black Tartarus,
And all the army of you helliſh fiends,
With new found torments rack proud Locrine's bones.
O gods and ſtarres, damn'd be the gods and ſtarres,
That did not drown me in fair Thetis plains.
Curſt be the ſea that with outragious waves,
With ſurging billowes did not rive my ſhips
Againſt the rocks of high Cerannia,
Or ſwallowed me into her watry gulf.

Would

Would God he had arriv'd upon the ſhore
Where Poliphemus and the Cyclops dwell,
Or where the bloody Anthropomphagie
With greedy jawes devoures the wandring wights,

Enter the Ghoſt of Albanact.

But why comes Albanact's bloody Ghoſt,
To bring a corſive to our miſeries!
Is't not enough to ſuffer ſhamefull flight,
But we muſt be tormented now with Ghoſts?
With apparitions fearfull to behold?
Ghoſt. Revenge, revenge for blood.
Hum. So nought will ſatisfie your wandring Ghoſt,
But dire revenge, nothing but Humber's fall,
Becauſe he conquered you in Albany.
Now by my ſoule, Humber would be condemn'd
To Tantals hunger, or Ixions Wheele,
Or to the vulture of Promotheus,
Rather then that this murther were undone.
When as I I die I'le drag thy curſed Ghoſt
Through all the Rivers of foule Erebus,
Through burning ſulphur of the Limbo-lake,
To allay the burning fury of that heat,
That rageth in mine everlaſting ſoule.

Exeunt.

Alba. Ghoſt. Vindicta, vindicta.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Atey as before. Then Omphale Daughter to the King of Lydia, havinga Club in her hand, and a Lyous skin on her back, Hercules following with a diſtaffe. Then let Omphale turn about, and taking off her Pantofle, ſtrike Hercules on the head, then let them depart, Atey remaining, ſaying;

Quem non Argolici mandata ſevera Tyranni,
Non potuit Juno vincere, vicit amor.

Stout Hercules the mirrour of the world,
Son to Alemena and great Jupiter,
After ſo many conqueſts won in field,
After ſo many Monſters quell'd by force,
Yielded his valiant heart to Omphale,
A fearfull woman void of manly ſtrength,
She took the Club, and wore the Lyons skin.
He took the Wheele, and maidenly gan ſpin
So martiall Locrine cheer'd with victory,
Falleth in love with Humber's Concubine,
And ſo forgetteth peerleſſe Guendoline.
His Unckle Corineius ſtormes at this,
And forceth Locrine for his grace to ſue,
Loe here the ſumme, the proceſſe doth enſue.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Locrine, Camber, Corineius, Aſſaracbus, Thraſimachus, and the Souldiers.

Loc. Thus from the fury of Bellona's broiles,
With ſound of Drumme and Trumpets melody,
The Britain King returns triumphantly,
The Scythians ſlain with great occiſion,
Doe equallize the graſſe in multitude,
And with their blood have ſtain'd the ſtreaming brooks,
Offering their bodies and their deareſt blood
As ſacrifice to Albanactus Ghoſt,
Now curſed Humber haſt thou paid thy due,
For thy deceits and crafty treacheries,
For all thy guiles, and damned ſtratagems,
With loſſe of life, and everduring ſhame.
Where are thy Horſes trapt with burniſht gold,
Thy trampling Courſers rul'd with foaming bits?
Where are thy ſoldiers ſtrong and numberleſſe,?
Thy valiant Captains, and thy noble Peers?
Even as the Country Clownes with ſharpeſt Scythes,
Doe mow the withered graſſe from off the earth,
Or as the Ploughman with his piercing ſhare
Renteth the bowels of the fertile fields,
And rippeth up the roots with Razors keen.
So Locrine with his mighty curtle-axe,
Hath cropped off the heads of all thy Hunnes,
So Locrine's Peers have daunted all thy Peeres,
And drove thine hoaſt unto confuſion,
That thou maiſt ſuffer penance for thy fault,
And die for murdring valiant Albanact.
Cori. And thus, yea thus, ſhall all the reſt be ſerv'd,
That ſeek to enter Albion 'gainſt our wills.
If the brave Nation of the Troglodites,
If all the Cole-black Æthiopians,
If all the forces of the Amazons,
If all the hoaſts of the Barbarian lands,
Should dare to enter this our little world,
Soon ſhould they rue their overbold attempts,
That after us our progeny may ſay,
There lie the beaſts that ſought to uſurp our Land.
Loc. I, they are beaſts that ſeek to uſurp our Land,
And like to bruitiſh beaſts they ſhall be ſerv'd.
For mighty Jove, the ſupream King of heaven,
That guides the concourſe of the Meteors,
And rules the motion of the azure skie,
Fights alwayes for the Britains ſafety.
But ſtay, me thinks I hear ſome ſhrieking noyſe,
That draweth near to our pavillion.

Enter the Souldiers leading in Eſtrild.

Eſtrild. What Prince ſoe're adorn'd with golden (Crown,
Doth ſway the Regall Scepter in his hand:
And thinks no chance can ever throw him down,
Or that his ſtate ſhall everlaſting ſtand,
Let him behold poor Eſtrild in this plight,
The perfect platform of a troubled wight.
Once was I guarded with mavortiall bands,
Compact with Princes of the noble blood,
Now am I faſn into my foemens hands,

And with my death muſt pacifie their mood.
O life the harbour of calamities,
O death the haven of all miſeries,
I could compare my ſorrows to thy woe,
Thou wretched queen of wretched Pergamus,
But that thou viewd'ſt thy enemies overthrow,
Nigh to the rock of high Capharens,
Thou ſaw'ſt their death, and then departed'ſt thence.
I muſt abide the victors inſolence.
The gods that pitied thy continual grief,
Transform'd thy corps, and with thy corps thy care,
Poor Eſtrild lives diſpairing of relief,
For friends in trouble are but few and rare.
What ſaid I few? I, few or none at all,
For cruel death made havock of them all.
Thrice happy they whoſe fortune was ſo good,
To end their lives, and with their lives their woes,
Thrice hapleſſe I, whom fortune ſo withſtood,
That cruelly ſhe gave me to my foes.
Oh ſouldiers is there any miſery,
To be compar'd to fortunes treacherie.

Loc. Camber, this ſame ſhould be the Scythian Queen.

Cam. So may we judge by her lamenting words.

Loc. So fair a dame mine eyes did never ſee,
With flouds of woes ſhe ſeems o're-whelm'd to be

Cam. O Locrine hath ſhe not a cauſe for to be ſad?

Locrine at one ſide weeping.

Loc. If ſhe have cauſe to weep for Humber's death,
And ſhed ſalt tears for her overthrow:
Locrine may well bewaile his proper grief,
Locrine may move his own peculiar woe,
He being conquer'd died a ſpeedy death,
And felt not long his lamentable ſmart,
I being a conquerour, live a lingring life,
And feel the force of Cupid's ſudden ſtroke.
I gave him cauſe to die a ſpeedy death,
He left me cauſe to wiſh a ſpeedy death.
Oh that ſweet face painted with natures dye,
Thoſe roſeal cheeks mixt with a ſnowy white,
That decent neck ſurpaſſing ivory,
Thoſe comely breaſts which Venus well might ſpite,
Are like to ſnares which wylie fowlers wrought,
Wherein my yielding heart is priſoner caught.
The golden treſſes of her dainty hair
Which ſhine like Rubies glittering with the Sun,
Have ſo entrapt poor Locrine's loveſick heart,
That from the ſame no way it can be won.
How true is that which oft I heard declar'd,
One dram of joy, muſt have a pound of care.

Eſtr. Hard is their fall, who from a golden Crown
Are caſt into a Sea of wretchedneſſe.

Loc. Hard is their thrall, who by Cupid's frown
Are wrapt in waves of endleſſe carefulneſſe.

Eſtr. Oh Kingdome object to all miſeries.

Loc. Oh love, the extream'ſt of all extremities.

Let him go into his chair.

Sold. My Lord, in ranſacking the Scythian Tents,
I found this Lady, and to manifeſt
That earneſt zeal I bear unto your Grace,
I here preſent her to your Majeſty.

Another ſold. He lies, my Lord, I found the Lady firſt,
And here preſent her to your Majeſty.

1. Sold. Preſumptuous villain, wilt thou take my prize?

2. Sol. Nay rather thou depriv'ſt me of my right.

1. Sol. Reſigne thy title (captive) unto me,
Or with my ſword I'le pierce thy cowards loins.

2. Sol. Soft words, good ſir, 'tis not enough to ſpeak:
A barking dog doth ſeldome ſtrangers bite.

Loc. Unreverent villains, ſtrive you in our ſight?
Take them hence Jaylor to the dungeon,
There let them lie and trie their quarrel out.
But thou fair Princeſſe be no whit diſmaid,
But rather joy that Locrine favours thee.

Eſtr. How can he favour me that ſlew my ſpouſe?

Loc. The chance of war (my love) took him from thee.

Eſtr. But Locrine was the cauſer of his death.

Loc. He was an enemy to Locrine's ſtate,
And ſlew my noble brother Albanact.

Eſtr. But he was link'd to me in marriage bond,
And would you have me love his ſlaughterer?

Loc. Better to live, then not to live at all.

Eſtr. Better to die renowned for chaſtitie,
Then live with ſhame and endleſſe infamie.
What would the common ſort report of me,
If I forget my love, and cleave to thee?

Loc. Kings need not fear the vulgar ſentences.

Eſtr. But Ladies muſt regard their honeſt name.

Loc. Is it a ſhame to live in marriage bonds?

Eſtr. No, but to be a Strumpet to a King.

Loc. If thou wilt yield to Locrine's burning love,
Thou ſhalt be Queen of fair Albania.

Eſtr. But Guendoline will undermine my ſtate.

Loc. Upon mine Honour, thou ſhalt have no harme.

Eſtr. Then lo brave Locrine, Eſtrild yields to thee,
And by the gods, whom thou do'ſt invocate,
By the dread ghoſt of thy deceaſed Sire,
By thy right hand, and by thy burning love,
Take pitty on poor Eſtrilds wretched thrall.

Cori. Hath Locrine thus forgot his Guendoline,
That thus he courts the Scythians paramour?
What, are the words of Brute ſo ſoon forgot?
Are my deſerts ſo quickly out of mind?
Have I bin faithfull to thy Sire now dead,
Have I protected thee from Humber's hands,
And do'ſt thou quit me with ungratitude?
Is this the guerdon for my grievous wounds,
Is this the honour for my labours paſt?
Now by my ſword, Locrine, I ſwear to thee,
This injury of thine ſhall be repaid.

Loc. Uncle, ſcorn you your royal ſoveraigne,
As if we ſtood for cyphers in the Court?
Upbraid you me with thoſe your benefits?
Why, it was a ſubjects duty ſo to do.
What you have done for our deceaſed Sire,
We know, and all know, you have your reward.

Cori. Avant proud princox, brav'ſt thou me withall,
Aſſure thy ſelf, though thou be Emperour
Thou ne're ſhalt carry this unpuniſhed.

Cam. Pardon my brother, noble Corineus,
Pardon this once, and it ſhall be amended.

Aſſar. Couſin, remember Brutus lateſt words,
How he deſired you to cheriſh them:
Let not this fault ſo much incenſe your mind,
Which is not yet paſſed all remedy.

Cori. Then Locrine, loe I reconcile my ſelf,
But as thou lov'ſt thy life, ſo love thy wife:
But if thou violate thoſe promiſes,
Bloud and revenge ſhall light upon thy head.
Come, let us back to ſtately Troynovant,
Where all theſe matters ſhall be ſetled.

Locrine to himſelf.

Millions of devils wait upon thy ſoul.

Legions

Legions of ſpirits vex thy impious ghoſt:
Ten thouſand torments rack thy curſed bones.
Let every thing that hath the uſe of breath,
Be inſtruments and workers of thy death. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Humber alone, his hair hanging over his ſhoulders, his arms all bloudie, and a dart in one hand.

Hum. What Baſilisk hath hatched in this place,
Where every thing conſumed is to nought?
What fearfull Furie haunts theſe curſed groves,
Where not a root is left for Humber's meat?
Hath fell Alecto with envenomed blaſts,
Breathed forth poiſon in theſe tender plains?
Hath triple Cerberus with contagious foam,
Sow'd Aconitum 'mongſt theſe withered hearbs?
Hath dreadfull Fames with her charming rods
Brought barrenneſſe on every fruitfull tree?
What not a root, no fruit, no beaſt, no bird,
To nouriſh Humber in this wilderneſſe?
What would you more, you fiends of Erebus?
My very intrails burn for want of drink,
My bowels cry, Humber give us ſome meat,
But wretched Humber can give you no meat,
Theſe foul accurſed groves afford no meat:
This fruitleſs ſoil, this ground brings forth no meat.
The gods, hard hearted gods, yield me no meat.
Then how can Humber give you any meat?

Enter Strumbo with a pitch-fork, and a Scotch-cap.

St. How do you, Maſters, how do you? how have you ſcaped hanging this long time? ifaith I have ſcapt many a ſcouring this year, but I thank God I have paſt them all with a good couragio, couragio, and my wife and I are in great love and charity now, I thank my manhood and my ſtrength; for I will tell you, Maſters, upon a certain day at night I came home, to ſay the very truth, with my ſtomack full of wine, and ran up into the chamber, where my wife ſoberly ſate rocking my little babie, leaning her back againſt the bed, ſinging lullaby. Now when ſhe ſaw me come with my noſe formoſt, thinking that I had been drunk, as I was indeed, ſnatcht up a fagot-ſtick in her hand, and came furiouſly marching towards me with a big face, as though ſhe would have eaten me at a bit; thundering out theſe words unto me. Thou drunken knave where haſt thou been ſo long? I ſhall teach thee how to benight me another time: and ſo ſhe began to play knaves trumps. Now although I trembled fearing ſhe would ſet her ten commandements in my face, ran within her, and taking her luſtily by the middle, I carried her valiantly to the bed, and flinging her upon it, flung my ſelf upon her, and there I delighted her ſo with the ſport I made, that ever after ſhe would call me ſweet husband, and ſo baniſht brawling for ever: and to ſee the good will of the wench, ſhe bought with her Portion a yard of land, and by that I am now become one of the richeſt men in our pariſh. Well, Maſters, what's a clock? it is now break-faſt time, you ſhall ſee what meat I have here for my break-faſt.

He ſits down and pulls out his victuals.

Hum. Was ever land ſo fruitleſs as this land?
Was ever grove ſo graceleſſe as this grove?
Was ever ſoil ſo barren as this ſoil?
Oh no: the land where hungry Fames dwelt,
May no wiſe equalize this curſed land;
No, even the climate of the torrid zone
Brings forth more fruit then this accurſed grove.
Ne'er came ſweet Ceres, ne'er came Venus here;
Triptolemus the god of husbandmen,
Ne'er ſow'd his ſeed in this foul wilderneſſe.
The hunger-bitten dogs of Acheron,
Chac't from the nine-fold Puriflegiton,
Have ſet their footſteps in this damned ground.
The iron-hearted Furies arm'd with ſnakes,
Scatered huge Hydra's over all the plains,
Which have conſum'd the graſs, the herbs, the trees,
Which have drunk up the flowing water ſprings.

Strumbo hearing his voice ſtarts up, and puts his meat in his pocket, ſeeking to hide himſelf.

Hum. Thou great commander of the ſtarry ſky,
That guid'ſt the life of every mortal wight,
From the incloſures of the fleeting clouds
Rain down ſome food, or elſe I faint and dye:
Pour down ſome drink, or elſe I faint and dye.
O Jupiter, haſt thou ſent Mercury
In clowniſh ſhape to miniſter ſome food?
Some meat, ſome meat, ſome meat.

Strum. O alas ſir, ye are deceived, I am not Mercury, I am Strumbo.

Hum. Give me ſome meat, villain, give me ſome meat,
Or 'gainſt this rock, I'le daſh thy curſed brains,
And rend thy bowels with my bloudie hands.
Give me ſome meat, villain, give me ſome meat.

Strum. By the faith of my body, good fellow, I had rather give an whole oxe, then that thou ſhould'ſt ſerve me in that ſort. Daſh out my brains? O horrible, terrible. I think I have a quarry of ſtones in my pocket.

He makes as though he would give him ſome, and as he putteth out his hand, enter the Ghoſt of Albanact, and ſtrikes him on the hand, and ſo Strumbo runs out, Humber following him. Exeunt.

Alba. Ghoſt. Loe here the gift of fell ambition,
Of uſurpation and of treachery.
Loe here the harms that wait upon all thoſe
That do intrude themſelves in others lands,
Which are not under their dominion. Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Locrine alone.

Loc. Seven yeares hath aged Corineus liv'd
To Locrine's grief, and fair Eſtrilda's woe,
And ſeven yeares more he hopeth yet to live;
Oh ſupreme Jove, annihilate this thought.

Should

Should he enjoy the aires fruition?
Should he enjoy the benefit of life?
Should he contemplate the radiant sun,
That makes my life equall to dreadfull death?
Venus convey this monster fro the earth,
That disobeyeth thus thy sacred hests.
Cupid convey this monster to dark hell,
That disannulls thy mothers sugred lawes.
Mars with thy target all beset with flames,
With murthering blade bereave him of his life,
That hindreth Locrine in his sweetest joyes.
And yet for all his diligent aspect,
His wrathfull eyes piercing like Linces eyes,
Well have I overmatcht his subtiltie.
Nigh Deucolitum by the pleasant Lee,
Where brackish Thamis slides with silver streams,
Making a breach into the grassie downes,
A curious arch of costly marble fraught,
Hath Locrine framed underneath the ground,
The walls whereof, garnisht with diamonds,
With ophirs, rubies, glistering emeralds,
And interlac't with sun-bright carbuncles,
Lightens the room with artificial day,
And from the Lee with water-flowing pipes
The moisture is deriv'd into this arch,
Where I have plac'd fair Estrild secretly;
Thither eftsoons accompanied with my page,
I covertly visit my hearts desire,
Without suspition of the meanest eye,
For love aboundeth still with policie:
And thither still means Locrine to repair,
Till Atropos cut off mine uncle's life. Exit.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Humber alone, saying:

Hum. O vita misero longa, fœlici brevis!
Eheu malorum fames extremum malum.
Long have I lived in this desart cave,
With eating hawes and miserable roots,
Devouring leaves and beastly excrements.
Caves were my beds, and stones my pillow-beres,
Fear was my sleep, and horrour was my dream;
For still me thought at every boisterous blast,
Now Locrine comes, now Humber thou must dye;
So that for fear and hunger, Humber's mind
Can never rest, but alwayes trembling stands.
O what Danubius now may quench my thirst?
What Euphrates, what light-foot Euripus
May now allay the fury of that heat,
Which raging in my entrails eats me up?
You ghastly devils of the ninefold Styx,
You damned ghosts of joyless Acheron,
You mournfull soules, vext in Abyssus vaults,
You coal-black devils of Avernus pond,
Come with your flesh-hooks, rend my famisht armes,
These armes that have sustain'd their masters life;
Come with your razours rip my bowels up,
With your sharp fire-forks crack my starved bones.
Use me as you will, so Humber may not live.
Accursed gods that rule the starrie poles,
Accursed Jove king of the accursed gods,
Cast down your lightning on poor Humber's head,
That I may leave this deathfull like life of mine:
What hear you not, and shall not Humber dye?
Nay I will dye though all the gods say nay.
And gentle Aby take my troubled corps,
Take it and keep it from all mortal eyes,
That none may say when I have lost my breath,
The very flouds conspir'd 'gainst Humber's death.

Flings himself into the river.

Enter the Ghost of Albanact.

En cædem sequitur, cædes in cæde quiesco.
Humber is dead, joy heavens, leap earth, dance trees;
Now may'st thou reach thy apples Tantalus,
And withem feed thy hunger-bitten limmes:
Now Sysiphus leave the tumbling of thy rock,
And rest thy restless bones upon the same:
Unbind Ixion, cruel Rhadamanth,
And lay proud Humber on the whirling wheel.
Back will I post to hell mouth Tanarus,
And pass Cocytus, to the Elysian fields,
And tell my father Brutus of these newes. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Ate as before. Jason leading Creon's daughter. Medea following, hath a garland in her hand, and putting it on Creon's daughters head, setteth it on fire, and then killing Jason and her, departeth.

Ate. Non tam Trinacriis exæstuat Ætna cavernis,
Læsa furtivo quam cor malieris amore.
Medea seeing Jason leave her love,
And choose the daughter of the Theban King,
Went to her devillish charms to work revenge;
And raising up the triple Hecate,
With all the rout of the condemned fiends,
Framed a garland by her magick skill,
With which she wrought Jason and Creon's ill.
So Guendoline seeing her self misus'd,
And Humber's paramour possesse her place,
Flies to the Dukedome of Corunbia,
And with her brother stout Thrasimachus,
Gathering a power of Cornish souldiers,
Gives battel to her husband and his host,
Nigh to the river of great Mertia:
The chances of this dismal massacre,
That which ensueth shortly will unfold. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Locrine, Camber, Assaracus, Thrasimachus.

Assa. But tell me, Cousin, dyed my Brother so?
Now who is left to hapless Albion,
That as a pillar might uphold our state,
That might strike terrour to our daring foes?
Now who is left to hapless Britanie,

That

That might defend her from the barbarous hands
Of those that still desire her ruinous fall,
And seek to work her downfall and decay.
Cam. I Uncle, death is our common enemy,
And none but death can match our matchlesse power,
Witnesse the fall of Albioneus crew,
Witnesse the fall of Humber and his Hunnes,
And this foul death hath now increas'd our woe,
By taking Corineus from this life,
And in his room leaving us worlds of care.
Thra. But none may more bewaile his mournfull hearse,
Then I that am the issue of his loins,
Now foul befall that cursed Humber's throat,
That was the causer of his lingring wound.
Loc. Tears cannot raise him from the dead again,
But where's my Lady Mistris Guendoline?
Thra. In Cornwall, Locrine, is my sister now,
Providing for my Father's funeral.
Loc. And let her there provide her mourning weeds,
And mourn for ever her own widdow-hood:
Ne're shall she come within our Palace gate,
To countercheck brave Locrine in his love.
Go, boy, to Debolitum, down the Lee,
Unto the arch where lovely Estrild lies,
Bring her and Sabren straight unto the Court,
She shall be Queen in Guendolinaes room.
Let others waile for Corineus death,
I mean not so to macerate my mind,
For him that barr'd me from my hearts desire.
Thra. Hath Locrine then forsook his Guendoline?
Is Corineus death so soon forgot?
If there be gods in heaven, as sure there be,
If there be fiends in hell, as needs there must,
They will revenge this thy notorious wrong,
Ande pour their plagues upon thy cursed head.
Loc. What, prat'st thou, pesant, to thy Soveraigne?
Or art thou strucken in some extasie?
Do'st thou not tremble at our royal looks?
Do'st thou not quake when mighty Locrine frowns?
Thou beardlesse boy, were't not that Locrine scorns
To vex his mind with such a heartlesse child,
With the sharp point of this my battel-axe,
I'de send thy soul to Puryflegiton.
Thra. Though I be young and of a tender age,
Yet will I cope with Locrine when he dares.
My noble father with his conquering sword,
Slew the two gyants Kings of Aquitain.
Thrasimachus is not so degenerate,
That he should fear and tremble at the looks
Or taunting words of a venerian squire.
Loc. Menacest thou thy royal Soveraign?
Uncivil, not beseeming such as you.
Injurious traitor (for he is no lesse
That at defiance standeth with his King)
Leave these thy taunts, leave these thy bragging words,
Unlesse thou mean'st to leave thy wretched life.
Thra. If Princes stain their glorious dignitie
With ugly spots of monstrous infamie,
They leese their former estimation,
And throw themselves into a hell of hate.
Loc. Wilt thou abuse my gentle patience,
As though thou did'st our high displeasure scorne?
Proud boy, that thou mast know thy Prince is mov'd,
Yea, greatly mov'd at this thy swelling pride,
We banish thee for ever from our Court.
Thra. Then, losell Locrine, look unto thy self,
Thrasimachus will venge this injurie. Exit.
Loc. Farewell, proud boy, and learn to use thy tongue.
Assa. Alas, my Lord, you should have call'd to mind
The latest words that Brutus spake to you,
How he desir'd you, by the obedience
That children ought to bear their sire,
To love and favour Lady Guendoline:
Consider this, that if the injurie
Do move her mind, as certainly it will,
War and dissention follows speedily.
What though her power be not so great as yours,
Have you not seen a mighty Elephant
Slain by the biting of a silly Mouse?
Even so the chance of war inconstant is.
Loc. Peace Uncle, peace, and cease to talk hereof,
For he that seeks by whispering this or that,
To trouble Locrine in his sweetest life,
Let him perswade himself to die the death.

Enter the Page, with Estrild and Sabren.

Estr. O say me, Page? tell me, where is the King?
Wherefore doth he send for me to the Court?
Is it to die? is it to end my life?
Say me, sweet boy? tell me and do not fain.
Page. No, trust me, Madam, if you will credit the little honestie that is yet left me, there is no such danger as you fear, but prepare your self, yonder's the King.
Estr. Then, Estrild, lift thy dazled spirits up,
And blesse that blessed time, that day, that hour,
That warlike Locrine first did favour thee.
Peace to the King of Britany, my Love,
Peace to all those that love and favour him.
Locrine taking her up.
Doth Estrild fall with such submission
Before her servant King of Albion?
Arise, fair Lady, leave this lowly chear,
Lift up those looks that cherish Locrine's heart,
That I may freely view that roseal face,
Which so intangled hath my love-sick breast.
Now to the Court, where we will court it out,
And passe the night and day in Venus sports.
Frollick, brave Peers, be joyfull with your King. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Guendoline, Thrasimachus, Madan, and Souldiers.

Guen. You gentle winds that with your modest blasts,
Passe through the circuit of the heavenly vault,
Enter the clouds unto the throne of Jove,
And bear my prayers to his all-hearing ears,
For Locrine hath forsaken Guendoline,
And learnt to love proud Humbers concubine.
You happy sprites that in the concave skie
With pleasant joy, enjoy your sweetest love,
Shed forth those tears with me, which then you shed,
When first you woo'd your Ladies to your wills:
Those tears are fittest for my wofull case,
Since Locrine shuns my nothing pleasant face.
Blush Heavens, blush Sun, and hide thy shining beams,
Shadow thy radiant locks in gloomy clouds,

Deny

Deny thy cheerfull light unto the world,
Where nothing reigns but falſhood and deceit.
What ſaid I, falſhood? I, that filthy crime,
For Locrine hath forſaken Guendoline.
Behold the heavens do wail for Guendoline:
The ſhining ſun doth bluſh for Guendoline:
The liquid air doth weep for Guendoline:
The very ground doth groan for Guendoline.
I, they are milder then the Britain King,
For he rejecteth luckleſs Guendoline.

Thra. Siſter, complaints are bootleſs in this cauſe,
This open wrong muſt have an open plague:
This plague muſt be repaid with grievous war,
This war muſt finiſh with Locrinus death,
His death will ſoon extinguiſh our complaints.

Guen. O no, his death will more augment my woes,
He was my husband, brave Thraſimacus,
More dear to me then the apple of mine eye,
Nor can I find in heart to work his ſcathe.

Thra. Madam, if not your proper injuries,
Nor my exile, can move you to revenge:
Think on our father Corineus words,
His words to us ſtand alwayes for a Law.
Should Locrine live that caus'd my fathers death?
Should Locrine live that now divorceth you?
The heavens, the earth, the air, the fire reclaims;
And then why ſhould all we deny the ſame?

Guen. Then henceforth farewell womaniſh complaints,
All childiſh pitty henceforth then farewell:
But curſed Locrine look unto thy ſelf,
For Nemeſis the miſtreſſe of Revenge,
Sits arm'd at all points on our diſmal blades,
And curſed Eſtrild that inflam'd his heart,
Shall if I live, die a reproachfull death.

Madan. Mother, though nature makes me to lament
My luckleſs fathers froward lechery;
Yet for he wrongs my Lady mother, thus,
I, if I could, my ſelf would work his death.

Thra. See Madam, ſee, the deſire of revenge
Is in the children of a tender age.
Forward, brave ſouldiers, into Mertia,
Where we ſhall brave the coward to his face. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Locrine, Eſtrild, Habren, Aßarachus, and the Souldiers.

Locr. Tell me, Aßaracus, are the Corniſh chuffes
In ſuch great number come to Mertia,
And have they pitched there their hoſt,
So cloſe unto our Royal manſion?

Aſſa. They are, my Lord, and mean incontinent
To bid defiance to your Majeſty.

Locr. It makes me laugh, to think that Guendoline
Should have the heart to come in armes 'gainſt me.

Eſtr. Alas, my Lord, the horſe will run amain
When as the ſpur doth gall him to the bone;
Jealouſie, Locrine, hath a wicked ſting.

Locr. Sayſt thou ſo, Eſtrild, Beauties paragon?
Well, we will try her choler to the proof,
And make her know, Locrine can brook no braves.
March on, Aſſarachus, thou muſt lead the way,
And bring us to their proud pavillion. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter the Ghoſt of Corineus, with thunder & lightning.

Ghoſt. Behold, the circuit of the azure ſky
Throws forth ſad throbs, and grievous ſuſpirs,
Prejudicating Locrine's overthrow:
The fire caſteth forth ſharp darts of flames,
The great foundation of the triple world
Trembleth and quaketh with a mighty noiſe,
Preſaging bloudy maſſacres at hand.
The wandring birds that flutter in the dark,
When helliſh night in cloudie chariot ſeated,
Caſteth her miſts on ſhadie Tellus face,
With ſable mantles covering all the earth,
Now flies abroad amid the cheerfull day,
Foretelling ſome unwonted miſery.
The ſnarling curres of darkned Tartarus,
Sent from Avernus ponds by Radamanth,
With howling ditties peſter every wood;
The watrie Ladies and the lightfoot Fawns,
And all the rabble of the woodie Nymphs,
All trembling hide themſelves in ſhadie groves,
And ſhrowd themſelves in hideous hollow pits.
The boyſterous Boreas thundreth forth revenge:
The ſtonie rocks cry out on ſharp revenge:
The thornie buſh pronounceth dire revenge.
Sound the alarme.
Now Corineus ſtay and ſee revenge,
And feed thy ſoul with Locrine's overthrow,
Behold they come, the Trumpets call them forth:
The roaring drumms ſummon the ſouldiers.
Loe where their army gliſtereth on the plains.
Throw forth thy lightning, mighty Jupiter,
And pour thy plagues on curſed Locrine's head.
Stand aſide.

Enter Locrine, Eſtrild, Aſſaracus, Habren and their ſouldiers at one door, Thraſimachus, Guendoline, Madan and their followers at another.

Loc. What is the Tygre ſtarted from his cave?
Is Guendoline come from Cornubia,
That thus ſhe braveth Locrine to the teeth?
And haſt thou found thine armour, pretty boy,
Accompanied with theſe thy ſtragling mates?
Believe me but this enterpriſe was bold,
And well deſerveth commendation.

Guen. I Locrine, trairerous Locrine, we are come,
With full pretence to ſeek thine overthrow:
What have I done that thou ſhould'ſt ſcorn me thus?
What have I ſaid that thou ſhould'ſt me reject?
Have I been diſobedient to thy words?
Have I bewray'd thy arcane ſecrecie?
Have I diſhonoured thy marriage bed
With filthy crimes, or with laſcivious luſts?
Nay it is thou that haſt diſhonoured it,
Thy filthy mind orecome with filthy luſts,
Yieldeth unto affections filthy darts.
Unkind, thou wrong'ſt thy firſt and trueſt feer,
Unkind, thou wrong'ſt thy beſt and deareſt friend;
Unkind, thou ſcorn'ſt all skilfull Brutus lawes,

For-

Forgetting father, uncle, and thy self.
Estr. Believe me Locrine, but the girle is wise,
And well would seem to make a vestal Nun,
How finely frames she her oration.
Thra. Locrine we came not here to fight with words,
Words that can never win the victory,
But for you are so merry in your frumps,
Unsheath your swords, and trie it out by force,
That we may see who hath the better hand.
Locr. Think'st thou to dare me, bold Thrasimacus?
Think'st thou to fear me with thy taunting braves,
Or do we seem too weak to cope with thee?
Soon shall I shew thee my fine cutting blade,
And with my sword, the messenger of death,
Seal thee an acquittance for thy bold attempts. Exeunt.

Sound the alarum. Enter Locrine, Assaracus, and a souldier at one door, Guendoline, Thrasimacus, at an other, Locrine and his followers driven back.
Then let Locrine and Estrild enter again in a maze.

Locr. O fair Estrilda, we have lost the field,
Thrasimachus hath won the victory,
And we are left to be a laughing stock,
Scoft at by those that are our enemies,
Ten thousand souldiers arm'd with sword and shield,
Prevail against an hundred thousand men,
Thrasimachus incest with fuming ire,
Rageth among'st the faint-heart souldiers
Like to grim Mars, when covered with his targe
He fought with Diomedes in the field,
Close by the banks of silver Simois, Sound the alarum.
O lovely Estrild now the chase begins,
Ne're shall we see the stately Troynovant
Mounted with courses garnisht all with pearles
Ne're shall we view the fair Concordia,
Unlesse as captives we be thither brought.
Shall Locrine then be taken prisoner,
By such a youngling as Thrasimachus?
Shall Guendoline captivate my love?
Ne're shall mine eyes behold that dismal hour,
Ne're will I view that ruthfull spectacle,
For with my sword, this sharp curtle axe,
I'le cut in sunder my accursed heart.
But O you judges of the ninefold Stix,
Which with incessant torments rack the ghosts
Within the bottomlesse Abyssus pits,
You gods, commanders of the heavenly spheers,
Whose will and laws irrevocable stands,
Forgive, forgive, this foul accursed sin,
Forget O gods, this foul condemned fault:
And now my sword that in so many fights kiss his sword.
Hast sav'd the life of Brutus and his son,
End now his life that wisheth still for death,
Work now his death that wisheth still for death,
Work now his death that hateth still his life.
Farewell fair Estrild, beauties paragon,
Fram'd in the front of forlorn miseries,
Ne're shall mine eyes behold thy sun-shine eyes,
But when we meet in the Elysian fields,
Thither I go before with hastened pace.
Farewell vain world, and thy inticing snares.
Farewell foul sin, and thy inticing pleasures.
And welcome death, the end of mortal smart,
Welcome to Locrine's over-burthened heart.
Thrusts himself through with his sword.

Estr. Break heart with sobs and grievous suspirs,
Stream forth you tears from forth my watry eyes,
Help me to mourn for warlike Locrine's death,
Pour down your tears you watry regions,
For mighty Locrine is bereft of life.
O fickle fortune, O unstable world,
What else are all things, that this globe contains,
But a confused chaos of mishaps?
Wherein as in a glasse we plainly see,
That all our life is but a Tragedie.
Since mighty Kings are subject to mishap,
I, mighty Kings are subject to mishap,
Since martial Locrine is bereft of life,
Shall Estrild live then after Locrine's death?
Shall love of life bar her from Locrine's sword?
O no, this sword that hath bereft his life,
Shall now deprive me of my fleeting soul:
Strengthen these hands O mighty Jupiter,
That I may end my wofull miserie,
Locrine I come, Locrine I follow thee. Kills her self.

Sound the alarme. Enter Sabren.

Sab. What dolefull sight, what ruthfull spectacle
Hath fortune offred to my hapless heart?
My father slain with such a fatal sword,
My mother murthred by a mortal wound?
What Thracian dog, what barbarous Mirmidon,
Would not relent at such a ruthfull case?
What fierce Achilles, what hard stony flint,
Would not bemone this mournfull Tragedie?
Locrine, the map of magnanimitie,
Lies slaughtered in his foul accursed cave,
Estrild, the perfect pattern of renown,
Natures sole wonder, in whose beauteous brests,
All heavenly grace and vertue was inshrind,
Both massacred are dead within this cave,
And with them dies fair Pallas and sweet love.
Here lies a sword, and Sabren hath a heart,
This blessed sword shall cut my cursed heart,
And bring my soul unto my parents ghosts,
That they that live and view our Tragedy,
May mourn our case with mournfull plaudities.
Let her offer to kill her self.
Ay me, my virgins hands are too too weak,
To penetrate the bullwarke of my brest,
My fingers us'd to tune the amorous Lute,
Are not of force to hold this steely glain,
So I am left to waile my parents death,
Not able for to work my proper death.
Ah Locrine, honour'd for thy nobleness.
Ah Estrild, famous for thy constancie.
Ill may they fare that wrought your mortal ends.

Enter Guendoline, Thrasimachus, Madan, and the Souldiers.

Guen. Search souldiers search, find Locrine & his Love,
Find the proud strumpet, Humber's concubine,
That I may change those her so pleasing looks,
To pale and ignominious aspect.
Find me the issue of their cursed love,
Find me young Sabren, Locrine's only joy,
That I may glut my mind with lukewarme bloud,
Swiftly distilling from the bastards brest,
My fathers ghost still hants me for revenge,
Crying, revenge my over-hastened death,
My brother's exile, and mine own divorce,
Banish remorse clean from my brazen heart,

All mercy from mine adamantive brests.
Thra. Nor doth thy husband, lovely Guendoline,
That wonted was to guide our stailesse steps,
Enjoy this light; see where he murdred lies:
By luckleſſe lot and froward frowning fate,
And by him lies his lovely paramour
Fair Estrild goared with a dismal sword,
And as it seems, both murdred by themselves,
Clesping each other in their feebled armes,
With loving zeal, as if for company
Their uncontented corps were yet content
To passe foul Stix in Charon's ferry-boat.
Guen. And hath proud Estrild then prevented me,
Hath she escaped Guendolina's wrath,
Violently by cutting off her life?
Would God she had the manifold Hydra's lives,
That every hour she might have died a death
Worse then the swing of old Ixions wheel,
And every hour revive to die again,
As Titius bound to houseles Caucason,
Doth feed the substance of his own mishap,
And every day for want of food doth die,
And every night doth live again to die.
But stay, me thinks I hear some fainting voice,
Mournfully weeping for their luckleſſe death.
Sa. You mountain nimphs which in these desarts raign,
Cease off your hasty chase of savage beasts,
Prepare to see a heart oppreſt with care,
Addresse your ears to hear a mournfull stile,
No humane strength, no work can work my weal,
Care in my heart so tyrant like doth deal.
You Driades and lightfoot Satiri,
You gracious Fairies which at evening tide,
Your closets leave with heavenly beauty stor'd,
And on your shoulders spread your golden locks,
You savage bears in Caves and darkned Denns,
Come waile with me the martial Locrine's death.
Come mourn with me, for beateous Estrilds death.
Ah loving parents little do you know,
What sorrow Sabren suffers for your thrall.
Guen. But may this be, and is it possible,
Lives Sabren yet to expiate my wrath?
Fortune I thank thee for this curtesie,
And let me never see one prosperous hour,
If Sabren die not a reproachfull death.
Sa. Hard hearted death, that when the wretched call.
Art fartheſt off, and seldome hear'ſt at all.
But in the mid'ſt of fortunes good succeſſe,
Uncalled comes, and sheers our life in twain:
When will that hour, that blesſed hour draw nigh,
When poor distreſſed Sabren may be gone.
Sweet Atropos cut off my fatal thred.
What art thou death, shall not poor Sabren die?
Guendoline taking her by the chin, shall say thus.
Guen. Yes damsel, yes, Sabren shall surely die,
Though all the world should seek to save her life,
And not a common death shall Sabren die,
But after strange and grievous punishments,
Shortly inflicted upon thy bastards head,
Thou shalt be cast into the curled streams,
And feed the fishes with thy tender flesh.
Sab. And think'ſt thou then, thou cruel homicid,
That these thy deeds shall be unpunished?
No traitor, no, the gods will venge these wrongs,
The fiends of hell will mark these injuries.
Never shall these bloud-sucking masty currs,
Bring wretched Sabren to her lateſt home.
For I my self in spite of thee and thine,
Mean to abridge my former destinies,
And that which Locrine's sword could not perform,
This present streame shall present bring to passe.
She drowneth her self.
Guen. One michief follows anothers neck,
Who would have thought so young a maid as she
With such a courage would have sought her death.
And for because this River was the place
Where little Sabren resolutely died,
Sabren for ever shall this same be call'd.
And as for Locrine our deceased spouse,
Because he was the son of mighty Brute,
To whom we owe our country, lives and goods,
He shall be buried in a stately tombe,
Close by his aged father Brutus bones,
With such great pomp and great solemnity,
As well beseems so brave a Prince as he.
Let Estrild lie without the shallow vaults,
Without the honour due unto the dead,
Because she was the authour of this War.
Retire brave followers unto Troynovant,
Where we will celebrate these exequies,
And place young Locrine in his father's Tombe.
Exeunt omnes.
Atey. Lo here the end of lawleſſe treachery,
Of Usurpation and ambitious pride,
And they that for their private amours dare
Turmoile our land, and set their broils abroach,
Let them be warned by these premiſſes,
And as a woman was the onely cause
That civil discord was then stirred up,
So let us pray for that renowned maid,
That eight and thirty years the Scepter sway'd
In quiet peace and sweet felicitie,
And every wight that seeks her graces smart,
Would that this sword were pierced in his heart. Exit.

FINIS.
